MR. CHARLES M. BESTIC'S COMPANY,
Under the direction of F. MARTIN MORRIS in
New and Original Musical Comedy in Two Acts,
THE FLOWER GIRL.
Book, Lyrics, and Music by William T. Gliddon.
AN ENORMOUS SUCCESS.
The Scotsman says:—The verdict was all in its favour.
The Edinburgh Dispatch says:—Since Nell Gwynn sold oranges in Drury-lane pit many immortal romances have been written round the theme, and the same pretty idea is used in the excellent musical comdy seen at the Lyceum this week. "The Flower Girl" is musical comedy at its brightest, and it is a long time since the Lyceum boards saw such entertaining fare staged. A gorgeous exhibition scene in the second act bristles with liveliness. The new piece sprang into favour at once.

NOT LIMITED.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ARGYLE STREET, BIRKENHEAD

The only First-class Theatre in the Town, and the PREMIER THEATRE of Cheshire.

Acknowledged by all who have seen it as one of the HANDSOMEST THEATRES IN GREAT BRITAIN.

I do not say it is the Largest Theatre on earth, but it has recently held over 2000 persons, and in money the gross receipts for one night were £131 3s. 6d., and at a matinée recently the takings were £125 4s.

Dottridge and Longden's Pantomime of "Aladdin" opened to £113 10s. 6d.

Meody-Manners Opera Company played in one week to £543 7s. 9d.

"Belle of New York" opened here recently to £105.

"Trilby" played to £407 14s. 3d., which is not so bad for the week immediately following the Easter Holidays.

And any theatre that can hold such money is plenty large enough for the present requirements of Birkenhead.

This theatre is situated in the main thoroughfare of the town, and all the electric tramcars stop at the theatre doors.

The advertising department is under the immediate control of the Hustler himself, and if he don't know how to advertise a theatre or a play properly, who does?

I control my own hoardings, and will post any quantity of printing up to 10,000 sheets, so the more printing the companies supply the better I shall be pleased, and the bigger will be the takings.

Nothing but first-class attractions are played in this Theatre, as the following bookings and pencillings for this season will readily confirm:—

"The Merry Widow."
"Belle of New York."
Birkenhead Dramatic Co., in "Trilby."
Clifton Operatic Society, in Gilbert and Sullivan's Operas.
"A Chinese Honeymoon."
"With Edged Tools."
"The Gay Gordons."
"Tom Jones."
"Lucky Durham."
"Duchess of Dantzic."
"Message from Mars."
Leonard Boyne, in "Raffles."
"Girl Behind the Counter."
"Sunday."
"Catch of the Season."
"A White Man."
"Miss Hook of Holland."
Moody-Manners Opera Company.
New Version of "The Christian."
"The Hypocrites."
"Veronique."
"His House in Order."
F. R. Benson's Répertoire Co.
"The Dairymaids."
"Beauty of Bath."
"A Royal Divorce."
"Cinderella" Pantomime.
J. F. Elliston's "Puss in Boots."
"The Prodigal Son."
"The Bondman."
"The Girls of Gottenberg."

And all the better-class dramas under the control of the following well-known managers:—

Messrs. Paumier and Howard, Mark Blow, J. F. Elliston, Armitage and Leigh, E. Hill-Mitchelson, Harris Fineberg, Dottridge and Longden, Walter Maxwell, Fred Mouillot, Arthur Bertram, Bert Coote, J. Bannister Howard, Fred C. Somerfield, E Vivian Edmonds, Sylvanus Dauncey, Lester Collingwood, G. M. THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Morning Leader, Jan. 18:—
"The Era" Annual is still the supreme record of the "passing show." The new issue for 1908, in addition to being a comprehensive historical survey of the theatrical world, contains a great amount of lighter dramatic fare. Mr. Frank Desprez tells a most entertaining story of the troubles of an understudy, who was called upon at short notice to play an exciting part in "The Crime of Count Corusco"; Mr. Lionel Brough writes on "The Natural Actor"; Mr. Arthur Collins on "A Day at the Telephone"; Mr. Richard Green on "Opera Reminiscences"; Mr. Henry Vibart on "Actors' Christmas Days"; Mr. Alfred Butt on "Double Dummy"; Mr. Ernest Shand on "Fishing"; and Miss Marie Illington on "Betty Bellamy's Burglar."

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDARE.—NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Aberdare Public Hall, Theatre, and Billposting Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—The stock company here opened on Monday with The Octoroon. Miss Ellen Armor gives an ideal representation of Zoe; Mr. H. Creagh Hunt plays Jacob McClosky with power; George Peyton is in the capable hands of Mr. Robert Hall; and Miss Renie Douglas as Weeny Paul is capital. Mr. Laurence Stephenson as Wah-no-Tee acts in a capable manner; Mr. Larry Clements is seen to advantage as Pete; and others who take prominent parts are Miss Margaret Noble as Mrs. Peyton, Miss Florence Delmar as Dora Sunnyside, Mr. Leonard Yorke as Salem Scudder, Mr. Joe Oswald as Captain Rats, Mr. Frank Oswald as Sunnyside, and Mr. H. C. Elvington as Colonel Pointdexter.

ABERDEEN. — PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The Elliott-Savonas continue to give their delightful entertainments to crowded houses; Mr. Max Ritter and Miss Grace Foster are in the front rank as dancers; Miss Bessie Knight also dances and sings exceptionally well; Mr. Wallace Muirhead possesses a fine cultured tenor voice; the Sisters Hall are likewise successful as vocalists; Mr. Mark Merry is an irresistibly funny comedian; and Wright and Lawson contribute a highly amusing turn as grotesque acrobats.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. David Thomson.—Miss Violet Davidson made a welcome reappearance after a severe illness on Monday. Her reception was enthusiastic in the extreme. Along with Miss Nellie Riach she sang a number of duets faultlessly; Mr. Sydney Lochlynne is a mimetic artist of high ability; Miss Daisy Taylor, who is undoubtedly one of the most talented of the younger members of the profession, sings and dances charmingly, and all the other entertainers, Messrs. Chorley, Connor, David Thomson, and Vulcaris, the accompanist, continue deservedly to earn the heartiest plaudits of the audiences.

ALHAMBRA MUSIC HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair; Manager, Mr. George B. Lee.—The hall continues to draw large audiences in the evenings. Practically the whole of the variety part of the entertainment is borne by Wilber and Warner, who are frequently encored for their singing and playing. The turn is undoubtedly one of the best that has been seen at this house for a considerable time. Though it is of some duration the clever artists never flag in their efforts. Mr. Dove Paterson's films, which judiciously blend grave and gay, are, as usual, followed with the deepest interest.

ABERTILLERY. — THE PAVILION. — Lessees, Messrs E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—A musical treat is provided here by Lilian Rigby, who manipulates several musical instruments in an excellent manner, and dances prettily; an amusing turn is Kitty Woodford's dog circus; Dexter as a juggler is smart and clever; Kattie Corrie's songs are rendered in a pleasing style; Fred Lester as an actor-vocalist is good; Rosali Jacobi gives capital renderings of several songs; Jack's the Lad is produced in an interesting manner by Jake Friedman's company, the title-rôle being well sustained by Mr. Fred Lester, and Mr. Fred Hawthorne, a good exponent of Jack's mother.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—For the second week of the stock season Mr. Ormerod presented The Sorrows of Satan. Mr. Sidney Bedwell in the difficult part of Prince Lucio displays ability; Geoffrey Tempest was in the capable hands of Mr. Robert Falkner; Mr. Sydney Cranston played Lord Lynton creditably, and Mr. Graham Dinsford was well placed as the Earl of Elton. Miss Mabel Mannering achieved success by her powerful portrayal of Lady Sybil; Miss Francesca Strickland as Diana Chesney received appreciation, and Miss Maud Townsend was well suited to the character of the gentle Mavis Clare. On Thursday and Friday Camille was the attraction.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—If success is measured by the amount of applause, then the Weimars hold the palm here, for the applause is deafening after Weimar discloses himself in a 9th Lancers uniform, and tells his tale of the ride from Kabul to Kandahar, where he was bugler to Lord Roberts. His little daughter, who sings from the auditorium, shares in the reception. Fred Ginnett's rollicking sketch, A Hunting Morn, in which a hunter gallops on to the stage, and jumps over the breakfast table, is thrilling as well as amusing; the Godfreys are clever with their instrumental and highly diverting witticisms; Russell Carr is a clever ventriloquist; Madge Daly sings a couple of songs with powerful voice; Tony Cooper does not satisfy with one song alone; and the Bioscope has some new pictures.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Mr. Julian Malvern's company is here with I Defy the World, in which Mr. Lewis Gilbert sustains, with much ability, the character of Leon Darville. The Count de Beaulieu is portrayed, with all the customary devilish instincts and purposes emphasised, by Mr. Oswald Douglas; Miss Gladys H. Walton as Pauline, the General's daughter, is a capable actress; and Miss Mary Ainslie interprets the part of Blanche Darville (Leon's wife) with skill.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Heading the "bill" here for current week is Adkin, the ventriloquist, very smart and very clever; Maddison Bros. furnish fun as burlesque boxers; the Days (lady and gentleman), second sight-seers, give audiences plenty of entertainment; the Swift Duo, the lady cyclist and the grotesque, are expert in their specialities; Seims is an expert illusionist; Harry Russon, actor-comedian, maintains his high reputation; the Eight Olympians (four ladies and four gentlemen) demonstrate the real Japanese methods of self-defence (ju-jitsu); Fanny Wentworth is a clever society entertainer; Victor and Louis are amusing vocalists; and the Bioscope illustrates the vagaries of a mysterious parcel.

ATTERCLIFFE.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bert Lester.—The premier position of this week's attractive programme here is held by Mr. G. C. Doughty, assisted by a capable company in a bright and mirthful comedy-scena entitled Captain Cupid. The Lauri Brothers are clever and smart acrobats; Miss Vena Valma wins deserved applause in a musical comedy act; Mr. Jock Walker, Scotch comedian, proves a favourite; a good turn is submitted by Clack and Clack, lady barrel-jumpers; the Mavis Trio give a pleasing singing and dancing act; a burlesque interlude, full of fun and go by Fields and Lewis, is a welcome item; and Mr. Clayton's Attergraph pictures are well received.

BARNSLEY.—NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Barnsley Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson.—This house is doing good business this week. The chief attraction is Ce-Dare, in her marvellous and sensational golden globe act; Selbo gives an expert club-juggling performance; the Yorkshire Mill Girls are pleasing duettists; Ryan and Hall are very amusing comedy acrobats; George Collins is a quaint comedian; Eddie Stidder and Gwennie Dunbar are droll musical entertainers; the Bros. Harrison, good patterers; and contributions also come from Ned Graydon, comedy instrumentalist, and Harry Keeble, ventriloquist. The Palacescope, with new pictures, completes.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Sydney Spenser's No. 1 company in My Sweetheart is here. He himself is a typical sport as Joe Sholwell; Mr. Edward Rawlinson is an excellent Tony, Mr. Harry T. Butler, jun., a capital Harold Bartlett, Mr. Wilton Hardinge an amusing Dudley Harcourt, and Mr. Fred W. Freeman a dignified Dr. Oliver. Miss Amy Rogerson as Mrs. Hakell, Miss Olive Downs as Peek-a-boo, Miss Lily Smith as Christie, and Miss Violet Etherington as Emmeline give nicely contrasted performances, and Miss Lizzie Hall is an engaging and winsome Tina. A Wonderful Woman is also billed.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—The Kremka Brothers are the leading turn here this week, and their initial appearance in Barrow was a great success; McDonald and Huntington are really first-class entertainers, their singing and dancing being a great treat; Bernard and Weston are clever patterers and comedians; Harry Briggs is an excellent vocalist and mimic, his singing in different voices being very creditable; the Walcots give a good comedy sketch, entitled She Loved a Sailor; Jessie Lee is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Vernon's Bioscope has again some good pictures.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—An excellent series of pictures is presented here this week. The programme is interspersed with capital comedy items by Fred Rex and Corri and Foot.

BARRY DOCK. — THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—The chief attraction here this week is A Woman Worth Winning, presented by Mr. Percy Norman's No. 1 company. As Fergus Lovinsky Mr. A. B. Mackay gave a most realistic portrayal; as also did Mr. Carthage Caldcleugh of Ivan Bardoff. Miss Chrissie Dunbar as Roma Pauloff scored a success; and the comedy parts were well sustained by Mr. Ernest Kendrick and Miss Ida Mackay. As Bertie Scribbles Mr. Frank Wilson did well. The company is strong all round.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Peter Gotz, the celebrated light-weight wrestler, is creating a big stir amongst the sporting fraternity here this week, his bouts with many of the competitors arousing much enthusiasm; the Kirbys, on a welcome return visit, go as well as ever; Lily Arthur, a young comedienne of promise, meets with a good reception, and others in the bill are the Roxbys, vocalists and dancers; Mac and Hill, amusing cross talk comedians, and Kitty Willis, comedienne and dancer. Good films are unfolded by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

SYDNEY GARDENS.—Mr. Carl Fredericks' Merry-makers continue to entertain large assemblies at this charming spot.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson. — Kennedy's Komiks are occupying the boards here for a few weeks, during which the theatre will open at nine instead of at eight. Mr. Dan Noble is a really funny man, and is soon on good terms with the audience; Mr. Keane Harker also contributes to the humour of the evening; Mr. Allan Morgan, the dancing messenger boy, gives a clever performance; and Mr. Chas. Bland's tenor voice is heard to good advantage. Mme. Damarus Du Pere sings some excellent contralto songs; and Miss Dot Irving is encored for her coon lilts and dances.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—The inimitable Scotch comedian, Mr. W. F. Frame, heads the bill, and has been most successful. The exceedingly funny sketch, Man, the Brute, produced by Henry Grattan and company, keeps the audience in shrieks of merriment; and praise is due to Jan Rudenyi and company for their delightful performance in the musical romance, The Power of Music; Leo Tell's imitations of animals is marvellous in its realism; and Larry Lewis is one of the funniest of comedians. Also in the bill are the charming Sisters Edwards, duettists; Mr. Victor Courtney, at the piano; Miss Violet Stockelle, a good comedienne; and the Palace pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmot and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs. The leading attraction at this popular theatre is supplied by Mr. John Tiller's company of comedians, who appear to the greatest possible advantage in The Queen of Monte Carlo. The various characters are ably presented, while the comedians vie with each other in creating shrieks of merriment. Alf. Gibson's humorous songs, sung in his own inimitable style, keep his admirers highly amused; and Ted Curtis and Pics have been accorded a good reception for their attractive entertainment. The equilibristic feats of Les Montaldos are exceedingly clever; and Estrella is a most accomplished danseuse. Miss Cloe, coon vocalist and dancer, is rewarded with much applause; and the Scottish Meisters gain a noteworthy reception. Also here are Ajax and George in speciality, and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Miss Hilda Jacobsen is the star here, and this accomplished comedienne has made a hit. Mr. J. W. Rickaby arouses roars of laughter with his comic songs; and the wonderful juggling feats of Mr. Frank Hartley have created quite a sensation. The vocal items by the Three Sisters Grosvenor have won immense favour, their voices blending most harmoniously; Mr. Frank Couch's patter is smart and up to date; and much praise must be accorded Miss Adey Spencer, "the girl from the hat shop," for her acceptable performance; Kisbey, the call-boy, is clever; and the bill is completed by the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Packed houses are still the rule here. Under the direction of Mr. Hugh Beckett some capital animated films have been exhibited, including Beatrice Cenci, a wonderful drama, with soul-stirring effects, The Fireman's Daughter, £100 Reward, &c. In addition, the Leonas appear in their clever banjo act; and Mr. Charles Coll proves himself a really funny comedian.

BILSTON.—NEW ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Battersby.—Mr. Woulfe and his company entered on the second week of their stock season here on Monday with considerable success.

AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Battersby.—Mr. Alf. Brookes and Mr. Harry Plant are irresistible comedians, and Mr. Plant's comical musical act is well received. Mr. Carl St. Clare, female impersonator; Miss Flo Holyrood, soubrette; and Mr. T. R. Norbury, baritone, are all highly appreciated.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Kimberley's company in A Sister's Sin has been cordially received. Mr. T. Arthur Ellis gives a convincing performance of Harold Raymond; Mr. Hugh Carmichael is a commendable George Oakley, and Walter Hastings is well played by Mr. Edward Bikker. Minnie Hastings is finely represented by Miss Mabel Scudamore; Charzel is well embodied by Miss Clara Santley, and Miss Patricia Connaughton gives a careful rendering of Redempter. Miss

Edie Macklin as Floss Perks and Miss Lynn Darlington as Nell Stubs are most efficient, and Mr. Will Percy is a humorous Larry Murphy. The play is liberally staged.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Joe O'Gorman, the popular Irish comedian, is on a welcome return visit, and is scoring heavily; Miss Madoline Rees, the happy possessor of a handsome stage presence, is a vocalist of exceptional ability, and Mr. H. O. Wills is a comedian with a sense of genuine humour. Other prominent turns include those of Mesdames Fraser and Halley, talented vocal duettists; Burley and Burley, entertaining eccentric comedians; the Bros. O'Gorman, amusing patterers, clever dancers, and general favourites; Miss Ena Compton, an accomplished comedienne; Mr. Will Hughes, an expert juggler and bâton swinger; Will Vay's Juveniles in their well-sustained act, Life in the Slums, and the ever-popular Brown's Royal Bioscope.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Edwin Adeler.—The popular pierrot entertainments are supported by Mr. C. D. Reekie, raconteur; Miss Edith Heron-Brown an accomplished vocalist; Mr. Harold Browne, basso; Mr. Donal McDougal, Scotch comedian; Mr. Alf Ripon, ventriloquist; Miss Winifred O'Connor, soprano; and Mr. J. A. Tunbridge, pianist.

BIRMINGHAM. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—The Seal of Silence, with Mr. C. Watson Mill's company, is drawing "success to enterprise" this week, thus the fixed, "determined" policy to play all the year round is well supported by the crowded houses here. The above company is full worthy. Mr. William Vane as Jack Ellerslie looks and plays the part to admiration; Mr. Chas. O'Connor could scarcely be excelled as the "man of evil," Hedley Norman; Mr. Gilbert Elvin portrays the "master fiend," Dr. Renwood, with eerie effect; Mr. Ralph Leo gives a pleasant impression of the young artist Geoffrey Merrington; Miss F. Constance Davey makes a charming character of Madeline Morrison; Miss Violet Langley shows the impulsive nature of Lillian Desbroke very successfully; Miss Myra Eyton wins sympathy as Victor; and Mr. Ern Turner and Miss Elsie Walton essay the humorous rôles with fine effect.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Mr. Alfred West's pictures continue to be the attraction here twice nightly. Scenes of Our Navy, Army, and Colonies appear in quick succession, keeping the audiences thoroughly engrossed to the end. Those of Our Colonies give a visit to the West Indies, showing Barbadoes diving boys, a triple wedding of Arawak Indians at Demerara, and a nigger carnival at Trinidad, &c. Our Army is represented by a grand military tournament of the 25th Brigade R.F. Artillery, &c., and Our Navy presents some inspiring spectacles, all of which are "stage-managed" and "musicked" to full effect.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Great Vaudeville and the Universal Animated Picture Company again show an attractive programme here. The pictures include The Sleeping Beauty, the Elixir of Life, The Student's Jokes, The Suffragette, The Music Teacher, The Rural Postman, Picturesque Naples, &c. The Sisters Vallie display considerable charm and ability in singing and dancing; George Willard's Marionettes are very entertaining and cleverly manipulated; and Sharon amuses the house with his smart delineations of street musicians.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake.—The Streets of London has proved a sound attraction here this week, with Mr. Matthew H. Glenville's company. Mr. Glenville plays Badger and scores a big success, and he is well supported. Mr. Gerald Kennedy skilfully suggests the crafty character of Bloodgood; Miss Florrie Zillwood is successful in showing the hard and pitiless nature of the daughter, Alida; Mr. Tom Beasley is excellent alike as Capt. and Paul Fairweather; Miss Lydia Andre is tender and graceful as Lucy; Mr. Alec Finlayson is in favour as Mark Livingstone; and the Puffys are represented with kindly and homely humour by Mr. Arthur Behan, Miss Cissy Behan and Miss Beatrice Shirley.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Geoffrey Langdon's Wife, the new drama by Mr. Fred C. Somerfield, is here with the author's own company. Mr. Somerfield appears as the unscrupulous man of passion, Beverley, and thoroughly rivets the audience with his powerful, dominating acting; Miss Cecilie Dare as the perplexed and sorely tried wife, Mary, gives an affecting study; Mr. Wilson Summers is successful as the husband, Geoffrey Langdon; Mr. Edward E. Louis as the falsely-accused Jack Stirling shows much spirit; Miss Cissy Bellamy accounts satisfactorily for the part of Mr. Sands; Miss Katie Lever is very charming as Sweet Nancy; and Messrs. Percy Dawsone, Percy Brown, and Ivan Maris give prominent support.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—R. A. Roberts, protean actor, is starring here in Dick Turpin and Ringing the Changes, his quick changes are remarkable; Guyer and Crispi appear in a bright American sketch, Wait for the Finish; Will Poluski, jun., the Sisters Morgan, Lota Patey, the Three Cape Girls, the Vasilescu Troupe in their comedy bar act, Norman Leonard Trio in The Itinerants, Kioto (Japanese equilibrist), and Daras (a versatile Parisian artist) complete an excellent programme.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The Poluski Bros. are at the head of a strong bill here, their skit, Pictures, being applauded; the Bros. Griffiths have a wrestling skit; Jay Laurier is highly amusing; Gertie Gitana is encored for her songs and dances; Terry and Lambert are very droll; and the illusion entertainment provided by Cussac-Talma and Yvonne de Forge is remarkable; Bi-bo-bi, eccentric musician; the Dunedin Troupe of cyclists, and Harry Drew, Welsh basso, are also in the bill.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—The Alexandra Operatic Trio are making a big impression here with a selection from Il Trovatore, which is rendered with much skill; Fyne and Hurley have a smart duologue, The Dude and the Coster; Mabel La Blanche, Queenie May, and the Three Sydney Girls all sing and dance well, and deserve the loud applause greeted them; the Four Juggling Geraldos are smart; Wild, Willie, and West have a knockabout sketch, The Bounding Navvies; Lieut. Travis, ventriloquist; Charlie Jerome, and a sketch, Eerdie's Ma-in-Law, do attractive turns.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles Owen.—Carl and Mary Ohm's annual circus is proving an attraction here. The monkeys, bears, dogs, and ponies show remarkable training; the Villions are responsible for a daring cycling act; and Marstro and Oretta are expert equilibrists; Johnny Hofland and Co. have an amusing sketch, The Boat-builder; other popular turns are supplied by the Society quartette, Sisters Wingrove, Dolly Moore, Dene and Dawson, and Richard Taylor.

BLACKBURN.—NEW PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Page.—Mr. Dickie Clare's company appears this week in Lucky Lisa, and the presentation of the musical absurdity has met with uncommon success. Mr. Clare in the part of Silas Slim scores heavily, and there is scarcely a lull in the laughter during the whole of the time he is before the audience; as Paul Pettitoe, Mr. Norman H. Lee is also naturally humorous; Miss Vesta Brownie wins all hearts with dainty dancing and clever singing; and Miss Madge Brownie also sings and dances charmingly. The piece has many catchy songs and good jokes.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—Jay W. Winton being unable to appear, capital substitutes were obtained in Emmerson and Baldwin, whose juggling feats are of a high order; the Violas, referred to as the White Mahatmas, in an exhibition of "second sight," completely mystify the people by their wonderful demonstrations; Miss Maude Darrell is popular with several songs; Prof. Norton displays his remarkable sleight-of-hand gifts with great success; and others who are favourably received are Miss Flo Burnett, vocalist; the Sisters Petram, with a novel marionette turn; La Belle Duchess, a young Australian with an exceptionally clever troupe of animals; the Lannons, expert dancers; and the San Remo Girls, who gaily sing and dance to the great pleasure of the audience.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Clarence C. Corri's company is paying another visit here this week with The Dandy Fifth, and, notwithstanding the tropical weather, is attracting good houses. Mr. Jack Crichton as Brown, Mr. Frank Barclay as Dick Darville, and Mr. George Beverley as Sergt Milligan, all play their parts capitally. Kate Lorrimer is again in the hands of that excellent artist Miss Pauline Hague, whilst Miss Isa Bowman is entirely successful as Polly. Other parts are also in efficient hands.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—Mr. Leslie Faber and company are extending their visit here to the second week, and The Manœuvres of Jane forms the attraction now. Mr. Faber proves his cleverness and versatility by his excellent portraiture of Lord Bapchild; and Miss Winifred Arthur Jones plays with naturalness and ability the part of Jane Nangle. Clever impersonations of George Langton and Mrs. Nangle are given by Mr. Charles Combe and F. G. Thurstans respectively, and other minor characters are also ably sustained.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Malcolm Scott this week tops a big programme here, which is given twice daily. His appearance in a directoire costume, and as Salome, causes great hilarity. Other capital turns are supplied by Charles Ulrick, barrel marvel; Maudie Francis, comedienne and dancer; Blake and Amber, frivolity artists; Mooney, Holbein, and company, in a sketch; A. D. Robbins, a marvellous cyclist; and Irene Lee, in a novel singing and dancing act.

WINTER GARDENS PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Wonderland, the beautiful ballet arranged by Mr. John Tiller, continues to draw big houses here twice daily. The remainder of the programme is supplied by Miss Violet King, a clever entertainer; the Great Wieland, juggler; Les François Family of acrobats; Miss Kalchen Loisset, with her performing pigeons; Dr. Jules Angelos' tableaux vivants; and William and Wagner, musical eccentrics.

TOWER CIRCUS.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop.—The finest circus in the world (and this is no misnomer) is now open for the season. This week's attractions are Captain Woodward's sea lions, Boswell's Circus, the Janslys, acrobats; the Jees, in their musical comedy scena, The Musical Smithy; Selma Braatz, the wonderful lady juggler; Elton and Elma, in a triple bar act; the Cabiacs, famous French acrobats; August and September, the favourite clowns; and Professor Dubois, with his educated baboon.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Fioni.—The living pictures shown here this week include Blackpool Day by Day, which is a big draw. The variety company includes Julus Ajax, a strong man; the Boston Twins, mimics and vocalists; the Esmeraldas, singers; and the Gentrys, dancers.

NORTH PIER.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Jas. Walker.—After a lengthy absence, Mr. Leslie Harris, the world famous entertainer, has been welcomed with open arms here this week. Assisting him are Mr. Cuthbert Allan, an excellent baritone; Miss Ida Kahn, soprano; Miss A. Backsheen Wood, violinist; and Essler Kessen, illusionist and ventriloquist.

CENTRAL PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Daly.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton are sending excellent artists here week by week. The Saucy Arethusa company has possession this week, with Mr. Tubby Edlin at the top of the bill.

VICTORIA PIER.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. George Roberts.—Herr Arnold Blome's orchestra and Mr. George Royle's Troubadours provide the pleasurable fare here this week.

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Wilmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The sensational drama When Rogues Fall Out is being presented this week by the stock company. Mr. Stanley S. Gordon is a manly Jack Lorriemore; Mr. Cyril Grier plays well as Sir Henry Lorriemore; a charming performance of Madge is submitted by Miss Nina Vaughton; Miss Kathleen Magee is well placed as Hettie Stanton; Mr. Tom H. Solly makes an amusing Billy Faggles, and a good performance of Dick the waif is given by Miss Effie Macintosh. Stephen Ralston is played by Mr. Alfred D. Adams with his usual skill, and Mr. Alfred Grenville ably assists as Bill Jenkins.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—Mr. Alfred West continues his famous entertainment, "Our Navy and Army," twice daily, and opened for the third consecutive week on Monday, when new pictures were presented. Among the most popular films are those relating to a fine pictorial story of a boy leaving his village home to join the Navy, and a Grand Review of the two Services before the King at Aldershot. During the entertainment some clever sketches at the piano are given by Mr. Julian Fredericks. The presentation is under the popular management of Mr. G. Aubrey Hall.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—The present is the third week of Mr. Hart's stock season. On Monday night last Mr. Gilbert Doyle's comedy, A Princess in Bohemia, was produced for the first time. A full notice of the play appears in another column.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Councillor, F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Mr. H. Hill-Mitchelson's stirring drama, The Price of Sin, again provides the strong attraction here, and much interest is taken in the performance by an able company, amongst whom Mr. Wm. Heilbronn distinguishes himself as Major Crawford. His daughter, Nancy, is played well by Miss Violet Carlyle; as Lieut. Ray, Mr. Graham Woods is distinctly effective; and Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan is forceful as the scoundrel, Frank Foster; Miss Gwynne Warren ably fills the rôle of Kate Creleyn.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—That remarkable protean artist, Chas. T. Aldrich, with his burlesque on modern jugglers and magicians, occupies the place of honour here; Tom Costello combines quaintness with pathos well; his scena, My Home is Far Away, is effective; Marie Kendall's songs are rendered in her customary bright and humorous style; the Garganis are smart comedy acrobats, who do some clever and novel tricks; Steve McCarthy, comedian, is expert as a dancer in an original style; the turn submitted by Ouida Macdermott (vocal actress), viz., "Redwing," is intensely dramatic; the Bros. Webb are a couple of vastly entertaining and clever musical eccentrics; the Bros. Dean are good as whistlers and simultaneous dancers; and the Egbert Bros., "the happy dustmen," are again eliciting hearty laughter with their clever sketch. The American Bioscope shows some entertaining pictures.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—America's Famous Empire Comedy Four are contributing some fine harmony here, and they are responsible for much mirth; the Dancing Gilberts are clever in their line; as a "light comedian," Chas. Cork is entertaining; Richard Corbin's performing dogs are wonderfully trained and very intelligent animals; Ernest Rees is a good comedian with capital patter; an acceptable turn by Edie Coolville, comedienne, wins approval; Harry Lamore's eccentric "dude" juggling is clever and very amusing; Robins and Collier, in a novel railway station scena do some clever business, which is funny; and good pictures are seen in Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL PRINCES' PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Mr. Norfolk Megone, the new musical director of the municipal orchestra, commenced his duties on Saturday, and quickly established himself in favour with the visitors to this fashionable rendezvous. A splendid programme was presented at the Sunday evening concert, including Glazannow's grand suite, "Ruses d'Amour," which Mr. Megone introduced to a Bridlington audience for the first time. Miss Carrie Switer, a pleasing soprano, is the vocalist this week. In the Grand Pavilion, in addition to the Flockton-Foster Entertainers, a special turn is given by Shavo, the amusing comedy juggler. The Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures, introduced by Mr. Will Emmerson, were presented for the first time this season on Monday evening, and drew a large crowd. Mr. Emmerson introduced some new and beautiful pictures to a delighted audience.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—After giving us a capital fortnight with the Gaieties, who drew a packed audience to their final performance on Saturday evening, Mr. Tunbridge is this week again giving delight to his patrons by his engagement of the Gems, a company of clever artists, in a programme of "song, play, and mirth," and they play up to the reputation which they have acquired. Miss Nettie Walker possesses a pleasing voice, and her songs and pretty dances are well given; Miss Olive Mortimer is delightful in her songs, possessing a full, rich contralto voice, which is well trained, and she also possesses a fund of humour in her duets with Mr. Kenna Lawson, who is a polished humorist, and he scores immensely with his quaint rendering of his songs; Mr. Wallace Kennedy is a sweet tenor vocalist; Mr. Ernest Attwell, the baritone of the company, is quaint in his portrayal of a Frenchman and in his duets with Miss Walker; and the burlesque opera given by the entire company is admirably done. Mr. David Norton is a most able solo pianist and accompanist.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. W. Delmar.—A most elaborate and novel attraction this week is the great Zerbinis Troupe of ten ladies and gentlemen, each of whom is a clever musical artist. They appear in a gorgeous electrical scena, The Enchanted Glade, in which are introduced some beautiful transformation effects, and their performances on an extensive collection of musical instruments was rapturously received by a delighted audience. The Daroneys, musical eccentrics, are retained for another week; and the Parisian Animated Pictures are kept well up to date by the enterprising manager.

SUMMER GARDENS. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—The programmes at this resort of the seaside visitors are always well received, and each artist works hard to ensure success. This week the company are introducing an amusing burlesque scena, Madame Samina's Orchestra, which is most amusingly rendered; Mr. Charles Danton's songs and dances are excellent; George Hyam is very popular with his comic songs; and Mr. Charles Beanland always secures a "double" for his eccentric humour. Mr. J. Bath also gives evidence of his popularity by his portrayal of some good songs; and Coda, with his violin, is as good as ever.

BRIGHTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr. George Waters' company is here this week with The Gay Deceivers. Mr. Mark Lester gives a very humorous portrayal of Joseph, the butler; Mr. George Delaforce is capitally suited as Colonel Dewar; Mr. Guy Williams makes an admirable Lieut. Frank Dewar, and displays pleasing vocalisation; Mr. Frank Stanmore is effective as Lord Reggie Muddleton; Miss Pauline Prim is a bright and diverting Rosie; Miss Dorothy Chard sings and acts charmingly as Dora Dartrey; Miss Cicely Stucky is a winsome Winnie Winter; Miss Kate Chard acquits herself admirably as Mrs. Dewar; and the remaining characters are satisfactorily sustained. The Directoire Girls make an excellent chorus.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. Ernest Carpenter's stock company is performing The Shadows of a Great City here this week. Mr. Ronald Adair submits an excellent enactment of Tom Cooper; Mr. Ellis J. Preston is well placed as George Benson; Mr. Edward McLean's Abe Nathan and Mr. Charles A. Preece's Jim Farren merit warm praise; Miss Kathleen Russell gives an admirable impersonation of Nellie Standish; Miss Amy Venimore makes a delightful Annie Standish, and Miss Lucy Murray is a charming Biddy Roonan.

ALHAMBRA.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—An attractive programme is sustained here this week. Maud Rochez presents the Royal Monkeys' music hall with distinct success; Edith Muir and Hubert Bartlett and company are entertaining in the tabloid comedy The Collar Stud; the Three Amaranths win warm applause for their admirable dancing; Devon and Earle contribute smart dances; the Gregson Comedy Trio are amusing in their speciality act, The Dummy; Mary Ambrose is a good character vocalist; Victoria Glenn is a versatile comedienne; Sergeant Brennan displays novel diabolo feats; Minnie Mace is a fascinating comedienne; and the Alhambrascope pictures are up-to-date and very interesting.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—There is a capital company here this week. The Saletos display some marvellous balancing feats; Bains and Reed submit some clever knockabout business; Lena Wylie, South American soprano, sings admirably; Dorothy Gould is a dainty vocal comedienne; Lord, Murray, and Lord are applauded for their comedy gymnastic mélange, The Intruder; Grahame and Harrington are highly successful in their enactment of A Daughter of Pleasure; Lawrence Barclay is an eccentric comedian; Belle Davis and her piccaninnies are entertaining, and the Barrascope pictures are excellent.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Messrs. Frank G. Bayly and Arthur Eldred's company is here this week with The Lord of Latimer Street. Mr. Frank G. Bayly is completely successful in his portrayal of Earl Latimer; Miss Katie Johnson merits unstinted praise for her artistic enactment of Tilda Reeves; Mr. Arthur Eldred submits a good character-study as Alf Jenkins; Miss Margaret Yarde and Mr. F. Morland are well suited as Tilda's mother and father respectively; and Miss Phyllis Manners is highly effective as Lady Latimer.

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mr. W. Alexander Dallas and company opened here on Monday with The World's Great Snare. Mr. David G. Noble gave a fine impersonation of the hero, Royal Keene; Mr. A. Fellows Bassett submitted a capital representation of the villainous Lascelle La Mort; Mr. John Montgomery was admirably suited as Red Heart; Mr. Harry K. Lloyd was amusing as Moses Levy; and Miss Leiselle Delores as Louise Granville, Miss Fay Garnet Vayne as Star Eye, and Miss Jessie Elvin as Wild Rose contributed praiseworthy enactments.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. M. Barrasford; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Fred Bauer.—The animated pictures here still prove very attractive. The Suffragettes' recent great meeting in Hyde Park is capitally depicted; The Gipsy's Daughter conveys an interesting episode in nomadic life; The Nihilist represents a powerful drama; and the amusing films include When Women Rule, The Clown Doctor, Tale of a Shirt, and Who Kneaded the Dough?

BRISTOL. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Messrs. Edward Lloyd and Frank Adair's company is here with Man to Man, the drama being both well staged and capably performed. Mr. Frank R. Robertson acts in good manly style as George Gordon; Mr. Frank Adair is consistent and effective as Richard Ellerton; Mr. Denholm Muir makes a popular part of the Rev. Philip Ormond; Mr. Edward Lloyd is quaintly amusing as Bill Burkley; Miss Louie Adair acts excellently as Ethel Maythorne; Miss Ada Hatchwell is well placed as Ned Doyle; and Miss Evelyn Warde displays power as Gipsy Madge. The comic parts of Samuel Plumtree and Mary are capitally taken by Mr. Herbert Williams and Miss Phyllis Oakley.

PALACE. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—The leading turn here is provided by the Lukushimas, a troupe of Japanese entertainers, including Otora San, described as "Japan's premier lady artist," the act being chiefly acrobatic and equilibristic. Edward Cranston and Mrs. Bennett's company score in the Irish racing sketch, Terry; or, True to His Trust; the Kimberley Boys amuse as grotesque comedians; Carlile and Walker, vocal comedy artists, are entertaining; Trick and Trixie please with a musical turn; James Eadie and Cissie Ramsden score with a musical comedy duologue, Charlie's Visit; Alice Blandford, described as the "New Zealand Nightingale," is a pleasing and competent vocalist; and "One of the Macs" obtains applause for patter and knockabout business. The performance concludes with Bioscope pictures.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Hooker and Davis and their Six "Cowboy" Girls, including Mabel Davis, eccentric toe dancer, provide a pretty song and dance entertainment as the leading turn; Goodfellow and Gregson score with their comedy and dancing act; Tamamoto does a good turn as a Japanese dancer and tight-rope performer; Raie Walters, comedienne, is successful; the Three Sisters Dugnesne are excellent vocalists and dancers; Daley and Collins amuse as comedians; Clive Watts, comedian and dancer, obtains appreciation; and up-to-date pictures conclude.

COLSTON HALL.—Mme. Clara Butt and Mr. Kennerley Rumford gave a very enjoyable concert here on Tuesday evening, it being their first appearance in Bristol on their return from their phenomenally successful tour through Australia and New Zealand.

BURNLEY.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner. — The Faludy Troupe of Hungarian acrobats rouses great enthusiasm, and the turn of Francini Olloms and Page is full of smart jugglery and musical items; Percy Curry's contribution as a comedian is distinctly funny, and Talbot and Pearce in a Japanese duologue, Yo San, are very pretty and admirable; Alice Maude, juvenile, is most successful in imitations of celebrities, and the Cecelias, lady instrumentalists, give excellent selections; Fred Land takes well with "Nursery Ballads," and Master May charms the house with his delightful singing. The Theatroscope completes the good programme with The Ragpicker's Daughter and A Chase for a Husband.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The fare here this week is excellent, and the crowded houses are appreciative of every turn. Herr Paul Conchas is a man of fine physique, and his performance with shells and cannon balls demands great strength and daring; Sahib Gustav Fasola, illusionist, has a number of bewildering tricks, for which he is loudly applauded; Zeta Grey and company present a laughable sketch, The Lancashire Lass, and the Four Maisanos, clown musicians, are clever and funny; Mark Henton is a comedian with good patter; and Recco, in acrobatic burlesque, displays great skill and causes endless laughter; the Sisters Bartholomew sing well, and Carter's Ten San Tan Girls give an excellent vocal scena, An Eastern Slave. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows Father's First Baby.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Another week of living and talking pictures (Gaumont's patent) on the Bioscope and Chronomegaphone respectively, is meeting with continued success, and Mr. Fred Barnard, at whose instigation the venture was made, is to be congratulated.

CARDIFF. — EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—Eugene Stratton occupies premier position this week, and his popularity is greater than ever; Phil Ray is the smartest patter comedian heard here for some considerable time, the twenty minutes occupied by him being one continuous roar of laughter; the graceful and wonderful trick cycling of the Six Proveanies borders on the marvellous; Rich and Rich, comedians, are a couple of old friends, who cause much mirth by their clever repartee; while Ted E. Box is another quaint comedian and exceptionally good whistler; a "taking" turn proved to be that of Elsie Roby, comedienne-pianist, in her novel act, The Shiver, and Will Musgrave, comedian, obtains a good "hand"; a most successful presentation of Home from the Honeymoon is given by Arthur Jefferson, assisted by a clever company, the sketch causing unbounded merriment. An amusing picture on the Bioscope concludes.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Good business is maintained at the popular Palace. A wonderful performance is provided by the marvellous Chanti, who presents his clever quick-change act with novel stage effects; Selby and Myers are exceptionally smart comedians and intricate dancers; Abel and Welsh are well-known as two remarkable "eccentrics"; the Sisters Darnton prove to be a charming duo of vocalists; Allsopp and Bekwith are an entertaining couple of comedians; Corman's Juveniles present a taking scena entitled The Waif, which wins the entire sympathy of the audience; and Madge Field scores with her effectively-rendered songs. The Raymond Bio-tableaux are a further attraction.

CARLISLE. — H. M. THEATRE. — Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—For the Race Week a special attraction is provided in those popular plays Captain Swift and The Idler, admirably enacted by Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft's company. The first-named piece was played on the opening night to a full house, and the artists engaged had every reason to feel the utmost satisfaction at the enthusiastic reception accorded them. Mr. Philip Cuningham, who appeared in the title-rôle, gave a clever and effective performance, which met with unqualified appreciation. That sound actor, Mr. Stephen T. Ewart, was no less successful, his rendering of Gardiner being marked throughout by dramatic skill; Mr. Seabrook, in the hands of Mr. Richard Dalton, became quite a popular character, and his son Harry was ably impersonated by Mr. A. E. Walker; Mr. Haldane Dalton's Marshall was a well-played and effective sketch of a by no means easy part. In the exacting rôle of Mrs. Seabrook, Miss Elspeth Dudgeon acquitted herself in a manner worthy of the highest praise, gaining great sympathy in her emotional scenes; Miss Zoe Davis was charming as Mabel Seabrook; and Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft, Miss Rita Trekelle, and Mr. William Attfield added much to the success of an admirable performance.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—Alec Hurley, the inimitable coster comedian, is on a return visit here, and scoring heavily with The Coster's Friendly Lead; Mayme Cannon, a dainty and refined comedienne, is making an enormous success with her catchy song "When the lights are low"; George Brooks has also established himself a favourite; Farr and Farland are smart cross-talkers, and meet with an ovation for their clever manipulation of the banjo. Other good turns are Lizzie Daniels, comedienne; Marie Gros, comedienne; Anna Kenwick, in American songs and dances; and Cummins and Seaham, acrobatic speciality act. The Pepiscope completes an excellent programme.

NEW PUBLIC HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. F. W. Bolam and Sydney Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sydney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Uden.—Good business is still being done by the Edison Animated Pictures. A capital variety programme is submitted.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—The Loyal Dominion company's animated pictures are amusing, instructive, and dramatic. During the evening Miss Lizzie Casey delights all with her sweetly-rendered songs.

CHATHAM. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard.—Here we have Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company in The Corsican Brothers. Mr. Sydney Bland appears quite successfully as Fabien and Louis dei Franchi. Mr. F. G. Vane is powerful as Chateau Renard, and the Misses Cissie St. Elmo and Aimee Grattian Clyndes do well as Madame dei Franchi and Emilie de Lesparre respectively. The drama is followed by a dramatic episode entitled The Holy War.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—The artistic visions presented by the Parisian beauty, La Freya, are a decided novelty; Vincent is repeating his daring feats of tumbling; Nancy Renshaw's laugh proves contagious; the Hyde and Cody Trio present some smart acrobatics; Theresa and May please all with their protean act; and Arthur Gill, vocalist and mimic; Ruby Emmerson, serio; and Avon and Crest, comedy artists, complete the variety turns. Lacey's Erascope proves as popular as ever.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. E. G. Woodhouse.—That versatile entertainer, Larola, is again delighting gaiety patrons; Ethel Dove is also a big favourite; Bert Williams, accompanied by Tommy, gives some good topical items in his ventriloquial act; Collins and Rice are a lively couple of gagging rhymesters; the Sisters Reno are energetic dancers; the Raymond trio present a well-liked mixture of music and dancing; Rose Cabani is a lively serio; and pictures by the Edisonograph complete.

CHESTER. — ROYALTY THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—For the last week of the present season Mr. Fred J. Little's combination presents a cut-down version of The New World; and the bill also includes Alec Thompson, comedian; Willie Hickes, Irish vocalist; the Sterling Cycling Girls; and Bikello, tramp cyclist. In connection with the cycling turn, competitions are being run during the week. A good selection of topical and comic films are shown by the Bioscope.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harold Montague.—"The Dandies" are a notable attraction here this week, and the attendance is good, considering that the season is still young. Mr. Henry J. Corner meets with a great reception for his songs "A border ballad" and "I beg your pardon," and his monologues. In conjunction with Miss Josephine Gordon, he makes a great hit in the duologue Love and Dentistry. This latter lady, the possessor of a charming voice and pleasing manner, delights with her song "Look out, Mr. Man." Miss Rhoda Gordon appears to great advantage in her item "I've got a spooney-ooney feeling," and her song at the piano entitled "Do I like love?" is charmingly rendered. Mr. Stephen Fitzgerald's humorous items are vociferously applauded. The concerted numbers by the company are praiseworthy.

WESTCLIFFE GARDENS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Graham Russell and Bentley.—The concerts at these gardens are well patronised. Miss Ethel Grimes, soprano, proves herself a singer of exceptional ability; Mr. Harry Barratt's rollicking songs are enthusiastically received; and Mr. Fred Buxton makes a decided hit in his musical novelty act. Mr. Will Bentley is really funny in his song "Geography"; Bert Graham causes hearty laughter with his songs; and Mr. Bernard Russell also contributes laughable items. Mr. Cyril Weller ably presides at the piano.

PALACE-BY-THE-SEA. — Managing-Director, Mr. P. W. Willard.—Several excellent turns are here this week, including the Frantz Comedy Five with their eccentric acrobatic tricks; Grossmith and Grant, "the chorus girl and call boy"; Royston and Royce, comedy artists; the Three Sisters Jerome in Auntie's Maid; Miss Lil Elfrida, vocalist and mimic; Miss Vera Patey, the Summer Girl; and Mr. Fred Dorman, comedian. The Palacescope shows some excellent films.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. W. F. Jury; Manager, Mr. Dudley Harcourt.—The pictures shown here are of the usual high order, including, among others, the Franco-British Exhibition, The Publication of Lloyd's, and also a screamingly funny film, entitled A Rough Journey. Miss Clairette Florence, soprano, renders some particularly good items, and Mr. Jack Horton's illustrated songs are much enjoyed.

COLCHESTER. — HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—Fred Karno's name is pre-eminent on this week's bill, filling the top line with Mumming Birds and footing it with London Suburbia. Both shows go with a rare swing, and reflect the greatest credit on the companies Mr. Karno is presenting. Harry Taft, with characteristic yarns and whistling contributions, is particularly well received; Albert Athas and Lizzie Collins, comedy artists, are much appreciated, the male performer dancing in excellent style; Evelyn Dess, with song and dance to her own banjo accompaniment, is applauded; and the Pathé films gain great admiration.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—At Duty's Call is being presented here. The piece is very finely staged, especially the scene "The Fall of Khartoum." Mr. John Gerant gives a fine rendering of Harold Alison; Mr. Matthew Boulton cleverly portrays the part of Captain Geo. Alison; Mr. Ernest St. John makes a capital General Gordon; and Mr. W. P. Carr as Jack Spencer and Mr. Frank Caffrey as Terry O'Hallaron are most amusing. Miss Edith Western is seen to adv very wonderful feats. Fred Eustace and company give a comedy-drama entitled The Amber Light, which wins much applause; Lowenwirth and Cohan are a couple of good comedians; Hurman gives a skilful juggling display; a most enjoyable performance is given by Miss Dot Stephens, a clever comedienne; Jack Crawley appears in a pretty and novel act, Lights Out; and Marguerite Ismay and her White Coons in a novel dance.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—The John Leopold company fills the star turn at the above house in a sketch entitled The Houseboat. The Seven Wulfrunas appear in Fun in a Café; Howe and Ardie are a couple of clever comedy gymnasts; some charmng acting is given by Chas. Kitts and Rhoda Windrum in their military comedy The Cuckoo; Mlle. Eldee appears in an artistic posing exhibition; Moon and Morris are capable comedians and eccentric dancers; Mr. Hugh Barclay is a baritone of considerable ability; and the Bioscope pictures conclude.

CROYDON.—HIPPODROME AND NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Samuel James and Newman Maurice.—A very excellent programme is provided here this week. Mr. D. Watson gives a good cornet performance; Ethel Scheffer is again welcomed with her illustrated songs; Harry Bentley, comedian, is well received; and an excellent sketch entitled The Night Watchman, is given by Fred Southern's company. Some interesting animated pictures are shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hal Cummings.—Mr. Leonard Pagden and company are here in The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Mr. Pagden contributes a striking performance of Aubrey Tanqueray; Miss Lucy Wilson as Paula merits general praise; Miss Gladys Bartle-Frere as Mrs. Cortelyon proves satisfactory; Miss Muriel Alston as Lady Orreyed is well suited; Miss Lorna Lawrence makes a charming Ellean; Mr. J. Edward Pearce as Cayley Drummle is excellent; Mr. Guy Fletcher is a success; Mr. James Hussey is seen to advantage as Sir George Orreyed; and Mr. Ernest A. Duglas is capital as Gordon Jayne.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—A very entertaining bill is here. Bosanquet and company, at the bottom of the bill, in a musical sketch, contribute a fine performance; the Royal Delomes are up-to-date singers and dancers; and Mr. John Warren and company in The Magic Carpet, is also an attraction. Adah Payne, comedienne; Fred Keeton, comedian, Marin and Lona, juggling acrobatic act; Reid and Power in comedy duologue; and the Peniscope pictures are also listed.

DARWEN.—HIPPODROME AND THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. A. M. Loader; Manager, Mr. J. A. Whitehouse.—Excellent films are shown by Ralph Pringle's North American Animated Picture Co. In addition, we have the Idento Bros., comedy jugglers, both smart and amusing; York Wilson, eccentric comedian; and Jack Monks, tenor, on a return visit.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Langley Wyatt.—At the head of the bill this week is Arthur Lennard, whose character singing gains him unstinted recognition. Another excellent turn is that of Ross and Lewis, described as the Yankee Doodle Duo, whose clever dancing completely captures their audience. Cull Pitt, in his tricks, talks, and topics, is very amusing; Stelling and his canine comedian are entertaining, the dog showing remarkable intelligence; the Wedburns, comedy instrumentalists and vocalists, cause much merriment; the Maro Duo are clever triple-bar comedians; Lizzie Fletcher is a pleasing comedienne; and Alec Lyner is a successful comedian and dancer. The Bioscope concludes a good all-round programme.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Charles H. Lester's company again occupies the boards here, and is producing an emotional drama entitled A Life for a Life. Mr. C. H. Lester as Don Leon Fernandez plays with his customary skill throughout; and the Pedro di Calci of Mr. Charles Yorke is an exciting portrayal. Miss Beatrice Anderson as Eulalie achieves success; Mr. Harry T. Wood as Kit Oswald and Miss Dorothy Riddell as Nancy Dorn work together in capital style; the rôle of John Evelyn is ably sustained by Mr. Henry C. Gilpin; Mr. Horace Buckley and Miss Lydia Hart in their respective characters create hearty amusement; and Little Irene is a clever child actress and neat dancer.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Despite adverse atmospheric conditions, the Metropole draws large houses, the attraction being Messrs. Chabot and Ballard's company in Only a Woman. Mr. F. Green is a manly Lieut. R. Summerfield; Mr. W. H. Wilson makes an excellent Lieut. Rodney Summerfield; Mr. Percy Ballard does well as Courtenay Wallace; Miss Violet Cranford scores in the title-rôle; and Miss Flora Leslie and Miss Rosie Fields are responsible for no small share of the success.

DONCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—An excellent company is here this week. Flo Penley and George English in their light and agreeable musical comedy sketches, In Ould Kildare and Four a Shilling, Mackerel) are distinctly successful; Mr. Tom Johnstone, actor vocalist, is warmly received; Miss Evie Temple, comedienne, gives generously from an ample répertoire; E. W. Selman's forte is humorous songs; Ivy Gallard is a pleasing comedienne and danseuse; and others contributing to the programme are Stilvo, the tramp on stilts; Mario Collette, the singing mill girl; and Mr. George Edwards in selected poems by George R. Sims and Rudyard Kipling.

DOUGLAS.—GAIETY THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—The evergreen East Lynne, under the ægis of Mr. Arthur Gibbons, is the attraction here this week. Miss Kitty Cavendish as Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine was emotionally pathetic, and obtained a popular success; Mr. Frank Bradley acted Sir Francis Levison with keen perception; Mr. Frederick Moyes as Archibald Carlyle was impressive; Mr. Julian Revarez made an adequate Justice Hare, sufficiently irascible and self-important; the Barbara Carlyle of Miss Mabel Sealby was pretty and convincing. The other characters were capably played by the members of Mr. Herbert Ralland's company.

DERBY CASTLE, LTD.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Kelly.—Dancing is here provided to the witching melodies of Mr. Harry Wood's orchestra. An excellent variety programme is also presented in the recently-erected Opera House. The Brothers Miller are quaintly funny as burlesque wrestlers and patterers; Miss Nellie Moore repeats her artistic impersonations; the Firmans appear in their sketch The Fire Station; the Velter Bros. exploit an episode which catches the attention of the public; Vernon's Bioscope illustrates the world's happenings; the Douglas Male Choristers are excellent.

THE GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Resident-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—The attraction at this playhouse is Professor Wood's musical and pictorial organisation, popular combination of up-to-date ballads, the most recent music, and fresh pictures. The principal artists are Miss Nellie Hewett, Mr. Ben Simpson, Meinheer Du Val, Miss Elsie May, and Mr. George Christo.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Lessee, Mr. Charles Dare.—This is the anniversary week of a continuous opening of the Empire Theatre for more than twelve months. The pictures are up-to-date, and the variety programme has merit.

MR. FRED BUXTON'S Pierrots and Tea Village, with its ever-changing programme, is an excellent and refined entertainment which is rewarded by good attendances.

MESSRS. ADELER AND SUTTON'S Minstrels on Onchan Head secure liberal patronage.

DUBLIN.—QUEEN'S ROYAL THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. S. Pearse; Manager, Mr. Jones.—This establishment is still running, with great success, and the pictures displayed are heartily enjoyed by the large audience. Adding greatly to the entertainment are Major Arnold, conjurer; Miss Fern, vocalist; Bert Vincent, comedian; and Arthur Warren, comedian.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Winifred Hare is an artist of exceptional ability, and her refined songs are a great treat; Fred Curran supplies a most enjoyable turn with his quaint songs. Another good and amusing performance is that of Mitchell and Cain as The Frenchman and the Other Fellow; the Sisters St. Julian sing pleasing duets and dance well; Gus Hindell scores in capital style; and Cline and Clark win rounds of applause for their vocal and speciality dancing act; Harry Simmons and Harry Weldon, comedians, both contribute successfully. Films, Ltd., still continues to hold a high place in favour with animated pictures.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The New Macs easily maintain their position as patter comedians; the Rickards Trio create much hilarity in their comedy acrobatic act; and Luna Love, comedienne and dancer, is well received. A dexterous performance on the trapeze and rings is contributed by Petro and Leon, and the Sisters Dorrell are clever vocalists and dancers; Raglus is highly amusing in his comedy juggling act, and Jennie Hartley gives her songs in capital style; Alexander Prince, concertina soloist, Frank Lynne, comedian, and the Bioscope complete a good bill.

PAVILION (KINGSTOWN).—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's star company is drawing big houses. Miss Emilie Tait's vocal items are charmingly rendered, and deservedly encored; as a character impersonator Mr. Tom Stuart would be hard to beat; the Terpsichorean act of Miss Mona Vivian is deserving of special mention; Mr. Paddy Duprez, comedian, scores a decided success; Mr. Albert Chapman, baritone vocalist, is much appreciated; and Mr. Jack Macdermott is as humorous as ever.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The company engaged here includes Henshall and Foster, sketch artists; May Leigh, comedienne; Harry Albury, comedian; May Sinclair, comedienne; George Parry, comedian; and the Cinematograph.

EASTBOURNE.—NEW PIER THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Peter Davey's company is appearing here on a return visit with Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner. Mr. Langhorne Burton works earnestly and well as Captain Peyton; Mr. George Mallet as Valentine furnishes clever work and is well received; Mr. Frank Harding does excellently as Major Colden; Mr. Wilson Blake contributes usefully as John Edwards; the part of Sergeant Carrington is ably enacted by Mr. Donald Young; and Mr. F. Woodville and Mr. R. Paterson as the servants, Black Sam and Cuff, are skilful helpers. Miss Ruby Miller has a charming manner, and undertakes the rôle of Miss Elizabeth with dainty skill; Miss Phyllis Back is a pretty and engaging Molly Edwards; and Mrs. Peter Davey is a bright, interesting Mistress Sarah.

The Russian giant, Machnow, 9ft. 3in. high, is exhibiting himself here during the week, and is exciting much curiosity and amazement.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE. — Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company is appearing here in Are You a Mason? Mr. Howard L. Tracy and Mr. H. Langdon are natural, bright, and entertaining as Frank Perry and George Fisher, the latter very cleverly impersonating the French dressmaker; Mr. E. H. Paterson is an amusing Amos Bloodgood; Mr. Charles McLagan is a hearty and earnest John Hatton; Mr. E. E. Clive contributes a very vivid picture of the "stagey" Hiram Travers; and Mr. J. H. Wallis is a satisfactory Morrison. A remarkably well-played part is that of Mrs. Bloodgood by Miss Adelaide Grace; Miss R. Johnson is a pretty and graceful Mrs. Perry; Lulu and Amy have very charming and attractive representatives in Miss S. Nicolls and Miss Babs Stuart; Miss Lillie Lee is very good as Mrs. Halton; Miss Edith Drummond is a richly humorous Irish servant, Lottie; and Miss Ploengains is a smart Mlle. Amitage. A Bad Penny precedes, and in this Mr. E. E. Clive is a conspicuous success as Richard Hanbury.

THE PARK PAVILION.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. E. A. Brown.—Mr. Albany Ward's series of animated pictures of pageants, &c., are very interesting and well shown. Mr. G. A. Deighton is a smart and pleasant conjurer, and his ventriloquial efforts are well received.

THE ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—Slippere, the blind entertainer, tops the bill here this week, and his imitations and musical contributions arouse storms of applause. Mr. Johnny Danvers pays a welcome return, and sings and dances in his own able manner; Mr. Nevill Graham and company are very successful in the clever sketch The Man in the Street; Miss Bessie Butt sings and dances pleasingly; O'Malley and Brown sing, dance, and patter in good style; Miss Nellie Chandos is a clever singer of coon songs and dances well; and new pictures are added.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. Charles M. Bestic's company began an engagement of six nights here on Monday with the bright musical play The Flower Girl, in the presence of a large audience. The title-part was played by charming Miss Dorothy Firmin, who acts with genuine dramatic skill, and sings with feeling and taste; Mr. Robert H. Howard, a painstaking actor, was a pleasant Honourable Billy Greenhill, and sang with much expression, his rendering of "Sing me to sleep" in the second act receiving an enthusiastic encore; Mr. Martin Adeson, as Joe Wheeler, sang and acted with great humour, and he was ably seconded by Mr. Alfred Donohoe as Johnny Wheeler; Mr. Edward Kipling's portrait of the dude, Reginald Rackit, was clever, and he danced with conspicuous neatness; distinct hits were made by Miss Florence Wilton, an actress of agreeable presence and immense vivacity, as Lizette de Racquet, and by Mr. Henry Adnes as Alphonse de Racquet, a very amusing impersonation; Miss Jeanie Holmes was admirable as a Suffragette. The chorus work was well done, and the mounting of the piece left nothing to be desired.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Dutch Daly's amusing method of story-telling, combined with his excellence as a concertina player, continues to mark his turn as one of the most enjoyable items of the bill; Ella Shields secures warm approval as a singer of coon songs; and Russell Wallett's female impersonation, "the lady in black," is favourably received; Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, assisted by Albert Mason, succeed admirably in the very laughable sketch Would-be Actors Rehearsing a Drama; Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink's company of human and equine star performers introduce an important spectacular production, entitled St. George and the Dragon; and the King's College Boys prove themselves pleasing vocalists in their scena The Students' Concert. Max York and his trained fox-terriers give a highly interesting display; and comedy turns, with or without dancing, from Hans and Lux, Bert Weston, and Leonie Dixon, supplemented by Bioscope pictures, complete a well-diversified programme.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Mr. Fred Karno's company is appearing here this week in His Majesty's Guests. Mr. George Hestor as Sergeant Lightning causes a great deal of laughter; and Miss Blanche Lynd is a capital Lady Maud Basem.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—This is the last week of the present stay of the Gipsies and their Jester. On Monday evening a Japanese fête—it is a novel and pleasing form of entertainment—was held.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth.—Carta and Mirtziana top the bill here this week with their Continental equilibristic act, an exceedingly clever turn. Mr. Padey Pennington, thought reader and ventriloquist, evokes great interest; Gravetta and Parr, in a pot-pourri act, are good; Miss Amy Elcock gives a smart little turn; and Sydney Back as the "Welsh woman at the piano," introduces some unique trick playing.

TOWN HALL.—Lessee, Mr. E. J. Chadwick.—The London Animated Picture Company is still giving entertainments at the Town Hall, and attract good audiences. The films are excellent. Special mention must be made of the Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau.

GATESHEAD. — METROPOLE THEATRE. — Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. France.—Miss Lydia Donovan's company, in Her One Great Sin, occupies the stage here. Mr. Frank Lennard makes a manly Reuben Warhurst; Mr. C. Quinton Fulford ably portrays the villain; Mr. A. G. Raymond is amusing as Jerry Jumble; Miss Donovan submits a telling impersonation of Grace Warhurst; Miss Nelly Lambert adorns the part of Nancy Wimpenny; and Miss Maudie Lambert is a dainty and refined Gracie Warhurst.

KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—John E. Coyle, a comedian with a style peculiarly his own, is "on top" at this house; Cromo and Hamilton present a novel act, named Artful Aladdin; Flo Hilton is a clever male impersonator; the Marconis, with some wonderful electrical experiments, are highly appreciated; Matthews and Brown, a pair of coloured men, dance themselves into favour; Bert and Dora, comedy artists; Aba Be's Picture Postcard Album, and the King's Pictures are also billed.

GILLINGHAM (Kent).—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Jack Woolf.—This week's programme is headed by Mr. Leoni Clarke, with his collection of trained cats, birds, and rats, and the novelty and attractiveness of the performance is greatly to the liking of Hippodrome patrons. The major portion of the programme is provided by the Bioscope pictures, which are varied and entertaining. During the week Beauty Competitions have been held for ladies and gentlemen, valuable prizes being offered.

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—Mr. Edward Marris's company is here this week with The Gentleman Jockey, in which Miss Ethel Ward gives a spirited representation of the heroine, Poppy Grayson; while Mr. Cecil C. Parke fills the title-part with marked success. Mr. Helier Le Maistre acts the part of a racehorse trainer, and his fine voice is heard in several effective songs; the shadiness sometimes connected with the Turf is well expressed by Mr. Walter B. Nugent as Frank Snakeworth and Mr. Victor Rowland as a chauffeur Miss Lillian Drake as Kitty Granmere gives exquisite expression to the song in Act III.; and the Lottie Stone Quartette are equally effective in their dances. Mr. Leonard Dalrymple is well suited as Archie Fitzherbert; and Mr. Stanley Jefferson makes a good appearance as Tommy, the stable boy. The fun of the play is well sustained by Mr. George Brentwood as the Village Policeman and Miss Gertie Reid as Pippin.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson.—Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company, in A Master of Millions, is highly successful. Messrs. Alex. C. Grant, John L. Schofield, and Captain A. E. Winnington Barnes all do full justice to the work entrusted to them. Special mention should also be made of the parts filled by Miss Phyllis Elton and Miss Edna Wilkinson.

EMPIRE. — District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Harry Lauder is once again back among his "ain folk," and filling the Empire to its utmost capacity. His new songs go well, and the revival of "Calligan" is much enjoyed. Wille Brothers, in their marvellous head-balancing feats, excite great astonishment; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden contribute one of their clever sketches; Mena Brae takes well in her Dutch song and dance; Little Betty Green is a great favourite, and a really smart young artist; the Kurios give an ingenious turn, full of tricks and surprises, and concluding with a clever display of painting in smoke and colours; Chas. Fisher's opera company contribute several operatic selections; David Stewart, in his illustrated songs, proves himself a tenor vocalist of much ability; Vickey Delmar, acrobatic dancer and musical specialist, completes an excellent all-round company.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Joe Peterman's company, in The Pawnbroker, occupies the principal place in this week's programme. Silbon's Novelty Circus, with their trained cats, dogs, and ponies, is heartily enjoyed and deservedly popular; Mallia and Bart give a smart acrobatic turn under the name of "The Baggage Smashers"; Sandy and Carl, old favourites here, take well in their singing, dancing, and boxing turn; Little Ikey Moe, a very young Hebrew comedian, tells a lot of clever stories of Yiddish thrift, &c.; Ray and Delmore, with Miss Marie Stanley, appear in a comedy sketch, In a Fix; the Onlaw Trio contribute a marvellous wire-walking act by a lady, the ends of the wire being held by the teeth of the two gentlemen—a wonderful performance; St. Ruth and Conyers, two clever lady vocalists; Lina Leslie, comedienne; and the Glasgow Police Sports on the Bioscope, also prove popular items.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—Morris Cronin, with his cleverly-arranged juggling scena, tops the bill here, and the neatness and dexterity of all the tricks cause much comment. The Musical Johnstons demonstrate their dexterity on the xylophone in several high-class items; Frank Elliston's company take well in the playlet, My Lady Betty, the three characters being finely acted by Miss Nellie Stevens and Messrs. Richard Olliver and Frank Elliston; the turn of the Barnard Family, "Dolls Alive," is a neat and well-worked show; Fred Cary scores as an eccentric facial comedian; the popular Martin Conway comes in for a big slice of public favour, all his songs going strong; the Almas show wonderful nerve in their equilibrist feats; Dandy George and his clever dog, "Rosie," show the acme of animal training; the Carlyles, in whirlwind dancers, and the ingenious and clever display made by Wylie's dogs, complete an excellent bill.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie. — The bill is headed this week by Edwin Boyde, who receives a hearty welcome. Billy Williams, of the "velvet suit," is also enhancing his popularity; in the gymnastic line a finished performance is given by the La Faille Troupe; while those who love a good song are well catered for by Lily Lonsdale. Nat Abatt, a really smart gag artist and instrumentalist, is applauded.

HASTINGS.—ROYAL CONCERT HALL.—Signor B. Volpi's Royal Italian Circus continues to meet with well-merited success. Animals introduced by Signor Luigi Volpi, and trained by him, include the equestrian somersault dog Gardia, a trio of skipping dogs, a novel act by pony and dog, and the leaping pony Gigi. Signor Cembrani exhibits a rope-walking monkey and an equestrian baboon, with a novel act by dogs, pony, and goat, and the dog Spitz on horseback. Directeur B. Volpi introduces a dozen monkeys and a bear in one act, named A Banquet, a fancy dress ball by a dozen dogs, a quadrille by four ponies ridden by monkeys, a march past by ponies, dogs, monkeys, and goats, and ten musical ponies, with the elephant Jumbo, jun., as conductor. The Circus Band, directed by Mr. R. Niblett, give efficient musical assistance, and the clowns, Nimble Nip and Wee Wullie, contribute grotesque comicalities.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Griffiths and Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Miss Peggy Fame dances and sings in a manner that wins great favour; Mr. Harry Wright, comedian, quite excels as an extemporising vocalist; the New Hipposcope illustrates some excellent up-to-date subjects; Mr. Fred Ginnett's company and his team of highly-trained horses, perform the popular equestrian spectacle, Turpin's Ride to York. The incidents of the long journey, and the death of Black Bess, &c., are graphically depicted. The equestrians later appear in a laughable sketch, The Remounts. Remarkable feats of memory are exhibited by Datas, who is a veritable encyclopædia; an attractive descriptive vocalist is seen in Miss Nellie Gannon; and the Delevines are very successful in their interesting act Flipp and Flopp.

PIER PAVILION.—Pier-Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Miss Annie Stalman and a smart company are appearing here in Pinero's interesting comedy, The Magistrate, their performance meeting with pronounced success. Mr. Besley Beltran, in the title-rôle, gives the character weight, dignity, and repose; as Colonel Lukyn, Mr. Drew Mackintosh gives an intelligent impersonation of the part. The juvenile rôle of Cis Farringdon, taken by Mr. Robert Bottomley deserves high commendation; Miss Annie Stalman makes a charming Agatha Posket, playing with a light and effective touch which is an immense advantage to the play; Miss Nancy Harding, as her sister, Charlotte, is charmingly natural; Miss Josy Hammersley quite realises the character of Beattie Tomlinson, the reduced music-teacher; and Bullamy, of the Mul-

Interesting Illustrated Postcards.

Nothing more charmingly artistic than these twelve Odol picture-postcard portraits of the most lovely actresses of the day can be produced.

Most of these beauties have been specially photographed for these cards, and each is revealed in a most characteristic and captivating pose and expression.

They have been selected from the hundreds of theatrical stars and celebrities who have volunteered independent and disinterested testimony to the efficacy of Odol, the World's dentifrice, which not only beautifies but also preserves the teeth, and the fragrant taste it leaves in the mouth is most refreshing.

Send 2d. in stamps, along with your name and address, and one set of 12 postcards will be sent post free (7 sets a 1s.).—Address, Odol Chemical Works, 99, Park Street, London, S.E.

berry Police Court, is well taken by Mr. H. P. Owen. The piece is tastefully mounted, and good audiences are attracted.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—The Wallis Arthur Syndicate Entertainments opened the season here on Monday. Mr. George Blackmore is again the manager, and the large audience gave him a warm welcome, and encored his humorous songs; Miss Elsie English opened with a piano solo, and afterwards sang songs to her own accompaniment; Mr. H. V. Crofton, the possessor of a good baritone voice, sang acceptably; Miss Marie Schultz rendered humorous songs with pleasing effect. Some good character selections were contributed by Mr. Dolf Wheeler; Miss Sybil St. Elmo, a cultivated soprano, gained much applause. As in previous seasons, the concert party perform in the Alexandra Park each afternoon, under the auspices of the Borough Entertainments' Association.

PUBLIC HALL.—The London Animated Picture Company's entertainment continues here this week. The pictures are admirably presented, and include dramatic, humorous, and pathetic subjects.

ST. LEONARD'S PIER PAVILION. — Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—A welcome revisit is being paid by Dr. Seaton, with his interesting animated photographic pictures. There is a very varied selection, many of them being of a humorous character; for instance, The Boys' Half-Holiday, &c. The story of "Black Beauty," a favourite horse, the Victoria Falls by Dawn, and Coal Mining in Wales are graphically depicted. Some pleasing songs are introduced by Miss May Davis and Mr. Harry Hougkins.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—This place continues to be in the hands of the Bioscope operators, and good films are shown and thoroughly appreciated. One specially interesting film is that depicting the training of firemen for the fire brigades of Paris.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—A programme full of good things is provided this week by D'Arc's Mannikins, in clever imitations of popular variety stars; Miss Hanid Alexander, a gifted young lady, in a brilliant turn at the piano; the Leonards, duettists; Millicent Freres, in their daring gymnastic performance; the Sisters Pine, in their humorous duologue; Hersleb Bros., a couple of fine acrobats; the Merrions, in a novel musical comedy turn; and some interesting pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. A. Graham; Resident and General-Manager, Mr. Harry Dundord.—Retribution, a powerful sketch of Russian life, is cleverly presented by Herbert Terry's company. Mr. Graham's own juveniles make a welcome reappearance. They have wonderfully improved, and are recalled many times. Ray and Calden are a smart duo; the Falcons are clever comedy equilibrists; and other turns include Harry Nelson, Mark Lemon, and Beau and Belle.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Mlle. Sahara, in a series of classical dances, tops the bill; the Fitzroys are smart gymnasts; and other turns include Sam Walsh, Two Sports, Charles Daly's sketch, My Wife's Husband, Harry Hutin, and Dolly Boston.

ILKESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Madame Lucretia, an exceedingly clever dancer; Josie Townshend, in ballads; the Miltons, in a skating act; Henriette and Selina, musicians; Priestman, clay modeller; Ellis Marion, comedienne; Miss Garibaldi, contralto; and Chas. Waterfield, jester, are the entertainers this week.

IPSWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Stead.—Miss Carrie Laurie's Eight Juveniles give an excellent entertainment, and thoroughly deserve the enthusiastic applause they evoke; Miss Dorothy Clarke, on a return visit, has a charming method of singing Irish songs; Allis and Cassati give some comical duets; and Beatrice Bounie is a singer of merit. The Alberto Troupe of four are accomplished gymnasts; Stylo is a clever juggler with hoops of various kinds; Will Driscoll sings of a Bachelor's Paradise; Harry Cotton is also in the bill; and the Bioscope concludes.

LANCASTER. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—The Four Emilions in an acrobatic performance head the bill, and are nightly recalled; Lee and Kingston win favour with a comedy act, The Resourceful Lover; Edna Latonne sings some capital songs; Charlie Carr, comedian, has a great reception; the Three Pirmans introduce a novelty pantomime act, Dans le Jardin; Bessie Travis is a ventriloquist of no mean order; and the Keiths supply a pleasing instrumental turn. The Hippograph still proves a popular item.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—The Eve of Her Wedding is this week presented here. Miss Sadie Smith plays Mavis Leverton in charming style; and Reine de Telle is cleverly embodied by Miss Nita Langford; Mr. Arthur L. Read shows ability in his handling of the part of George Tremain; Mr. Chas. H. Gallier does well as Dick Leverton, and good work is also done by Mr. Louis Hector and Mr. Chas. Groves, jun.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—E. H. Bostock's troupe of educated baboons are wonderfully intelligent; Thierry and Liell present a dramatic sketch with success; the Betsons, in a comedy cycling item, are amusing; Katie Butler is a pleasing comedienne; Olga Doré is an accomplished vocalist; and Fred Athalan, balancer extraordinary; Melbourne and McCarthy, comedy duo; Amos Howard, vocalist and dancer; and Fred Bamford, whistling expert, are all successful.

EMPIRE.—Hetty King tops the bill here, and great enthusiasm greets her rendering of her songs; W. C. Fields, comic juggler, is having a big week; a remarkable whirlwind dancing performance is supplied by the Molasso Quartet; the Three Prestons score well in a humorous farce; those accomplished musicians Roma and Romani do a talented turn; Sinclair and Whiteford evoke applause by a neat comedy sketch; Leo Stormont, vocalist, has a warm reception; and Chas. J. Johnson and Nelson's Newsboys are excellent turns.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Yukio Tani, the renowned Jap, is having strenuous bouts with local wrestlers here; an Australian episode, The Sundowner, presented by Kitchen and Lister's company is much enjoyed; Gus Harris, a clever Hebrew humorist, has a big reception; and an acrobatic sketch by the Cattaneos goes well, as also does a similar entertainment by the Zaid Trio; Dan Thomas is successful with his humorous contributions; and good turns are done by Satsuma, a weird mystifier; the Four Aces, with a Continental speciality; B. Babington, vocalist; and Stacey and Williams, in song and dance.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Frederick Maxwell and company lead the bill here with the dramatic sketch The Last Command, which is much enjoyed; Cosgrove and Burns prove entertaining in a neat comedy episode; Harry Conlin leads the comedians in clever style; Charles Rose is a capable comedy specialist; and Fremel and Fremel, Rosie Coleman, Minnie D'Aubyn, and Godfrey James are doing particularly well.

LEICESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont.—Mr. Samuel James is presenting the melodramatic play Wanted by the Police, which is interpreted by a company of all-round excellence, and is especially well staged. Mr. S. James is a manly and convincing Philip Stanhope; Mr. Ernest Regent plays well as Richard Crawford, and Mr. Willis Collins is capital as Silas Underwood. Mr. Fred W. Graham creates endless amusement as Charley Sparrow, and contributes a song in his usual acceptable manner; Mr. Ronald Grahame, the author, is seen to considerable advantage as Nunkey Snarl; Mr. George Thorpe does well as the detective, Bertie Beresford; Miss Helen Vigors is sympathetic and clever as Mary Stanhope; Miss Eva Bertram is always good as Fannie Fordyce; and Miss Ethel Bateman is vivacious and smart as Molly, her song and dance also meeting with great appreciation.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hattoll Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertie Ralland.—Van Biene, the famous actor-musician, so popular with both theatre and music hall audiences at Leicester, is on a welcome return visit, and is receiving a warm welcome. He is presenting the one-act playlet The Master Musician, in which his remarkable gift as a performer on the 'cello is a conspicuous feature. Admirable support is forthcoming from Miss Lena Burnleigh and Miss Eileen Van Biene. Another smart turn is given by Howard and Harris, a mirth-provoking comedy duo, in The Adventures of a Happy Tramp. Ed. E. Ford, the Australian sundowner, who can twist his face into all conceivable shapes, is as popular as ever. Alix Lukos, an actor-vocalist and protean artist of great ability, scores a well-deserved success in his scena The Language of Fate. Ada Cerito, a beautifully-costumed and clever comedienne, is heartily appreciated; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, trick cyclists, go through some remarkably clever feats, their turn also having the merit of providing plenty of funny business; the Cambrian Trio of lady vocalists sing sweetly; Nancy St. John is an entertaining comedienne and dancer; the Bioscope is a special feature with the fantastical film, in twenty coloured tableaux, The Legend of the Ghost. Ray Wallace being unable to appear, her place is being billed by the versatile Bensons, who are making a hit as dancers, vocalists, and comedy artists.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—At the head of this week's show are Mr. John Henderson and company in the romantic and intensely thrilling playlet Under the Maple Leaf, which is admirably acted and staged, and is scoring a thoroughly well-deserved success. Mr. John Henderson as Sandy McFarlane plays with true histrionic ability, and Miss Millie Henderson shines as Lizzie Sinclair. Captain Kettle is particularly good as a magician, his coin and card tricks being done with a smartness that bewilders the audience; Louie Hurman, an attractively-costumed and chic burlesque actress, renders her songs in good style. Other capital items are contributed by Stuart and Evans, comedy conversationalists and dancers; Jack Foley, comedian; the Sisters Rivers, duettists and dancers; Learto, musical eccentric, and his well-trained dog Babs; and the Lovelaces in illustrated songs. A special feature is Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope depicting On the Riviera and The Chauffeur's Nightmare.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. A. Hurley.—Another grand array of comedy and dramatic pictures is shown here this week, the principal ones being The Combined Cycle Leagues' Cycle Run from Leicester Market-place to Enderby Strawberry Gardens (a special film), A Big Nocturnal Fire, Life of a Comic Song, The Juvenile Scientist and Arctic Hunting. Variety is interspersed by Bella Moody, a popular vocalist, who has been retained another week, in new songs; Tom Carpenter, who shines in a very good exhibition of ball-punching. Syd Harrison, eccentric comedian, the winner of last week's singing competition, is rewarded with a week's salaried engagement. Another competition is taking place this week exclusively for amateurs.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—Under the Gaslight was presented here for the first three nights of the week by Mr. Felix Pitt and stock company, Mr. Pitt being seen to advantage as Snorkey; Ray Trafford was capitally played by Mr. Charles Halling; Miss Muriel Dean was charmingly sympathetic as Laura Courtland; Miss May Warden played cleverly as Pearl Courtland, and Mr. Edward Warden gave a very able portrayal of Byke. The comedy was well looked after by Mr. Hyland O'Shea as Bermudas and Miss Edie Martin as Peachblossom; whilst the songs contributed in Act. II. by Miss Edie Martin, Miss May Warden, and Mr. Hyland O'Shea were highly appreciated. The Betrayer is billed for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

LEITH.—LORD JOHN SANGER AND SONS' ROYAL HIPPODROME AND MENAGERIE.—A three days' visit from this well-known travelling combination has drawn crowded audiences to each of the two daily performances. Excellent acrobatic displays were given by Zampo and Clown in their somersault throwing, by La Belle Fondants and Comical Pimpo in an up-to-date wire act, by the Airlees on the flying trapeze, and by the ladder performers illustrating the sports of ancient Rome. The equestrian and other animal turns were marked by great skill and novelty, and included a clever horse and elephant tableau presented by Coleman and company, dexterous feats by the Austins, a marvellous exhibition by the Maro troupe of riders, and the school horse Hawcombe, introduced by Miss Lina. Pimpo's canine wonders showed extraordinary intelligence, and the jumping of Snowflake was one of the records of the show; Cyclo's sensational act of being run over by a loaded motor-car might be turned to good account by educational authorities in these automobile days; Turpin's Ride to York concluded a most successful and enjoyable performance.

LINCOLN. — PALACE. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. R. R. Black.—The first visit of La Milo is proving a splendid draw, in spite of the heat, and two crowded houses acclaimed her most artistic act on Monday. Her poses, amid an effective stage setting, silenced any adverse criticism promptly, and the artist had to appear at the close to acknowledge the heartiest demonstrations of approval. Bioscope films of the Coventry Pageant and Cruikshanks' entertaining sketches are shown in conjunction. The Four Kellys present an extremely smart acrobatic act, and the Zelovas, Elma Morris, Clara Pledger, Lytton and Bland, the Sisters Thorne, and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are also attractive.

LIVERPOOL. — ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—The attraction here during the week has been Is Life worth Living? presented by Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company. Mr. Douglas Vigors made a manly Lionel Roy; Miss Lillian Earle showed discretion in the rôle of Madge Roxton; Miss Jennie Burgoyne was a powerful Isabel Corsbie; Mr. Herbert Hollister handled the part of Randolph Kerr satisfactorily; Mr. Harry Bristow and Miss Olive Lanty, as Peter and Sally Sloke, portrayed with effect a pair of ruffians; and other well-drawn characters were those of Roland Roxton (Mr. Frank Dennis), Tim (Mr. Albert Woodhall), Betty Dabbs (Miss Pearl Noyle), and Adam Tozey (Mr. James E. Manning).

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Messrs. Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod's company paid a return visit here this week with The Prodigal Parson. In the title-rôle Mr. Garrod was seen to particular advantage; Miss Bertha Kingston showed feeling as the parson's wife; Mr. Paul Beckett handled the part of Enoch Jaggins in masterly fashion; and excellent support also came from Messrs. Charles Ashwell (Ben Jaggins) and Walter Vincent (Ned Kettlepin) and the Misses Madge Gillard (Myrtle), E. Fredericks (Pomeroy), and Enid Edoni (Gretchen). On Friday evening The Sleigh Bells, in two acts, was given.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Happy Fanny Fields topped the bill here during the week, pleasing greatly with her Dutch songs; Miss Marquis exhibited her cleverly-trained cobs; Hallen and Hayes had a diverting comedy act; R. H. Douglass, an accomplished monologue artist, found general acceptance; the always welcome lively Lily Langtry was rapturously applauded for her taking songs and remarkable movements; some sensational work on the trapeze was shown by Lozelle; the Eight Empire Girls found general favour for their songs and dances; and also in the list were Frank Seeley, eccentric comedian; and Jack Neil, Scotch comedian.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Here this week For Better or Worse has been staged by Mr. Fred Granville's own company. Miss Pattie Hastings made a pathetic Olive Heathcote; Mr. G. M. Newall did well in the character of Captain Frank Hilliard; and the lighter parts were agreeably undertaken by Miss Jennie Hallworth and Mr. Evan Roland.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Dora Lyric headed the programme here this week, and pleased greatly with her latest successful songs; Frank Cass had a cordial reception on visiting this popular resort once more, his songs and patter proving very enjoyable; Hayes and Merritt, the bounding trampolinists, kept their audience in a merry humour; a smart drawing-room entertainment, entitled Little Charlie, or the Twin Sister, provided by the Arthur Lloyd Trio, was received with general favour; Merton and Rydon showed themselves to be a most capable couple of vocal and comedy speciality artists; Steve Bartle gave an able turn as a concertina player; Will Doran and company caused endless laughter with their absurdity, The Inventors; and Almon, the upside-down marvel, also appeared.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—The humorous Julian Rose, who made a big hit on a previous visit to Liverpool, was here in big type this week, and proved as successful as before; Leonard Gautier's animated toy shop was a most pleasing turn; Tiller's Manchester Mites sang and danced to everybody's satisfaction; a cordial reception was given to Jane Eyre for her popular songs; Hanvarr and Lee went through an acceptable sketch, The Golfer and the Maid; Tate and Tate had a most amusing trifle, The Barmaid and her Eccentric Customer; Lyster and Cook presented an able all-round musical show; and also in the list were C. Cleland, juggler; Ted Cowan, comedian; and the Smarte Bros., acrobatic eccentrics.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—During the week the stock dramatic company engaged have presented The Mysteries of London, from the pen of Lewis Gilbert. Mr. Harry Tresham played Philip Conway with expression; Mr. Sydney Grant was a striking Victor Levigne; Mr. Robb Wilton made a funny Dick Coppin; Miss Florence Palmer proved a pleasing Lena North; and good work was likewise performed by Messrs. E. D. Allen (William Rawson), Leo Montgomery (Robert Best), Cecil Ravenswood (Franz Muller), and the Misses Lilian Radbourne (Sybil Grey), Nancy Mitchell (Liza), and Beatrice Hudson (Charity Rawson). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed some excellent films.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—The Bioscope pictures here continue to be popular; and this week in addition to them the following artists have contributed items: George Young, blind musician; Ethel Griffiths, comedienne and dancer; the Lecardo Bros., refined comedy acrobats; and Mollie Seymour, comedienne and dancer.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Foremost here this week were the talented trio Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, who had a most flattering reception for their particularly smart entertainment; Lil Hawthorne brought her latest songs; the Daunton-Shaw troupe of trick cyclists gave a highly appreciated exhibition; Hall and Earle made merry as the Chinaman and the tramp; Thomas E. Finglass had some well-rendered coon songs; Marie Santoi and company submitted a delightful musical comedy, A Japanese Tea Garden; and others who appeared were the Brennans (Will and May), with an artistic dancing speciality; and Peter Bermingham, Scotch comedian.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—This latest addition to local places of amusement continues to enjoy great popularity, and last week, notwithstanding the hot weather, packed houses were the rule. This week Miss Dolly Elsworthy and company headed the bill with The Orange Girl. Some remarkable feats were performed by the Spanish Juanitos, acrobats, who were loudly applauded; Morander and Darius were a couple of expert lightning simultaneous gymnasts; Halma proved himself a most skilful juggler; Herbert Bates was well received for his pleasing tenor songs; Tom and Neil went through an amusing comedy wrestling and boxing match; Bert Danson was a comedian who proved enjoyable; Eva Chadwick, with a neat style, and possessed of an excellent voice, sang several acceptable numbers; the Belasco trio delighted all with their harmony singing and dancing; and the list also contained the name of George Dacre, character vocalist.

ROSCOMMON.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. M. Crewdson.—Percy Boucher and his stock dramatic company are still here, and during the week gave The Orange Girl, the principal rôles in which were undertaken by Messrs. Fred H. Constable (John Fryer), A. Wilson-Rae (Pepper Frost), Miss Nina Blake-Adams (Jane Fryer), Miss Ivy Chandos (Mrs. Gregory Dyngell), and Mr. Percy Boucher (a humorous Gregory Dyngell). The programme concluded with the laughable comedietta A Kiss in the Dark, the supporters being Messrs. Percy Boucher, W. Stephens, and the Misses Ivy Chandos, Florence Russell, and Nina Blake-Adams.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—The bill this week includes Austin Boyd and Trixie Gilfain in an operetta, Sunny Spain; Chas. Diamond and Miss Beatrice (harp and saxophone soloists); Celest, gymnast; Les Marsumas; Paul Pelham; the Sisters Beaumont; and Blanche Leslie.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—This huge building reopened on Monday with a popular programme, which attracted a great audience, who expressed warm approval of the bill of fare provided. The spacious building is now rendered delightfully cool, and is thoroughly cleaned and redecorated with evident taste and skill. The British Biograph Co. enter upon their third season with a fine series of all the latest and best animated subjects of the day. The variety bill includes Harwood's Juveniles in a scena, A Children's Christmas Eve; Marlow and Manton, sketch artists, in Wanted, a Wife; Ruby Dade, &c.

LUTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—The vaudeville season has commenced at this theatre, and Kennedy's Komicks are giving some excellent turns, the programme being changed each week. Included in the current bill are Miss Marie Liston, Mr. Fred Ellis, Miss Olliner, &c.

MAIDENHEAD.—PAVILION PLEASURE GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. George Gude.—An attractive programme is well received this week. Local allusions are noticeable in Miss de la Mere's catchy song, "The dandy river boy." The sketch, The New Baby, gives good scope for the "funnisities" of Will Harris and Leo Fallowfield.

MAIDSTONE. — PALACE THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester.—Tom E. Conover is at the head of affairs here this week, and his clever company of comedians get all the humour possible out of the well-written sketch, The Drink Cure. Chimes, a clever instrumentalist, is deservedly recalled for his novel act; the Pantzer Brothers are smart comedy acrobats; Miss Billy Beauford's two songs are well received; Sam Williams, vocalist, has some catchy chorus songs; Miss Madge Beresford, comedienne, is popular; and Allan and Hart, quick-change dancers, and the Bioscope are also in the programme.

MANCHESTER. — METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Andrew.—The principal attractions here this week are Beattie and Babs, capital juvenile entertainers, in their bright song and dance scena, A Pavement Rehearsal; and the Musical Twelve, in their enjoyable musical mélange, founded on The Bohemian Girl. Unthan, the armless wonder, gives a remarkable act; Dorma Morgan, vocal comedienne, is very pleasing; and other good turns are those of Chris Van Bern, eccentric comedian; Arthur Harris, actor-vocalist; Lily Palmer, vocalist and dancer; Tudor's Four Educated Ponies; and Victor, comedy juggler.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The well-known Boisset Troupe are giving here their screaming comic act, The Bricklayers; and Hymack, the chameleon comedian, mystifies the house by his wonderful changing of clothes. Mr. St. George Sylvesta's illusion act is smart and entertaining; Barrett and Knowles, patter comedians, are deservedly well received; Mason and Bart, expert comedy gymnasts, give an extraordinary show; Bert Woodward's steeple-chase cycling act is a popular item; Haines, Borthwick, and Co., are highly entertaining in their farcical sketch, Half-a-Dollar; and other pleasing turns are those of Rosie Archer, a clever mimic at the piano; and Amy Marsden, the comedy girl.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—Walter Passmore, very ably assisted by Mary Fraser and Charles Childerstone, is here this week in that delightful musical incident, The Constable and the Pictures, and causes considerable amusement; Paul Cinquevalli, the incomparable juggler, scores all along the line, his assistant being smartly amusing; Peggy Pryde, the popular comedy artist, makes a hit with "Bother the men"; Les Frasettis give a delightful musical turn; Howard and Howard, as the Hebrew messenger boy and the Thespian, are capital; and other good items are those of Lennie and Hast, in The Sea Nymph; Frank Bernard and company in sketch, Hello; and Lena Willard, comedienne. "Tit for tat" is well rendered by Miss Gertrude Howarth, of the choir. Pictures complete.

KING'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—The Geni Family, who top the bill here this week, are Risleyists of ability, and offer a first-rate performance; The Mystery of Edwin Drood is well presented by Henry Doughty and a very capable company, including Margaret Fareleigh. Other items are contributed by Harry Tomps, comedian; Rose D'Aulby, vocalist; Handel and Lee, musicians; George Don, quaint comedian; Curwen and Belle, burlesque artists; Helms and Cozens, in sketch; and Harry Morris, character comedian. The Chauffeur's Nightmare on the Bioscope is funny.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. Fred Leighton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Ivan Berlyn and a capital company, including Marion Turner, are seen to advantage here this week in an episode from "Oliver Twist," entitled Fagin. Sam Elton is quaintly amusing in his unique act with plates and eggs, and is deservedly well received; L. W. Harris is a neat comedian, and takes well; Alec Kendal talks in a natural and humorous style; Wittie Wattie Walton is smart in his burlesque scena; Horace Wheatley sings and dances neatly; and other entertaining items are given by Hayes and Watson, who patter and dance well; F. De Marce's clever performing animals; Walter Wade, comedian; and last, but not least, Ara, Zebra, and Vora, in smart act, Indian Pastimes. The wrestling tournament still continues in the afternoons.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Ethel Beech sings delightfully, and is ably assisted by six smart dancers in a pretty Indian scena, entitled Red Wing; F. V. St. Clair is popular, as usual, as a topical vocalist; and Mabel Osborne and Gordon Brookes are altogether excellent in a smart act. Les Sousloffs, whirlwind dancers, meet with a big reception; the Three Van Hosts, comedy acrobats and tumblers, have some original movements; Haidee St. George, soprano, sings well; and other enjoyable turns are those of Billie Burford, comedienne, with catchy songs; the Vanderbilts, comedy duo; and George Leavern, comedian. Ruffel's Imperial Bioscope pictures are particularly good.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Harry Ford, the well-known comedian, is to the front here this week, and sings three songs in his usual capital style; Owen McGiveney is deservedly well received for his efforts in presenting a quick-change dramatic episode from "Oliver Twist," all the five parts, including that of Nancy, being exceptionally well done by Mr. McGiveney. The music and scenery is excellent. The Would-bee Wonders cause amusement in their clever herculean performance; Wallace Whitney scores as Tubby, the footballer; Joseph B. Montague and Hilda Blanche are good in a comedy sketch; Ormonde Penstone, assisted by San-Go, mystifies the audience; Beattie Foster is a pleasing comedienne; and the Sicilians are smart instrumentalists. The Woman Who Wasn't a Suffragist is a very amusing film.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—Nat Clifford, the popular eccentric comedian, causes roars of laughter here this week, and is greatly appreciated; Yamamoto and Koyoshi are excellent equilibrists, and meet with a big reception; Dottridge and Instone's company, in Rosie's Birthday Party, including Kitty Trewhitt, Isa Gibson, and Trixie Whyatt, are pleasing; and other smart turns are offered by the Four Breens, comedy jugglers; Fritz Kornau, whistler; Gertrude Martini, comedienne; Bennett and Stirling, comedy artists; and Mike and Lena, in Dutch duologue, The Dutch Lovers. Pictures complete.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Phillips.—An excellent programme is offered here this week by the following capable artists:—Mr. Frank Dunlop, Mr. Norman Greene, Mr. Bert Byron, Mr. Francis Rayne, Miss Connie Clive, Miss Nellie Crawford, Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss Marion Edwardes, and Miss Dora Langham.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Hardy.—Dear Old Charlie, the Vaudeville success, was produced here on Monday by Mr. Cyril Vernon, and has had a most successful week's run. In the name-rôle Mr. George Lestocq has given a fine impersonation of Charles Ingleton; whilst Mr. C. Douglas Cox and Mr. R. S. Trelawney have rendered effective service as Gabriel Peploe and Thomas Dempil, his friends. Miss Marjorie Chard has made a delightful Agnes; and Mr. Duncan Young has been an excellent Colonel Fishbourne, with Miss Leonora Braham as a pleasing Mrs. Fishbourne. Miss M. E. Ellis as the maid Ruve and Mr. G. Smythe as the florist's boy have completed an all-round good cast. The comedy has been preceded each evening by the one-act play, entitled The Cause, in which Miss Leonora Braham and Mr. Cyril Vernon appeared with marked success.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Fred Karno's company has been appearing this week in the sketches, Moses and Son and The Bailiff, both of which have proved very amusing. Other contributors to the programme include Dolly White, male impersonator; Wright and Elton, comedy artists, tumblers, and dancers; Janet Hall, a delightful singer, with a rich Lancashire accent; the Three Laurels, in their comedy acrobatic turn; and the pictures are, as usual, up to date and amusing.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. W. Player.—His Sister's Honour, presented by Mr. Evelyn A'Dell's company, is here. Mr. R. Ferris renders a good account of Frank Stanley; as Sir Richard Kedvers Mr. Walter Steele is distinctly good; Timothy Timid is capitally played by Mr. George Whillis; and Mr. Frederick Garratt is well suited as Dr. Godfrey. Mrs. Evelyn A'Dell acts with sympathetic feeling as Ivy Merton; Miss Lillian Ross scores as Dora Stanley; and Miss Maudie Vincent is successful as Maria.

MEXBOROUGH.—NEW PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—A capital series of animated pictures are being shown here this week, including a number of dramatic and comic subjects. The films include Romance of the Fur Country, The Mysterious Treasure, The Hostage, The Thieving Hand, and The Pearl Fisher.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—Miss Ada Franks and company occupy the boards here this week in the drama, A Fight for Life. The play is full of stirring incidents, and keeps the audiences up to a high pitch of excitement. Miss Franks appears in the rôle of Suzanne, of whom she gives a very natural and womanly rendering; Mr. Courtney Robinson wins great distinction as Count Adrian; and Miss Violet Lesborough acts with fine vigour in the rôle of the Tigress. Mr. Clifton Earle gives an excellent interpretation of the part of Jean Cardell; as does also Mr. William Matthews that of Carlos Cardell. Miss Rose Woodhall is very good as Adell; and Mr. Sam Wilford gives a capital impersonation of the Irishman, Dan Murphy. The other rôles are in the hands of capable artists, and the piece is well staged.

OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Edward Jowsey; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—Drama again occupies the stage here this week, during which Mr. Harry Foxwell's company present An Abandoned Woman. Miss Thorne Hallam acts with great distinction as Eleanor Deane; and as Captain Herbert Seaton Mr. A. C. Holmes frequently elicits the plaudits of the audience. Miss Ruth Zillwood is charming as Ninon Malvoisin; and Mr. Fraser Brunner gives a powerful impersonation as Phillipe Malvoisin. Mr. Will Glaze is very amusing as Sammy Sharp; and Miss Queenie Fraser Burner is pleasing as Sally Sloper. Mr. Teddy Miles does full justice to the rôle of Paddy Boyle. The piece is well staged.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—Mike Whallen pays a welcome return visit here this week, and his inexhaustible fund of stories is immensely enjoyed. Tennyson and Waller have some really funny patter; and Chas. Wilson, who claims to be the champion jumper of the world, gives an interesting show. Proby and Bates give a pleasing entertainment; and Deans and Wilton are clever comedy acrobats. Francis McNulty, (society entertainer), Herbert Rule (comedian), and Marie Stroud also add to a capital programme.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—The programme here this week includes many old favourites, none of whom have a more gratifying reception than Mme. de Rose. She is accompanied by Miss Hilda Claremont, and the duets by these artists prove decidedly popular. Walton and Jester are as funny as ever; and Lillie Souter, an old pantomime favourite, creates roars of laughter. J. Copeland and Son provide some clever dancing; and there are also a number of other artists.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Mr. H. P. Maltby's excellent company have been seen in The Youngest of Three and Fraud, two plays varying in style and period, but both the work of Mr. Maltby, which fact proves his great versatility. Mr. Maltby is seen in suitable characters in both pieces, and he is supported by an excellent company, which includes Miss Mara Maltby, Misses Kathleen St. George, Florence Wynne, Lizzie Maddocks, Messrs. Arthur Claremont, Wyn Weaver, Norman H. Tracy, Brember Wills, Jas. Willoughby, H. B. Dewhurst, and S. Clegg.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—The amusing musical comedy The Dandy Doctor is making a welcome reappearance here this week, and is meeting with great success. Miss Florence Smithers as Jane, most humorous of "generals," is prolific in quaint byplay and droll gesture, her personation of a Lancashire mother seeking lodgings in Blackpool being perhaps her happiest effort; Melchisadek Brown, the tinned meat millionaire, provides Mr. Charles Stephenson with ample scope to display his undoubted ability; which Miss Mollie Wynne as Ivy Pendred gives a charming impersonation and dances extremely well. Other capable artists are Mr. Herbert Pearce as Colonel Pendred and Mr. Leslie Martin as Bertie Bolingbroke, who both contribute to the success of the piece.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—A very fine revival of The Shaugraun is this week to be seen at this popular house. The company is a capital one, the part of Conn being exceptionally well played by Mr. Frank Thorne, whose company is responsible for the revival. Mr. Paul Harper is excellent as Capt. Molineaux, and Miss Phyllis Vaughan makes a charming Arte O'Neill.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—An interesting entertainment is provided this week by Mr. F. Wybert Clive's company in the Russian play The Conscript. Mr. Harry Cullenford, the talented and popular actor, gives an admirable interpretation of the rôle of Karl Truevitch, the conscript, and is well supported by a talented company.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells.—At the head of an excellent bill this week is Mr. Ernest Shand, and he justifies his position by his amusing comedy. An elaborate entertainment is the production of Sunny South, in which tuneful songs and clever dances are introduced by the artists engaged in the production. Another capital turn is that of the Two Anartos in a musical sketch, whilst the Barton and Franklin Trio provide excellent entertainment; and other artists of well-known repute are the Twin And and Powell, Mike Cray, Maude A. Edwards, the Silvas, and the Tifanos are all responsible for meritorious turns.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager.—Mr. Sidney Cooper.—The London Fireman is being played here this week by Messrs. E. L. Garside and J. Forbes Knowles's company. Mr. B. J. Collins plays Viscount Fleming so realistically as to secure a demonstration of a sincerely hostile character; Mr. Wm. Burgess in successive parts is decidedly clever; and Miss Helena Walbran as Ida Curtis, Miss Gertrude Price as Grace Curtis, and Miss Nellie Waddington as Countess Fleming all do excellently; while Miss Olive Loyd in the part of Polly Bramble with Mr. G. E. Scully as Nixey Stringer were responsible for much fun. Mr. Wreford Bailey in the dual parts of Dr. Gerrard and Prof. Gurglewash exhibits capabilities of a high order; Abel Fortnum (Mr. J. Whyde) is a part capitally filled; and Mr. Walter Wilby as Joe Blumer, Mr. Dan Ryan as Crowder, and Mr. Chas. Mont as Capt. Langton all do well in their respective characters.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Major Gallagher.—The star turn here is furnished by Canny Neil Kenyon, who provides in his particular line one of the best turns seen here for a long time; Ludwig Amaun, quick-change artist, provides a clever performance; Tom Fay and company in The Yorkshire Lad in London are extremely entertaining; and good turns are given by Ray Maskell, comedienne and dancer; the Musical Schafer in a comedy act The Garden of Melody; J. W. Hall, a quaint comedian; Andie Burns in song and dance; and Rosa Loader, the happy slavey at the piano. The Bioscope, with a series of new pictures, completes the bill.

NORTHAMPTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Barnett.—The Five Musical Tritons, the star turn here, are presenting a spectacular electrical musical scena, with a combination of various musical instruments, including a beautiful lyre of tubular bells. Miss Lydia renders a vocal solo and Miss Eleace performs a solo on the tritophone, and the whole is loudly applauded. The Paolias are pleasing in their refined drawing-room act of balancing, juggling, and feats of strength; the Elduns (Lettie and Alf) appear in a pretty scena, The Spider and the Fly; and Jack Hayton, comedian; Vanbert, American illusionist; Helen McGregor, Scotch contralto; Jack Dawe, character comedian; and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope complete the programme.

NEW PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Director, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Manager, Mr. Thos. A. Evans; Musical-Director, Mr. Walter Ashton.—A dramatic episode, A Baby Shoe, is most effectively presented here, and Miss Ada Roscoe may be complimented on the excellent manner in which she impersonates the heroine, Nina. Mr. Horatio Sinclair gives excellent support as the husband and thief, Jim Harrison; Mr. Dave Leonard is satisfactory as Dick Desmond, a good-hearted swell; and the two constables are well represented by Messrs. James Robson and Frank Copeland. The Venetians are also successful in their vocal spectacle; Munroe's Black and White comedy team are loudly applauded; and Emma Don (male impersonator), the Three Neros, and the Palace Pictures complete the programme.

NORTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—A large and fashionable audience assembled here on Monday evening, the occasion being the annual benefit of the popular acting-manager (Mr. Horace Lee), an excellent and lengthy bill of fare being greatly appreciated. Burton's Bohemians, from South Shields, were warmly greeted; Miss Dora Woodhouse, soprano, Miss Dolly Cusden, contralto, and Mr. Courtier Dutton, bass vocalist, from the Spanish City, Whitley Bay, had a hearty reception; Mr. Bert Terrell, Dutch comedian, and Mr. Olly Oakley, banjoist, from Tynemouth Palace, were much appreciated; and Mr. Fred Maitland, the latest Parliamentary candidate, from the Central Palace, met with great favour; Mr. Adam Tomlinson, the local comedian, was as popular as ever; the Strongfort Brothers, athletes, presented a very smart act; Mr. Isaac Merkel, concertina soloist, was well received; and Messrs Clark and Hurrell, vocalists, also contributed successfully to the programme. The theatre is now closed for redecoration, &c.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—Mr. Fred Maitland with his Suffragette speeches is proving an interesting item on the programme here; the Gilberts with Pastimes in the Park have made a hit; Macmillan, Scotch comedian, causes much hearty laughter; Mr. Will Candlish, negro comedian, goes well; the Emmersons, speciality artists, are much appreciated; the Gasgoines, speciality artists, meet with favour; and the Mouldoscope is still as enjoyable as ever.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—There is a capital show here this week. Tom Edwards, ventriloquist, with an amusing turn, receives much applause; Mlle. Paula Peters exhibits highly-trained ponies, baboons, and dogs; Thomas and Taylor, in a quick-change scena Fun on the Midlands, are very laughable; Fraser and French are clever clog dancers; and Florence Esdaile, vocalist; Alf Hood, mimic; Clarice Sefton, dancer; the Sisters Brooke, vocalists and dancers; with the Hippodrome Bioscope complete a pleasing entertainment.

NOTTINGHAM. — GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's company give a capital rendering of A Wrecker of Men. Mr. Eric Campbell has an effective part in Jim Murley, and his robust methods gain hearty applause; Mr. Milner Noble gives a convincing embodiment of Pharosaphus; Mr. J. Ansdell Wilson is efficient as Railton; Mr. Arthur Robinson makes an impressive Guise Strange, Mr. Douglas Campbell supplies a light and easy portraiture of Reggie; an excellent Isaaca is seen in Mr. Charles Lovell; Mr. T. Carruthers is thoroughly effective as Eric Melville; and Mr. Harry Melton cleverly assumes the detective. Miss Amy Ellam capably sustains the forcible rôle of Risca Mallison; Miss Gwendoline Talbot well expresses the pathetic part of Doris Melville; and Miss Beatrice Reynolds as Vavasole Slopper is bright and amusing.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The appearance of Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Dorothy Minto in a duologue entitled The Dog Between brought an attentive and interested audience on Monday. The Gothams again demonstrated their facile ability in song and humour; the patter of Paul Barnes elicited the heartiest laughter; an entertaining item was provided by J. A. Wilson and his dog Towser; May Mars gained a demonstration for her spirited rendering of songs; a capital exhibition of leaping was given by the Huxter Bros.; and the Five Olracs supplied an amusing interlude. Cissie Carlette, comedienne; Bioscope pictures of the White City; and Irve Hayman and Marie Montague were also on the bill.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—Kennedy's Komiks, now on their third week, are still attracting large audiences. The programme this week, which is an entire change, comprises A. E. Allen and Doyle, and Nolan, who are smart comedians; Frank Lyndon provides an enjoyable and artistic turn on various instruments; Sisters Dunville (duettists and dancers) are applauded; Mabel Kington wins favour with some pretty ballads; Lily Ward (soubrette) and Albert Scott (eccentric dancer), and an excellent series of pictures concludes an enjoyable programme.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Motron Powell's production of The Mystery of Edwin Drood is staged here, and has been highly appreciated. Mr. T. Weldon Atherstone in the heavy part of John Jasper does exceedingly well, and he had a capital reception; Mrs. Morton Powell as Rosa Bud makes a charming and dainty heroine; Miss May Beatrice gives a telling interpretation of Helena Landless; and the acting of Miss Addie Adair as Princess Puffer is excellent. Miss Dot Russell is very good as Mary Jane; Mr. Walter H. Domoney acts in a clever manner as Edwin Drood; as Neville Landless Mr. J. H. Twyford is highly successful; Mr. R. Harris as Mr. Septimus Chrisparkle acts well; Miss Jennie Risley as Deputy renders her lines in adequate style; and Mr. Karl H. Edwards invests the character of Durdles with much humour.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Mr. Frank J. Pitt's company in £1,000 Reward opened here on Monday on a return visit, and was well received. Miss Kathryne Eckart appears as Mme. Sanson, and her acting elicits much applause; Mr. Edward de Vere as Fred Ingleford and Mr George Marriott, jun., as his son Fred do full justice to their work; Mr. J. Wilton as the villainous Gilbert Lisle acts cleverly; Mr. F. J. Pitt plays the detective Vincent Rainsworth in a capital manner, and Mr. F. Dallas does well as Inspector Gilbert of the old school. Miss Violet Ingram as Meg is dainty, and Miss Minnie Goepel as Kitty is amusing, and receives good assistance from Mr. Dick Seddon as Dick. Miss Alice Clarke as Mrs. Carthy is clever, and Fighting Jepps is ably portrayed by Mr. Arthur Merton.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kilrow.—Minnie Kaufmann, lady trick cyclist, at the head of the bill, gives a marvellous display; Ryder Slone, comedian, sings some capital songs; Chinks again demonstrates his dexterity as a juggler; Lillian Lowe is an excellent vocalist; the Hartley Wonders in their jumping act are smart; the Five Vernons, xylophone specialists, are well received; the Columbia Comedy Trio are very amusing in a singing act; Archie Glen is very good as a vocalist and story-teller; and the Dottoscope concludes with interesting pictures.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—The Eight Lancashire Lads are here, and they sing and dance with their usual success; Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard in a comedy sketch, Coming Home, are very humorous; Aidee Mellor, a singer of chorus songs, has proved herself a popular artist; George Gulliver is a capital ventriloquist; and Chant and Chant, comedy duo, are amusing with songs and patter. The Sisters Florence are dainty song and dance artists; Dunningarto in sleight-of-hand is smart; and the Dottoscope brings the programme to a close with good pictures.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Frank Stuart's company is this week presenting East Lynne and The Curate, the cast including the popular lessee and the able manager. In the former piece Miss Winifred Stuart as Lady Isabel wins complete favour with her sympathetic rendering of the rôle. Mr. P. C. Wentworth gives a very capable exposition of Archibald Carlyle, and Mr. Edward Oxley is successful as Sir Francis Levison; Mr. Frank Stuart is accorded a hearty welcome as Lord Mountsevern; Mr. Chas. Ninian is very effective as Justice Hare; and Mr. Dan Sydney is most amusing as Samuel Hogg. Miss Hallie Hazlewood proves herself a clever little actress as Little Willie Carlyle; Miss Theodore Henries does well as Barbara Hare, while Miss Bell Russell is quaint as Corney Carlyle. Joyce, Wilson, and Susanne are satisfactorily played by the Misses N. Smith, V. Fielding, and T. Smith respectively.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—Alber's performing Polar bears, ten in number, exhibit wonderful results of training; the Waldrons, owing to their properties having been destroyed in the fire at the Accrington Hippodrome last week-end, are unable to appear in their usual sketch, but they nevertheless submit a very funny and laughable comedy act; W. G. Webber, bass vocalist, is rapturously applauded for his fine singing; Farrell and Dunn score a great success as patter comedians and dancers; a smart comedian and dancer is May de Rowse; Will Godwin submits a capital scena entitled Repentance; the McKays are clever juvenile vocalists and dancers; and Ray Godwin, comedienne and dancer, performs meritoriously.

Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—At the top of the bill this week are the Lorch Family in a series of sensational acrobatic feats; the Three Lloyds, in their double bounding cable act, are loudly applauded; the Charnleys, vocalists, dancers, and bâtonists, deserve praise; Evelyn Taylor, chorus comedienne, is a decided success; Gibbon and Bell, speciality acrobats and dancers, are amusing; Johnny Walker, in catchy songs, proves a spirited comedian; Irene Meldon is vivacious and charming; Ellis and Watts, in smart songs, quaint stories, and clever dances, are much appreciated, and the Tivoliscope with up-to-date films concludes.

PETERBOROUGH.—NEW HIPPODROME, LTD.—Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. C. Peveritt.—Mr. Fred Lindsay exhibits skill and strength in the manipulation of the Australian stockwhip, and is loudly applauded; Fred Lorrison is an eccentric comedian; Nada delights the audience as a dramatic and musical raconteuse; Rose and Challoner are most amusing in a novel duologue entitled The Lady and the Porter; La Tostia is an exceptionally clever mandoline soloist; Tom Shale, a refined comedian and vocalist; Amy Bellwood, a dainty comedienne and clever dancer, and the Whittakers create roars of laughter when presenting Dick Whittington.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Edmund Tearle's stock company is this week presenting Jeannie Deans. To Miss Kate Clinton is entrusted the title-role, and this accomplished actress infused just the correct measure of pathos into the part. Miss Marie Campbell as Effie gives a clever interpretation; Mr. Tearle excels himself as Counsel for the Defence in the memorable Trial scene; Mr. Bernhardt Turner works hard as Geordie Robertson; Mr. Cook Hinton is at home in the part of the stern David Deans; and Miss Wanda Beresford is stately and graceful as Caroline, Queen of England. The week's répertoire also includes It's Never Too Late to Mend and The Merry Wives of Windsor.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field. The star turn for the week is Miss May Moore-Duprez, who is meeting with a warm reception; the Spanish Goldini Troupe furnish a most novel carpet spinning entertainment; G. W. Hunter maintains his popularity; and Hodgson, Lowther, and company evoke laughter with their sketch Barmaids. Other hard-working contributors to an excellent bill of fare are Charles Ashdowne, comedian and dancer, Marion Armitage, and Walter Stanley.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company in Send Him Victorious, by Herbert Skardon, was the attraction here on Monday. On Thursday and Friday was produced The Woman who was Dead. Captain Frank Ellison was finely portrayed by Mr. Montague Beaudyn; Mr. Frank Holyoake capably assumed the part of the King of Ravonia; Col. Kaufmann was in the able hands of Mr. G. Montanini; Major Strauss was ably presented by Mr. Arthur Tomlin; Mr. James Archer made a praiseworthy Governor; Miss Marie Robson scored a success as Countess Kara; Ethel Hardinge was well enacted by Miss Irene Munroe; and as Gretchen Holtz Miss Cecilia Crawford did well.

PORTH.—THE PALACE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Topping an exceedingly good programme here this week is Miss Harriet Vernon, who scores an unbounded success in "Sunshine and Shadow." Fred Wallace proves himself an admirable entertainer in his military ventriloquial sketch, The New Orderly. The Vyponds, the popular society entertainers, are accorded a capital reception; Moteni is a clever exponent of modern magic; Fancourt and Ruby, in their high-class comedy act, afford much genuine amusement; Tony Iveson, the ragman at the piano, meets with an enviable reception; the beautiful Lillian, lady cyclist, gives a clever performance, and the Palascope provides the latest films.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—This week we have Little Lord Fauntleroy, presented by Mr. Will Dennis and an able company. Mr. Dennis plays the part of the Earl in finished fashion; Miss Daisy May's Cedric Errol is a most winsome impersonation; Mr. George Roberts enacts the rôle of Mr. Havisham with dignity and ease; Mr. William Lockhart does excellent work as Mr. Hobbs; Dick finds a capital exponent in Mr. Herbert Lawrence; and Messrs. Norman Clifton, Alfred Curtis, and Charles Searle are capable in their respective parts of Higgins, Wilkins, and Thomas; Minna is taken in a vigorous manner by Miss Marion Fawsett; Miss Beryl Grayham makes an efficient Mary; and Mrs. Errol is acted with conspicuous ability and success by Miss Gertrude Netterville.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. B. Agate.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh, Mr. J. E. Whitty and company are here this week playing the emotional drama, An Unwedded Wife, in which Miss Van Praagh sustains the part of the heroine, Marion, with great success; Philip Blackstone is depicted by Mr. C. Lodge Percy with excellent results; Frank Hawthorne is taken in an able manner by Mr. George Daiper; Mr. J. Edward Whitty gives a decidedly good character sketch of P.C. Runyin; Mr. R. Wilton Bedford is humorous as Kit Lennox; Mr. W. Casey as Napoleon B. Boomer, the showman, does gratifying work; and Miss Jessie Gillette makes a volatile Carraway Crumpet.

KING'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Bertram.—The musical comedy drama, At the World's Mercy, is staged here by Mr. Carr Loates and company. Miss Cissie Milford in the dual rôles of Skittles, a stowaway, and Kitty Knott, a music hall star, gives excellent interpretations; Captain Frank Manley is well presented by Mr. Terry Davies; Mr. Carr Loates plays the solicitor, Jabez Barber, with force and decision; Mr. G. D. Knight as Morris Goldstein is capital; and Messrs. Jess Boxer and W. Griffin are well placed as Charley Smart and Sloughing Sam respectively. As Alice Lloyd Miss Molly Bee is praiseworthy; Miss C. Hall does well as Mr. Rourke; and Dot and Rosie find capable exponents in Miss Daisy Iago and Miss A. Hunter.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—A popular bill of fare for the week is at this house. Dan Crawley, the eccentric comedian and dancer, is popular with his mirth-raising patter and song; the Bros. Obo cause much diversion with their laughing duets and cross talk; Spry and Monti are favourably received; Harry Zetter is applauded for his eccentric dancing; Walter Ellis and company secure a hearty reception for their hilarious playlet, The Sleepwalker; Little Tich Bourne is a painstaking miniature grotesque; Webb and Branston are popular operatic duettists; Rayne's Bio shows clever pictures; and Maurin's fountains form a very picturesque stage spectacle.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—The entertainment provided here for the current week is excellent; Albert and Edmunds' Troupe, in farcical and pantomimical absurdity entitled Neighbours, score well in two realistic scenes; Beattie and Blanche are pleasing duettists; the Derrington Family of cyclists are exceptionally smart; the Tally-Ho Trio cause great laughter in their combination of mirth and harmony; the Brothers Horne give a brisk boxing bout; Tom and Marie Motramo are a clever pair; the Brothers Ford, vocalists and dancers, show ability; and some amusing Hippo pictures and Miss Daisy Wood, a dainty and most attractive comedienne, conclude.

PRESTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. Augustine Knight's company in the sensational play Mysteries of the Thames, succeeds in drawing good houses this week. Mr. Augustine Knight gives a powerful and realistic portrayal of Richard Brandon; Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson is also strong in the part of the villain, Captain James Denbigh; Mr. C. Allen Hineson is a capable Jack Hammond; Mr. E. E. Swinton as Bill Bosco and Mr. Tom J. Taylor as Peter Waggles import considerable humour into their respective characters; Mr. William James gives a good account of himself as Wary Mike; Miss Nellie Jackson proves an excellent male impersonator in the character of Bertie Fitzgerald; as Kate Brandon Miss Nellie Jackson wins sympathy for her womanly portrayal of the part; Miss Effie Bartlett gives a skilful rendition of the dual rôles of Grace Rochdale and Helen Price; Miss Marie E. Robertson is a sprightly Emma Seaton; and Little Doris Brereton is exceptionally clever as Little Doris Brandon. The piece is mounted in a finished manner.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Messrs. William Garland and Fred Douglas's company in A Trip to Coontown give a capital turn, their singing, dancing, and comedy being distinctly good; Billy Yeager and Emma Da Costa, Blackville Duo, introduce some real American coonisms; Minnie Vi-Dall contributes a song; Frank Sley and his Marvellous Nipper are refined comedians, and execute some exceptionally clever dancing; F. A. Martell gives a wonderful exhibition of hand and finger balancing; the Ramsey Trio present an absurdity entitled Birdie's Welcome; and the Imperials, Jack Madden and Tom Pease, give a clever demonstration of ju-jitsu wrestling, which is very instructive. Mr. and Mrs. Newly Wed on the Bioscope concludes.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—An extremely amusing and well-played show, Juno, the Living Statue, has been staged here during the past week by Mr. Julian Graham's company. The character of Timothy Twinkle, solicitor's clerk, is finely presented by Mr. Arthur Lenville; and Miss Graham Beck makes an admirable Juno, coming in for frequent and hearty applause; Miss Ida Lawrence is good as Lottie Stimson; Miss Winifred Symonds effectively portrays Priscilla Strong; and Miss M. Beresford is a characteristic and strong-minded landlady. Mr. Fred Carrington does good work as Samuel Strong; and Mr. Richard Teesdale makes a capital Sherlock Blake, a detective. The other parts are excellently sustained. Admirable dances are contributed by Les Papillons.

ROYAL PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Melvin.—Capital audiences were attracted to the Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, on the first three days of the week, when Mr. Rollo Balmain's company occupied the boards with a presentation of the late Wilson Barrett's famous play Hoodman Blind. Mr. Rollo Balmain played Jack Yeulett in excellent manner; and Miss Sarah Mignon Balmain filled the double rôle of Nance Yeulett (Jack's wife) and Jess (a waif) in a manner that gained for her the sympathies of her auditors. The villainy of the drama was well supplied by Mr. Howard Templeton as Mark Lezzard and Mr. Allan Grear as Kridge, his partner; while the good-hearted Ben Chibbles of Mr. J. W. Braithwaite was a capital piece of work. The remaining characters were well sustained, and the scenery and general mounting of the play quite effective. For the last three nights of the week a strong variety programme is being provided, with the Native Choir from Jamaica as a big feature. Other names in the bill are those of Charles Coborn (comedian), Harland and Rollison (musical eccentrics), and La Belle Nello.

MARINA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. F. C. Dew and L. Valeriani; General-Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—The Picturedrome continues to attract big and extremely appreciative audiences. The fine series of animated pictures exhibited includes a capital set entitled Don Juan. Tiny and Mite maintain their reputation as clever child vocalists and dancers.

READING.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—Miss Rose Atherton's company appear with success in the comedy episode, Murphy's Affinity; the Kymros, Welsh comedy duo, are well received; Jessie Harper is a pleasing comedienne; Charles Bignell, comedian, is in good form; Molly O'Connor causes much hilarity by her amusing views on the Licensing and Suffragette questions; Frances Harrold's company, in the comedietta, My Son's Wife, and Bright and Claire, in the comedy act, Married all of a Sudden, both give satisfaction; and Mlle. Louise's performing monkeys are highly trained, and go through some very clever gymnastic feats with wonderful precision. The programme concludes, as usual, with a Bioscope sketch.

PASTORAL PLAYS. — Messrs. Philip Sanders and B. A. Pittar's company of Shakespearean pastoral players are giving a series of al fresco performances in the grounds of Elmhurst Farm. The outdoor representations are a welcome change during the present warm summer evenings. The company includes Miss Violet Pittar and other capable artists. During the week As You Like It, The Taming of the Shrew, and Twelfth Night have been presented in excellent style.

RHYL.—MARINE GARDENS.—Mr. De Jong and his orchestra are giving pleasure to large audiences at these delightfully situated gardens three times daily. A successful garden fête took place on Thursday afternoon.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Eric Charlswood.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's musical comedietta Old Virginia is full of life and brightness, and the numerous artists concerned in it sing excellently and accomplish smart dancing. As Rastus and Chloe, Kit Keen and Nellie Sheffield work well together. Owing to indisposition, Mildred Bryan was unable to appear; a good deputy was found in Phyllis Beryl. The remaining characters are capably sustained by Messrs. Odeyne Spark, Joey Ellis, H. Buckland, Leonard Russell, Bert Errol, and William Pringle. Eric Charlewood sings a couple of songs each evening, and is heartily received.

The fine weather this week has been most favourable for outdoor amusements, and the performances given by Gilbert Rogers and his troupe of jovial jesters have been largely attended.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hague.—Saturday to Monday closes the season here this week. The play creates roars of laughter from rise to fall of curtain. Mr. Ainsley Burton is a host in himself as John Willie Jaggs; and Miss Julia Bassett enacts the part of Clorinda Dobbs with conspicuous ability.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—May Fairclough gives selections from Shakespearean plays; the Empire Bioscope pictures are greatly enjoyed; and J. H. Greener, singing pit lad; Edwin Lambert, vocalist; Marion and Mabel Countees, duettists; and Gladys Bushell, chorus vocalist, complete a capital programme.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Charles Harrington's No. 1 American combination is paying a welcome return visit in Uncle Tom's Cabin, which drew a good house on Monday evening. Mr. J. Carr makes a fine Uncle Tom; Legree is well played by Mr. T. Bowrom; Cassie creates a good impression as presented by Miss Hettie Johnson; Kitty Bell makes a charming Eva; and Miss Annie Watson is a funny Topsy. There are several specialities given in the plantation scene, including Amy Height, the well-known comedienne; Walter Langford (Marks), banjo soloist; Ben Rowe, bone soloist; Rich and Moore, coloured duettists; Shorty May, comedian; J. Warrie, clever buck dancer; the Tennesseeans, Jubilee singers; and Rowe and Holden, smart cake-walkers.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—John Tiller's company is giving much amusement this week with the musical comedy extravaganza A Trip to Paris, by Charles Fletcher and John Tiller. There is a great deal of pleasing dancing, and the dresses and scenery are very pretty. Mr. Bob Selvidge as Hiram P. Gibson, Mr. Fred Lawrence as a gendarme, Mr. Teddy Gibbs as Eli Heggs, Miss May Sharples as Camile Gibson, Mr. Barney Dixon as John James, Miss Nellie Rodney as Mary Ellen Heggs, and Miss Lizzie Hay as Mimi all work well, and keep the house in roars of laughter.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Leslie's Comedy Cadets head an excellent programme with their scena, After Lights Out, including a clever ventriloquial performance by Mr. Harry Leslie; a smart comedy stage aerial act is performed by Spangles and Sawdust (two ladies and two gentlemen); Jenny Maningo is a strong woman who does some novel juggling with military implements. The other turns include Harry Ronsby and Nell Rene, in comedy duologue, Fine Feathers; Lena Page, burlesque actress; Dennis J. McCarthy, character comedian and vocalist; Edna Francis, characteristic vocalist and dancer; Scott, Scott, and company, in pantomime, That Awful James; and Edythe and Toto, in contortion and speciality act.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Lester King.—The films this week (twice nightly) include A Day of Robbery, Caterpillar Engine, Pierrot's Family, The Smokeless Stove, Lost on the Alps, Wool Industry of Sweden, &c.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. H. D. Lyle.—Secrets —— is on a return visit here, the company being that of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Tomlinson.—Mr. Reginald Brown is an effective Lieut. Markham; Neuredin Ali is in the capable hands of Mr. John Worth; Mr. J. E. Tomlinson merits warm praise for his portrayal of Ibrahim; Mr. Fred C. Palmer is a popular Cecil; Breezy Bill is played in breezy style by Mr. Fred Bailey; Peter Wilkins supplies Mr. Herbert Wooden with many opportunities for displaying his abilities as a comedian; Ismali is charmingly drawn by Miss Lizzie Palmer; as Zulieka, Miss Maud Steeple is efficient; Winnie Wilkins is smartly played by Miss Madge Palmer; and the Warner Girls introduce pleasing dances.

SHEERNESS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Sheerness Hippodrome Co.—The Honeymoon, played by Mr. Gilbert Payne's company, opened here on Monday. Mr. Gilbert Payne is a conspicuous success as Nathaniel Noodle; Mr. Fred Fulton as Archie Mashington maintains his reputation; Miss Celestial Brandon is a charming Madge, Miss Rosie Kearns a successful Emeretta Noodle, and Miss Myra Douglass a graceful Stella; Mr. Chris Ainslie is an excellent Colonel Vandyke Brown, Mr. Leslie Erle a capable Jack Armstrong, and Mr. Gus Tomlin a good Victor L'Estrange. The Four Godfrey Girls dance gymnastic dances with characteristic dash.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Local Representative, Mr. Cyril Parks.—This week's pictures are of a diversified character, and include The Opening of the Franco-British Exhibition, Story of Treasure Island, Engaged all the Same, Leap Lear, &c. Owing to the success of Mansell Fane with his illustrated songs he remains here another week.

SHEFFIELD. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. C. M. Copping's specially-selected company opened on Monday in The Black Bishop. The cast is headed by those capable and graceful artists Miss Ruth Shepherd and Miss Constance Medwin.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Mr. Harry Tilbury's company is appearing here in the domestic comedy-drama His Dishonoured Wife. Mr. George Fry makes a manly hero as Frank Lindon, and the emotional character of Florence Lindon is represented with dramatic power by Miss Belle Tilbury; Mr. Horatio Sinclair is effective as Lord Devant; and other parts are cleverly played by Messrs. Fred Owen, Bernard Webb, Edward Brown, A. Goring, Geo. Walkley, and Harry Selby; Little Phyllis, Miss Annie Newall, Annette Fisher, Arline George, E. Spalding, and Mr. Harry Tilbury, who causes much laughter as Mickey Doolan.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—Mr. John Lawson, "a good 'un for a Jew," is starring here in a round of his successful sensational sketches, including The Tiger's Claw and Humanity. Plenty of comedy is provided this week by such diverting "comics" as Mr. George Bastow, in "Varmer Giles in Lunnon"; Mr. George Gilbey as "Spotty, the goal-keeper"; Mr. Fred Poplar, the favourite humorist; and Mr. Charles Morton, in his original mimetic interlude Comedians at the Races. Other first-rate turns are Boden and Bell, song and dance artists; Franco Piper, a smart banjo manipulator; the American Bioscope, with humorous films; Miss Kitty Wager, a dashing serio-comic vocalist; and the celebrated Billy McClain's Coon Troupe, in their lively Transatlantic darkey burletta Massa Johnson's Ball, a bit of real old Kentucky.

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—A splendid array of artists opened to a large audience on Monday. The pièce de résistance was The Prince of Monte Carlo, rattled through with great spirit by Mr. Harry Roxbury's company; the Four Rio Brothers, in a graceful gymnastic act, were loudly applauded; the Westwoods, in their wonderful cycle feats, won enthusiastic applause; Horace and Olga's pretty and amusing act with cats and dogs proved very successful; Miss Edith St. Clair looked charming, and sang two songs tunefully; the Wilton Heriot company, in their protean comedy sketch An Anglo-American Alliance, caused great hilarity; and Mr. Charlie Williams, "the Scotch Nigger," Miss Ruby Bijou, an artistic transformation danseuse, the Three Cunards, dancers, and the Barrascope were all cordially received.

The Dangers of Neglected Indigestion.

MANY people feed themselves regardless of Digestion and Nutrition. They obtain very little benefit from the Food they eat. Moreover, the Organs of Digestion are injured—they become Impaired and Weak. Then follow the pains of Indigestion and the miseries of Nervousness and Debility.

To strengthen the Stomach, restore the activity of the Digestive Organs, and to nourish the Nerves, take Guy's Tonic. It is an unfailing Remedy, and has the confidence of Medical Men as well as the praise of Multitudes of people who have been cured by its aid.

Rev. A. W. LEFROY, of Appleshaw Vicarage, Andover, writes :—

"I have taken Guy's Tonic on occasions when I have suffered from Indigestion, Nervousness, and Loss of Appetite. I have always found Guy's Tonic have a speedy and beneficial effect—in fact, I have received so much benefit from it myself that I recommend it unhesitatingly to my friends. Those who have tried Guy's Tonic have received like benefit."

Guy's Tonic, price 1s. 1½d. per bottle (family size 2s. 9d.), is sold by Chemists and Stores all over the World.

GRAND THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—The following artists are appearing here this week:—Chester and Lee's company, with their celebrated marionette theatre of art; Hulbert, ventriloquist; Mons de Lill, conjurer; Miss Julia Gilbert, vocalist; the Bros. Tarrant, in a novel act; and the Orchids, in a pleasing musical comedy entertainment. The Raymond Bio-Tableaux of topical and humorous scenes conclude a well-arranged programme.

SOUTHAMPTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—During the week's closure the interior of the theatre has been redecorated throughout, and now presents an artistic appearance. This week's attraction is A Woman's Past, a melodrama which is most effectively presented by Messrs. A. Hamilton Warder and Chas. V. Sandford's company.

PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wm. Trussell.—Florrie Forde, dainty and dashing as of yore, tops the bill, and wins loud applause for her catchy chorus songs. The Sutcliffe troupe of acrobats are well received; Nightingale and Stigant evoke roars of laughter with their comical backyard duologue, "Two Sides of a Wall"; and other turns are submitted by the Arleys, Victor Travers, Addie Dorina, and Ruby Parsonage.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—Topping the list here is Harry Randall, who scores his usual great success in song and patter; Jack and Evelyn excel in fun and frivolity; and W. H. Clemart is a very fine ventriloquist. Carney and Armstrong are a comical couple; and other well-appreciated turns are given by the Sisters Herbert, Fred Lincoln, Belle Braham, and Little Salvino.

PIER PAVILION. — Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—This is about the coolest and most delightful place of entertainment in Southampton, and the charming performances given by Mme. Stockham's Ladies' Orchestra, harpists, &c., have been highly appreciated. Mr. J. Wellesley Lynn is another big favourite with his magic and mimicry, and the company is quite one of the best of the season.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA. — PIER PAVILION.—Mr. Lionel Brough's successful appearance in a triple bill here is described elsewhere.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The engagement for this week of Mr. Alfred B. Cross and his selected company, in The Manxman, is immensely popular, and on Monday this soul-stirring play was admirably represented and heartily appreciated. A notable feature is the typical setting in the whole of the five acts. Mr. Alfred B. Cross makes a central figure of Pete by an exceptional impersonation, who is equally successful in sincerity of love and devotion as in a suffering and noble character, that gains him recognition of the heartiest; next for coveted honours is Miss Minnie Watersford, by her highly creditable portrayal of Katie Cregeen, who displays the difficult character of the distracted woman most effectively. Mr. Sydney C. Kearns gives a talented impersonation of Philip Christian; Mr. Maurice Yorke is well suited as Ross Christian; and Mr. Fred Mace as Cæsar Cregeen creates enthusiasm by a good rendering of Katie's father. Messrs. Roland A. Bridge, Lionel Balmont, and F. Lynton are also able exponents; while Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff gives every satisfaction as Nancy.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—A good variety programme is submitted in the theatre here, and each item is warmly appreciated. The Palace Troupe of Gipsy Girls, under the direction of Miss Beatrice Harold, are popular, and deserve praise for their excellent renderings of the scenas and dances, entitled "Far, far from Gibraltar" and "My Cuban Girl"; Mr. Tom Cliff in light comedy and song is well received; as is also Mr. Fred Pollard, an eccentric patterer and comedian. The Misses Phyllis Dorr, Lilian Constance, and Nellie Giles all please as vocalists; and Miss Kitty Grey contributes songs and dances in capital style. Character dances are done by Miss Carmichael; and Gordon and Wilson entertain loyally with the sketch entitled Tit for Tat. Three series of new pictures on the Bioscope are amusing and enjoyable.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, the Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Singleton.—As the Albert Hall is this week engaged for a competitive musical festival, a variety combination occupies the boards at the Opera House. Wrestling is the principal feature of the programme, capital exhibitions of the art being presented by John Lemm, the champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler, Ono and Hiraux, champion Japanese, together with Miss Roberts, the English lady champion. The turns include Jack Irwin, monologue artist; Phyllis Seymour, soubrette and dancer; Geo. Reeves, eccentric comedian; Harry Moneta, comedian; Eva Ford, vocalist; Walleno, speciality artist; Helen Lambert and Fred C. Glover, in a high-class farcical duologue; and the Palacescope, with the latest films.

SOUTH SHIELDS. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. Junius Booth's company is here in Monte Cristo. Edmond Dantes finds a powerful exponent in Mr. Junius Booth, who acts with realism and earnestness, and is charmingly supported by Miss Conyers Radcliffe, who plays Mercedes in a natural and sympathetic manner.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. George F. Thompson.—A Night in Egypt is being performed here by Alice Raymond and company. Miss Raymond is a clever exponent of the cornet, and is ably supported by her company. Mr. George Neilson is a capable conductor, and renders his vocal numbers in good style; Signor and Mme. Borelli, duettists, are well received; J. C. Scatter, Tyneside comedian, is a great favourite, his patter being excellent; some clever dancing is displayed by the Northern troupe of International dancers; Mario is a good juggler, and his manipulation of burning torches is effective. Remaining items are supplied by Lena Verdi, comedienne and dancer, Carl Howard, conjurer, and the Bioscope.

COSY CORNER, SEA FRONT.—Mr. George Burton's comedians are still attracting large audiences by their clever entertainment. Miss Pattie Burton submits a good rendering of Arditti's "Il Bacio"; Ray and Ross contribute a good comedy item; a laughing song by George Russel is well received; and an original sketch, Merry Maid Marian, is produced this week, for which see elsewhere.

STALYBRIDGE.—GRAND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Fioni; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. A. Jackson.—The Cromwells have the premier position on the bill, and are clever in their juggling turn; Marie Gold is a dainty comedienne; and James Brady, character comedian, is an evergreen with Stalybridge audiences, and has lost none of his drawing power. The Bros. Lavelle are a couple of acrobatic comedians, whose antics prove to be highly diverting; Tom Moore is announced as the new comedian, and he certainly has an original style, coupled with a good voice.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader.—A Warning to Women is being played by Mr. C. Watson Mill's company. Dr. Marcus Dread is effectively depicted by Mr. Leonard Lawrence; Mr. Wingold Lawrence takes the part of Shaun in an earnest and convincing manner; and Fergus McNaughton has an excellent exponent in Mr. Leslie Beaufort. Miss Lillian Herries has a fine part in Moira Kennion, and plays it with great feeling; Miss Winifred Rutland looks sweet and acts well in the part of Sheila Kennion; Squire Kennion is admirably portrayed by Mr. Hy. Rutland; and much amusement is caused by Mr. Sydney Ernest as Lord Eversleigh, and by Mr. Oscar Power as Mike.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—The great attraction here this week is Lafayette, whose performance is wonderfully smart; Joe Boganny's Troupe are exceedingly clever acrobats; Cyrie Carle is excellent in his scene; Ross and Grayson are as popular and successful as ever; the Bohemians give an excellent musical performance; Belford and Mars are capital in their turn; and the Milfords are also successful laughter-makers.

STOCKPORT. — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—There is plenty to interest and amuse in When Other Lips, capably presented here this week by Mr. T. Arthur Jones and company. Mr. T. Arthur Jones impersonates the character of Ted Daunton, a sailor, in excellent style; Basil Cunningham is effectively portrayed by Mr. Juan D'Alberti; Mr. Willie Reid as Tommy Neccles and Mr. Clem Horlock as Duddle Topwash provoke abundant mirth; Bombioso Jenkins is pleasingly acted by Mr. Albert Clarke; Miss Marie Daventry acts charmingly as Ruth Lingley; Miss Jane Watson displays merit in her impersonation of a Woman in Black; and Miss Amy Maitland is delightful as Kitty Topwash.

EMPIRE. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—Tom Jones, Welsh character comedian, who is the particular star here this week, has met with a cordial reception. Among others appearing are the Attilla Brothers, extraordinary heavy-weight lifters; Sid Dooley and Edie Wright, amusing duettists; the Moncktons, in a laughable sketch, Two in a Flat; the Two St. Johns, versatile musicians, comedians, and expert dancers; Edie Tennis and Gertie Laune, pleasing vocalists; and Will Sullivan, an entertaining patter vocalist.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty. — Mr. M. Montgomery presents here a romantic drama, entitled In the Midst of Life. There were large audiences at the two houses. The leading characters were ably represented by Miss Lilian Beaumont, Miss Lina Nazeby, Miss Daisy Norman, Messrs. Ernest Wingfield, F. S. Strickland, and A Byron. A number of the latest pictures were shown by means of Payne's Biophotoscope.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—Leslie Clare and company are seen in an amusing comedy sketch, entitled Wanted, a Wife. Miss Alice Cheshire sustains the part of Tilly, the slavey, in a capable manner. Ida Kessanly's highly-trained fox terriers seem to enter into the spirit of the show; Dunn and Reano are smart eccentric gymnasts, Dale and Vale good as pedestal dancers; and Lisle and Ford, Tom Bassett, Edgar Cook, and Blanche Marion are also billed. Black-Eyed Susan is a good film depicting naval life, &c., as in the days of Nelson.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Grieveson.—A more than usually strong attraction is provided in Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's company with the domestic drama The World and the Woman. Mr. Carl Rovinelli gives a fine, well-sustained enactment of Lord Hartingdon, the erstwhile Arthur Burleigh; Mr. George H. Doyle's impersonation of the plotting and unscrupulous Ludlow Burleigh is exceptionally strong and even; Mr. J. Rice Cassidy proves versatile as Tut Harding, adding many humorous, as well as strong, touches to his impersonation; Mr. Ralph Leslie succeeds as Terry O'Harris; Mr. Henry Compton is equal to the demands of the rôle of Sir Francis Chalmers; as is Mr. Jerold E. Reed to those of Hike. Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy submits a highly interesting study of Nelly (Lady Hartingdon), the various phases of the part giving scope for her undoubted ability; Miss Roma Tremayne as the erring Lady Marion also has opportunities that are taken advantage of; Miss Alice Inman is amusing as Gibby, a servant of the Louie Freear type; Miss Violet Parker as the juvenile Nina is also worthy of praise; Miss Vara Herne successfully portrays Gwendoline; and Miss Rose Hallas is adequate as Nurse Halton.

EMPIRE OF VARIETIES. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Chief honours go to the Four Holloways, in their marvellously expert wire act, some of the feats being wonderfully smart; Carlotta Levey, well-known to Northerners, proves a great source of attraction; Charles Fraser and company appear in an up-to-date illusion, entitled The Enchanted Iona; Barton and Ashley are amusing in the farcical absurdity, Adam the Second; R. H. Hollingsworth, a local blind vocalist and pianist, comes in for hearty applause; Burnetti's versatility as a musician finds vent in his many impersonations; Lily Hayes, a comedienne and dancer; Little Zola, comedian; and the Bioscope pictures are also included in the bill.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Dean.—Trilby has been presented here by Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company. Mr. William Grant is entrusted with the part of Svengali, and his impersonation is one of the best things that has been seen here for some time. Miss Bessie Rignold achieved another decided success by her telling acting as Trilby; Messrs. C. Hartopp, W. Clayton, and C. Goldsmid as the brothers of the brush, are well placed.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Miss Francis Delaval and company are playing here Love's Golden Dream. Mr. Fred Emery as the Rev. Harold Tre-Wynne is effective; the Captain Darrell of Mr. Cecil Gray is also good; Marjory is convincingly presented by Miss Frances Delaval; and Mr. W. H. Vernon as Cowey and Miss Maud Stuart as Charity provide excellent comedy.

EMPIRES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—Mr. Bransby Williams made a welcome reappearance here on Monday, and won the heartiest appreciation; Ted and May Hopkins have a funny act, Wedding Bells; a juggling turn of more than average cleverness is contributed by Walter Bellonini; Ian Colquhoun's fine voice is heard to advantage; Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas, in their comedy sketch, Her Birthday, provide good entertainment; and Gwennie Hasto's dance is a welcome contribution. Johnson and Bert, in their act, A Queer Customer, make a hit; Ruth Lytton sings Scotch songs acceptably; and Harry Mart is a comedian and dancer of distinction. Bioscope pictures conclude.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—For the last week of the season the programme includes the well-known comedian, R. G. Knowles, who renders his songs and patter in his own inimitable style; Helen Stuart pleases with her illustrated songs; Jock McKay, Scotch comedian and piper, takes well; and Clarke and Glenney present a laughable sketch, In the Haunted House. Kathleen Cogan is a dainty serio comedienne and dancer; Driscol and Felino, comedians, are amusing; and Sisters Lytton, duettists, sing in a pleasing manner. Helena Sleach and Chas. Aldin are seen to advantage in an operatic scena, Dashing Duval, the Knight of the Heath; Percy Farrimond, vocalist, possesses a good voice; and Les Marbas, humorists and acrobatic dancers, give a smart act.

TON-Y-PANDY.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—Miss Winifred Maude's company, in The Stowaway, forms the current attraction. As Dicky Dials, the stowaway, Mr. Victor Du Cane is a complete success; Tom Inglis is safely entrusted to Mr. Vincent Carlyle; Mr. W. Bradford gives a praiseworthy rendering of Chas. Etherington; and Miss Nellie Rouseby as Chucky, a London newsboy, is happily placed. Miss Winifred Maude wins general approbation for her meritorious interpretation of Althea Dale.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. Will Stone.—Worthily heading a strong programme are Wyndham and Kitty, in their sensational wire act; Clown Leo introduces four trained dogs; Dolly and Madge McCalla, juvenile entertainers, are very popular; Jenny Russell dances well; and Walter Mascott, comedian, scores off the Suffragettes. Some very good pictures are shown, including A Slave's Hate and The Shipowner's Daughter.

TORQUAY. — PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—Mr. Bert H. Delmar's "The Comets" are occupying the boards here. They include Mr. Bert H. Delmar, an able comedian and entertainer; Mr. Edward Headlam, an amusing entertainer; Mr. Brian Lawrence, accompanist; Miss May Williams, soubrette; Miss May Otto, contralto; and Mr. Robert Tattersall, illusionist. Mention should be made of Mr. Delmar's skit on the Zancigs.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Manager, Mr. Arthur H. Burdett.—The great attraction of the Hippodrome programme this week is Lockhart's Elephants, under the direction of Capt. Taylor, and their clever feats are well received. Henri Bekker performs some smart conjuring feats, assisted by Mlle. Male; and Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, has a very cordial reception in her artistically rendered songs. Lillian Farrar dances well; William Kingsley is a skilled manipulator of hand bells; and L. B. Athol, comedian, completes an excellent bill.

TYNEMOUTH.—PALACE AND WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—The Gaieties score a huge success with their concerted items; Ruby Wilson is a comedienne of considerable ability; Olly Oakley is a skilled player of the banjo; Wheeler and Wilson, comedy acrobats, perform some original and amusing feats; Bert Terrel, Dutch comedian, has a budget of good songs; the Palace orchestra, under the bâton of W. A. Crosse, B.M., continue to please by their various well-rendered selections. The programme also includes Wilson James, humorist; Alan Stainer, comedian; Gertrude Hart, soprano; and Percy Watson, tenor. The evening entertainment winds up with an admirable and up-to-date show of animated pictures.

WAKEFIELD.—HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfrees. — The Esthor Trio of hand balancers give a clever performance; the Primrose Quartette of vocalists sing acceptably; Miss Fanny Robina, comedienne, has a good reception; Miss Florrie Cooper, comedienne, is conspicuously successful; the Ives (Sam and Louie) give a fine exhibition of ball punching; and Gould and Gould, comedy couple; and Mr. Billy Bint, vocalist, complete the bill.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—The Leslie Brothers as eccentric musicians are extremely good; the Picchiani troupe of lady acrobats are remarkably clever; Theo. Bowmeester, the protean actor, and company in Who is Guilty, in which he performs seven different parts, is a great attraction; Daisy Martell proves a charming comedienne; Will Johnson creates much laughter, his songs being well received; Rex Fox is capital in a ventriloquial and musical wire act; Lizzie Glenroy, Scotch comedienne, proves most successful, and a series of pictures entitled "Wild Birds at Home," shown on the American Bioscope, completes a capital bill.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Ryder Boys' company is here again, and on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights The Red Lamp was staged. A fine study of Paul Demetrius, the chief of the secret police, was that of Mr. William Calvert; whilst Mr. Henry Worrall was excellently placed as the scheming Nihilist, Ivan Zazzullo. Mr. Murray Graham puts plenty of dramatic force into the part of Allan Villiers; and success attended Mr. Leonard Mudie's portrayal of Prince Alexis. Mr. Harold Neville was a dignified General Morakoff; Miss Alice Hughes as Princess Claudia Valerian had ample scope to display rich abilities; and a charming Olga was Miss Ethel Norbury. Miss Elsie Vron scored as Mme. Dannenberg. The minor parts were all well sustained and the staging and dresses very effective. The Robbery of the Lyons Mail forms the attraction for the remaining nights of the week.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Vesta Fay's male impersonations are exceptionally good; Arthur Andrews is a capital comedian, with excellent songs; and Bugler Carr, equilibrist, scores. The pictures include Too Old to Work, Father Buys a Picture, and Stop those Barrels.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—Herman Melot's wonderful feats of conjuring astonish all, and he has a great reception. J. Gar. Kiddie's company score admirably in the absurdity The House of Tinn, in which Mr. J. Gar. Kiddie as Jeremiah Jinks, Mr. J. W. Groves as Mrs. Arabella Tinn; Miss Lizzie Payne as Miss Dolly Tinn; and Mr. Douglas B. Watson as Augustus Hobbs all win success. Virto plays tunes on quite a variety of instruments; and Mr. "B" portrays some piquant points in peculiar pictures. The Sisters Varley are charming duettists; and the Evalos score in their humorous juggling act. Chassino is an expert shadowgraphist and whistler; and the Forsyths are seen to advantage in the speciality act The Tramp and the Nursery. The pictures are good, and Widdop's orchestra play two delightful selections.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—The Kennedy and Moore combination is continuing to prove an immense attraction here. A good programme, including the Merry Pierrots, is being presented each evening. Messrs. Terry and Snowden, duettists and dancers, evoke loud applause; Miss Ivy Dene, soubrette, proves herself a highly-trained artist; well-merited applause is accorded to the Gelders in their marvellous illusionist entertainment; Madame Constance Bellamy's charming singing wins for her the favour of the entire audience, and a clever turn is that of the Three Belles Sisters, in their speciality dances.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—PALACE. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Miller.—At the head of a capital bill are the Cumberlands, who astonish all in their wonderful exhibition of cycling; Cullen and Carthy, with Little Cluley, never fail to please; Cedar and Elgar are also established favourites in their comedy act Ye Days of Olde; Dolly and Elsie are two charming young vocalists and dancers; Charles Resti's versatility is, indeed, attractive, and his conjuring smartly done; Edie Casson, assisted by Alexander Wills, appears successfully in The Escapade; and other attractions in the list are Nora Stockelle, a remarkably clever dancer; Maude Mortimer, comedienne, and Raymond's bio-tableaux.

GRAND.—Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—The Five Whiteleys, in acrobatic wire-walking and musical pot-pourri, have a gratifying reception; Will Letters' patter is provocative of hearty laughter, and others in the programme are Coralli, ventriloquist; Maxford and O'Neill, comedians; Emil Solbrig's automatons; H. A. Johnson's Les Belles Rays; Jim E. James, eccentric tambourine and banjo player; and Geo. A. Hope, vocalist.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Messrs. Rayner and Sutton's company is presenting Harvest here this week. Mr. Raynor gives an artistic portrayal of Beril Brook; Mr. Cecil Wynne is admirable as Sir Noel Musgrave; Mr. M. C. Curtis gives a thoroughly good interpretation of Capt. Tresider; very praiseworthy, too, is the Roy Marston of Mr. Conrad Heywood; Miss Henrietta Schrier's Brenda Musgrave is an impersonation replete with artistic touches; Miss D. West Squire is excellent as Lettice Vane; and Miss Lisa Coleman delightful as Nora Fitzgerald.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. J. H. Svenson.—The Hollanders are paying a welcome return visit here this week, and on Monday a very attractive programme was provided. Miss Marie Merton received quite an ovation for her waltz song; "Roaming in the Gloaming" was artistically rendered by Miss Elsa Brettingham; Miss Gertrude Skinner was loudly applauded for her excellent violin solo, "Tarantella"; Mr. Alec S. Clunes, the possessor of an admirable voice, was heard to advantage in "Hybrias, the Cretan"; "That is all I got out of him" was humorously rendered by Mr. Dick Henty; Mr. Harry Buss, a clever comedian, made the hit of the evening with his song, "My little Deutscher Girl"; some fine pictures were shown on the Bioscope by Mr. J. Lambert.

Messrs. Adeler and Sutton provide an entire change of programme for their open-air concerts on the pier.

WEST STANLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Stanley Theatre Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Mark H. Lindon; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Kelly.—The Woman from Scotland Yard is scoring a success here. Mr. George Edwin Clive, the co-author, plays his original part of Harry Stanhope to perfection; Mr. David Beattie is responsible for the rôle of the villain, Paul Obanoff; Miss Agnes Collier is effective as the heroine, Edith Mayne; Miss Mildred Cottell as Lady Stanhope is excellent; and Miss Daisy Kent is very good as her maid. Mr. Arthur Russell is all that can be desired as Ivan; Mr. Louis Newman provokes mirth as Algernon Fitzmaurice; and Mr. Robert Cromwell gives a dashing impersonation of Jack Brown.

VICTORIA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes; Stage-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Montrose.—Topping the bill here this week are the Five Musical Palmers, military musical experts, with Miss Palmer in imitations of Sousa. Kendrick and Laura, in their dainty interlude; Daisy Almer, comedienne and dancer; the Three Eltons, acrobats; the Three Royal Temples, operatic vocalists; Mlle. Laro's Marblesque Trio, in their classical living pictures; and Lu Chang Hi, Chinese magician, are other attractions.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—The Old Home is being played here this week by Mr. Roland Yorke's talented company. Mr. Charles Franmore gives an excellent portrayal of the old fisherman, Daddy Dean; Miss Gertrude Bonser is especially effective as Hazel Dean; Mr. Henry Lonsdale as the Rev. Eric Armstrong makes a typical parson; Miss Mara Collings is excellent in the part of Bridget Donoghan; and Mr. Fred de Vere is capital as Sam Adams; Lord Avondale finds an able exponent in Mr. Roland Yorke; Miss Gertie Douglas is successful as Polly Popp; Mr. Claude Agnew as Dr. Warburton acts forcibly; and Jack Warren is ably presented by Mr. Walter Osmond. The drama is thoroughly well staged.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co. District Manager, Mr. Gerald Hunt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Marco.—Some excellent films are produced this week, and enthusiastically received by crowded audiences. "From Earth to Moon" is a very fine picture, and others of equal merit are entitled "The Angel of the Village," "The Lion Tamer" (a most amusing series), "For Baby's Sake," and "The Magic of Music," &c. For ingenuity of conception, mechanical effects, and brilliant colour-schemes, these films are unequalled. H. McCann, comedian and acrobatic roller-skate dancer, varies the programme with admirable performances, which are highly appreciated.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Le Wards.—Variety performances twice nightly continue to receive generous support. Miss May Lilian Levey, a comedienne of striking ability, is this week proving a great favourite; the Prince-Milner Trio give a varied performance; and the "cycle whiz" of Blanche and Diacoff provides the requisite sensation. The Brothers St. Clair furnish a novelty in the form of a football match on cycles; and the gymnastic display of the Craig, Roze, and Craig troupe is highly entertaining. There are some excellent vocalists, and the Bioscope pictures are capital.

WORTHING.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Henry Swinerd's No. 1 company was here for the first three nights presenting Dare-Devil Dorothy. Special mention should be made of Mr. Walter Boyce as General Garston, Mr. Walter Ashley as Captain Geo. Fielding, Mr. G. Clifton Boyne as Captain Ed. Dudley, Mr. Francis Trevor as Hawkins, Mr. Harry Ugar as Silas Stump, and Miss Dorothy Desmonde as Dorothy Montrose.

THE WINTER HALL.—Manager, Mr. Shanly.—The pictures here this week are of a highly entertaining nature.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; General-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Miss Grace Warner and a talented company are paying a visit here with The Scarlet Clue, Lady Audley's Secret, and East Lynne. On Monday The Scarlet Clue was presented with thrilling effect. Miss Grace Warner gave a striking performance as Sal Scarlet, and was recalled again and again. The important part of Elsie Dean was undertaken by Miss E. Conway with notable success; Miss A. Corri depicted the rôle of Miss Esmond with ability; the part of Musette was admirably taken by Miss Estha Dean; Miss K. Cranston was a most realistic Mother Scrooge; and the little girl part of Polly was nicely expressed by Miss Nórah Britton. Mr. George Gordon appeared as the villain, Michael Stanton, and his fine elocution and physique added considerably to his success; Mr. Terence O'Brien as the Twin Brothers, seemed specially endowed for the portrayal of these well-drawn characters; the part of Billy was amusingly hit off by Mr. Wallace Black; and Mr. V. Garnet-Vayne was very realistic as Crazy Jim.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Brooks.—Large houses are the rule at each performance to see Miss Helen Roberts in her classical dances, including the famous Salome dance, and she is heartily applauded from all parts of the house; Thorpe and Coe introduce a smart little sketch, which is followed with interest; Cissie Lupino is nightly recalled for her clever dancing; the Arthur Watson and Flo Stanley troupe, in a musical comedy sketch, entitled Cruise of H.M.S. Victory, is well received; Mlle. Du Roche has a pleasing personality, and sings with good taste; Johnson and Devere do some daring and amusing feats on cycles; the Oakes Trio, in Money Land, cause roars of laughter; and Sira, the one-legged acrobat, is wonderfully good.

SCENE PAINTERS OF THE PAST.

BY GEORGE TWEDDELL.

Having spent many years in the painting rooms of various theatres as a scene-painter, I have met with many of what are called the "old school"—managers, actors, as well as scene-painters—and it has often seemed to me a loss to the historian of our stage that so few have taken any trouble to place on record what they could have told us about their contemporaries and the stage of their time. I have had the pleasure of conversing with a few of what I might call "links of the past"—practical workers in the theatre for a living, or, more likely, a "struggle for existence," as Darwin calls it; and very possibly this aphorism holds good in an eminent degree to those who live to please—"they have to please to live."

Anyhow, I have found time when I was kept busy, very often for twelve hours without intermission, to read various so-called learned articles in our papers about the use and abuse of scenery, and often written by people who, I should think, know nothing about this subject, for they speak as lightly of the scene-painter and stage scenery as if the stage painter was of no more value than the gentleman who puts the last coat of distemper on the ceiling, or the printed paper on the wall. I have often thought it would be well if some people that write so lightly about us had three months' training in a large theatre, before the production of a pantomime, or a new opera or play. They would be in a far better position to write. They would then find what an amount of hard work, physical and mental, is attached to our calling. If the scenic artist happens to gain a little praise from the public, some of those gentlemen tell us his work interferes with the play and the actors, and have even suggested a backing of drapery when the works of our greatest poet and dramatist are placed on the stage. Well, what Shakespeare himself would have liked, if he did not get it, he has written above each scene, and most of his plays are adapted for scenic illustration.

When stage scenery was first used in the English theatres I am not able to ascertain. The splendid Court pageants designed by Inigo Jones and others have been all described by abler writers. It is usual to call De Loutherbourg the father of scenic art in this country, but it is evident it was in use before, perhaps in a very simple and primitive form. As is well known, it was practised in Italy long before by really great artists, as the following extract from Pilkington's "Dictionary of Painters," published 1805, shows. He writes thus of Baldassare Peruzzi, 1481-1536:—"His usual subjects were views of streets, palaces, corridors, and the insides of magnificent apartments, and by a judicious distribution of his lights and shadows, he gave them a roundness and projection as natural and as striking as if they were real. It surprised and pleased even Titian, for when that great artist viewed some of his work, he was so deceived that no arguments could persuade him that the objects he saw were produced by the pencil. Peruzzi excelled in painting scenes for theatres, in which he introduced with taste and judgment, and the decorations peculiar to the stage, and he is accounted the first who practised that style of painting."

Salvator Rosa is also said to have practised scene-painting, and with regard to Canalletto, who died in 1768, I give again an extract from Pilkington:—"He was the son of one Bernardo, a scene-painter, followed the profession of his father, and acquired by that exercise a wildness of conception and readiness of hand. . . . He made use of the camera, but corrected its defects in his air tints. He was the first to show to artists its real use and limits."

It is singular this mention of the "camera" by Pilkington, as we are reminded that the discovery of photography was attributed to a French scene-painter, M. Deguerra, employed at the Paris Opera House, for which he received a pension, and it was afterwards called the "Daguerrotype."

As to the beginning of the use of scenery in this country, we have been told of the Court pageants, and also of the introduction of scenery in Milton's "Comus" at the creation of Charles I. as Prince of Wales, also of D'Avenant in 1656, using "scenic effects on a most extensive scale," and many mechanical changes, but when it became common in the regular theatres is not very evident. The late G. A. Sala, himself a scene-painter in early life, tells us the poet Pope sneered at the painted ceilings, "where sprawl the saints of Verrio and Laguerre," and that the poet slew the art of Mural decoration in this country. Those artists, whose sprawling saints were in reality very masterly, were virtually scene-painters, and many of the pupils of Sir James Thornhill and Laguerre devoted themselves to the embellishment of the stage." One of the early English scene-painters was Francis Hayman, who died in 1776, the friend of Hogarth and De Loutherborg. He painted extensively at Vauxhall, and for Fleetwood at Drury Lane. W. Hodges, R.A, a pupil of Wilson, also painted for the theatres. He accompanied Captain Cook to the South Seas as draughtsman. In 1788 the celebrated architectural scene-painter, Signor Gaetano Marinari, was artist at the King's Theatre, Haymarket. Scenery painted by him was in use at Drury Lane as late as 1850, according to James Anderson:—"The scenery for Coriolanus was mostly new (with the exception of the magnificent pictures of old Rome, by the deceased grand architectural scene-painter, Marinari)." I remember seeing an Eastern interior by him in 1869 at Drury Lane, when a pupil with Mr. Beverly. It had been in the scene stores a great number of years, and it was a very fine piece of work. In 1790 Luppino, one of the scene-painters of Covent Garden, made a folio of sketches in Hertfordshire, and in 1800 was published one hundred plates in aquatint of theatrical scenery by Basoli.

The Greives were practising scene-painting in London for a century. I had a conversation with the late Mr. Walford Greive, the son of Thomas Greive, some years ago, and he told me he could remember his grandfather, "the elder Greive," and gave me 1846 as the date of his death. Mr. Thomas Greive worked for a time in partnership with that fine artist, the late Mr. William Telbin. No doubt, had those gentlemen cared, they could have told us more than we shall ever know now about this interesting subject; but perhaps they were too much employed with their art to think of this. But Mr. Telbin's son is still with us—an excellent artist—and perhaps he may one day write us more. He is, I feel sure, most capable, judging from a few excellent articles in the Magazine of Art he gave us a few years ago on stage scenery. P. de Loutherborg (born 1740) has been well written about, and called the "father of the art in this country," I suppose because he was the first to introduce "effects" in his diorama, coloured mediums, transparency painting, &c. He must have been a very excellent painter, as the great Turner is said to have studied his work. I give the following extract from the Athenæum, Sept., 1873:—"It is remarkable that Turner owed much to De Loutherborg's teaching, as Cox did to one De Maria, a painter from the London Opera House, engaged at the Birmingham Theatre. Forty years after Cox's employment at the Birmingham Theatre he used to describe with enthusiasm the scenes painted by De Maria, especially a wooded landscape, and after describing its effect and breadth, added how very much he should like to see it again. It is also noteworthy that several of our best landscape painters have owed much to practice in scene-painting, or, as Turner did, have learnt from artists of that class. Almost all that was good in the work of David Roberts was due to scene-painting. Mulready practised it, as did W. Hunt. Stanfield's obligations are well known, Eastlake was not untaught, and Linnell had some brief practice."

It has already been pointed out that one of the parts of the ticket given to the purchaser is by him handed to the check-taker. These parts are put into a locked box by the check-taker, and counted by a member of the staff who has no duties at, and is independent of, the Box-office, and he in his turn makes a return direct to the Acting-Manager.

Similar returns will also be made to the Acting-Manager from the Pit and the Gallery, where, in place of tickets as above, either roll tickets or a check machine is used. In either case a counter's return is made, as above, and should agree with the cash returns as shown below.

Roll tickets are checked by recording starting and finishing numbers. A check machine automatically records the number of tickets issued.

In the case of the Pit and Gallery, where re-admission is allowed, Pass-out tickets must be provided. It is advisable to have them varied either as to colour or form as frequently as possible.

It frequently happens that people desire to exchange their seats for places in a better part of the house.

In these cases the Pass-out check must be given up to the Box-office clerk or money-taker issuing the new ticket. The check represents the difference between the tickets issued and the actual cash received.

Another system in vogue in dealing with transfers is the use of counterfoil ticket books printed with the amounts usually paid for the various transfers, different books being kept for transfers to each part of the house.

Only the Pass-out check, given up when the transfer was made, will be issued for the original seats, if re-sold.

THE roll of civic dignitaries connected with the theatrical profession has been increased by the appointment of Councillor Hy. Masterman, the popular manager of the Theatre Royal, Castleford, as a permanent Justice of the Peace for that town. We heartily congratulate Mr. Masterman.

MRS. D. KING, of Calcutta, who recently received the Kaiser-i-Hind medal, has for many years been a prime mover in all the charitable enterprises of the city. She was formerly a member of Sir Henry Irving's Lyceum company, and is a most capable comedy actress.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

On Friday evening, June 26, a performance of Glück's Iphigenia in Tauris, by members of the operatic class, was given in the theatre of the institution. It was a happy idea of Dr. Cummings's to revive an opera which is generally considered Glück's masterpiece, as Iphigénie en Tauride, originally produced at the Académie Royale de Musique, Paris, in May, 1779, has not been heard in London since 1866, when a performance was given at Her Majesty's Theatre, with the great Titiens, Gardoni, and our own fine artist, Sir Charles Santley, in the cast. The English version of Glück's dramatic opera heard on Friday night relates how Iphigenia, daughter of Agamemnon, is a priestess in Diana's Temple at Tsurica, under the King Thoas, and one of her most painful duties is to sacrifice to the goddess Diana all strangers in the land. Orestes, really Iphigenia's brother, and his friend, Pylades, being strangers from Greece, Iphegenia's native land, are, according to custom, brought to the Temple to be sacrificed. On questioning Orestes, whom Iphigenia does not recognise, she hears that his father has been killed by his wife, Clytemnestra, who is also slain by her son. Thinking her brother dead, Iphigenia decides to set one of the two free, so that he can carry a letter to her sister, Electra. Both friends wish to be the one slain to save the other, but at last Pylades is the one chosen to carry the letter. When on the point of killing Orestes, Iphigenia learns it is her own brother. The King Thoas hears of Pylades being set free, and is on the point of sacrificing Iphigenia and her brother, when the goddess Diana appears, orders the King and his subjects to give up her statue, and Iphigenia and her brother, who are to return to their native land, where Orestes is to be King. The opera, which is in four short acts, has some cleverly painted and admirably arranged scenery by Mr. W. T. Hemsley. Miss Barwell-Holbrook sang the music of Iphigenia with great intelligence and earnest expression; while Mr. Robert Carr quite distinguished himself by a very clever and ably acted performance of Orestes. Hardly less excellent was the Pylades of Mr. Edwin Lewis; while the smaller parts of Diana, Thoas, and Clytemnestra were ably filled by Miss Lilian Allen, Mr James Saker, and Miss Helen Duncan. Favourable mention should also be made of Mr. Ernest Claydon as Minister of the Temple. The chorus, an important feature in this opera, may be heartily commended, both for their singing and acting. The weird dance of furies and demons round the sleeping Orestes was very effective, and capitally arranged by Mr. B. Soutten, the stage-manager; while the excellent statue of Diana in the last act gave picturesque interest to the scene. The handsome costumes, kindly lent by the Royal Opera Syndicate, Covent Garden, and the wigs of Messrs. Clarkson, lent special interest to a performance that reflected credit on all concerned. All the artists were called on at the close, and a special and well-deserved compliment was paid to Mr. Richard H. Walthew, the conductor, when he appeared on the stage among the principal artists; while the small, but efficient, orchestra, which he so skilfully conducted, may be warmly commended.

The pupils of Mme. Fiammetta Waldahoff were heard in a mandoline recital in the concert room of the Guildhall School of Music on Monday evening. There was a very large audience, and Mme. Waldahoff had good reason to be gratified by the skill and intelligence displayed by her talented pupils. At first sight the length of the programme seemed somewhat formidable, but it was so well arranged that the concert proved full of interest, while the full body of tone produced by the young performers came no doubt as a surprise to many who have hitherto considered the mandoline as a somewhat limited instrument. The programme commenced with orchestral selections, conducted by Mme. Waldahoff, Weaver's "Marche Orientale" and "Under the Red Cross" receiving a spirited interpretation. Miss Lilian Branston, an advanced pupil, gave an excellent solo on De Beriot's "Scène de Ballet," accompanied by the mandoline orchestra; and Miss Gwendoline Priestley was heard in a very brilliant performance of Papini's "Salterella" and the "Bandurria," unaccompanied, of Stauffer. Two piano solos, Grieg's charming "Au Printemps" and the "Frühlingsrauschen," by Sinding, were cleverly played by Miss Amy L. Parsons, pupil of Mr. Norman Cummings; while the Misses Branston, Cooper, and Priestley gave a very effective mandoline trio (unaccompanied) on Morris's "Sweetest flower." Miss Ethel Lowe played "Wiegenlied" (Brahms) with good results; and Miss Lillie Selden, an associate of the Guildhall School, and a professional pupil of Mme. Waldahoff's, was heard in a clever arrangement of "Home, sweet home" (Waldahoff), an organ imitation on five strings, by Ciociano, which one would think almost an impossible feat on the mandoline, the same composer's "Le Village" (a descriptive piece), and, lastly, the difficult "Hungarian Dance" of Brahms. Miss Selden, who played with delightful skill and finish, was received with abundant applause. Hucke's quartette, "Pour Toi," played by the Misses Lowe, Strover, Stevenson, and Cremer, was an admirable instance of the fine, rich tone produced by concerted mandolines. Miss Beryl Cremer, a very youthful pupil, showed great command of her instrument in Distin's "Entr'acte." An interesting feature in the concert were the Old French Airs (17th century), played by the Misses Rudge and Parsons, who were accompanied on a harpsichord made in 1605, kindly lent by Mr. J. Geo. Morley. Three clever recitations, "But they didn't," "My ships," and "Nini Ninette Ninon," were given by Miss Jessie Ainge Stirling, A.G.S.M., a pupil of Mr. Cairns James; and the interesting recital closed with "Marcia Reale," "Poet and Peasant," and "Le Régiment qui passe," played by the Rita Quintette. The accompanist was Miss Amy L. Parsons.

AMONGST those who contributed to the entertainment at the dramatic and musical matinée at the French Embassy on Wednesday, in aid of the French Benevolent Society, were Madame Emma Calvé, Madame Yvette Guilbert, M. Coquelin, aîné, M. Johannes Wolff, Mlle. Fély Dereyne, M. Seveilhac, Mlle. Herleroy, M. Gilibert, Signor Sammarco, Madame Donalda, and M. J. Hollman. The accompaniments were played by Signor Baraldi, M. Charlier, M. Ferrari, and Mr. Raphael Roche, and the entertainment was under the direction of M. Paolo Tosti.

THE Savoy Theatre was the scene of a small fire on Saturday evening, when the fireman, upon going his rounds after the last employee had left the theatre, discovered an outbreak in the electrician's room. Having called the brigade, he put the theatre hydrant into use, with the result that the flames were quickly extinguished. The room was severely damaged, and the stage and contents, including some scenery, suffered from the heat, smoke, and water. A temporary switchboard was erected, and there was no interference whatever with the performance of The Mikado on Monday evening.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SYDNEY, MAY 26, 1908.—Sherlock Holmes, with again Mr. Kingston in the title-part, is doing good business here. Mrs. Robert Brough has a part worthy of her in that of Madge Larrabee; Mr. Gregan McMahon as Professor Moriarty created a profound impression by his powerful acting; Miss Nellie Calvin was a good Alice Faulkner; and Mr. R. Carey was again Billy, the buttons. Other parts were well acted by Messrs. C. R. Berkeley, Frank Harcourt, Vivian Edwards, Cyril Mackay, T. W. Lloyd, Miss Irby Marshall, and others.

AT Her Majesty's Humpty Dumpty pursues his attractive career.

AT the Palace, Messrs. Meynell and Gunn are keeping The Midnight Wedding in the bill.

KUBELIK, the great violinist, was welcomed by the Lord Mayor (Alderman Thomas Hughes) at the Town Hall on the 20th, when the principal musicians and representatives of musical societies were invited to join in. The Lord Mayor, in a graceful speech, welcomed the visiting artist, and he was followed by Sir William Manning; the Hon. C. K. Mackellar and Mr. Parry, on behalf of the Philharmonic, Amateur Orchestral, and Indertafel Societies, and by Mr. P. F. Marich for the music-sellers of the city. Jan Kubelik made a modest speech in excellent English.

THE TIVOLI has Will Lochraine, the Two Westons, Olive Robinson, Baby Watson, the new Dean Tribune, Ardo, Alberto, Walter Whyte, Sylvo, Albert Sisters, Les Warton, Marsh Little, and Little Gladys Conway. The bird imitator, Charles Mildare, finished on Saturday, and went to Melbourne.

THE National Amphitheatre has Maggie Fraser and Jessie Lee as chief vocalists; the Weatherleys and Tim Howard are prime attractions; and the newest arrivals are the Australian Dartos (the McLean children), one of them a fine imitator of Little Tich in his boot dance.

WEST'S PICTURES are at the Town Hall. The Theatorescope is at the Lyceum Hall, and picture shows are at the Victoria, Queen's, and Oxford halls, all doing well.

MR. H. R. ROBERTS and his Prince Chap company left for New Zealand on the 23rd, returning here in Sept. next.

MR. ALFRED DAMPIER, actor and manager, died on the 24th at the age of 60. He leaves a widow, two daughters, and one son. In Australia the late actor was a great favourite for many years, but sickness supervening on an accident had removed him from active work for some time, and his end was not unexpected. General sorrow greeted the news of his death. He was buried in Waverly Cemetery, where so many theatrical and musical remains lie at rest.

MELBOURNE, MAY 26, 1908.—PRINCESS THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. G. P. Huntley.—The Merrymakers are still staging their medley performance, and a full and varied programme is provided.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. E. J. Tait.—The Merry Widow has fairly taken Melbourne by storm. On Saturday evening hundreds were turned away long before eight o'clock. Miss Carrie Moore in the name-part has established herself a greater favourite than ever. The Merry Widow will run till further notice.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Meynell and Gunn; Business-Manager, Mr. Stanley W. Cherry.—Numbers of people who wished to renew acquaintance with Mr. and Miss Hook and their famous liqueur had to leave the doors of the Theatre Royal on Saturday night disappointed. Seating and standing room had all gone long before eight o'clock. For next Saturday the "second edition"—that is, additional songs and dances—is announced. In Mr. Stanley W. Cherry Messrs. Meynell and Gunn possess a capable and courteous business-manager.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—Mr. Harry Rickards is certainly keeping faith with his patrons as regards giving them new turns in rapid succession. On Saturday evening Mr. J. P. Ling, mimic and monologue entertainer, made his first appearance, and met with instant approval from a large and enthusiastic house. Mr. Ling allows his audience not a single dull moment while he holds the boards. His performance throughout was thoroughly enjoyed. The eccentric comedians, Regan and Ryan, were chiefly remarkable for their clever dancing; Mr. Irving Sayles made his reappearance, and got a warm reception, chiefly from his friends in the gallery; Frank Harwood, raconteur and descriptive vocalist, presented a budget of new stories; Ike and Will Scott appeared in an amusing sketch; Mr. John Higgins (champion jumper) performed a number of new and difficult feats; while Florrie Ranger, Muriel Andrews, Fanny Powers, Gertie Cremer, Gibson Girls, Bob Harper, Clarence Tisdale, George Bentley, and the rest of the company all contributed pleasing numbers.

THE GAIETY THEATRE, under the able management of Mr. Harry Brennan, continues to do excellent business. There was a complete change of programme on Saturday evening, and several new artists made their appearance. Artists appearing with success at present include Zeno and Hall, Will Bracey, Joe Charles, C. Hayes, Gertrude Emery, Lily Grimshaw, Lucy Lavina, Amy Blackie, Rose Sisters, Wally Edwards, Clara Keating, Ernest Pitcher, and Tindall and Royal.

WEST'S PICTURES at Wirth's Olympia are as popular as ever. The management are presenting a number of new films weekly. A feature of the entertainment is the excellent performance nightly by West's full military band.

THE Athenæum Hall affords further evidence of the popularity of picture entertainments. Messrs. Best and Baker's pictures are drawing big houses, and the entertainment deserves its success.

THE Scarlet Troubadours, under the management of Mr. Edward Branscombe, are appearing with great success at the Town Hall. The entertainment is a bright and varied one, and each individual item is loudly applauded. Owing to the success which has attended the performances so far the management have decided to extend the present season.

LOCKHART, in his "Life of Scott," devotes several pages to an account of a visit paid to Sir Walter by the Duchess of St. Albans, who was then Mrs. Coutts. She arrived at Abbotsford with a train of three carriages, each drawn by four horses. Her retinue consisted of her future lord, the Duke of St. Albans, one of his Grace's sisters, a sort of "lady in waiting," two physicians, "and, besides other menials of every grade, two bed-chamber women for Mrs. Coutts's own person, she requiring to have this article also in duplicate, because in her widowed condition she was fearful of ghosts." There were already assembled at Abbotsford several ladies of high rank, who, witnessing this ostentation on the part of an actress who, when a girl, had been chased from her home by a vulgar virago of a mother, took it into their heads to snub her. The good-natured Sir Walter, pained at the conduct of his noble guests, took the youngest and prettiest of them aside, and lectured her on her manners. The beautiful peeress thanked him for treating her as his daughter; and one by one the other ladies, being made to run the gauntlet of Sir Walter's rebukes, Mrs. Coutts was speedily set at ease. The narrative is curious as a typical illustration of the sentiments with which the society to which Harriet Mellon claimed to belong regarded her.

NAPOLEON AND THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

Though the Prince, writes Arsène Houssaye, alluding to Napoleon III., never wore his heart upon his sleeve, not even in his most intimate and familiar moments, he was not at all "stand-offish" with his friends. Etiquette was not very strictly observed at the Elysée; after all, it was not so very long ago that he had led the life of a simple citizen of the United States, without dragging a court after him. He was only too happy to be in France and to breathe his native air not to be pleased with everything, except with the Orleanists who kept up a vigorous war against him in the National Assembly under the Republican mask.

One morning when he had sent for me—I do not remember for what—I happened to come in at the breakfast hour. He just got into the dining-room when my name was taken in. On the impulse of the moment he was about to send me for a stroll in the garden, but he checked himself and told me to sit down to breakfast.

Some of his suite were already in the dining-room. Persigny, Toulongéon, Fleury, Prince Murat, Baciocchi, were standing about waiting for him. At his request they had preceded him, he being engaged for a little while on some ambassadorial business. They left off talking as he took his seat, in case he wished to say something, but he kept silent at first, as if engrossed with other things. Prince Murat spoke to me about Mlle. Rachel, which brought the Prince's thoughts back to his surroundings. Having cleared his deep bass voice to sing the praises of the tragédienne, he took the opportunity of pronouncing a eulogy on tragedy—no doubt because tragedy is the apotheosis of princes. With him everything was the means to the end. It is sufficiently well known that he did not love art for art's sake. Though he had written in verse himself—though he had tried eloquence in solemn prose—he was no more gifted with the poetic than with the artistic sentiment. The "continuator"—as distinct from the successor—of Napoleon I. was a utilitarian. What he loved most in the vault of Heaven was his own star; what he loved most in the forest was the noise of the chase; what he loved most in the valley was the smoke of the railway engine; what he loved most in this marvellous garden of the Elysée was the view of the Palace of the Tuileries.

I admit feeling some emotion in answering the Prince. It was no longer a mere breakfast-party, it was a congress with everyone looking on. They had scarcely had time to judge me at my work, and now they wanted to judge me at oratory. If I happened to utter a few fine truisms couched in redundant phraseology I was lost as a director. There was a profound silence that became very terrible to me. Fortunately I had something to say.

I began by reminding the Prince-President that in Paris there were several kinds of pit. One might open the doors of the Théâtre Français as wide as one could to the people; they would not be likely to come to it, for the simple reason that the people only go where they enjoy themselves. They have a holy horror of Alexandrines (twelve-feet verses), and they kick against the exalted teachings of master-minds. Hence it is not for the people that one should govern the Théâtre Français. When art shall be brought within the appreciation of everybody it will no longer be art; democracy is not fond of summits—when it scales the mountain it is to knock it down. The good and the beautiful are not always synonymous; the people love the one and greet the other, but from a distance. Do what one may, two kinds of spectacles will always be necessary—that which appeals to the intellect, that which appeals to the eyes. You may smash the aristocracy that boasts its coats of arms; you'll never destroy the aristocracy of nature. The descendant of a Montmorency goes to the spectacle that pleases the eye; the son of the rag-picker will go to the spectacle that appeals to the intellect, if God has placed His own divine mark on his front. Hence we must leave to the Théâtre Français all its supremacy. The attempt to descend would be an attempt of high treason against literature. The spectator will have to rise and still to rise. Let us give him the spectacle of Le Cid and of Le Misanthrope; let us endeavour to remind him of Æschylus and Shakespeare; let us show him his own moral doings as in a mirror; let us maks him laugh after having made him cry—that is all right; but to make a school for politics of the Théâtre Français, instead of a school for the teaching of the beautiful and the true—that would be wrong. The real mission and genius of the stage are to elevate the soul to the appreciation of all the great feelings of heroism, virtue, and patriotism—but of patriotism freed from all party spirit.

I was interrupted by one of the guests, who maintained that there was no patriotism without party spirit, because the genius of France was always represented by a man.

"That is just where the danger lies," I said, "because the Parisian pit is always disposed to tilt against the powers that be. Under Napoleon I. it applauded everything savouring of Republicanism or Royalism; under the Restauration it applauded everything that was Republican or imperialist; under the Second Republic Mlle. Rachel has sung the "Marseillaise," but it was Mlle. Rachel, and not the "Marseillaise," that was applauded."

The Prince, who was not at all obstinate, said:—

"Perhaps you are right."

"THE prices of admission to the early theatres," says Dutton Cook, "varied according to the estimation in which they were held, and were raised on special occasions. 'Twopenny rooms,' or galleries, were to be found at the larger and more popular theatres. In Goffe's Careless Shepherdess, 1656, acted at the Salisbury Court Theatre, appear the lines:

'I will hasten to the money-box
And take my shilling out again;
I'll go to the Bull or Fortune, and there see
A play for twopence and a jig to boot.'

The money received was placed in a box, and there seems to have been one person specially charged with this duty. Dekker, dedicating one of his plays to his 'friends and fellows,' the queen's servants, wishes them 'a full audience and one honest doorkeeper.' Even thus early the absolute integrity of the attendants of the theatre would appear to have been a subject of suspicion. 'Penny galleries' are referred to by some early writers, and from a passage in the 'Gull's Horn Book,' 1609—'Your groundling and gallery commoner buys his sport for a penny'—it is apparent that the charges for admission to the yard, where the spectators stood, and to the galleries, where they sat on benches, were the same. In Dekker's Satiromastix, one of the characters speaks scornfully of 'penny bench theatres,' where a gentleman or an honest citizen 'might sit with his squirrel by his side cracking nuts.' But according to the Induction to Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, first acted in 1614, at the Hope, a small dirty theatre on the Bank-side, which had formerly been used for bear-baiting, the prices there ranged from sixpence to half-a-crown."

THE Playgoers' and the O.P. clubs, at a meeting held on the 26th ult., decided to amalgamate, the resolution being moved by Mr. Algernon Collins and seconded by Mr. Carl Hentschel. A sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Carl Hentschel, J. M. Freshwater, A. T. Ellis, and Chris. Taylor, was appointed to effect the amalgamation, with power to act. The name of the amalgamated clubs, we understand, is to be "The Playgoers'—with which is incorporated the O.P." The club rooms will be in Clement's Inn.

THE MUNICIPAL THEATRE.

Of the practicability of a municipal theatre, says Mr. Sidney Lee in "Shakespeare and the Modern Stage," ample evidence is at hand. Foreign experience convincingly justifies the municipal mode of theatrical enterprise. Every great town in France, Germany, Austria, and Switzerland has its municipal theatre. In Paris there are three, in addition to four theatres which are subsidised by the State. It is estimated that there are seventy municipal theatres in the German-speaking countries of Europe, apart from twenty-seven State theatres. At the same time, it should be noted that in the French and German capitals there are, at the side of the State and municipal playhouses, numerous theatres which are run on ordinary commercial lines. The prosperity of these houses is in no way checked by the contiguity of theatrical enterprise of State or municipality.

All municipal theatres on the continent of Europe pursue the same aims. They strive to supply the citizens with true artistic drama continuously, and to reduce the cost of admission to the playhouse to the lowest possible terms. But the working details of the foreign municipal theatres differ widely in individual cases, and a municipality which contemplates a first theatrical experiment is offered a large choice of method. In some places the municipality acts with regal munificence, and directly assumes the largest possible responsibilities. It provides the site, erects the theatre, and allots a substantial subsidy to its maintenance. The manager is a municipal officer, and the municipal theatre fills in the social life of the town as imposing a place as the town hall, cathedral, or university.

Elsewhere the municipality sets narrower limits to its sphere of operations. It merely provides the site and the building, and then lets the playhouse out at a moderate rental to directors of proved efficiency and public spirit, on assured conditions that they honestly serve the true interests of art, uphold a high standard of production, avoid the frivolity and spectacle of the market, and fix the price of seats on a very low scale. Here no public funds are seriously involved. The municipality pays no subsidy. The rent of the theatre supplies the municipality with normal interest on the capital that is invested in site and building. It is public credit of a moral rather than of a material kind which is pledged to the cause of dramatic art.

In a third class of municipal theatre the public body confines its material aid to the gratuitous provision of a site. Upon that site private enterprise is invited to erect a theatre under adequate guarantee that it shall exclusively respect the purposes of art, and spare to the utmost the pockets of the playgoer. To render dramatic art accessible to the rank and file of mankind, with the smallest possible pressure on the individual citizen's private resources, is of the essence of every form of municipal theatrical enterprise.

The net result of the municipal theatre, especially in German-speaking countries, is that the literary drama, both of the past and present, maintains a grip on the playgoing public which is outside English experience. There is in Germany a very flourishing modern German drama of literary merit. Sudermann and Hauptmann hold the ears of men of letters throughout Europe. Dramas by these authors are constantly presented in municipal theatres. At the same time, plays by the classical dramatists of all European countries are performed as constantly, and are no less popular. Almost every play of Shakespeare is in the repertory of the chief acting companies on the German municipal stage. At the side of Shakespeare stand Schiller and Goethe and Lessing, the classical dramatists of Germany; Molière, the classical dramatist of France; and Calderon, the classical dramatist of Spain. Public interest is liberally distributed over the whole range of artistic dramatic effort. Indeed, during recent years Shakespeare's plays have been performed in Germany more often than plays of the modern German school. Schiller, the classical national dramatist of Germany, lives more conspicuously on the modern German stage than any one modern German contemporary writer, eminent and popular as more than one contemporary German dramatist deservedly is. Thus signally has the national or municipal system of theatrical enterprise in Germany served the cause of classical drama. All the beneficial influence and gratification, which are inherent in artistic and literary drama, are, under the national or municipal system, enjoyed in permanence and security by the German people.

Vienna probably offers London the most instructive example of the national or municipal theatre. The three leading Viennese playhouses—the Burg-Theater, the Stadt-Theater, and the Volks-Theater—illustrate the three modes in which public credit may be pledged to theatrical enterprise. The palatial Burg-Theater is wholly an institution of the State. The site of the Stadt-Theater, and to a large extent the building, were provided by the municipality, which thereupon leased them out to a private syndicate, under a manager of the syndicate's choosing. The municipality assumes no more direct responsibility for the due devotion of the Stadt-Theater to dramatic art than is implied in its retention of reversionary rights of ownership. The third theatre, the Volks-Theater, illustrates the minimum share that a municipality may take in promoting theatrical enterprise, while guaranteeing the welfare of artistic drama.

The success of the Volks-Theater is due to the co-operation of a public body with a voluntary society of private citizens who regard the maintenance of the literary drama as a civic duty. The site of the Volks-Theater, which was formerly public property and estimated to be worth £80,000, is in the best part of the city of Vienna. It was a free gift from the Government to a limited liability company, formed of some four hundred shareholders of moderate means, who formally pledged themselves to erect on the land a theatre with the sole object of serving the purposes of dramatic art. The interest payable to shareholders is strictly limited by the conditions of association. An officially sanctioned constitution renders it obligatory on them and on their officers to produce in the playhouse classical and modern drama of a literary character, though not necessarily of the severest type. Merely frivolous or spectacular pieces are prohibited, and at least twice a week purely classical plays must be presented. No piece may be played more than two nights in immediate succession. The actors, whose engagements are permanent, are substantially paid, and an admirably devised system of pensions is enforced without making deductions from salaries. The price of seats is fixed at a low rate, the highest price being 4s., the cheapest and most numerous seats costing 10d. each. Both financially and artistically the result has been all that one could wish. There is no public subsidy, but the Emperor pays £500 a year for a box. The house holds 1,800 persons, yielding gross receipts of £200 for a nightly expenditure of £125. There are no advertising expenses, no posters. The newspapers give notice of the daily programme as an attractive item of news.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

"GROVE'S DICTIONARY."

If the world knows little of its greatest men, it knows still less of its greatest musicians; but with the precious possession of the goodly volumes of "Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians" the lover of the divine art can linger affectionately over the story of the trials, the struggles, and the triumphs of the masters and interpreters of melody; can glean knowledge of ancient forms of music and instruments; can acquaint himself with the earliest examples of orchestration; in a word, can avail himself of the research of busy and gifted experts. These are points especially to be noted by the amateur and the performer. The cultured critic will glance more particularly at the accounts given of modern and living composers, of the men now making musical history. Nothing, indeed, seems to have been left out of this admirably complete work, of which Messrs. Macmillan and Co. have just issued the fourth volume. To this there are close upon a hundred contributors, including the editor, Mr. Fuller Maitland, M.A., F.S.A., who contributes an interesting and highly critical analysis of the claims of Richard Strauss as an original composer. According to the editor he began as a "follower of the classical ideals." Then, we take it, Strauss wrote down his inspirations with simple, natural expression, and without that bizarrerie which Schubert, in 1816, said prevailed in most of the composers of his time—that "bizarrerie which unites the tragic and the comic, the agreeable and the repulsive, the heroic and the petty, the Holiest and a harlequin; infuriates those who hear it instead of dissolving them in love." Those who remember the storm of ridicule roused by Wagner both in Paris and London in the early seventies will not be surprised to learn that the "eccentricities of style" developed by Strauss in his later compositions are considered reprehensible. Says the editor, the composer "seems to have considered it his duty (on discovering that his eccentricities were an attraction to the public) to startle his hearers with some new piece of independence (not to say impertinence) with each successive production." His passion for notoriety is no doubt responsible in great measure for his choice of Oscar Wilde's Salome, a subject that is being much discussed just now. "The ill-timed realism of the orchestration at the moment when the Baptist's head is cut off is thoroughly characteristic of the composer, and that he should not see the incongruity of introducing such a touch at such a moment argues the want of the finer perceptions." The editor sums up his estimate of Richard Strauss thus: "It is too soon to guess what his position among the musicians of the world may ultimately be: while he is still young enough to admit that his main object is to shock and startle, he is not too old to change his convictions, as he has already changed them once before."

The reader naturally turns to the article on Sir Arthur Sullivan. We are told that "the penalty of excessive popularity has been paid since Sullivan's death, for although that event came like a national disaster, his more important compositions have been almost entirely neglected. Even the beautiful Golden Legend, which enjoyed enormous popularity for many years, has been only heard comparatively seldom of late years." But the masses love Savoy opera, whose perennial popularity will for a long time yet keep Sullivan's memory green. No short review of the volume can do justice to its completeness or afford the slightest conception of the interesting matter to be found on every page. Such a compendium is worthy of the advance in musical knowledge and musical achievement that has taken place in this country during the last quarter of a century.

The volume, which is an admirable example of neatness of binding and clearness of print, is priced at one guinea.

"I HAD suggested to W. G. Wills," says Sir John Hare, in his reminiscences in the Strand Magazine, "that he should write me a version of 'The Vicar of Wakefield.' He jumped at the idea, and a few months after informed me that the play was finished. The manuscript—if I can so call it—was the most extraordinary thing of its kind I have seen. It was almost illegible, and many of the scenes were written on backs of envelopes, pieces of blotting-paper, and portions of old letters. I remember reading several pages and then arriving at an obvious hiatus, which I pointed out to Wills, who replied, in a thick Irish accent: 'I've got it, dear boy, in my pocket, or, perhaps, on my shirt cuff,' and he would then produce a suspicious-looking fragment scintillating with literary gems and poetic thought, though the play in its original condition was chaotic in the extreme. It was altogether incoherent and impossible in its first state—a mere embryo of what afterwards appeared when we got it into shape. Wills and I sat up night after night reconstructing the piece, and if I suggested a new scene or alteration to which he was agreeable he would reply, 'I accept that, dear boy.' He then proceeded to make a note on that useful shirt-cuff, underneath which slumbered the sleeves of three jerseys struggling to make their appearance, and perhaps jealous of their owner's partiality for that once white shirt."

As to who controls the theatre, writes Lady Grove in the Daily Chronicle, there is much doubt. "Oh, the women!" exclaimed a man vigorously to whom the question was put, and understanding the original query only in that way. He went on to give an instance of a piece in which he was interested having been rehearsed and staged. The interior decorations had been entrusted to a firm whose work was worthy of the artistic upholsterer-poet. Everything was satisfactorily arranged. Up came the "leading lady" one day, and with a wave of her imperious hand and a wink of her flashing eye all was changed, "Because, forsooth," the injured one complained, bitterly, "it did not tone with the lady's complexion."

THE following list gives some idea of the varying fortunes of plays recently produced at London theatres. The numbers given are those of performances:—A Lucky Spill, New Theatre, 4; Susannah and Some Others, Royalty, 7; Way Down East, Aldwych, 8; The Lord of Latimer Street, Terry's, 13; The Two Pins, Aldwych, 14; The Orange Blossom, Terry's, 15; Pro Tem., Playhouse, 21; The Woman of Kronstadt, Garrick, 25; Stingaree, Queen's, 25; Is Marriage a Failure? Terry's, 30; The College Widow, Adelphi, 30; The Marriage of William Ashe, Terry's, 30; A Fearful Joy, Haymarket, 32; Marjorie Strode, Playhouse, 33; Edwin Drood, His Majesty's, 33; The O'Grindles, Playhouse, 36; The New York Idea, Queen's and Apollo, 47; Lady Barbarity, Comedy, 47; The Beloved Vagabond, His Majesty's, 62; Matt of Merrymount, New, 72; Angela, Comedy, 75; Simple Simon, Garrick, 80; Her Father, Haymarket, 83; Dear Old Charlie, Vaudeville, 92; Irene Wycherley, Kingsway, 140; Diana of Dobson's, Kingsway, 140; The Education of Elizabeth, Apollo and Haymarket, 150; A White Man, Lyric, 170; The Thief, St. James's, 186; The Earl of Pawtucket, Playhouse, 223; The Gay Gordons, Aldwych, 229; The Girls of Gottenburg, Gaiety, 307; Brewster's Millions, Hicks, 323; Miss Hook of Holland, Prince of Wales's, 462. The Merchant of Venice at His Majesty's ran for fifty-nine performances, and Romeo and Juliet at the Lyceum was played for nearly a hundred times.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE Theatrical Sports Committee will meet on Tuesday evening to receive the auditors' report, a summary of which is given below. The financial result is better than was expected in view of the fact that, owing to the rain, the gate receipts were only £2. Had it not been that a much larger number of tickets were sold before the day and that the prize fund is larger than in any previous year the committee would have met with a serious deficit. With a desire to secure a bigger gate more money was spent in printing and advertising, which, in the circumstances, was wasted. There is a proposal that next year the sports be given on a Saturday, as the committee feel the efforts of all who give their service, both before and on the day, should have a better result and the convenience of the general public receive more attention in the future by selecting a day on which a greater attendance may be reasonably expected.

SUMMARY OF ACCOUNTS.

MEMBERS of the Cinematograph Operators' Association who are in London on Tuesday next are requested to attend a special meeting of the committee, to be held at 2.30 at the offices, 29, Wellington-street, Strand. Business of importance will come before the meeting.

THE Empire, Leicester-square, staff—back and front of the house—will go for their annual outing on Sunday week to Hastings. Dinner will be served in the Drill Hall. The management, as usual, are taking great interest in the arrangements.

THE staff of the Theatre Royal, Colchester, had their annual outing on Saturday last, the G.E.R. supplying a special saloon, by which nearly forty persons made the journey to Great Yarmouth. Dinner was partaken of at the St. Peter's Restaurant, under the genial chairmanship of the popular lessee and manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona, and the greater part of the day was spent in the open, many making the trip to Gorleston and Caister. On the return journey a break was made at Ipswich, allowing the party to visit the performance at Mr. E. H. Bostock's fine hippodrome.

THE staff of the Colosseum Theatre, Oldham, held their annual outing on Sunday last, Lincoln being chosen as the place of resort. Leaving Oldham at 6.5 a.m., on arrival at their destination the party proceeded to enjoy themselves, a drive round Metheringham, and a visit to the Cathedral and Mr. Chaplin's stables were included in the programme. Dinner was partaken of at the Lion Hotel, where full justice was done to the good things. A convivial evening brought the proceedings to a close, and home was reached at 11.30 p.m., after a pleasant day.

"MR. W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM'S plan," says the Mail, "with each play he has written has been to think it out very carefully for a few months, to get the complete story very carefully arranged in his mind, and when that is done to start writing. The actual writing of the play, which is ready to be transferred to paper, is usually with him a work of three or four weeks. Roughly calculated, the gross number of people his four plays draw to the theatres is 35,000 per week, and the gross receipts will vary between five and six thousand pounds for the same period. Mr. Charles Frohman is congratulating himself already because he has got three of them to produce on the other side, and takes the English and American rights in the next two that Mr. Maugham writes."

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS ETHEL HARDACRE.

Unlimited experience has been enjoyed by Miss Ethel Hardacre, who has played almost every line of part. Her forte lies, however, in comedy and character, her finest performance being undoubtedly that of the Duchess of Berwick in Lady Windermere's Fan. In contradistinction to this aristocratic dame, she was highly successful in an entirely opposite rôle, that of Belinda in Our Boys. For some time back she has been mainly associated with the Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne, and is at present playing with Messrs. Armitage and Leigh on tour the part of Cornelia Carlyle, a rôle she has sustained some hundreds of times. Her versatility can be proved by the fact that she has essayed at different periods and on emergencies every female part in that celebrated play. Other characters that have fallen to the lot of Miss Hardacre are Norah O'Reilly in The Silver Falls, Arte O'Neil in The Shaughraun, Ethel Arden in Union Jack, Delia Challis in Current Cash, Jerry Twaddle (boy) in Rags and Bones, and with Minnie Palmer in The School Girl. She has also toured in India, China, and the Philippine Islands, where she performed Olive Skinner in The Silver King, Mavis Clare in Sorrows of Satan, Ethel Carlton in His Excellency the Governor, Bina in Turned Up, and Sophie in Pink Dominos. She also played in The Geisha, A Runaway Girl, and The French Maid, and with the late Alfred Maltby enacted Mme. Polenta in Betsy. Many other parts she has essayed in comedy and drama, and has also played in two of her brother's (Mr. Pitt Hardacre) pantomimes at the Comedy Theatre, Manchester. Such a record is a fine one for an actress who may be said to have her career before her.

MISS ETHEL HARDACRE.

MR. ARTHUR GIBBONS.

Originally intended for a civil engineer, Mr. Arthur Gibbons was articled to his father, Mr. C. Preston Gibbons, himself an engineer of some importance. Mr. Arthur Gibbons started the Gravesend Dramatic Society, of which the late-lamented chief, Sir Henry Irving, was president, and it was as an amateur in that society that Mr. Gibbons originally faced the footlights. His first salaried engagement was with Miss Maggie Morton to play Tim in the late F. A. Scudamore's melodrama Is Life Worth Living? Then he adventured with Mr. Graham Falcon, essaying Gibson, the tailor, in The Private Secretary. Among the rôles in which Mr. Gibbons has secured success are Brabazon in Sydney Grundy's Sowing the Wind, Dr. Primrose in Olivia, principal baritone in grand opera, Idle Jack in pantomime Dick Whittington, and Dame Marjorie in Red Riding Hood. Also he made a vogue in many of the late

MR. ARTHUR GIBBONS.

Mr. Willie Edouin's creations, including Watty Walker in Off the Rank, and Stuart Cross in The Late Lamented. He has also played the hero in When London Sleeps, and in the melodrama Serving the Queen; and undertook Mr. William Terriss's part in Secret Service and the heavy rôle De Carteret in Sporting Life. The last two years as leading man and producer for Mr. Herbert Ralland's stock season at the Gaiety Theatre, Douglas, Isle of Man, has established him as persona grata with the public. His chief theatre successes have been Digby Grant in The Two Roses and Baron Hartfeldt in Jim the Penman—two characters diametrically opposed ethically and yet akin in their dramatic forcefulness. In comic opera Mr. Gibbons' chief success was the Baron Chanterelle in Mr. C. P. Levilly's La Poupée combination. When Mr. Herbert Ralland relinquished his engagement as general-manager—a position he had held for many years—Mr. Gibbons stepped into his shoes, and the shoes fitted. Mr. Arthur Gibbons makes a feature of original productions. In addition to the stock seasons in Douglas, which mean a complete change of programme—pièce de résistance and curtain-raiser—weekly, Mr. Gibbons produced Is Marriage a Failure? at Terry's Theatre last Christmas. The result was gratifying to all and sundry. The producer's share was a substantial cheque and a letter of sincere congratulation. Nine touring pantomimes all stand to Mr. Gibbons' credit. At the close of the Douglas summer season Mr. Gibbons will take up the duties of general-manager on tour of A White Man under Mr. Herbert Sleath's direction. He will also create in the provinces the rôle of Cash Hawkins. Mr. Gibbons is a sportsman, and was the founder of the Gravesend Sailing Club.

MR. G. H. SNAZELLE.

Interesting results were the outcome of a recent visit to Mr. G. H. Snazelle's studio at the Guildhall School of Music, where the popular entertainer was very busy teaching the young idea how to elocute. We elicited a few incidents of his remarkable career, which can best be related in his own words. "To begin with," said Mr. Snazelle, "I was born in Kent just fifty-nine years ago, and underwent a commercial education there and in France, where, I'm afraid, I didn't study the language so much as I ought to, but made up for it by being able at the end of two years to play nearly every instrument in the College Band—from the trombone to the kettle-drum. I subsequently obtained a situation in a subordinate position in a merchant's office, but got the honourable order of the sack because I took the whole of the important foreign mail to a cricket match instead of to the post-office. I then went to sea for a time, but that did not last long. There's a difference between being before the mast on a sailing vessel and being (as has been my later experience) a first-class saloon passenger on an ocean liner.

"Later I engaged with a French firm as a commercial traveller, and, equipped with a handsome horse and trap, had to push the sale of elastic webs for side-spring boots. This occupation lasted three months. I don't recollect getting any orders, but I do recollect having eleven fights! I then resolved to go into a bank. A friend and myself tossed a coin as to which bank we should select, and I won and had first choice. My salary at the end of ten years was £150 a year; my friend (he is still my friend) is a partner, and draws £20,000 a year. I don't. However, life has its compensations, for I've seen all the world—he hasn't; and he's got the gout—I haven't. That finished my commercial career, and for this reason. I was always passionately fond of music of the highest class, and I used to spend all my spare cash on the Popular Concerts and the opera. Accordingly, having some knowledge of music and a bass voice, while still employed at the Bank I placed myself under the best master I could afford, and knocked together a répertoire of about ten small parts in Italian opera. Through the late Lord Kinnaird's influence I was engaged by the late Col. Mapleson at Her Majesty's Opera, and I used to rehearse under Sir Michael Costa, singing with such eminent vocalists as Titiens, Trebelli, Bettini, Christine Nilsson, Valleria, Del Puente, Campanini, Wachtel, Behrens, &c. The £12 a week I received, though, perhaps, singing only once a fortnight, was a nice addition to my little £3 a week at the bank. At last I cut the painter, and branched out into opera entirely with Mr. Carl Rosa at the Princess's just thirty years ago. My old friend and master, Sir Charles Santley, was at the head of the company, and I shall never forget his great kindness to me as a beginner. We always remember with gratitude those who helped us up the ladder when we are on the bottom rung. I stayed with Carl Rosa on a very happy engagement for nine years, taking leading parts in about thirty operas—Mephistopheles, Sir John Falstaff, Devilshoof, and many others.

"Then I branched out into my entertainment: 'Music, Song, Story, and Travel. Pictorially Illustrated,' which has enabled me to journey all over the world—not only in the civilised communities but amongst the savages—and very often cannibals—of the South Pacific Islands. In Fiji, Tonga, Tahiti (these are not cannibals), New Hebrides, Solomon Islands (doubtful), I gave a lecture on the Chicago Exhibition with dissolving views, scenes, the stately homes of England, and so on, all deeply interesting to such an audience. They had no money, so for admission I took pearls, moonstones, sucking pigs, spears, grog-bowls, sharks' and whales' teeth, all of some value in the curio market. Incidentally, I was sending copy to a Melbourne newspaper.

"For the third time I visited Australia with a lecture—West's 'Our Navy'—and on my return undertook the teaching of elocution at the Guildhall School of Music—a most interesting and pleasant experience. But the fates have willed it that I am not to settle down yet, and I am off to Australia, India, China, and Japan again, under the auspices of Mr. Geo. Musgrove (with whom I have had many pleasant engagements in Australia) in a whole range of legitimate comic operas, not musical comedies—Les Cloches de Corneville, Mme. Angot, Das Fliedermaus, Bohemian Girl, and so on. To this visit I look forward with intense pleasure. The country is great and beautiful, the climate irreproachable, and the people whole-hearted and genuine."

Every admirer of Mr. Snazelle—and there are many—will be sorry to part with him, for besides being a most versatile artist, he has always played cricket, not only literally but metaphorically. His popularity was emphasised by the send-off concert which was given to him at St. James's Hall on the 24th ult., when many of the leading lights of the musical and dramatic world assembled to do honour to the occasion. We wish him God-speed on his travels. It may be added that Mr. Snazelle has permission to take up his duties at the Guildhall School of Music on his return.

MR. ESME PERCY.

As yet but on the threshold of his stage career, Mr. Esme Percy has little to record of his experiences and no views to express. Gratitude he has, and that "boundless as the sea." Mr. Percy is fain to admit that he is deeply and eternally grateful to Mrs. Brown Potter, Mr. F. R. Benson, Mr. William Poel, and Mr. Beerbohm Tree for having given him the opportunity of playing in the springtime of his life such superb parts as Romeo, Armand Duval, Shylock, Charles Surface, Macbeth, Orlando, Britannicus, Petruchio, and Hamlet. "Yes, thanks to them all," reiterates Mr. Percy enthusiastically, "and last—but, need I say it, not least?—my infinite gratitude to Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the very source and spring of this stream of luck which has distinguished my stage years up till now. Of course, I am but human, and as such, am not satisfied yet. If my gratefulness is boundless as the sea, my greediness is as infinite as the firmament. I wish to play all those wonderful parts again and again, and a host of others." Let us hope such a worthy desire will in course of time be gratified.

MR. ESME PERCY.

MISS EDYTH OLIVE.

America has gained the services of Miss Edyth Olive, who has journeyed across the Atlantic to take up Miss Margaret Auglin's rôle in The Great Divide. Miss Olive has had a noble welcome from New York audiences, and, as was confidently anticipated, her success has been great. Although a strongly emotional actress, the first hit of Miss Olive's career was scored in farce—The New Wing, in which she played Louisa Dexter at the Strand. Miss Olive subsequently undertook the lead in The Broken Melody, and a short season with Mr. F. R. Benson followed. Shakespearean drama gave her opportunities of proving her worth in tragedy, and she played Ophelia to the late Nutcombe Gould's Hamlet, Desdemona to Mr. H. B. Irving's Othello, Juliet, and Hermione; then in comedy, Rosalind, Viola, and Beatrice. Among modern characters her most successful interpretations have been Militza in For the Crown, Princess Flavia in The Prisoner of Zenda, Ishtar, Daughters of Babylon; Lady Marchant, A Bunch of Violets; Olive de Carteret, Sporting Life; Peg, Masks and Faces; Pauline, Lady of Lyons; Mrs. Borkman, John Gabriel Borkman; and leading heavies in many of the principal dramas. She created the rôle of Ygraine in the production of Maeterlinck's Death of Tintagiles at the Globe Theatre, in 1900. Then she waited until she was lucky enough to receive an offer from Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry to play Lady Castlemain in Sweet Nell of Old Drury, an impersonation which all who saw it will recall with pleasure. Among the most recent opportunities of witnessing Miss Olive's careful and talented work in London was that given at the Scala Theatre on April 12 last, when she gave a touching and eloquent portrayal of a Sister of Mercy in the Play Actors' production of Hannele. Miss Olive is the wife of Mr. Arthur Applin, who, besides acting in the States, has received a commission to write a couple of plays for the American stage.

MISS EDYTH OLIVE.

"FOR two years," writes Signor Alessandro Bonci in the Mail "I sang only vocal exercises, but with the utmost care, thinking with my teacher. At the end of three years I was singing little classical songs. I had come to a point of great importance—the comprehension of expression and enunciation; each individual word had its value, import, and colour, combining to make the reason for the existence of the song. Some have the mistaken idea that the songs of the great composers should be taken up early in the student's career, but before one can sing the old Italian songs as they should be sung one must be an artist. A great deal of harm is done by applying words before the tone is properly placed. First establish the proper production of the tone, which can only be done after two or more years' study."

A SHAKESPEARE COMMEMORATION.

For many years, writes Dr. Ralph Winnington Leftwich in the Westminster Review, Stratford has held an anniversary festival in honour of Shakespeare. And rightly so; for its illustrious citizen was born and educated, died, and was buried there. But, after all, the poet's working life was not passed there, nor did his genius develop there. It was in London that his genius developed; in London that he acquired his vast vocabulary of fifteen thousand words; in London that his wit sharpened itself against that of his fellow men; and in London that he gained that knowledge of practical stage-craft without which he might have failed as a playwright. The poet, in his journeys to the City, and, especially, to the Mermaid, no doubt frequently took boat; but often, too, must he have walked over the only bridge that then existed; the latter more particularly when accompanied by his friends Beaumont and Fletcher, who lived within a few yards of him. At the foot of London Bridge, the trio would pass a beautiful old church with a square tower. This church contained the tomb of the first English poet, Gower, and many a time must they have entered the building and gazed upon the memorial of their great forerunner. In 1607 Shakespeare's younger brother, Edmund, was buried there "with a forenoon knell of the great bell," and, judging from the amount of the fee paid, with much ceremony. Again, all three were doubtless present—certainly Shakespeare himself. The same year saw the interment of the poet Dyer; perhaps best known as the author of "Grongar Hill," and again it is likely that Shakespeare was amongst the mourners. The church in question was originally the Priory Church of St. Mary Overy, or St. Mary of the Bank (cf. the German Ufer, a bank). In 1540 it became the parish church, and was generally known as St. Saviour's. As such, it was Shakespeare's parish church. Indeed, in a straight line, it was less than 300 yards from the Globe Theatre. It is almost certain, therefore, that it was attended regularly by him.

Here, as has already been mentioned, our earliest poet, Gower, was buried, and the tomb showing his recumbent figure, with his three books beside him, has been a prominent feature for five hundred years. In addition, the two Elizabethan dramatists, Fletcher and Massinger, and the poet, Dyer, are all interred here, and windows have been put up to their memory.

Now, since the building with which Shakespeare was connected is ecclesiastical, there is only one form that a commemoration can take, namely, that of a special service in the cathedral. It is only with this that the writer is at present concerned. But he would be only too pleased if a water pageant could be added. Such a procession might go from Westminster to Bankside, where, on a platform formed of a number of barges, a rough reproduction of the Globe Theatre might be erected.

Perhaps that may come later; but let us in any case have the commemoration service next year.

About a month before Shakespeare Day, in this current year, the writer drew up a scheme similar to that which follows, and presented it to the notice of the Bishop of the diocese. It was discussed by his lordship with the Chapter, and received with considerable favour. Unfortunately, it was found that the time was too short for anything to be done this year, and the request was made that the scheme be brought before them again in the very beginning of the year 1909, fortified, if possible, by some expression of a desire for it from the outside.

This support the writer now seeks to obtain; and he solicits expressions of opinion from all lovers of the poet; but, especially, from those in active connection with literature and the drama, and from Shakespeare Societies in all parts of the world.

The following are the chief points of the scheme:—

1. That an anniversary Shakespearean service be held in Southwark Cathedral.
2. That the time for holding it be about four o'clock, so as to suit actors and actresses.
3. That the preacher be, if possible, a Shakespearean scholar, and the service be largely musical.
4. That for purposes of decoration, the flowers of Ophelia, combined with laurel, be employed, and that they take the form of ropes, wreaths and lyres; but not, as being too funereal, of crosses.
5. That the societies linking church and stage be asked to undertake the decorations.
6. That the offertory be given to the Cathedral Building Fund.

The Shakespeare Statue Committee has decided that the surplus, if any, shall be devoted to the promotion of the representation of Shakespeare's plays; but it will be found by no means easy to allocate the various sums without creating jealousy. The writer therefore suggests that it would be better to devote the surplus to the one London building associated with the poet—Shakespeare's old church.

THE late Augustin Daly used to tell the following story:—"Fleury, once the greatest of French comedians, when in his glory under the Empire, consented to play a part of but one scene, and in which he had but five words to speak—'Madame, your petition is granted.' It was that of an old seigneur, to whom an appeal is made by a poor woman whose husband is under arrest upon their wedding day. Fleury seemed to listen to her, at first with the indifference with which a nobleman usually receives the applications of such rude and ignorant peasants. Then all at once, struck with the dignity of her manner and sentiments, he fixed his eyes upon her, and while continuing to listen, as if by an instinctive, almost involuntary movement, his hand was raised by degrees to his hat, which he lowered before her as if mechanically. When the wife was done speaking the seigneur was in the attitude of respectful obeisance. The pantomime was so true, so delicate—it expressed so naturally the feeling of respect and surprise at finding the woman so superior to what she seemed—that the effect was electrical, and Fleury was greeted with the most tumultuous applause. The stock actor, who usually played the part, exclaimed 'See what reputation will do. Fleury gets three rounds of applause for just taking off his hat, while I never get a hand—and I don't believe that an old seigneur would take off his hat to a peasant woman anyhow!'"

AT a country theatre in the old "stock" days, a super who never before had had a speaking part, was cast for Catesby, in Richard III. He was exceedingly nervous, and forgot most of his lines, or "hashed" them up. When Catesby enters to Richard to announce Buckingham had been made prisoner, he said: "My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken prisoner, and we've cut off his head!" "Then," said Richard, in an aside to him, "stick it on again, you silly."

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, June 29,
"HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW."

Large audiences have assembled at the Kennington Theatre this week to witness Miss Mary Austin and E. Vivian Edmonds's company in He's a Jolly Good Fellow. The play brims over with intensely tragic episodes, and the authors, Messrs. Arthur Shirley and E. Vivian Edmonds, have provided plenty of mirth. Mr. J. Milne Taylor as Lord Vernon, of Oakwood Hall, is a typical English nobleman; the part of Harold Vernon is admirably enacted by Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds, who recently scored a big success in Woman and Wine at this theatre; Mr. Charles Aldred is responsible for the part of Vincent Vernon, which he handles in capital style; as Sampson, an artist's model, Mr. Richard A. Greene is a great favourite and is accorded an ovation; Mr. Riddell Robinson as the Baron Levertz is an ideal villain; Mr. Edwin T. Kisby as Bertie Splashington, Mr. Cyril Price Evans as Pierre Pasha, and Mr. Frank Sutherland as Jean Crac are excellent in their respective parts. The rôle of Hester Danvers is very ably sustained by Miss Mary Austin, whose skilful acting and charming personality won general admiration; the part of Marion Brooklyn finds a worthy exponent in Miss Dorothy Casey; Miss Ella Gillette is seen to advantage as Little Harold; Miss Winifred Williamson and Miss Hilda Gray give an excellent account of themselves as Lizette and Julia Flouflou respectively. All the minor parts are carefully handled. The elaborate scenery by Stanley Hohan and Charles Francotte leaves nothing to be desired, while the incidental music, written by George Melba, is very effective.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, June 29, the Drama, entitled
"THE LITTLE BREADWINNER."

Mr. J. A. Campbell's talented company is responsible for an excellent representation of the above-named drama here this week. Mr. H. B. Peppin plays in a masterly manner as the Quaker, Lord William Dorrington; Mr. Louis Lingard presents a finished performance as Richard Lawrence; and Mr. Alfred Maurice, as the oily, sneaking secretary, Joseph Prior, is to be commended for an admirable piece of acting. Mr. Sidney Lynn gives a bright and humorous impersonation of the bookmaker, Charles Prior. As Margaret Daventry Miss Emmie Barton is responsible for a sweet and sympathetic rendering; and Miss Clara Hunt is excellent as Bridget O'Flannaghan. Miss Gwen Stewart is seen to advantage as Kate Cherry; and Miss Kitty Melville is a taking Ruth. Miss Lizzie Young as Bobby Trott supplies a really clever study; and Miss Marjorie Lawrence as Megg, the little breadwinner, is an extremely capable child actress. She is also quite at home in song and dance, and fully deserves the royal reception accorded her. The minor characters are well cast, and the drama is well staged.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, June 29, the Drama entitled
"THE GOLDEN LADDER."

A large and enthusiastic audience assembled at this popular East-end house on Monday, when Messrs. George R. Sims' and Wilson Barrett's excellent drama The Golden Ladder was revived with great success. As the young missionary, the Rev. Frank Thornhill, Mr. Ashley Page was vigorous and incisive, while his love-making scenes with Lilian Grant were enacted with great fervour. Miss Marion Denvil made Lilian Grant a lovable character, playing with charm throughout, and displaying poignant grief in the prison scene. The villainous Michael Severn was impersonated by Mr. Walter Thornton in telling style; while the nervous tendency of the Greek adventurer, M. Peranza, was well suggested by Mr. Raymond Wood. Mr. Wilfred E. Shine made Samuel Peckaby stand out well in the picture by his homely rendering of the kind-hearted confectioner; and a clever character-sketch of the Tearer was presented by Miss Vibray Weaver. Jim Dixon, the defaulting clerk, was made the most of by Mr. Harry Brandon; Mr. Andrew J. Phillips was satisfactory as John Grant; and Noah Learoyd was performed by Mr. Bert Lloyd. Miss Nell Gilmore was a capable Mrs. Peckaby; and Victoria Alexandra was played well by Miss Mabel Lowe. The remaining parts in a long cast were competently filled by Mr. Herbert Conick, Mr. Robert Wilson, Mr. Fred Biron, Mr. Frederick Hill, Mr. Herbert Goddard, Mr. Arthur Fairfort, Mr. Geo. Godfrey, Mr. William Henry, Mr. Arthur Hyde, Miss Alice Dalmaine, Miss Annie Darville, Miss Florence Lauder, and Miss Bertha Hanbury. The scenery and effects were admirable, while the selection of music performed by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. V. Vorzanger, was admirably rendered.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, June 29, the Drama, entitled
"THE EXECUTIONER'S DAUGHTER."

Messrs. Fred J. Little and Fred Darcy are presenting this week a capital play from the pen of Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson, which is highly appreciated by the patrons of this theatre, who are ever sensitive to dramatic situations, soul-stirring incidents, and the final triumph of right over wrong. Consequently, The Executioner's Daughter, being well mounted and fitted with an adequate cast, and containing, as it does, the afore-mentioned requirements, thoroughly fulfils its mission. Monsieur Roche, the Executioner of Paris, is very ably undertaken by Mr. Elmore Frith, who presents a good study of the part. Mr. Albert Guyon as the villainous Felix Marius maintains a strong hold of the audience, Mr. Edward Ouston does justice to the character of Paul Rovel. A clever impersonation is supplied by Mr. Fred Benton as Kretch; Mr. Frank Ayrton as Tom Holmes is amusing, and supplies a large amount of comic relief. Vivian Ormonde is well sustained by Mr. Fredk. Loyd. Miss A. Harrison Tate essays the rôle of Arnette, the Executioner's daughter, with distinction and charm, and receives every sign of approval; Miss Adelaine Raby gives a noteworthy performance as Felice; Christine, a cripple, finds a suitable representative in Miss Prudence Ayrton; while Miss Madge Seymour supports the character of Sally King with ability. Well-rendered assistance in minor parts is supplied by Mr. W. Wills, Mr. William Le Blanc, Mr. George Smith, Mr. Arthur Lloyd, Mr. Louis Scott, Mr. Edward Hill, Mr. James Abbey, Miss Flora White, and Miss Constance Stow.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, June 29,,
"LOST IN LONDON."

A crowded house on Monday last showed a keen appreciation of Mr. Bell's company in the above well-known drama. Mr. Arnold Bell himself undertook the character of Job Armroyd, and gave one of his well-known excellent studies; Mr. Fred Morgan, one of the best present-day "heavies," was particularly good as Gilbert Featherstone; Mr. E. C. Robson was effective as Sir Richard Loder; Mr. Tom Nye and Mr. G. Graham as Jack Longbones and Dick Raine were quite satisfactory, as also was Mr. F. Stanley as Noah Moorhead. Mr. Billy Ross was really good as Benjamin Blinker; and Mr. Jimmy Danvers was funny as Thomas. Miss Frances Campbell acted with much feeling and power as Nelly Armroyd; Miss Maisie Lawson did well as Teddy Draggletherpe; Miss Elaine Gibson and Miss V. Campbell as Mme. D'Alton and Florence were both good; and Mr. E. Bickham made a clever Jerry, the street Arab.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales witnessed the performance of The Flag Lieutenant at The Playhouse on Saturday.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held at 409, Strand, on Monday. Present: Mr. F. J. Arlton (in the chair), Messrs. Cecil Raleigh, J. Poole Kirkwood, Hayden Coffin, Edmund Gurney, Richard A. Greene, Cecil Brooking, Chris Walker, F. Annerley, C. F. Collings, Robson Paige, Misses Agnes Imlay, Lucy Sibley, Rose Mathews, and Mr. Hubert Blount, secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Letters from Miss Irma Fielden and Mr. K. Blackmore were read, and the secretary received instructions to write to Miss Fielden asking her to call and see Mr. Mote with a full statement of the facts. He was also instructed to inform Mr. Blackmore that the Council had the greatest possible pleasure in accepting the proposition, and suggesting that five members from each side should be elected to sit on the committee, that the chairman be elected alternately from the A.A. and A.U., and also that nothing passed at these committee meetings be binding on either side before it has come before the Council of the A.A. and the Committee of the A.U.

The Finance Committee's report was read and accepted.

Mr. Willie Atom and Miss Violet Graham were elected members.

The Council discussed the question of excluding members from the rooms of the Association who have not paid their subscriptions, and it was resolved, "That members should not be allowed to use the rooms until their subscriptions due are paid." It was decided to put up a notice to the effect "That on and after this date (July 1) members cannot be allowed to use the rooms until their subscriptions are paid." The secretary was also required to instruct the staff to ask each member for their tickets. On it being found that a member has not paid his or her subscription the secretary is to be notified and interview such member on the subject, and should the excuse be reasonable, the same is to be put before the Council.

Mr. Brooking gave notice of his intention to move the rescission of the resolution accepting the Socials Committee's report.

The Council instructed the secretary to make it known that 957 members had paid their subscriptions, that the balance at the bank was £161 18s. 3d., and that the rent had been paid for three months in advance, and to ask those members who still owed their subscriptions kindly to send same at once.

Miss Rose Mathews reported the result of the Scala matinée, and a vote of thanks was passed to her for the manner in which she had worked and the great interest she had taken in the matter. A vote of thanks was also passed to Mr. Adnam Sprange and to all the ladies and gentlemen who worked for the matinée.

It was decided to insure the staff against accidents, and the secretary was instructed to carry out the arrangements without delay.

The Council passed a vote of thanks to those ladies and gentlemen who kindly made a donation of the money paid by them for tickets for the Midsummer Ball.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

On Monday, June 29, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Arthur Shirley and Sutton Vane, entitled
"TWO LANCASHIRE LASSES IN LONDON."

Hardie and Von Leer's company have been playing the above drama here during the week. The names of the joint authors are a guarantee of the excellence of the work. The plot is clear and cleverly worked out, and the writing smart and convincing. The production was warmly appreciated and followed to the end with interest flattering alike to authors and artists. Mr. Herbert Pearson gives a powerful and popular rendering of the character of John Edmunds; Mr. Chris. Mason is excellent as Samuel Hallett—his performance is intelligent and consistent throughout; Mr. E. Rayson-Cousins is gentlemanly and unexaggerated as the Reverend Frank Selby; Mr. Bernard Mervyn makes a hit in the part of Jonas Deane, which he plays capitally; Mr. Harry V. Mann is very good indeed as Edward Langley, Jonas Deane's junior partner; Mr. Harry Reynolds plays Jim Price excellently; and Mr. Walter Walmsley is good as Ratty Gabbit. Mr. Ronald Clive gives a good account of Police-sergeant Jellaby; and Dr. Gay is well represented by Mr. Dick Winslow. The two Lancashire lasses have charming representatives in Miss Rosslyn Vane (Constance) and Miss Alice Defoe (Nelly), who both look and act most pleasingly. Miss Margaret Trevosper proves herself an actress of ability and resource, and is well suited to the part of Bessie Edmunds, whose little daughter Lucy is prettily played by Miss Elsie Forester; while Miss Evelyn Shaw is responsible for a capital impersonation of Jane Adelaide Bloomfield. The play is well and appropriately mounted.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mr., or ought it not rather to be Master, Edward S. Mitchell came forward as a composer as well as a pianist at the Students' Concert given at the College on Monday evening. The two Preludes, MSS., No. 1 in D minor and No. 2 in A, showed much promise, the second proving by far the most attractive. Saint-Saëns's "O love! from thy power," was well sung by Miss Hilda Felstead, who got the best results out of solo when not attempting to force her voice. Miss Kate E. Daggs's pianoforte solo of Beethoven's Sonata in F sharp, Adagio—Allegro vivace, was much applauded; and Miss Alice Booth gave a very pleasing, even if somewhat timid, rendering of Spohr's song, "Rose softly blooming." Mr. Lorne Wallet was successful in Schumann's songs from the "Dichterliebe," "Aus meinen Thränen spriessen" being ably sung, while "Ich grolle nicht," the most popular of the seven songs, was delivered with considerable power and expression. Two pleasing songs (MSS.), "Forsaken" and "Sleep," written by Miss Mabel Pocock, were expressively sung by Miss Gertrude Wallis; and the programme concluded with a violin solo of Spohr's Scherzo, op. 135, No. 2, played by Mr. Aaron Saens.

"GEOFFREY LANGDON'S WIFE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Re Geoffrey Langdon's Wife, I note that Mr. Somerfield says in his letter that my original play of Geoffrey Langdon's Wife is as far removed from his "as are the poles."

Now I witnessed Mr. Somerfield's production at the Rotunda Theatre, Liverpool, on June 22, and I should like to point out that the following incidents were the same in that as my original play:—

The jewelled dagger for the hair with which Geoffrey Langdon is stabbed by his wife (in my drama it was his mistress); the heavy man sees the action, and henceforth holds the woman in his power; the cousin (in my case brother) comes from abroad, is bending over the dead body, when heavy man enters and accuses him of the murder; the old gentleman shakes the hero by the hand, and before everybody declares that he believes him to be innocent.—Yours faithfully,

NITA RAE.

T. R., Middlesbrough, June 30, 1908.

"THE GAY DECEIVERS," the new musical comedy which has been making records, both at Margate and Brighton, has been written by Frank Stanmore, Leslie Hawkins, and Mark Lester. The West End production will take place the third week in October.

ACTORS' UNION.

Mrs. Walter Bentley took the chair at the weekly meeting of the Actors' Union at Hummum's Hotel, on Tuesday. Amongst those present were Mr. J. H. Batson, Mr. Watty Brunton, Mr. Henry Bedford, Mr. George H. Child, Mr. Walter Clarke, Miss Florence Creagh, Miss Marie Clavering, Mr. James English, Mr. Fred Elvin, Miss Adelaide Gracey, Mr. Sydney N. Hallows, Mr. G. Beresford Innes, Mr. Frederick Jacques, Miss Maud Kirwan, Mr. Frederick F. Loyd, Mr. George P. Lester, Mr. Frank Litchfield, Mr. Carl Lyle, Mr. H. C. Momber, Mr. Royce Milton, Mr. William Macready, Mr. Henry W. Monte, Mr. Alfred Richards, Miss Millie Vere, and Mr. Richard J. Webster.

Mrs. Bentley, in an eloquent speech, touched upon most of the aims and objects of the Union, and mentioned the difficulty experienced by ladies receiving low salaries in providing modern dresses for the parts in which they appeared. Mrs. Bentley also laid stress on the need of payment for rehearsals and matinées, and said that the amateur element was killing theatrical business. People in the provinces had good local amateur clubs, and if they were only offered amateur acting at the theatres, they would prefer to see the performances of their own friends. One of the most interesting portions of Mrs. Bentley's speech was that in which she alluded to the advantage of being able to consult a Union specialist when ill. She had been suffering, she said, from neuritis, and, after being in the hands of several doctors, had at last gone to a Union doctor, who had soon put her right again. In this connection she suggested the formation of a convalescent home for members of the Union. She ended by reciting the verses "Unite!" which were sung at Miss Rose Mathews's Actors' Association benefit on the 25th ult.

Mr. Henry Bedford expressed his satisfaction at a non-member of the committee taking the chair, and said that the only difficulty with respect to her suggestion was want of funds. They were full of schemes, but short of cash. There were three kinds of bogus—the bogus actor, the bogus manager, and the bogus theatre. There were certain theatres in the provinces which were worked in collusion with bogus managers to the loss and distress of the actor and actress. These theatres were the cause of the other two sorts of bogus, and were really the worst of the three.

At the weekly committee meeting the following were present:—Messrs. Frank Gerald (chairman), Alfred M. Stapley, Henry Bedford, Orlando Barnett, H. Tripp Edgar, Cecil G. Calvert, Frederic F. Loyd, Paul Lovett, D. Lewin Mannering, Harry C. Momber, George P. Lester, Royce Milton, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary).

The Secretary was instructed to write and thank Mr. Frank Lindo for his letter containing the names of the bogus actors he complains of, and to inform him that the particulars have been filed for future reference.

The Committee have appointed Mr. Gordon Wilson, "Historic House," 16, Nile-street, Preston, the hon. secretary for that town, and members should communicate with him for particulars concerning meetings there.

The Hon. Solicitor was asked to communicate with a member with reference to a legal matter in which the member was interested.

The Secretary was instructed to communicate with the members of the Executive Committee on tour, and draw their attention to the amendment to Rule 7, which reads: "Members of the Executive Committee must communicate with the General Secretary of the Union at least once a month."

The Committee informed the members of the Union of the death of the Hon. Medical Officer for Barrow-in-Furness, Dr. J. K. Fell, which took place on Friday last at his residence, 6, Harley-street, Barrow-in-Furness. The cause of death was valvular disease of the heart, accelerated by asthma and dropsy.

Mr. H. Tripp Edgar will take the chair at the weekly meeting of the Actors' Union, to be held at Hummum's Hotel, Covent Garden, W.C., on Tuesday, July 7, at 2.30 p.m.

MANCHESTER.

An Actors' Union meeting was held on Sunday at the Clarendon Hotel, Oxford-street, Manchester. Mr. Cecil Calvert presided, and there were present Mr. Ivan Berlyn, Mr. Walter Longford, Mr. Norman A. Overton, Mr. Tom Bowron, Mr. Ernest H. Clarke, Mr. Victor T. Raymond, Mr. Reg. Oldroyd, Mr. Charles Halling, Miss Alice Maund, Mrs. Sidney Halling, Mr. Fred Charles, Miss Marie Barrett, and Miss Marion Turner.

Mr. Cecil Calvert alluded to the success of the Actors' Union Agency, and said its Hon. Solicitor had won every case he had undertaken. He remarked on the want of enthusiasm in "bogus" actors, and said the superior manager did not rely on pictorial advertisements.

Miss Marion Turner and Mr. Fred Charles joined the Union

The Secretary invites any member visiting Manchester who is willing to take the chair at next Sunday's meeting, to communicate with him at 226, Victoria-square, Oldham-road, Manchester.

A NEW idea of an artistic and ingenious character is taking shape in the latest beauty competition that has been set on foot by the proprietors of Odol. It is really a "beauty and art" competition, and offers interesting scope for attitude, pose, and expression as well as for beauty of feature. The prizes are all cash prizes, and range as follows:—1st prize, £50; 2nd prize, £20; 3rd prize, £10; and 30 prizes of £1 each; in addition to which a large number of consolation prizes will be given. It was indeed a happy thought to associate a beauty-conferring preparation like Odol—the world's dentifrice, as it is everywhere called—with a competition of this description. The flask of Odol, which has to be shown in every competing photograph, will serve as an inspiration for many attractive posings, and give just the kind of incentive that will, in the majority of cases, ensure a good result. The awards of the judges will be based on the general beauty of the competitors, with special reference to the beauty of the mouth and teeth and on the effectiveness of the pose as regards the introduction of the Odol flask. The competition is open to all, without entrance fees, and Sept. 30 is the closing day for the competition.

THE Queen paid a private visit to the White City, Shepherd's Bush, on Tuesday, and made a tour of the exhibition.

THE SOCIETY OF YOUTHFUL PLAYERS.

The newly-formed association, known as the Society of Youthful Players, gave a matinée performance at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Friday, the 26th ult. Two new plays were produced, both written by lady members of the Society, and, taking into account that the age of the authors is only seventeen, their efforts in the difficult art of playwriting were decidedly praiseworthy, and showed promise of future distinction.

The programme opened with a one-act play by Marguerite Adamson, entitled

"AN APRIL FOOL."

Alamanda Sniffkins..MISS MARGUERITE ADAMSON
Liza Smith .....MISS MIRABEL HILLIER
Harry Maynard .....MR. VALENTINE GLYNN
Richard Browning .....MR. J. L. DALE

Early one spring morning Harry Maynard pays a visit to Mr. Richard Browning's flat, but that young gentleman is not at home. He, however, awakens from her slumbers Alamanda Sniffkins, a maid servant, who, being quite young, and no doubt a regular reader of the penny novelette, has not yet quitted in her journey through life the realms of romance. Harry picks up the morning newspaper, and is reminded that it is the 1st of April. At once he decides to have his little joke—and at the expense of the romantic Alamanda. He tells her that his friend Richard has fallen in love with her, and is about to ask her to become his wife. Alamanda is naturally overjoyed at the prospect of being the future Mrs. Richard Browning, and the guileless maiden never once doubts the truth of the story. When her friend, Liza Smith, calls, she with great gusto imparts the joyous news to her. On the return of Richard to his abode, the gushing Alamanda is not slow in revealing her hitherto hidden love for the young man she now regards as her "intended." Richard laughs heartily at the idea of a union with the "slavey," and speedily dispels her visions of marital bliss; but it is no fun to poor Alamanda to be made the victim of a 1st of April joke. Her disappointment is so keen that, left alone, the unhappy little "slavey" is heard sobbing aloud as the curtain falls. The authoress, Miss Marguerite Adamson, who also produced the piece, played her part exceedingly well as the romantic Alamanda; Miss Mirabel Hillier was also good in the rôle of Liza Smith; and the young men, Harry Maynard and Richard Browning, had capital representatives in Mr. Valentine Glynn and Mr. J. L. Dale.

The curtain-raiser was followed by what was described on the programme as Miss Mirabel Hillier's "first offence," in three acts, entitled

"PEGGY DOYLE."

Peggy Doyle .....MISS MARGUERITE ADAMSON
Mrs. Osbourne .....MISS GRACE SHEFFIELD
Milly Osbourne .....MISS ALEX VERCESI
Kitty Osbourne.....MISS GLADYS MACKADAM
Miss Johnson .....MISS MARY WILSON
Laura Grennall .....MISS MIRABEL HILLIER
Jack Davies .....MR. VALENTINE GLYNN
Tom Osbourne .....MASTER JACK HOBBS
Hugh Osbourne .....MR. HERBERT DARRAN

Peggy Doyle, the heroine of the play, is a young girl, who, on leaving school, is cordially welcomed as a visitor at the home of her mother's old friend, Mrs. Osbourne. Her son, Hugh, however, is not so pleased when he hears of the new arrival, holding the modern school girl somewhat in contempt. His particular hobby is photography, and when his young brother, Tom, carelessly drops Hugh's new camera, seriously damaging it, that mischievous youth foresees trouble. But Peggy generously takes all the blame upon herself, whereupon Hugh loses his temper, and calls her a "little beast," a remark which Peggy overhears, and very naturally strongly resents. Miss Johnson, the prim and exceedingly plain schoolmistress, who has charge of Mrs. Osbourne's three children, sets her cap at Hugh, and does her best to keep him and Peggy apart. She even goes so far as to spread the story that Hugh is engaged to another lady; but that young gentleman has by this time learnt that his brother broke the camera, and also makes the discovery that he is really in love with Peggy. Finding the girl in tears after hearing the news of his supposed engagement, the lovers speedily come to an understanding, and as they fondly embrace Master Tom snapshots them. At the conclusion the authoress had a special call. The most amusing and natural character in the piece was the school-boy, Tom, played with much vivacity and evident enjoyment by Master Jack Hobbs, his sarcastic remarks concerning his teacher, Miss Johnson, caused frequent merriment. Miss Marguerite Adamson was bright and pleasing as Peggy; Miss Mary Wilson gave a neat and telling sketch of Miss Johnson; the young couple, Jack Davis and Laura Grennall, were ably embodied by Mr. Valentine Glynn and the authoress of the play; Mr. Herbert Darran as Hugh and Miss Grace Sheffield as Mrs. Osbourne both deserve favourable mention; and the children, Milly and Kitty, were charmingly represented by Miss Alex Vercesi and Miss Gladys Mackadam. Miss Hillier was responsible for the production of the play. During the intervals Miss Alice M. Cox sang several songs in good style.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, June 29, the Play, by Frank M. Thorne, entitled, "THAT WOMAN FROM FRANCE."

Miss Blanche St. Albans, with the members of her most efficient company, is presenting the play, That Woman from France, at the Dalston Theatre this week. The many exciting incidents, the deep thread of interest, and the general excellence of the acting serve to provide an entertainment in every way calculated to rivet the attention of those who like to follow an engrossing story. Miss Blanche St. Albans undertakes the trying part of Camille Nicholl, a woman who possesses a special attraction for men, but only to fleece them, and then to glide off in search of other victims. While amazed by the cruel nature of the character, an audience cannot fail to admire the histrionic abilities of the actress delineating it. Cecil Charrington, the specially-selected victim of Camille, has such a genial representative in Mr. Lester Langham that spectators feel really glad to find that the pleasant-mannered young millionaire eventually gets quite clear of the snares so artfully laid for him by the sorceress, and is free to marry the sweet and amiable Beryl Stancliffe, a character most pleasingly presented by Miss Jeanie Weston. The audience cannot fail to sympathise with John Beaumont, the actual husband of Camille, who years before had been tricked into marrying the arch-schemer, and the way in which Mr. T. B. Brabazon plays the part helps to secure the goodwill of the onlookers. Mr. J. Leicester Jackson, as Phillip Charrington, plays the gentlemanly villain admirably. The funny man of the piece is Latimer Louder, whose capacity for consuming liquor is not always equalled by his success in obtaining the necessary funds for the necessary soothing lotion. This decidedly amusing character is admirably played by Mr. Fred Hodson. Mr. W. B. Somerville as Sir Edmund Charrington, Mr. Charles Robson as a lawyer, Miss Madge De Halle as Martha Williams, and Miss Peggie E. Yeoman as Winnie Williams, each do well in parts allotted them in the cast, which also includes Mr. Robert Ellis, Mr. George Parkhurst, and Miss Edith Devant.

A YOUTH named John Benyon was charged at Bow-street Police Court on Thursday with having been found on the roof of the Green Room Club for a supposed unlawful purpose, and was bound over to come up for sentence if called upon. The prisoner, it was stated, had been affected by the reading of "penny dreadfuls."

"THAT LITTLE AFFAIR AT THE BOYDS'."

A Modern Comedy, in Four Acts, by William Gillette, produced at the Columbia Theatre, Washington, on June 15.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

"Gillette is English now," said a New York newspaper in describing this new comedy by the well-known actor and dramatist, whose pen has hitherto been chiefly devoted to plays that were American in scene and subject. The reason of this remark is to be found in the fact that Mr. Gillette's latest effort is a story of life in London, the scenes being laid in Bloomsbury. The plot is interesting and unusual. Kitty Cameron, an actress, wishing to render a service to her sweetheart without his knowledge, enters his lodgings in Bloomsbury disguised as Ticey, a Cockney servant girl. This part was to have been played by Miss Cecilia Loftus, but, unfortunately, she was taken ill on the eve of the production, and Miss Mary Ryan took her place. The action of the play revolves around the efforts of Kitty to preserve her secret and at the same time accomplish her mission. The complications are exceedingly diverting, and, in addition to providing some clever passages of comedy, the author tells a pretty love story. In the third act occurs a dramatic climax, which is totally unexpected.

The first act takes place in a restaurant, where a number of stage people forgather. Among them is Kitty Cameron, a successful star. Hither also comes the young playwright, Stephen Boyd, to see Mr. Halliday, a theatrical manager, only to be assured once more that his plays are too poetic—that people do not talk like that in real life. Boyd is desperately hard up. With his mother and sisters dependent upon him he has grown poorer and poorer until they are in want. In the words of H. Montagu Wedgeley, played most amusingly by Mr. Dallas Welford, "He doesn't get enough to eat, by Jove!"

Kitty Cameron sees Boyd, and recognises him as an old friend, and from their conversation we gather that he has long been in love with her. She sees that he needs help; sees also that he is too proud, or perhaps too sensitive, to accept it, and when he has gone she conceives the idea of going to the house where he lives with his mother and sisters, and serving as a scullery-maid in order to be near him, and in the hope of being able to help him.

The second act is laid in the home of the Boyds, and shows Kitty in her new character and environment, cleverly disguised and grasping her first opportunity to be of service to her friend. Ticey is a typical unkempt, smudge-faced "slavey," who stumbles and breaks things in her awkwardness. Watching her, one's laughter is in danger of being changed to tears. The situation requires clever mimicry and sympathetic acting by the central character, for, in spite of her apparent ignorance and gaucherie, Ticey contrives to gain her ends by showing Stephen how to improve those passages in his play which the manager has pronounced impossible. To do this she pretends to believe that the characters in the play are real beings, but underlying this pretence is the earnestness of a woman who is familiar with life and love, and knows how to handle her subject.

The third act shows the practical results of Ticey's advice and assistance. The play in its revised form is accepted, and during this act the interest of the play is intensified by the sensational escape of Kitty Cameron from an actor, a member of her company, who is infatuated with her, and threatens to betray her secret.

The office of Manager Halliday is the scene of the last act. The play has been produced, and has proved a big success. Kitty, who has played the principal part, comes to a happy understanding with the lover for whom she has worked so hard. As yet he does not recognise her as Ticey, his good angel. But he is likely to know ere long, as she tells him "There is something I want to say to you some time."

As Kitty Cameron Miss Mary Ryan fulfilled all the requirements of an exacting rôle, and her performance was highly praised. Mr. Frederick Lewis as Stephen Boyd, Miss Jeffreys Lewis as Mrs. Boyd, Mr. Joseph Brennan as Manager Halliday, Mr. Frank Craven as Thomas Burnett, Mr. Robert V. Ferguson as Philippe, a waiter, and Mr. Frederick Hand as Willie Quayle acquitted themselves well in their respective rôles. The play was produced under the joint-management of Messrs. William A. Page and Winchell Smith. Its success in Washington makes it highly probable that it will meet with a favourable reception when it reaches London in the early autumn.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

Verdi's powerful opera Otello was revived at Covent Garden on Wednesday night, and attracted a large audience. Since Tamagno, who was so ably supported by M. Maurel as Iago, gave his forcible impersonation of the hero, tenors seem to have avoided so strenuous a part, and no doubt this is the main cause why so fine a work as Otello has not for years been performed at Covent Garden. Mr. Zenatello, who for the first time played the Moor, was most unfortunately out of voice, for which an official apology was made later in the evening; in spite of this, the fine artist, however, gave so masterly a reading of the dramatic side of the character, and sang the music with such artistic feeling and expression, that on a more fortunate occasion the title-rôle in Otello will be considered one of his most striking performances. Mme. Melba has appeared as Desdemona before, and the part is one that suits her to perfection. Being in superb voice on Wednesday, Mme. Melba sang the "Ave Maria" and "Willow Song" with the utmost charm, and by her refined and finished acting made the Moor's unhappy wife a most interesting personality. If not quite so intensely dramatic an Iago as some who have played the part, Mr. Scotti certainly sang the music admirably, his rendering of the "Credo" being a fine example; while as an actor Mr. Scotti always displays marked intelligence. Mme. Edna Thornton made an excellent Emilia; while Mr. John McCormack as Cassio and Messrs. Marcoux, Zucchi, and Crabbé, in the parts of Lodovico, Roderigo, and Montano, completed a fine cast. The beautiful scenery, excellent chorus and orchestra, also lent the fullest attraction to a most important and interesting revival. Mr. Campanini conducted.

"THE following," says the Weekly Despatch, "is a list of the more prominent actresses who have found husbands while acting in Mr. Seymour Hicks's musical comedies, which have come to be regarded as admirable matrimonial agencies:—Miss Camille Clifford, married the Hon. Lyndhurst Bruce, heir to Lord Aberdare; Miss Eva Carrington, married Lord de Clifford; Miss Barbara Deane, married Mr. Basil Loder, of the Coldstream Guards; Miss Madge Hodgkinson, married Mr. Paul Joseph Grisewood; Miss Jeannie Bateman, married Mr. Mervyn Dene. The Aldwych Theatre has now become established as a kind of marriage agency of stageland, although the playhouse is only a few years old. Mr. Seymour Hicks has had the rôle of Cupid thrust upon him, so to speak. When asked recently for an explanation of the demand for brides from the Aldwych he laughingly admitted that he 'could think of no excuse to offer.' 'The young ladies,' he added, 'come here presumably to act. If they get married, how can I help it? They take their choice. Some of them become actresses, some brides, some both. I believe that most of the marriages with which the Aldwych has been concerned have been true love matches. Anyhow, I have heard of no disagreements.'"

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, June 25.—"L'Ecran Brisé," a one act comedy by M. Henry Bordeaux, has been brought out at the Comédie-Française. Mme. de Monrevel has lost her life in a motor-car accident, and her sister, Mme. Marthe Chenevray, promises the distracted husband to take charge of his little daughter. A visitor is announced, Pierre Emagny, who was absent from Paris when the accident occurred. He tells Marthe that he was her sister's lover, and that his letters to his mistress are in a drawer of her writing table. The departed woman's memory must not be assailed, and he asks Marthe to take possession of these letters. Unfortunately M. de Monrevel has the key of that drawer, and Marthe takes a heroic resolve. She informs her brother-in-law that she has carried on a guilty intrigue with Pierre, and begs him to restore to her these letters that were addressed to her. But her pious lie has consequences for which she was not prepared. M. de Monrevel refuses to entrust his little girl to a woman who committed adultery, whereupon Marthe loses her presence of mind and exclaims, "Oh, I did not foresee that!" De Monrevel understands at once what has occurred, and realises Marthe's sacrifice. Marthe will now retain the custody of the child, and the husband kneels down before the portrait of his wife, whom he knows but too well he has also wronged. Mme. Bartet was admirable in the rôle of Marthe. The difficult part of the husband had been entrusted to M. Jacques Fenoux. Very simple in the beginning, that character becomes complex towards the end, and required a lighter touch than that clever actor could impart.

MLLE. DAULNAY, of music hall renown, has won her suit against the managers of the Concert-Européen. She had been engaged to impersonate the Commère in a revue, and, as usual, a clause had been entered into the contract allowing her £200 damages in case her services would not be required. The revue was launched, and Mlle. Daulnay had a rôle wherein she was described on the bill as a "commère," but it was a blind. She only appeared in the prologue, and in the next tableau another lady impersonated the Commère. The irate artist then refused to work under these conditions, and sued the management of the Concert Européen, who have been condemned to pay the lady the stipulated sum.

THE only theatres that will remain open here during the summer are: The Opéra, the Comédie-Française, the Nouveautés, the Porte-Saint-Martin, the Palais-Royal, the Folies-Dramatiques, Déjazet, and, probably, the Sarah-Bernhardt. The Opéra-Comique will close at the end of this month, likewise the Trianon Lyrique. The Athénée and Antoine will remain open till the middle of July.

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 1.—The great musical event at the Opéra during the coming season will be the production of Le Crépuscule des Dieux, a title I prefer to Die Goetterdämmerung, which sounds like hard swearing. In the course of a conversation I had with M. P. Broussan, before that gentleman had officially been appointed director of the Opéra, he grew quite excited, and said that he intended to engage the very best artists, so as to do honour to the work. And his choice, not unnaturally, fell on Mme. Litvinne for the principal rôle. But, alas! it is M. Broussan who proposes, and Mme. Cosima Wagner who disposes. That good lady issued an ukase, stating that the part should be entrusted to Mlle. Grandjean. Far be it from me to underrate the talent of the latter lady, whom we are always happy to applaud. For all that, there can be no doubt that Mme. Litvinne is better suited for that particular rôle. This Mme. Cosima Wagner knows very well; and the question arises why she should have taken up this extraordinary attitude. Does she want to imitate her Imperial master, and meddle with everything? She has the law on her side. She can compel the Paris Opéra management to engage the artists of her choice, and, in case of non-compliance, forbid them to produce the work. But Mme. Cosima should remember that MM. Messager and Broussan have at the present moment a difficult task to perform, and that such interference may prove prejudicial to their interests. Unfortunately the lady has inherited a famous name, wielding a big power as far as her late husband's works are concerned, and, no doubt, the temptation is very great to assert this power. This may be very human, but it savours of bullying.

WHILST we are on the subject of the Opéra, I may mention that the following novelties will be produced in the course of next season:—Bacchus (a sequel to Ariane), by MM. Catulle Mendès and Massenet; Rhamses, by MM. Paul Vidal and Camille de Sainte-Croix; La Forêt, by MM. Laurent Taillade and Savard; Le Miracle, by MM. Georges Hue and Gheus; to which list may be added Pénélope, on which M. Gabriel Fauré is still busy, and two ballets, one by MM. Catulle Mendès and Raynaldo Hahn, the other by MM. Aderer and Salvayre.

"LA FOI" is the title of a new play by M. Brieux, for which M. Saint-Saëns is writing the incidental music. The scene of the work is laid in Egypt, in the prehistoric times, and describes the death struggle of an old creed. As far as I know, the author has not yet found a manager anxious to produce it.

M. ALFRED CAPUS is finishing his new four-act comedy, which M. Guitry has accepted for the Renaissance. The principal rôles will be interpreted by M. Lucien Guitry, Mlle. Eve Lavallière, and Mlle. Andrée Mégard. It bears the title of L'Oiseau Blessé, because Mlle. Lavallière will recite therein Lafontaine's well-known fable.

SOME time ago we took the Société des Auteurs to task for having refused to pay Moussorgsky's heirs a royalty on Boris Godounow, on the grounds that in Russia no authors' rights are granted to French dramatists. The Era was the first to raise its voice against a proceeding savouring of the Middle Ages, and I am happy to see that others share our views. One of our confrères expresses itself very strongly. He writes that if such a system of reprisals were allowed, we would be justified to rob or murder a Russian travelling through France, because a French traveller had been set upon by robbers journeying through Russia. And, with perfect reason, he adds, that if the great Society had the intention of despoiling Moussorgsky's heirs of their dues, it was their duty to give these gentlemen formal notice of this before the first performance, instead of collecting something like £1,000 and then coolly sticking to it.

THERE is a firmly-rooted belief here in theatrical circles that the best English plays never see the footlights, because the Examiner of Plays rejects everything he does not understand, which, we are told, happens but too often. It is impossible for us on this side of the Channel to say in how far this statement is true. We know absolutely nothing of the English "Anastasie," except that the production of Mona Vanna was sternly forbidden because the heroine put on a cloak to cover her nakedness. The said cloak covered every inch of the lady's body, but she had no underwear, not even a chest-protector, and "Anastasie-on-Thames" took fright at this. A young Russian author, however, professes to known more than we do. According to him, these rejected plays constitute an immense répertoire of masterpieces that would enrich any impresario daring enough to produce them. And as we have slaughtered and buried our censor, he considers Paris an ideal place to bring out these rejections. Moreover, what with the entente cordiale and the desire of every Frenchman to learn English, the venture, he thinks, is bound to be profitable, inasmuch as he will have the support of every right-thinking Frenchman, without reckoning the members of the English colony in Paris, which is an important one. I am sorry to have to dispel this ambitious youth's illusions. The entente, certainly, has done an immense deal of good, but the number of English-speaking Frenchmen is much smaller than the young Russian imagines. The movement to learn English has only just begun, and it is the little French boys and girls who are the victims of the new craze. If you want to convince yourself of this, you have to but go for a walk in the Bois de Boulogne, near the lake, on the spot where the foreign governesses promenade their charges, and hear them startle the frogs in their attempts to express themselves in a strange idiom. Then there is the English colony. But these, too, are not to be relied upon as regards supporting an English theatre. They are honest, hard-working, highly respectable, but without means. Those holding the best positions are the agents or representatives of big London firms. They live in the suburb of Neuilly, among themselves, and rarely go to the theatre. Their means do not allow it. The others—mechanics, compositors, &c.—form the bulk of what is called the English colony. When Peter Pan was given it was quite a different matter. The fact of an entire company coming over from London to give a performance on a Paris stage imparted a prestige to the affair, and many French society men went to the Vaudeville to see the charming English actresses, about whom the papers had already written glorious accounts. An English theatre in Paris, however, cannot be a financial success, even if the American colony here came to the resuce. The latter have plenty of money, but, as an audience, are unreliable. The idea of attempting such a venture may possibly also come to others, for which reason I may be excused for expressing my views freely on this matter.

M. HENRI MARECHAL'S delightful ballet, Le Lac des Aulnes, will be revived at the Opéra, where a few months ago it scored such a huge success.

MR. ALBERT WARD.

THE PRODIGAL SON AND STAGE-MANAGER, MR. GEORGE D. DAY'S CO.

Mr. Albert Ward is a finished actor, with a fine presence and elocutionary powers, such as one nowadays rarely meets with on the stage.—The People, Feb. 1, 1903.

The diction of Mr. Albert Ward is admirable. His voice sounds like a bell. His every word is of perfect coinage. Even the long breath speeches of melodrama become poetic on his lips. Mr. Benson might have trained him. He will make his mark in Shakespeare.—J. T. Grein, Esq., the famous critic, Sept. 15, 1903.

"IT was fairly general in Garrick's time," says Mrs. Clement Parsons, "for a dramatist to publish his play in book form simultaneously with its stage appearance, a practice which soon afterwards fell into disuse, till revived of recent years. £100 to £150 was the sum the bookseller-publisher gave for copyright. The profits of the third, sixth, and ninth, or third, eighth, and ninth nights (when the piece was so fortunately long-lived), constituted—after deducting a charge of £73 10s. for the use of the house—the author's payment from the theatre. Compared with the current rates for other literary work, a successful dramatist drew a real prize in the lottery, and we can scarcely be surprised at the desperate manner in which strugforlifeurs endeavoured to get their productions popularised by the prince of players. It should, per contra, be mentioned that acting rights were practically unknown. Failing a printed (or a purloined) copy, any poor devils in the country theatres could vamp a new play they had seen or played in, and even call it by the name of the original."

A NEW JULIET.

Flowers and compliments innumerable were bestowed upon Miss Leah Bateman-Hunter, the grand-daughter of the veteran actress and teacher, Miss Bateman (Mrs. Crowe), on the occasion of her début on Monday afternoon at the Kingsway in the part of Juliet. The performance was given in aid of the Royal Dental Hospital, Leicester-square, and was under the patronage of the Duchess of Norfolk, the Lord Chief Justice, and other distinguished people. Romeo and Juliet was given without scenery on a draped stage, and as there were occasional cuts, and no synopsis of the scenes provided, a pleasing uncertainty prevailed throughout as to what was coming next. The representation was, however, very enjoyable, and an enthusiastic audience was lavish in applause. Miss Bateman-Hunter, who was thus put to one of the most exacting tests in the whole range of drama at the early age of sixteen, quite fulfilled the promise of her earlier appearances, and gave a rendering of Juliet marked by intelligence and keen perception. She has the youth and freshness of such inestimable value in the rôle, eloquently expressive features, and a voice of silvery sweetness, which enabled her to speak the lines with grace and fluency. There were times when the resources of the young actress were overtaxed by the arduous nature of the rôle, and she lapsed into indistinctness, but those periods were rare and were fully atoned for by the excellence of other phases of her rendering. The passion of the potion episode was less intense than might be wished, but in the preceding scene, when she learns of her lover's banishment, the sense of hopelessness and despair was acutely conveyed. It was an altogether admirable performance alike as a feat of memory, a study of character, and an elocutionary effort, reflecting throughout the artistic training of Miss Bateman (Mrs. Crowe), under whose care the young actress has graduated. Romeo was played by Mr. E. Harcourt Williams, and was an interesting performance, pleasing by reason of its romantic colouring and varied though occasionally affected intonation. Romeo's professions of love were marked by much fervour, and particular admiration was aroused by the fire he infused into his encounter with Tybalt; while his subsequent scenes were rendered pathetically impressive. Mr. Doré Lewin Mannering's buoyancy and animation as Mercutio quite overcame a somewhat sinister appearance, and an irritating Mephistophelian chuckle. He delivered the witty sentiments of Mercutio with an evident appreciation of their humour, but in the momentous episode preceding his death he was certainly at his best, acting with a fire and determination that carried the audience with him. The performance enjoyed the advantage of having Miss Bateman in the part of the Nurse, with the result that the rôle was rendered with an ease and finish that was not only good for the character but encouraged the players with whom she was chiefly associated. The humour of the part was less fully elaborated than is sometimes the case, but in the dramatic phases of the rôle Miss Bateman's tragic gifts were exercised with telling effect. Mr. George Fitzgerald made a dignified figure of Capulet, and delivered his lines with imposing sonority; and Montague was well played by Mr. F. Howard Lewis. Mr. Herbert Grimwood's Friar Lawrence suggested power and subtlety rather than beneficence; Mr. E. H. Brooke's Benvolio was in all respects satisfactory; and Mr. Henry Le Grand as Tybalt acquitted himself with every credit. Mr. Cecil Yapp had fewer opportunities than are usually given to the part of Peter, but he managed to make him amusing, and there was some character in his impersonation of the Apothecary. Mr. F. D. Arundel played the Prince of Verona, whose scenes were chiefly enacted "off"; and Mr. Frank Randell was a comely and courteous Paris. Miss Muriel Currey was a duly imperious Lady Capulet, Miss Josephine Middleton was responsible for Lady Montague, and the duties of Chorus were ably undertaken by Miss Isabel Merson. A hearty welcome awaited Mrs. Crowe's first appearance, and the applause, which was frequent and hearty throughout, was warmly renewed at the close.

"WHERE WOMAN LOVES."

A Dramatic Episode, in One Act, by M. Cozens, produced, for the first time on any stage, at the King's Theatre, Longsight, Manchester, on Thursday, June 25.

Hon. Edward Saville ..... MR. TOM RONALD
Sam Merilles ..... MR. GEORGE LANGDON
Bertha Dennison ..... MISS ADA ROSCOE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene of this effective little drama is Bertha Dennison's flat, and the action begins with Bertha's refusal of an offer of marriage made to her by the Hon. Edward Saville, intimately known as "Teddy." Bertha loves him, but realises that her past life has been too shady to allow her to become his wife. In his disappointment he makes a sudden attempt to shoot himself, but she is quick enough to prevent the act, and turn his impulse aside. At this juncture Sam Merilles, one of her old associates, is heard outside, and Bertha decides to test her lover's sincerity by allowing him to hear the interview desired by Sam. Concealed behind a screen, the Hon. Edward learns that Bertha—now, by the way, a music hall star—has not only been the associate of thieves, but has herself served six months in gaol. The blackmailing Merilles departs, and the Hon. Edward shows himself again. The disclosures have been too much for him; he mumbles lamely about his family, and retires from the situation with as much grace as he can summon to his aid. Bertha, probably realising that nothing else could come of it, unless "Teddy" were a fool, and that her own redemption through love of him is now impossible, hysterically seizes upon the weapon he has left behind, and turns it upon herself. The shot brings "Teddy" back, just in time to obtain her forgiveness for his rather heartless renunciation. The acting was good throughout. Miss Ada Roscoe put life and emotion into her embodiment of Bertha Dennison, and was particularly good in the scene with Merilles; Mr. George Langdon acted in a telling style the dramatic rôle of Merilles; and Mr. Tom Ronald scored quite satisfactorily with the less strenuous material at his disposal in the part of the Hon. Edward. The piece was received with every mark of favour.

ONE evening, when Weston was announced to play Scrub and Garrick Archer, in the course of the day he sent to Mr. Garrick in a letter requesting a loan of money, as he was continually in the habit of doing, under the impression that he was arrested. This Garrick at last discovered, and in consequence refused sending at that time what Weston had requested; upon which the latter neglected going to the theatre at his usual time; and when the hour of performance arrived, Garrick came forward and said as follows:—"Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Weston being taken suddenly ill, he is not capable of appearing before you this evening; and therefore, if it meets your approbation, I will perform the part of Scrub in his stead." Weston being in the two-shilling gallery with a sham bailiff, hallooed out, "I am here, and can't come; I am arrested." Upon which the audience sided with Weston, by insisting he should play the part, which the manager was obliged to acquiesce in, by paying the supposed debt, to the no small mortification of David.

AN ENGLISH THEATRE IN BERLIN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mme. Meta Illing's idea of establishing an English theatre in the German capital has been steadily growing for two years. That it is now rapidly approaching its realisation is due to several reasons, chief of which are the interest displayed in the undertaking by the Emperor, the indomitable energy of Mme. Illing, and—last, but not least—the ever-increasing need of a theatre of this description. "If I do not do it, somebody else will," has, no doubt, been one of the principal incentives to Mme. Illing's step. The English and American colonies in Berlin are very large, and hundreds of American and English people visit the city annually. The chief patrons, nevertheless, will probably prove the Germans, who are splendid English scholars, devoted to English literature, and always eager to extend their knowledge of the language.

Mme. Illing argues—and logically enough—that London has its German theatre, and many American cities support German theatres equally successfully. She has personally satisfied herself as to the welfare of the latter during her extensive tours in the United States, where she had her own company for a long time. It is Mme. Illing's firm determination to produce only "healthy and clean" plays, by English and American writers of note—modern ones for preference. She means to show—in contradistinction to the unfortunately prevailing mode in most Berlin theatres—that it is quite possible for a drama to be interesting, even thrilling, and to ennoble at the same time, without leaving a nasty taste in one's mouth.

Mme. Illing is herself an actress of note, having been a prominent member of the famous Lessing Theatre company at Berlin for some years. She has also toured the provinces with immense success. Among her principal rôles are Magda, Hedda Gabler, Nora, Rebecca West, Therese Raquin, and Mme. Sans-Géne. In the United States—where she gave all her rôles in English—she created the utmost enthusiasm everywhere.

Despite her histrionic triumphs, however, Mme. Illing does not anticipate acting in her own theatre, but will concentrate her efforts—for the present, at any rate—upon the art of management. She is busy at the present moment acquiring the rights of plays and engaging her company, which will consist of English and American artists. Plays by MM. Pinero, Sutro, and others.

MME. META ILLING.

As regards the building itself, nothing definite had been settled a short time ago, but a keen look-out was being kept for the best opportunity of obtaining a "ready-made" theatre. Whether one will be specially built depends naturally upon the success of the undertaking. The date of opening has yet to be fixed, but will probably be in late autumn, the commencement of the Berlin season. It is not at present in accordance with Mme. Illing's plans to remain permanently in Berlin, but only through the season proper, which extends from about October to April. The rest of the time she intends to go on tour with her company, visiting especially those cities where there are large English colonies, such as Dresden, Hanover, and Munich; or where the English language and customs are in vogue, such as Hamburg. A trip to Vienna is also not unlikely. Not only the Emperor and Empress, but the Crown Prince and Princess are most interested in the scheme, and many influential persons are giving their support to it. Communications will reach Mme. Illing if addressed care of The Era office.

BENJAMIN WEBSTER has, in his own graphic way, told of his first engagement. "I had heard that Mr. Beverley, of the Tottenham-street Theatre—now called the Queen's—the father of that great scenic artist who now wields the brush where dear Clarkson Stanfield once held sway, was about to open the Croydon Theatre for a brief season. I applied to him for walking gentleman. 'Full.' For little business and utility. 'Full.' For harlequin and dancing. 'Didn't do pantomime or ballet; besides, didn't like male dancers; their legs didn't draw.' For the orchestra. 'Well,' said he, in his peculiar manner, and with a strong expression which need not be repeated, 'why, just how you were a walking gentleman!' 'So I am, sir; but I have had a musical education, and necessity sometimes compels me to turn it to account.' 'Well, what's your instrument?' 'Violin, tenor violoncello, double bass, and double drums.' 'Well, by Nero!'—he played the fiddle, you know—'here, Harry' (calling his son) 'bring the double—so, I mean a violin—out of the orchestra.' Harry came with the instrument, and I was requested to give a taste of my quality. I began Tartini's 'Devil's Solo,' and had not gone far when the old gentleman said that would do, and engaged me as his leader at a guinea a week."

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, July 2.—There is much that is amusing in this new piece; the dialogue is neat, at times even witty, while the "situations" are comical, if impossible. Above all, the acting was so good that it is not to be wondered at that the audience waxed at times enthusiastic. Yet the failings are many and grave; in the first place, it is not easily credible that in order to succeed in any special branch of business it is necessary to be a villain, but this is what the authors would have us believe; secondly, coarseness prevails throughout; and, thirdly, the whole piece is too long. The special trade alluded to is Berlin "confection"—mantle and costume business. "Gelbstern" is Fränze Schott, a "trying-on" young lady in the establishment of Bernius and Co. The head of the firm is in love with her, but it is a fleeting and discreditable passion, and she is in love with Doerwald, the chief shop-walker. Doerwald, however, spurns her to woo Bernius' daughter, who has "gone wrong"; it is all one to him, this faux pas, as long as a marriage will promote his prospects. Fränze takes up, in despair, with the bagman Loewenherz, a merry pushing fellow, who is not true to her. She receives, however, 30,000 marks parting gift from the wealthy Bernius, and is independent, but is wooed now humbly by both Doerwald and Loewenherz (who have both been sacked by the chief), who see in her fortune a stepping stone to establishing themselves. At first obdurate, it appears probable she will relent towards one of them in the near future. The best character and the finest acted is a poor old Jewish agent, Bergmann, who has been honest, and consequently unsuccessful, all his life. Herr Schildkraut played the rôle magnificently.

THE Royal Opera summer season, which opens this week under the management of Herr Hermann Gura, is an event in the annals of Berlin. By an unprecedented act of courtesy—due alone to Herr Gura's high standing—the management of the Royal Opera has relinquished (for the two months' season) the rights of Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, and many other first-class works; and also placed at Herr Gura's disposal the entire personnel, scenery, and accessories of the Opera House proper. Several interesting novelties will be given in addition, such as Zumpe's Sawitri—which Herr Gura produced with much success at the Court Theatre, Schwerin—Schilling's Moloch, and Cherubini's Water Carrier, which is little known here. Among the soloists are to be Frau Lilli Lehmann, Mesdames Prevosti, Bellincioni, Langendorff (from the New York Metropolitan), Metzger, Burchardt, MM. D'Audrade, Giesen, Wittekopf, Siewert, and other well-known artists. The chorus of fifty persons is selected from the Royal Operas of Berlin, Schwerin, and Dessau; the orchestra (under high-class conductors) numbers seventy. Herr Gura will not sing, having his hands fully occupied with the reins of government.

AT the Schiller (Charlottenburg) the amusing farce Das Opferlamm (the sacrificial lamb) by MM. Walther and Stein, has been revived with complete success. The acting is adequately vivacious, and the piece will doubtless run smoothly for some time.

WHILE the New Schauspielhaus company is giving Raffles nightly at the Berliner, the former house is occupied—in the customary turn-and-turn-about fashion—by the Hamburg Operetta Company, which first introduced The Merry Widow to our notice. The pièce de résistance this time is Leo Fall's new operetta, Die Dollar-Princess, which is very bright and pleasing, with a fairly entertaining book. The interpretation is admirable throughout.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

MOSSOP, the actor, was so correct and particular, that in the parts he studied from he marked in the margin the expression of the face, the raising and lowering of an eyebrow, and the projection of an under lip. In his acting he had a certain distinct spot upon the stage for almost every speech. One night, Venice Preserved being the play, Knight, who was the Reinhold, being rather imperfect, requested the prompter to take care and watch him. "I will," said the prompter, "when you are at my side; but when you are O.P. I cannot be bawling to you across the stage." "Never mind that," replied Knight; "that's my business." All went on well until the scene of the meeting of the conspirators, when Mossop (the Pierre), according to settled business, had to cross over to the prompter's side. Accordingly he would have advanced exactly to the spot; but there stuck Reinhold! Mossop, in an under-tone, desired him to get out of his way. "I cannot, sir," he replied, still keeping his ear as close as possible to the prompter and his book. This rather heightened the fury of the embarrassed Pierre. After a few ineffectual attempts to drive Knight from his post, Mossop went on; and never was the reproof against the conspirators, particularly Reinhold, spoken by Mossop with more spirit and bitterness than upon that night.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR JOHN HARE will be seen positively for the last time in London in A Pair of Spectacles on Friday next, when he terminates his season at the Garrick. The piece will be preceded on this occasion only by A Quiet Rubber. So successful has the season at the Garrick been that Sir John might well have prolonged it for some time, but the need of a rest made itself felt, and the eminent actor will therefore take a short holiday. In the autumn Sir John will go on a farewell tour of the towns to which he has not yet bade farewell, but in the meantime will play a week's engagement at Blackpool, beginning on Aug. 10.

MR. EDWARD TERRY'S name was omitted from our list of those present at the recent Garden Party at Windsor. The popular actor was present, but Mrs. Terry was, unfortunately, prevented from accompanying him on that occasion.

MR. SEYMOUR HICKS while acting at Birmingham a fortnight since ran a splinter into his left hand. The wound seemed of little consequence, but a day or two ago blood poisoning set in, and Mr. Hicks had to return to London and undergo an operation, which was successfully performed by Sir Alfred Fripp, amputation being very narrowly escaped. Mr. Hicks, we are sorry to hear, will be in the doctor's hands for some time.

MR. AND MRS. WILHELM GANZ gave an At Home at Piccadilly Hotel on Tuesday to celebrate Mr. Ganz's diamond jubilee, when nearly 400 people were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Ganz were assisted by Miss Georgina Ganz and Miss Adelina Ganz in receiving their guests, amongst whom were Sir Charles Wyndham, Mrs. George Alexander, Mme. Destinn, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Eva Moore, Lady Monckton, Mme. Ada Crossley, Miss Florence Wood, and Mr. and Miss Kuhe. The artists taking part in the concert were Mme. Sobrino, Miss Ruth Vincent, Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Gregory Hast, Mr. Hamilton Earle, M. Nicolay (of the Scala), M. Billetta, Mr. Charles Ganz, Zimbalist, Mlle. Tina Lerner (Russian pianist), and Mr. A. Mann. Carl Heubert's band played.

MR. JOSEPH LYONS has accepted the post of chairman of directors of the New Princess's Theatre, Ltd., which will issue a prospectus next week. The capital is £155,000, in £1 shares, all of which will be offered for public subscription.

MME. META ILLING, a well-known Berlin actress, has come to London with the idea of establishing an Anglo-German theatrical company. Miss Illing's intention is to form the theatrical company of prominent English actors and actresses, and to open a season next year in Berlin. Performances of Mr. Pinero's Iris, Mr. Alfred Sutro's The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt, and Mr. Laurence Housman's Prunella will be given in four consecutive weeks; and for another period of four weeks the company will appear at Hamburg, Dresden, Frankfort, Munich, and other German towns. Miss Illing hopes to bring over to London later on a company of German artists, who will appear in a repertory of modern plays. Sir Charles Wyndham, Miss Ellen Terry, and Mr. Henry Arthur Jones are in support of the scheme.

THE Theatrical Garden Party was a glorious success nobly won. The statistics which we give in another column show to what an extent the work was carried, and prove how zealously each department laboured towards the result achieved. The record takings, as will be seen, were secured by the photographic stall, where signed pictures were disposed of by leading ladies of the dramatic profession, and a sum of £109 was realised. The travesty at the Theatre Royal, whose operations were spread over a less period, came next in order with £98; and third place was obtained by the Eldorado, where the variety entertainment provided by Mr. Oswald Stoll, under the direction of Mr. Fred Trussell, resulted in the sum of upwards of £87.

MR. FRED WRIGHT, JUN., had the honour of appearing in a little "polo" burlesque at Baron Rothschild's Paris residence on the Grand Prix night, after the Baron's dinner-party, the management of the Moulin Rouge keeping the curtain down twenty minutes later so that Mr. Wright could play at the Baron's and get back in time. Baron Rothschild presented Mr. Wright with a pretty pin in the shape of a polo club, in addition, of course, to his fee, and asked him to appear at a garden party on the Sunday afternoon following, Miss Madge Lessing being brought over by Mr. Wright specially to join with him in the "Kiss Kiss" and "Fishers" duets from The Prince of Pilsen.

MISS ITALIA CONTI has been very successful in her arrangement of the programme for the Garden Fête, to be given in aid of the funds of Charing Cross Hospital at the Royal Botanical Gardens on Tuesday. The Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, will open the fête, and a prologue welcoming Her Royal Highness will be spoken by Little Dolly Dot, who, in the character of Cupid, will act as Master of the Ceremonies. The forest scenes from As You Like It, arranged as a woodland masque, with special dances, and glees to be sung by the Westminster Singers, will be followed by a café chantant, at which Mr. Joseph McCormack, Mme. Guilbert, Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. Harry Fragson, Mr. George Robey, and many other well-known artists will appear.

MEMBERS of the Lady Frederick, Havana, Dairymaids, and Butterflies companies are hard at work completing their plans for the special tea-tables, and other attractions at which they have promised to assist. Lady Frederick will hold a Court of Feminine Fripperies and Masculine Mysteries; and Miss Florence Wood, whose clever impersonation of the dressmaker, Mme. Claude, is one of the features in Mr. Maugham's sparkling comedy, is to preside over an exhibition of model gowns and hats, which are being generously supplied by the Maison Vendôme, Ltd. Other attractive features have been arranged, and the fête promises to be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

MR. F. R. BENSON had his hands full at Winchester last week in organising the local pageant. Mr. Benson had an accident during the progress of the rehearsals. He was driving a chariot with two horses when they bolted, ran outside the grounds of Wolvesey Castle, where the pageant is given, and collided with a vehicle in the road. Mr. Benson being thrown out and rather badly shaken. He soon recovered, however, from the effects, and having got the pageant into working order, has devoted himself to receiving the Royalties and others who have visited the show. On Saturday afternoon Princess Henry of Battenberg and Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck attended, with Lord and Lady Northbrook, and were welcomed by Mr. Benson in the grounds. There were also present the Duke of Wellington, Lord and Lady Winchester, Lord and Lady Lansdowne, the Speaker and Mrs Lowther, Lord and Lady Knaresborough, Lord and Lady Powis, Sir George Cooper (High Sheriff of Hants) and Lady Cooper, Lord Althorp, Lord Maitland, Lord Malmesbury, Lord Calthorpe, Lord Normanton, Lord Curzon, Lord Abinger, Lord Basing, Lord Eversley, and Lord Portsmouth. Mr. Benson has had valuable assistance from Mrs. Benson, who arranged the dances; and Mr. Herbert Norris, who designed the principal costumes.

THE matinée which will be given at the Lyceum Theatre on the 14th inst., in aid of the King's College Hospital Removal Fund, is likely to be successful, if we may judge by the list of attractions offered. Mr. Alfred Butt and the Palace directors will permit Miss Maud Allan to appear in Mendelssohn's Spring Dance, Sir W. S. Gilbert will rehearse a revival of Rosencranz and Guildenstern, with Miss Marion Terry and Miss Toller in the cast; Mr. Martin Harvey, Miss de Silva, and Miss Mary Rorke will appear in The Tragedy of Truth, and a one-act play entitled A Matter-of-Fact Husband will be produced by Miss Ella Dixon and Mr. Gelderd. Others who have promised to appear are Miss Phyllis Lett, Miss Ethel Bevans, Mr. Yorke Stephens, and Mr. and Mrs. Matheson Lang. Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Margaret Cooper, and other popular actresses have consented to sell programmes.

THE wedding of Miss Dora Barton, the popular young actress, and Mr. Antony Caton-Woodville, elder son of the famous war artist of that name, was celebrated very quietly at St. Paul's Church, Hammersmith, on Saturday. The ceremony was performed by the Vicar of the parish, the Rev. G. N. Walsh. The bride was accompanied by her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Newall, and by her brother and sisters, one of whom is Miss Naomi Barton. Mr. Woodville had the support of his brother, Mr. William Caton Woodville.

MISS DORA BARTON made her first appearance at Liverpool in the September of 1892 as the child Suzanne in A Man's Shadow, with Mr. Beerbohm Tree. Her principal engagements have been in Editha's Burglar at the Haymarket in 1894; with Forbes-Robertson at the Lyceum in 1896; in Brother Officers at the Garrick in 1898; in Hearts are Trumps at Drury Lane in the following year; in The Wilderness at the St. James's in 1901; as Joan in Sweet and Twenty at the Vaudeville in the same year; an American tour with Mrs. Langtry in 1902; in Glittering Gloria at Wyndham's in 1903; with Miss Ada Reeve at the Criterion in 1904; in The Mountain-Climber at the Comedy in 1905-6; in Monsieur Beaucaire and Clancarty at the Lyric in 1907; and a subsequent tour with Mr. Lewis Waller in the former piece and Robin Hood.

OWING to ill-health, Mr. Norman V. Norman has cancelled all his engagements for Pastoral Plays, with the exception of Bournemouth. The performances there will take place, as usual, in the Winter Gardens, and the music will be played by Dan Godfrey's well-known band. Both Mr. Norman and Miss Beatrice Wilson are great favourites in Bournemouth, and last season the Pastoral performances were crowded nightly.

OUR sympathies are extended to Mr. H. Athol Forde, who has sustained a severe bereavement in the loss of his wife. Mrs. Forde, who passed away on the 26th ult., was not connected with the stage, but took a keen interest in all its best work.

MR. JAMES MACREADY CHUTE, proprietor and manager of the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, took his annual benefit on Saturday, the performance being under the patronage of the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, and the High Sheriff of Bristol. The house was packed with an enthusiastic audience. The entertainment consisted of a triple bill, including Packing Up, in which Mr. Fred Allandale and Miss Minnie Blanchard successfully appeared; The Governor's Nephew, in which Mr. Horace Mills and Mr. W. H. Rawlins distinguished themselves; and A Pantomime Rehearsal, the chief parts being taken by Mr. Horace Mills, Mr. Evelyn Vernon, Mr. Fred Allandale, Mr. Stratton Mills, Miss Winnie Volt, Miss Mabel Young, and Miss Minnie Blanchard.

AT a convenient interval Mr. Chute made his customary speech, in the course of which he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, at the close of another season the pleasing duty once more devolves upon me to acknowledge, with grateful thanks, the generous support which has been so freely bestowed. There are two points which make the past season a notable one, namely, the unusual number and variety of the plays that have been presented and the pantomime of Jack and Jill, which established a record. The important matter of ventilation of this building has for some time engaged my attention, and I propose to instal a new and complete system on the most approved hygienic and scientific principles. The work will be carried out during the vacation, and I have every hope it will prove successful in securing increased comfort to patrons in all parts of the theatre." Mr. Chute, who was loudly applauded, then referred to the various engagements he had made for the coming season, commencing on August Bank Holiday.

MISS EMMA HUTCHISON AND MR. PERCY HUTCHISON have acquired from Miss May Palfrey the provincial rights of Mrs. Dot for the whole of the towns not reserved for Miss Palfrey's own tour. Miss and Mr. Hutchison are to be congratulated on having secured one of the most brilliant successes of the present London season; a play which sparkles with wit and humour from beginning to end. Ever since its production the Comedy Theatre has been crowded, in spite of the fact that there are now fifteen rows of stalls. On Mr. Hutchison's list of plays starting on tour early in August are Lady Frederick, of which there are two companies; Peter's Mother, Mrs. Ponderbury's Past and Brewster's Millions; and negotiations are going forward for the provincial rights of still another play not yet produced in the West-end.

MR. OSCAR ASCHE and Miss Lily Brayton closed their short summer season at the Aldwych last Saturday evening. Each and every act of The Taming of the Shrew was received with the heartiest of applause; and at the close Mr. Asche, in answer to a most enthusiastic call, stepped in front of the curtain and said, "Ladies and gentlemen,—I am not going to make a speech to-night, but on behalf of my wife and myself I thank you for your kind appreciation here to-night, and bid you farewell until we meet again."

THE legitimate and variety stage have alike lost a sincere friend by the demise of Dr. Thos. Kennedy Fell, of Barrow, who died on Friday, the 24th ult., at his residence, 6, Harley-street, Barrow-in-Furness, at the age of fifty-seven. Dr. Fell was hon. medical officer of the Actors' Association and the M.H.A.R.A. for a number of years, and also acted in that capacity for the Actors' Union. During the many years of his connection with the theatrical and music hall associations the deceased gentleman has attended thousands of the profession, and in all cases his services were given gratuitously.

THE funeral took place, amid many manifestations of sympathy and regret, on Monday at the Barrow Cemetery, and was very numerously attended, there being present all the local medical gentlemen, representatives of the Town Council, North Lonsdale Field Club, Friendly Societies, Actors' Association (Mr. Moxon), M.H.A.R.A., and members of the Press. The deceased leaves a widow, two young sons, and a daughter, to whom our deepest sympathy is extended.

MR. W. V. GARROD will conclude to-night a long association with The Prodigal Parson, having played the rôle 741 times. For the next fortnight he will play the comedy part to enable Mr. Owen Remoude to take a short holiday, and then, after a brief rest, will produce and create the lead in A Country Girl in London.

MR. FRED WRIGHT, JUN., proved his prowess as a bowler at a cricket match, which was played recently on the Standard A.C. (Paris) ground at Suresnes between teams representing the Peter Pan company from the Vaudeville, Paris, and the staff of the Continental Daily Mail. Among those who watched the game were Mr. J. M. Barrie and Mr. Entwistle, and many ladies of the Peter Pan company, including Miss Pauline Chase. The Peter Pan XI. batted first, and were dismissed for 15. Mr. Fred Wright, assisting the Pressmen, secured seven wickets for six runs.

AT the Ladbroke Hall, Notting Hill, on June 26, a performance for stage right purposes was given by the Thalia Dramatic Society of a three-act play, entitled His Sacrifice, by Donald F. Buckley.

MISS JESSIE LONNEN, owing to the indisposition of Miss Ada Reeve, undertook with success the character of Rhodanthe at the Apollo, on the Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week.

MR. HERBERT FLEMMING'S new English comedy company is proving a big success in Australia, where it is generally recognised as being equal to the famous Brough and Boucicault combination of some years ago. The répertoire includes The Mummy and the Humming Bird, Morals of Marcus, Olivia, The Red Lamp, Dr. Wake's Patient, Peter's Mother, and Simple Simon, the last-mentioned being now in rehearsal for its initial production in Sydney next month. Miss Beatrice Day, the star of the company, is winning innumerable laurels, and socially is extremely popular. The present tour is booked up to 1910.

COUNCILLOR SIDNEY BACON, who has been for the last twelve years connected with the Grand Theatre, Newcastle, Metropole, and Queen's Theatres, Gateshead, has sold his interests in these properties to Mr. F. W. Bolam.

AT the third annual general meeting of the New Gaiety Theatre, Dundee, Ltd., held on the 25th ult., the report showed an increased surplus for the year. The sum of £100 was authorised to be added to the reserve fund, and a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent., free of Income Tax, was declared.

MR. MAURICE E. BANDMANN, after a flying visit to London of only a few weeks, left for Naples on Thursday evening to conclude arrangements with his Italian Grand Opera Company, which will tour on his circuit during the forthcoming season. This company will number seventy-five people, and will be the largest combination of this kind that has ever visited the East. From Naples Mr. Bandmann will proceed direct to India. During his absence his business will be conducted as heretofore by Mr. Alfred Dove.

MR. ERNEST R. ABBOTT, whose successful visit last December to the Broadway Theatre, New Cross, with Sapho will be remembered by playgoers of the district, commences on Monday a four weeks season there with his company. Mr. Abbott is a strong local favourite, having been born in Lewisham High-road. During a lengthy experience as an amateur he organised and initiated the dramatic club in connection with the local Literary Society, which is still renowned for the excellence of its performances, and there are not a few of the original members who can bear testimony that it owes its success in a large measure to Mr. Abbott's untiring energy of years ago. The opening attraction will be Trilby, with Miss Ada Abbott (Mrs. Ernest R. Abbott) in the title-rôle, and Mr. Abbott as Svengali.

MISS IRIS HOEY, who first won fame as the daintiest of Ariels in Mr. Tree's production of The Tempest, and is at present fluttering gaily as a Butterfly at the Apollo, is, we understand, engaged to be married to Mr. Lauri de Frece, a talented comedian, and brother-in-law of Miss Vesta Tilley. Both artists were to be seen hard at work at the Garden Party on Tuesday, Mr. De Frece doing yeoman service as Mrs. Jarley, and Miss Hoey making one of the prettiest babes in the wood ever found in a collection of waxworks or anywhere else.

SIGNOR GARBIN will appear at Covent Garden next Tuesday in Fedora, and his repertory will include Manon Lescaut, Tosca, Madama Butterfly, Traviata, and other operas. Signor Garbin has appeared in the principal theatres of Italy and Spain. Preparations are being made for the production next January of Dr. Naylor's new English prize opera, The Angelus.

MR. WALTER HERRIES POLLOCK has written a volume of "Impressions" of the late Sir Henry Irving, and the book will shortly be published by Messrs. Longmans.

MISS VERA BERINGER'S special matinée of The Boys, which was produced at Croydon a few weeks since, will take place at the Court Theatre on Thursday next. In addition to Miss Beringer, the cast will include Mr. Charles Goodhart, Mr. Fred Lewis, Mr. Wilfred E. Shine, Mr. George Silver, Mr. John Brabourne, Mr. Max Leeds, Miss Florence Lloyd, Miss May Blayney, Miss Carlotta Zerbini, and Miss May Holford.

MR. E. W. SILVERTHORNE, having just terminated a lengthy spring tour with The New Clown, which was under his direction, is now prepared to negotiate for business management in London, or for tour. His address will be found in our advertising columns.

MR. EDMUND KENNEDY, who sailed for New York on Wednesday to take up an engagement with Mr. Henry Miller in The Servant in the House, was the recipient of a handsome silver cigar-case as a memento of his long association with Lucky Durham, in which he has played the leading part for three years, under the management of Messrs. Armitage and Leigh. The presentation, which took place at the Marlborough Theatre, Holloway, on Saturday last, was made by Mrs. Leigh, on behalf of "the management and artists of the Lucky Durham company and other friends," and expressed their "sincere appreciation of his work and their best wishes for his future success."

WE record with regret the death of Mr. Frederick Shakspere Shenton, a name well-known to members of the theatrical profession, who passed away at his residence, Home Villa, Grosvenor-place South, Cheltenham, on the 23rd ult. Mr. Shenton, who was fifty-four years of age, was a member of an old Cheltenham family, and his father, Mr. T. B. Shenton, who preceded him in his business as a printer in Winchcombe-street, was the proprietor of the old Theatre Royal, Cheltenham. Owing to the breaking down of his health, the deceased had left his house but little for a long time past, his son, Mr. Shakspere Shenton, having for long been virtually responsible for the conduct of the printing and large bill-posting business. The deceased gentleman, who leaves a widow, a daughter, and four sons to mourn his loss, was a brother of Mr. Edward Shenton, lessee of the Victoria Rooms. The funeral took place on Saturday at Cheltenham Cemetery, among the mourners being Messrs. Shakspere Shenton, R. R. Shenton, N. B. Shenton (sons), and Edward B. Shenton (brother). Many beautiful wreaths testified to the esteem in which Mr. Shenton was held.

MR. EDWARD TERRY will add Fiander's Widow, by arrangement with Mr. Arthur Bourchier, to his already extensive répertoire on his forthcoming autumn tour. This will be the first time that this piece has been performed out of London.

THE work of reconstruction at Drury Lane Theatre is being busily carried on, and men are at work day and night, decorating the auditorium and practically building a new stage. Although it is only four years since the theatre was entirely renovated and the stage floored with teak wood, practically the whole of the front of the house and the dressing-rooms are being decorated afresh, and the stage is being refloored.

THE important part of the work is the removal of the centre wall, enabling the new stage to reach a depth of 80ft. The roof will be increased in height from 70ft. to 80ft., and will be surmounted by a lantern 27ft. square. Two large "flies," connecting by a bridge at the back of the stage, will be constructed, each 80ft. in depth. The oak beams which stood the ravages of the fire so successfully will be replaced by steel girders, and the solid teak floor, which was laid only five years ago, but suffered from the falling mass of burning properties, will be entirely renewed. The fore part of the stage is crossed by no fewer than five bridges—two electric, two hydraulic, and one operated by hand-power. Something like 200 men are at work continuously, for the theatre will be required some weeks before the opening night for the purpose of rehearsals. The cost is estimated at several thousands of pounds. It is hoped that the work will be completed by the end of August.

WE announce with regret the death of Mr. John Campbell Franklin, formerly associated with the Northampton Opera House, and of Franklin's Gardens in that town, who passed away at his residence at Ealing on Tuesday. A few days ago he underwent an operation which is very rarely attended with fatal consequences, but the heart was unable to bear the strain, and he succumbed towards midnight.

MR. FRANKLIN built the Jubilee Hall, at Franklin's Gardens, and, with the assistance of Mr. Isaac Tarry, the Gardens became very attractive. Mr. Franklin went to Leamington from Northampton, and was living at the time of his death at Broughton Lodge, Mount Park-road, Ealing. It is said of him that his modest and unassuming manner, while it made him hosts of friends, somewhat misled them as to his abilities, which were of no common order.

THE programme of the testimonial benefit to Mr. Walter Brandon, which will take place at the Lyric Theatre on the 10th inst., includes the names of Mr. Lewis Waller, who will appear with his company in a scene from The Explorer; Mr. James Welch, Miss Audrey Ford, and Mr. J. F. Tully, who will be seen in The Man in the Street; Miss Fannie Ward, who will play the heroine in an act from The Three of Us; and Mr. Fred Edwards and Miss May Edouin, who will contribute the laughable sketch The Kleptomaniac.

MR. J. H. LEIGH has granted a lease of the Court Theatre to Miss Mouillot, the principal of the Dramatic Conservatoire, who will present plays that are unsuited for a run at an ordinary West-end house, and will let the theatre for amateur performances. The Pioneers will undertake to give at the Court three matinées and three evening performances a week for forty weeks in each year; and Miss Mouillot intends giving high-class orchestral concerts on Sunday afternoons, so the boards of the Sloane-square house will be pretty constantly trod.

MISS JULIA NEILSON, we regret to hear, will not be well enough to accompany Mr. Fred Terry on his autumn tour with The Scarlet Pimpernel and Matt of Merrymount, which opens at Blackpool on Aug. 31; but she hopes to return to work early next year. While on this tour Mr. Terry will produce Mr. William Devereux's drama, Henry of Navarre, with which Mr. Terry will commence his season at the New Theatre in January.

MR. JEROME K. JEROME'S new play, which Mr. Forbes-Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott will produce at the St. James's Theatre on Sept. 1, is founded on Mr. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," which describes the coming of a Stranger with a spell like that in "The Palace of Truth" to a boarding-house in Bloomsbury. Mr. Forbes-Robertson will play the Stranger, and Miss Gertrude Elliott will have a part well suited to her sweet and winning personality. The piece is in three acts, the first being described as a prologue, the second as a play, and the third as an epilogue. Miss Alice Crawford, Miss Haidee Wright, Miss Kate Bishop, Miss Kate Carlyon, Miss Agnes Thomas, Mr. Marsh Allen, Mr. Edward Sass, Mr. Ernest Hendrie, Mr. Wilfred Forster, and Mr. Ian Robertson will be included in the cast.

MR. MAURICE E. BANDMANN has arranged with Mr. A. J. West, F.R.G.S., for an extended tour over his circuit of his successful naval and military entertainment Our Navy and Our Army. The company will leave London by P. & O. s.s. Persia on Friday, July 17, and the tour will extend over a period of twelve months.

MR. HERBERT SAMUEL, at the meeting of the Standing Committee of the House of Commons on the 25th ult., proposed the insertion of a new clause in the Children's Bill to the effect that when more than a hundred children were present at an entertainment a sufficient number of adult attendants should be provided to superintend the movements of the children. An amendment by Mr. Haslam to the effect that it should be made compulsory on the promoters of the entertainment to give notice to the local police was negatived, and the clause was added to the Bill.

MESSRS. E. TAYLOR PLATT AND TREVOR LOWE (by arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker) start a summer and autumn tour of Bernard Shaw's successful comedies You Never Can Tell and Arms and the Man on Monday next. The company, which has been personally rehearsed by Mr. Shaw, includes Miss Katherine Stuart, Miss Gwladys Morris, Miss Clara Earle, Miss Ivy Fenton, and Messrs. Charles Daly, F. Cremlin, Donald Calthrop, Leslie Hamer, George Howard, and Trevor Lowe, Mr. E. Taylor Platt acting as general-manager. The towns to be visited include Buxton, Ramsgate, Margate, Eastbourne, Brighton, Llandudno, Torquay, Exeter, Bath, Swansea, and other chief centres of amusement.

STRIKING evidence was forthcoming at the Royal Court Theatre, Warrington, on Friday, the 26th ult., of the popularity of Mr. Fred J. Reece, the acting-manager, who for the last three years has earned the esteem of all in the Lancashire hive of industry. Despite the tropical state of the weather, the place was packed from floor to ceiling, and the long list of artists who had volunteered their services worked especially hard in making his benefit the success it undoubtedly was. The amateur talent of the district was in full force, and professionals from the local Hippodrome and Royal Theatre of Varieties all assembled to do honour to the occasion. The energetic services of Mr. Lawrence Bolton, who acted as hon. secretary, together with those of Messrs. H. Neville, F. Weisker, and J. Waters as acting-managers, and Messrs. F. Willmot, H. Worrall, Ryder Boys, and Murray Graham as stage-managers, were recognised to the full.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN will reopen the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday, and will present Miss Isadora Duncan in classic dances. Miss Duncan's pupils, who support her in her dances, are called "The Lost Ones"; and their desire is to "live their lives in their own way." On Monday selections from Gluck's Iphigenie en Aulide will be given, illustrated by dancing. Miss Duncan is the proprietress of a school for dancing in Berlin.

MISS LALLIE FORSYTH, who has concluded an engagement with Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, has been engaged by Mr. Maurice Bandmann for his Eastern tour.

MRS. ALEC ROMER (Miss Margaret Radcliffe) desires to thank through our columns all her friends for their kind enquiries and expressions of sympathy. She wishes to tell them that her husband is now convalescent, but, acting on the urgent advice of his doctors, will not accept any engagement for twelve months. Yesterday (Friday) Miss Radcliffe started a fourteen weeks' tour, on which Mr. Romer will accompany her.

MR. WILLIAM LOCKHART has been touring the British Isles now for exactly eighteen years, but has never played in Portsmouth until this week. For some time, indeed, it has been a standing joke among his friends that if ever he did fulfil an engagement there something unusual would happen. It was, therefore, quite a relief to Mr. Lockhart that nothing really tragic occurred. All that happened was this, that owing to having his pockets picked during a four hours' wait at Brighton, he arrived at Portsmouth penniless, and at the moment of his arrival there was an eclipse of the sun.

IT is not only sufferers from railway accidents who exaggerate their injuries. Some months ago M. Eugene Ysaye was ordered to pay £320 to a railway guard, who alleged that he had become deaf after the famous violinist had boxed his ears. M. Ysaye was coming home with his brother, M. Theo Ysaye, from Antwerp, and it was stated that the assault followed a demand for tickets from the violinist, who was disturbed by the guard while asleep. An appeal was made, and the damages were to-day reduced to £60, as it was proved that the guard's hearing was defective before the assault.

MR. G. E. WILLIAMS, who was resident-manager at the Aldershot Theatre Royal for some years, has been engaged by Mr. Wentworth Croke as business-manager for The Bondman on tour. Mr. Williams has been spending a cricketing holiday among some of his old cricketing friends at Reading, Basingstoke, and Aldershot, and starts his new engagement on August Bank Holiday.

M. COQUELIN AINE has been appearing at His Majesty's Theatre this week in a round of his most celebrated creations, including parts in Le Voyage de Monsieur Perrichon, L'Abbé Constantin, Tartufe, Les Precieuses Ridicules, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, and Cyrano de Bergerac. The exquisite art of the great French cômedian has again been intensely enjoyed and liberally recognised.

THE advent of Mr. George Giddens as Christopher Podmore in Miss Ada Reeve's merry musical play Butterflies at the Apollo Theatre greatly strengthens an unusually strong cast. Mr. Giddens, who took up the character on Monday, revels in the humour of the puritanical Colonial broker who succumbs to the fascinations of "the Witch" and becomes a veritable butterfly.

MISS CLARA DOW will continue to play in The Mikado at the Savoy, but will rest on those occasions when H.M.S. Pinafore is given so as to be ready for the arduous work of the autumn répertoire.

THE production of John Strange Winter's comedy, Trixie, at the Scala Theatre, which was announced for Friday evening, has been postponed until Friday next.

MISS NORA CARTON has made arrangements with Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore, by which she acquires the entire provincial and suburban rights of H. H. Davies's clever and sparkling comedy Captain Drew on Leave, and will send out a company on tour early in August. As the cast has the approval at rehearsal of both Sir Charles Wyndham and the author, it may be relied upon that a first-class representation of this delightful play will be given. Applications for dates are to be made to Mr. C. B. Vaughan at the Criterion Theatre.

MISS GERTRUDE LE SAGE has just returned to England, after a two-years' successful and enjoyable tour in South Africa, under the Woods-Williamson management.

MR. TOM HESLEWOOD was presented with a silver bowl on Wednesday, the last day of the Chelsea Pageant, by the Mayor (the Hon. W. Sidney), who opened the proceedings.

MR. LEONARD RAYNE has secured Mr. Charles Hannan's well-known adaptation of A Cigarette Maker's Romance for presentation in South Africa. Mr. Hannan's comedy The Electric Man, which proved very popular during Mr. Rayne's recent tour, will also continue to form one of the items of his South African répertoire. Owing to illness, Mr. Rayne has hitherto been unable to personally appear in The Electric Man, but he intends to undertake the double rôle of Walter Everest and the Electric Man when he presents Mr. Hannan's piece in Johannesburg shortly.

THE fifth annual report and balance-sheet of the Fulham Football and Athletic Company for the season ended April 30 is a very satisfactory one. Taking everything into consideration, the directors feel they have every reason to be satisfied with the Club's first year in the English League, and they feel sure that but for unfortunate accidents at a critical time the results would have been even more satisfactory. The directors propose a dividend of 5 per cent., as in previous years. The fairer members of the theatrical profession who favour the sport of football may be advised to note that in future ladies will be admitted free to the ground at all reserve matches.

THE firm of A. R. Dean and Sons, to whose enterprise the decorating and furnishing of so many of our leading theatres and variety houses are due, are forging ahead, and their list for the year is a formidable one, including contracts with theatres in every part of the kingdom. The thirty years' practical experience in every department of theatrical furnishing enjoyed by the firm, and the extensive nature of their operations, give them a position unequalled in the trade. Mr. A. F. Windibank, who has superintended the equipment of 1,500 theatres and halls, is still manager of department.

AS an instance of the scope of Mr. Windibank's work, it may be stated that last week he journeyed to London, Brighton, Eastbourne, Southampton, Oldham, Manchester, Burnley, Colne, and Leeds in five days, and this week his travels have embraced Glasgow, Greenock, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Pontefract, Rochdale, Manchester, Birkenhead, &c. During his visit to Burnley, Mr. Windibank had the misfortune to break his arm through falling down a well at the local Empire; but, notwithstanding the painful nature of his injury, the sufferer could not lay up, and went on booking orders almost every day.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Three-parts of a Horse.

"IT was Melbourne Cup week," writes Mr. Harry A. Gribben. "I was playing with a stock company in a local theatre. As my uncle owned a horse (Arsenal, that won) running in the Cup, the manager thought it would be a good idea to put up The Flying Scud, and cast me for the old trainer, Nat Gossling. Our manager had a great leaning towards the realistic, and determined to make the race scene as like the real thing as possible. He accordingly had five horses cut from 'profile,' four mounted on one boat truck, the fifth, representing 'The Scud,' on another. The four horses on the large truck up stage were mounted by little boys, each of whom was advertised as a leading jockey. The 'profile' representing 'The Scud' on the down stage truck was ridden by myself. In the race scene 'Jerry Blossom' is hocussed, and when at the last moment there is no one to ride the mare, the old trainer dons the colours and takes her to the post. The Cup day arrived, and the race was won by my uncle's horse; and that evening I had the honour of wearing the colours (cerise and lavender stripes, cerise and lavender quartered cap) carried in the race by 'Arsenal.'

"THAT night the house was full, and the audience was heart and soul with the owner of 'The Scud.' When I, as the old trainer, was thrown on to the mare's back they cheered to the echo. They're off; and the excitement on the stage and in the front is at fever heat. The little horses go past on the back cloth, then appear (a little larger) as they recross on a hedgerow. 'Here they come! "The Scud" wins.' 'No, red and white.' 'No, blue jacket, green cap—green wins,' 'No, red.' 'No, green.' 'No, no, "The Scud" wins. "The Scud!" "The Scud!"' That was the cue for the boat trucks to appear on the stage. On we came, I riding my 'profile' 'Yarraman' for all I was worth. We reach the centre of the stage, with the other horses leading me by about half a length. This is the critical moment, for here the stage hands are to give one mighty pull and my boat truck dashes to the front and wins by a neck. On my 'profile' steed's forequarters there was fixed a trick-line so that he could be prevented from getting his head over the rails during his mad career towards the winning-post. In the excitement of the moment the stage-hand in charge of this trick-line put all his strength into an effort, and pulled 'The Scud's' head and shoulders off. They flew into the wings, whilst I disappeared riding the other three-parts of her body. There was a yell of derision, and peals of laughter from the audience; and when I re-entered on the real horse they would have none of us. 'No race,' they shouted, 'Objection,' 'Run it over again!' 'All bets off!' and in the midst of an uproar we endeavoured to bring the scene to a close. As the curtain descended, a gentleman in the front row of the stalls calmly informed us that horse, owner, trainer, and jockey ought to be 'warned off' for life for daring to try and 'kid' the public that they could win a race with three-parts of a horse."

A Railway Adventure.

"THE Gombeens Gold company," writes Mr. Butler Stanhope, "were engaged to appear at Waterford and Limerick for three nights in each town. We left Buxton on the Saturday, and arrived in Dublin on Sunday morning, stopped there all day, and left on the Monday morning by the Great Southern and Western Railway at Kingsbridge Station. There happened to be a strike on at the time, and we had great difficulty in getting away two hours after the advertised time. When about seventy miles on our journey the train stopped at a small station, and we could see there was a fair in full swing 'down town.' The driver, stoker, and guard quietly strolled away to the fair, leaving us there for upwards of an hour and a half. Then the railway people came in and started the train off, as if it was an every-day occurrence.

HOWEVER, we arrived safely at Waterford, where our agent had everything ready for the evening's performance; and we opened to an excellent house, and did a big three nights. On Thursday we had to leave for Limerick, and had trouble to get away, for the strike was still on, and we had to tip right and left to get on at all. There was a lot of young fellows on the train going to Queenstown, en route for America; and as we neared each station they gave a loud, peculiar cry, and when the train (a very slow one) drew up the station would be crowded by country folk to give them a hearty reception. We duly arrived at Limerick, where we were billed for two nights—Thursday and Friday—and a Saturday matinée. The latter we had to abandon, as the strike was getting more serious, and we wanted to get away as soon as possible on Saturday morning, for we were due at Dublin for twelve nights on the Monday; but to our consternation the carters had all gone on strike out of sympathy with the railway porters, so there was nothing for it but to carry our own stuff to the station.

THE gentlemen of our company volunteered their services; fortunately the theatre and railway were close together. We set at it with a will, and carried all the scenery into the station. Not a single porter would lend a hand; all stood with their hands in their pockets leaning against the wall. The stationmaster, a 'jolly good sort,' threw off his coat and came to our assistance; then the booking-clerk followed his example. Luckily the truck that brought in our luggage was still at the station. I offered to pay the porters liberally to load up, but they refused. So we had to do it ourselves as best we could. There was our heavy man struggling with a flat, our juvenile (a rather dainty dandy) in his shirt-sleeves working hard to get a wing into the trunk, and our low comedian fighting with a ground row. The stationmaster was tackling a house piece, which fell on him, shutting him out from view; then his head burst through a 'window,' the porters yelling with delight at this mishap. We extricated him safe and sound, and eventually got the truck loaded, the porters smiling, with their hands still in their pockets, enjoying what they, I suppose, considered a huge joke.

THE gentlemen put on their coats and waistcoats. Then I turned to the porters, and said: 'Now, boys, after your hard work in standing there and seeing us amuse ourselves, will you all come and have a little refershment?' an offer which was willingly accepted, and the pints those bold warriors put out of sight were a marvel. When we returned to the station the porters ran and got a tarpaulin, spread it over the truck, fastened it well on, and made all secure, and coupled the carriage and truck on to the engine. Then the foreman porters explained that they were forbidden by the union or society to which they belonged to help with any luggage, &c., but as we were strangers they would assist us to get off. We were taken on to a branch line, amid the cheers of the porters, and arrived at a place called Athenry, where, after a short delay, we got on to the main line to Dublin, at which city we arrived safely at night, weary and tired after our railway adventure."

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

THEATRICAL GARDEN PARTY.

Rank and fashion flocked again on Tuesday to the garden party annually given by the profession in aid of the Actors' Orphanage, and a scene more brilliant than before was presented at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, where the function was this year held. Long before and after the time of opening, the approaches to the Gardens were thronged by a fashionable crowd, amid which were leaders of society and many celebrities. Glorious weather waited upon the occasion, and a record attendance was reached.

The Gardens presented a dazzling sight. In creams and pinks and other delicate hues, leading actresses and comediennes paraded the grounds, tempting all to buy, and reaping a rich harvest, while prominent members of the profession combined in different parts of the ground in the work of providing amusement. A worthy lead was again set by the President, Mr. Cyril Maude, who, leaving The Flag Lieutenant on the swelling tide of success, devoted his day to the cause of the children. The help given by the variety profession was invaluable, and the fact of the artists appearing and of Mr. Oswald Stoll giving his time and the services of his managers to the organisation of the stupendous entertainments is highly appreciated in theatrical circles.

Theatre Royal, Botanic Gardens.

At the Theatre Royal was revived last year's success, The Desperado Duke; or, The Culpable Countess, written by Robert Marshall and Alfred Sutro, with the following cast:—

Hydrangea, Countess of Margate ..... MISS FANNY BROUGH
Theodosia ..... MISS AURIOL LEE
Duke of Ramsgate ..... MR. CYRIL MAUDE
Mr. Ponder ..... MR. HARRY NICHOLLS
Archdeacon Chancel .... MR. EDMUND MAURICE

Visitors were attracted to the theatre by a number of popular comedians. Mr. Brandon Thomas, thoroughly disguised as a showman, beat the big drum and exhorted the crowd to walk in, promising the ladies votes and the gentlemen emancipation from feminine government. By his side stood Mr. Ben Nathan, who in the wig and motley of a clown held out the inducement that the public would be able to witness the front page of The Era in the cast of the play, or that the sight of Cyril Maude murdering Fanny Brough could be enjoyed for half-a-crown. Consequently, there was standing-room only at the first performance of The Desperado Duke, which aroused unlimited merriment. Miss Fanny Brough again played the Countess of Margate, whose Socialistic tendencies lead her to offer her hand in marriage to a footman whom she engages in her service. Miss Brough's blood-curdling accents and mock-tragic demeanour as the Countess were again irresistibly humorous, and her clever by-play and facial expression added to the eccentricity of the rendition. Mr. Cyril Maude was in his most whimsical vein as the determined Duke, who goes to the lengths of impersonating the lowly footman so that he may win a bride, shaving off his beautiful black beard, and discarding his orders and his decorations for the purpose. His acting was the source of unlimited mirth, occasioned as much by the unexpressed humour of the character as by drollery of the lines. The duet between his Grace and the Countess, in which the vocalisation is supplied by the phonograph while the two characters go through the actions, was irresistibly droll. Mr. Harry Nicholls undertook the character of Mr. Ponder, played last year by Mr. Lennox Pawle, and gave a rendering of the typical butler rich in humour and resource. Mr. Edmund Maurice repeated his clever study of the pompous Archdeacon Chancel, and Miss Auriol Lee played the youthful Theodosia with charming ingenuousness. The business of the play was amusingly worked up, even to the end, when a number of faded bouquets and flower-pots were presented to the leading actress, who accepted them with undisguised disgust. Added effect was given to the performance by the music written by Mr. John Ansell, and rendered by an orchestra under his direction. All the costumes and wigs were lent by Mr. W. Clarkson. The manager of the booth was Mr. Alfred Turner, and the outside parade was assisted by Miss Maidie Andrews as Columbine, Mr. A. E. George as fruit hawker and accompanist, and Mr. Edward Coutts as a brigand chief. The show was advertised by sandwich-board men, impersonated by Messrs. A. G. Onslow, George Courteney, Eric Maturin, Daniel McCarthy, H. R. Averell, and Walter Hampden; and the programme and ticket sellers were Misses Marjery, Maude, and Madge Titheradge, Rosalie Toller, Kitty Sparrow, Bottomley, Max Hinton, Daisy Morland, Maud Thornton, Mabel Hewitt, Mrs. Alfred Turner, Miss MacLaren, and Miss Maude Courteney.

Eldorado Palace of Amusement.

The variety profession was again worthily represented, and at the Eldorado Palace a continuous vaudeville entertainment, embracing many important items, was presented, under the direction of Mr. Oswald Stoll. Mr. Fred Trussell was the manager of Eldorado, and grew eloquent in praise of the artists whom he paraded on a platform outside loudly proclaiming that the programme would be contributed to by "the principal artists of the principal bills of the principal halls of the metropolis." Such an inducement could not be resisted, and crowded houses witnessed the two shows provided. Among the entertainers was Mrs. Lewis Waller, who recited with her customary power and expression; Chung Ling Soo gave his sensational juggling performance; and the Zancigs went through their thought-reading séance before a bewildered assembly, appearing, it is understood, no less than ten times. The Gotham Quartet, who travelled especially from Nottingham to assist, made merry in jest and music; the Fratellini Brothers furthered the fun with their ludicrous William Tell episode; Mendel, the blind pianist, demonstrated his powers as a musician and extemporiser, and won loud applause; little Vera Fleming, the wonderful child dancer, excited much admiration; the veteran comedian, J. W. Rowley, had a cordial welcome; Mr. Herbert Shelley was singled out for distinction in his clever costume song; Mr. George Robey had an overwhelming reception; and warm appreciation was won by Miss Sadie Jerome, Mr. Julian Rose, Mr. Albert H. West, Miss Marie Collins, Miss Violet Lorraine, Miss Nita Ediss, Miss Edith Titheradge, Miss Millie Hylton, the Zenary Brothers, Darewski, Victor Niblo's Talking Parrots, Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. Edwin Barwick, the Martineks, Mr. Nelson Keys, Mr. Mortimer, and Miss Gladys Roberts, all of whom were under the superintendence of Mr. Frank Parker, the Hippodrome stage-director. The gentler sex came to the assistance of the cause in the disposal of tickets, which were sold by Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Mrs. Eugene Stratton, Mrs. Joe Elvin, Mrs. G. Lockhart, Mrs. Belle Elmore, Miss Lily Burnand (all of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild), Mrs. Fred Trussell, Miss Dora Fraser, and Miss Millie L. Emden.

Actors' Hat-Trimming Competitions.

A powerful source of attraction was provided in the "Phyllis Broughton Hat-trimming Stakes," in which prominent actors competed. The event was well advertised, with the result that the tent where it took place was twice completely filled. The competitors announced to take part were Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. Farren Soutar, Mr. Sydney Brough, Mr. Frank Lacy, Mr. Charles Lander, Mr. H. Nye Chart, Mr. Charles Angelo, Mr. Aubrey Smith, Mr. Godfrey Turner, Mr. Ambrose Manning, Mr. Horace Lane, Mr. William Spray, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Mr. Henry Lytton, Mr. M. R. Morand, Mr. Horace Mills, Mr. Maurice Farkoa, Mr. Walter Passmore, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. G. P. Huntley, and Mr. Lyn Harding. The competitors took their seats on the platform amid cheers, and, after disposing of numberless pins in their coats, with quite a professional air were soon at work on shapes and trimmings supplied by their fair assistants. The time-limit was twenty minutes, but before that period the hats had assumed fearful and wonderful aspects. Mr. Dan Rolyat exhibited a remarkable taste in colour, and turned out a gorgeous picture hat in which a pink crown was decorated with a huge heliotrope feather and other many-hued adornments, finished off with a green veil; Mr. G. P. Huntley had a quieter taste, and succeeded in manufacturing a neat toque; while Mr. Maurice Farkoa, after working away quietly for some time embroidering the under-brim of a hat, was fain to stop and mop his brow. Mr. Farkoa was eventually declared the winner by Mrs. George Alexander, who acted as judge, prizes falling in order to Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Horace Mills, Mr. Horace Lane, and Mr. Frank Lacy. None seemed more surprised than the winners. The arrangements were carried out with admirable tact and energy by Miss Phyllis Broughton, who marshalled her men in a manner worthy of a military expert, and got them in order in exemplary fashion. Within the tent she ably controlled the competitors, flitting about ministering to their wants with ribbons, flowers and feathers, and maintaining the best of order. The display was among the most popular of the afternoon, and was greatly creditable to Miss Broughton, who had devoted many days to its organisation. At the end of the competition the hats, which were callously dismissed by a lady onlooker in the phrase, "All hideous!" were offered at auction. The venerable appearance of Mr. Fred Wright, sen., in the enclosure where the prize hats were exhibited inspired confidence, and probably had an effect on the sale. Others who assisted at the exhibition were Mr. H. M. Morand, Mr. Arthur Coke, and Mr. J. W. Lethbridge; while the names of ladies selling tickets were Mrs. Ben Webster, Mrs. G. P. Huntley (Miss Eva Kelly), Mrs. Vedrenne, Misses Clara Jecks, Ada Blanche, Lena Leibrant, Lillian Digges, Clarice Lockstone, Daisy Cordell, Stella St. Audrie, Cicely Villiers, Edythe Burnand, Gladys Ivery, Gertrude Glyn, Blanche Glyn, Hilda Stewart, Alice Liebmann, and Delia Mason.

Jarley's Living Waxworks.

A marvellous shillingsworth was provided by Jarley's Living Waxworks, presented under the direction of Mr. Aubrey Smith and Miss Vane Featherstone, neither of whom spared themselves in their work, being loyally assisted by Mr. Dennis Eadie and Mr. H. Nye Chart. Mr. Laurie De Frece as Mrs. Jarley had the task of describing the collection, and admirably did he acquit himself of it. Mr. P. F. Knot was Mr. Jarley, Mr. J. Farren Soutar 'Orace, and Mr. Frank Collins Peter. The figures indulged in extraordinary antics. Geo. Bernard Shaw, represented by Mr. Louis Goodrich, distinguished himself by taking the wreath of laurels from Shakespeare (Mr. Clarence Blakiston) and placing it on his own brow; Winston Churchill (Mr. W. T. Lovell) and Maud Allan (Mr. Bertram Steer), after being refused admission through the gates of the City of Manchester by a comely lady policeman (Miss Victoria Addison), fell on each other's bosom and wept; the "Entente Cordiale" was maintained by Miss Lilias Waldegrave as Britannia and Miss Amy Ravenscroft as La Belle France; the insured domestic found a realistic exponent in Miss Lilie Garde; and the Working Man was justified by Mr. A. Holmes-Gore. Mr. James Welch and Miss Iris Hoey posed as the Babes in the Wood; Miss Pattie Browne impersonated Harry Lauder, Mr. Hubert Willis was Robinson Crusoe, Miss Molly Pearson Lady Macbeth, Mr. Sidney Paxton a humorous jockey, Miss Decima Moore a tuneful Little Bo-Peep, and Mr. Ernest Mainwaring a diverting Little Jack Horner; while at the end Miss Pollie Emery created a diversion as an intruding suffragette. Good service was done by Miss Migon Clifford as pianist. Tickets for the waxworks were sold by Misses Ethel Matthews, Lena Armfield, Nannie Bennett, Joy Chatwin, Mona Harrison, Lucy Roche, and Gisella Darewski.

Professor Huntlirina Wright.

Visitors to the Lecture Tent were treated to a discourse by Professor Huntlirina Wright upon "The Animal Man, by one who tamed him," "Manophobia; or, Who Bit Her?" "Woman's Position To-day, and Who Put Her There," and "The Superior Sex; or, Who Told Him So?" being an exposé of the creature man. The lecture, delivered in Mr. Wright's funniest fashion, created uncontrollable merriment, which was increased when Mr. George Silver, as a mere man, interrupted the speaker, and insisted on taking part in the proceedings on the platform. Never has a piece of spoof been more complete. So realistic was the dispute maintained that on one occasion three or four gentlemen in the audience, fearing a breach of the peace was actually being committed, stepped forward, with the object of ejecting the intruder. Tickets for the lecture were sold by Misses Kitty Bishop, Adelina Bourne, Alice Delmar, Ethel Harper, Eileen Orby, and Mabilia Daniell, and Mr. Leslie Carter and Mr. Spencer Trevor acted as doorsmen.

Old English Songs and Games.

In the conservatory English folk songs, morris dances, and games were given by boys and girls of the Esperance Clubs. The lads in top hats and white shirts, and the girls in print frocks, furnished a picturesque spectacle, and sang old folk songs and danced to the delight of all. The performance was under the direction of Miss Mary Neal and Mr. Herbert Macilwaine, and the acting-manager was Mr. Charles Cruickshanks.

The Gipsy Encampment.

A Gipsy Encampment, under the direction of Mrs. Raleigh, had for its principal figures Miss Edna May and Mr. Harry Fragson, and drew many patrons desirous of indulging in cocoanut shies and other fun of the fair. Among the attractions of the enclosure was "a real live baby born in the encampment." Assistants at the fair were Misses Eily Maylon, Daisy Thimm, Irma Foldi, Ina Cameron, Margaret Yarde, Alice Gordon, M. Polak, Gladys Archbutt, Mrs. Sidney Dark; and Messrs. Sydney Ellison, John Tresahar, Sydney Grahame, C. Parry, Masters Philip Tonge and Cecil F. Hall. Fortunes were told by Mrs. Raleigh, also made up faithfully as a member of the clan, the great tenor Caruso paying a guinea to have his fate predicted. Mr. Fred Grove, who adopted a realistic Romany rig-out, and was most cleverly made up with velveteen corduroys, stained face, and curly wig, presided at the cocoanut shies, which did a roaring trade. He secured the attention of the onlookers by many and varied devices, even going to the lengths of a lecture on phrenology, using for his subject a cocoanut, which he described as an emblem on that occasion of the three virtues, Faith, Hope, and Charity—hope in the prospect of an engagement, faith in the manager paying his salaries, and charity in the benevolent impulses of his audience. Many celebrities tried their hand with more or less success at the roll-bowl-and-pitch, the great tenor Caruso being among the number.. Nor did the sale of cocoanuts cease after the game was over, for one stalwart Romany—we believe it was Mr. C. Parry—adopted the tactics of the street merchant, and coming outside the enclosure with his sack of cocoanuts, cunningly attracted the attention of the crowd. Surreptitiously placing a nut under his hat on the ground, he would invite the attention of his hearers to a marvellous trick of conjuring, and after executing a few passes would remove the hat and reveal the cocoanut, which he would offer at the modest sum of threepence. By this means he disposed of a sackful of cocoanuts, the ladies purchasing them eagerly and handing them to their gentlemen friends, whose efforts to dispose of the awkward purchase in pockets or beneath frock coat were very comical.

Refreshments and Other Commodities.

The refreshment buffets and tents devoted to the sale of various commodities were numerous, and eager customers were lured therein by the presence of distinguished dispensers. A thriving trade in cigars and cigarettes was driven by Miss Marie Löhr, looking very sweet in white, and Miss Constance Hyem, attired in similarly-becoming costume. They were assisted by Misses Valli-Valli, Jessie Rose, Mary Mollison, Dora Fellowes, Vera Coburne, Rose Laing, Katie Vesey, Edna Arnold, Lulu Valli, Marjorie Michie, Patty Wells, and Mrs. Aimes, the duties of acting-manager being ably discharged by Mr. A. E. Mathews. An interesting feature of this tent was a large doll dressed by Miss Ellen Terry, which reposed in its white silken robe at the entrance. It was in the charge of Miss Marion Terry, who graciously retailed tickets at 1s. The doll thus realised some £10, and was ultimately raffled.

Graced by the presence of many beauties of the stage, the signed photograph and picture post-card stall, which was under the direction of Miss Carlotta Addison, Miss Compton, and Mrs. Charles Gay, drew overwhelming crowds. In the list of photo-sellers were Misses Adrienne Augarde, Crissy Bell, Lilian Burns, Madge Crichton, Cecilia Cavendish, Alice Crawford, Gladys Cooper, Lily Elsie, Evie Greene, Mabel Green, F. Glossop-Harris, Isabel Jay, Mabel Love, Ida Lytton, Netta Lynde, Gertie Millar, Helena Millais, Denise Orme, Louie Pounds, Mabel Russell, Nina Sevening, Florence Smithson, Gertrude Tate, Daisie Williams, and Elaine Inescort, with Mr. C. Milne Gay as acting-manager.

Misses Zena and Phyllis Dare had many admirers and many customers at the chocolate tent, and derived valuable assistance from Mrs. Walter Abrahams, Mrs. Arthur Faber, Misses Kathleen Shaw, Gwenda Villiers, Sylvia Morris, Gladys Ben Davies, Doris Keyzor, little Vera Le Fleming, Anita Edis, Margaret Cooper, Dora Levis, and Master Philip Tonge. There was a brave array of acting-managers, the names set down being Messrs. Charles Bishop, Hubert Blount, William Devereux, Jack Harrison, Lennox Pawle, E. H. Bull, M. V. Leveaux, Frank Willard, and Walter Maxwell.

The Stars and Stripes fluttered bravely over the American Bar for the sale of iced drinks, whereon a constant raid was made. Miss Irene Vanbrugh presided, and was assisted by Misses Victoria Addison, Muriel Beaumont, Sybil Carlisle, Pamela Gaythorne, Margaret Halstan, Eva Killick, Jean Stirling Mackinlay, and Gladys Storey.

Strawberries and cream were dispensed with appropriate sweetness under the direction of Miss Winifred Emery and Miss Lillian Braithwaite, who had loyal aid from Misses Rosalie Toller, Nell Toller, Maud Cressell, Dora Barton, Constance Collier, Mabel Adair, Margaret Bussé, Pamela Hope, Beatrice Ferrar, Dorothy Scott, Evelyn Beaumont, Freda Watson, Esmé Hubbard, Iris Hawkins, Viola Compton, May Congdon, Beatrix de Burgh, Dorothy Fane, Dolly Holmes-Gore, Marjorie Maude, Joyce Lawrence, and Maidie Andrews. Officiating as acting-managers were Messrs. Edward Rigby, Owen Nares, Eric Maturin, R. Averell, and Cecil Broughton.

The Ice-cream Tent, under the direction of Mrs. Mangles, received liberal patronage, the grateful and cooling concoction being handed out by Misses Evelyn Millard, Ruth Maitland, Gladys Erskine, Winifred Fraser, Beatrice and Jessie Ferrar, Ethel Erskine, May Chevalier, Madge Titheradge, Elaine Smith, and Amy Brandon Thomas, with Messrs. G. Saville and Myddleton Evans as acting-managers.

For afternoon tea one sought the tent behind the conservatory, where Mrs. C. Hayden Coffin and Miss Amy Coleman officiated, Captain Preston undertaking the duties of acting-manager.

Side-shows and Music.

Side-shows were extensively patronised. Character reading from the face by Professor Annie I. Oppenheim, F.B.P.S., was very popular; and palmistry by Miss Julie Critten was also practised. The Imperial Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Arthur Crudge, played a large and comprehensive selection; and the Hampstead Mandoline Orchestra, under the conductorship of Miss Keevil, also provided music.

The Business Department.

The less agreeable and more arduous work of the ticket and cash department was carried out in the Secretaries' Tent, where Miss May Warley, hon. secretary to the fête, did yeoman service, assisted by Messrs. A. J. Barr, A. A. Felton, J. G. Gowan, W. W. Heard, Harold E. Perrin, A. J. Lindsay Simpson, J. Stewart Mallam, F.C.A., Fred J. Turner, R. Barlow Tyler, A.C.A., and Broughton Young. Badges were distributed by Miss Cicely Richards. Messrs. Andrew W. Barr and Co., it should be added, kindly consented to audit the garden party accounts.

The whole function was a marvel of organisation, and resulted in a record success, upon which the executive of the Fund and its hon. secretary (Mr. A. J. Austin) cannot be too highly congratulated.

The number of visitors, including members of the Botanic Society, was approximately 9,000, and the receipts are roughly estimated to total about £2,340.

The estimated takings at the various booths were as follows:—

Theatre Royal, about	£98	0	0
Eldorado	87	4	6
Jarley's Waxworks	77	15	6
Mr. G. P. Huntley Wright's Lecture	67	0	0
The Gipsy Encampment	63	0	0
The Hat Trimming Competition..	70	0	0
Kiosk of Miss Ellen Terry's Doll	60	0	0
Esperance Entertainment	20	0	0

At the hour of 9.15, when the beautiful gardens were practically deserted, the devoted co-workers, Miss Mary Warley and Mr. A. J. Austin, could have been seen congratulating each other on a great success. Twenty minutes later Mr. Austin, accompanied by Mr. E. Barlow Tyler and a detective (the last to leave the grounds), drove away in a cab to the London and County Bank, Ltd., where special arrangements had been made for receiving the cash.

The organisation was perfect, owing chiefly to the fact that Mr. Bryant Sowerby, the Secretary of the Royal Botanic Society, gave Mr. Austin an early opportunity of erecting the beautiful tents, and rendered the utmost service in all the arrangements, which were absolutely complete on Monday evening.

"THE WATER WITCH," a new comic opera, the scene of which is laid among the picturesque Fiords of Norway, is the work of Mr. Oswald Brand, who has written the book and lyrics, the music being composed by Mr. Frank Bradsell. The piece is ready, and will be produced this autumn. Mr. Brand, we regret to learn, is still an invalid.

LIONEL BROUGH AT SOUTHEND.

At the Pier Pavilion, Southend, this week Mr. Lionel Brough has been providing a triple bill each evening, and, with Mr. Tom Craven's assistance, has presented a highly entertaining and humorous programme. Mr. Lionel Brough is so deeply respected and universally admired that his appearance in Southend was certain to be an occasion of excitement and interest, especially as he has been ingeniously provided with opportunities of introducing his best points to the admiring audiences at the popular watering-place. The opening of his summer tour to the seaside resorts, accompanied by Mr. Tom Craven and a capital company, was an immense success. The Lady in Red, the opening sketch, is excellently portrayed, and evokes hearty laughter. Then follows Tom Craven's comedy duologue entitled

"THE YARN-SPINNER."

Mr. Yapper ..... MR. LIONEL BROUGH
Mrs. Cackle ..... MISS MARY BROUGH

In The Yarn-Spinner Mr. Craven has succeeded in weaving a brief but interesting story in which Mr. Brough is enabled to interpolate many of his choicest stories. Mr. Yapper, who poses as an actor-manager, is looking about for lodgings, and finally sees something which will, apparently, suit him in Kennington-road, at a house kept by Mrs. Cackle. His appearance at the door fills that old lady with pleasurable excitement, and she asks him into her snug little parlour, and endeavours to acquaint him with her terms. He interrupts her with many little anecdotes of which something she says or does reminds him. Several attempts to get to business are made by the lady, but the anecdotes follow so rapidly that little progress is made; and, finally, after Mr. Yapper has helped himself to the good things on the old lady's table and has endeavoured to borrow money of her, she orders him out of the house. He is just about to go when he "is reminded" of another story, this time one of some importance. Mr. Yapper hands Mrs. Cackle a dirty old newspaper; and, reading a paragraph headed "A Strange Will," she finds that her would-be lodger is looking for a lady who, years ago, played the part of principal boy under the name of Laura Banana. She fetches a dilapidated poster with her picture, as she then appeared, on it, and exclaims, "I am the one you are looking for." Under the will the whole of the fortune is divided between Laura and the one who finds her. Together they agree to share life's joys and sorrows, and proposals on each side are made and accepted.

Mr. Lionel Brough had found a very sympathetic audience, and his many "yarns" were listened to with evident pleasure, and greeted with enthusiastic applause. Miss Brough made an ideal lodging-house keeper, her hopes of securing a good lodger and her wily tricks to induce him to accept her terms being made very amusing. In the final scene Miss Brough's love-making was excellent. The duologue is unique in many ways, and should have a very successful run.

The concluding item was the celebrated comedy in two acts by H. T. Craven entitled

"MILKY WHITE."

Daniel White ..... MR. TOM CRAVEN
Dick Duggs ..... MR. STEPHEN ADESON
Archibald Good ..... MR. JACKSON WILCOX
Rude Boy ..... MASTER CHERRY
Mrs. Sadrip ..... MISS MARY BROUGH
Annie White ..... MISS ISABEL COLLIER

Milky White made a thoroughly enjoyable item and gave evident pleasure. Mr. Tom Craven as Daniel White made himself very popular by a clever and mirth-provoking impersonation, and was eminently well suited. Mr. Stephen Adeson was a good exponent of the simple cowboy Dick Duggs; Mr. Jackson Wilcox ably sustained the rôle of Archibald Good; Miss Mary Brough gave a talented representation of Mrs. Sadrip; and Miss Isabel Collier as Annie White won applause by a successful delineation.

"I SENT a play to a manager," writes Dr. Dabbs in the Daily Mail, "and with it a letter of introduction from so prominent a man of letters that it was actually acknowledged and a pledge was given to read the play. Some months later, no decision having been given, I judged it advisable to jog the manager's memory. A profuse apology was sent. 'It should be read at once.' Within ten days the play was returned to me with all the courtesy of postal registration. An accompanying letter stated 'that it had been carefully considered, but the dénouement was so extravagant that it could not possibly be accepted; that in consequence of the high literary introduction with which I had come the manager's opinion had been confirmed by the further opinion of his usual literary advisers.' I replied: 'I am impressed by this instance of the clarified vision of the clairvoyant. Knowing a little of the readers of plays, I had carefully gummed together the pages in which the dénouement occurs; they are still adhesively connected.'"

"IT is a little the fashion," writes Mr. E. A. Baughan in the Daily News, "to make light of M. Coquelin's great gifts, and he alone is to blame for this. Year by year since he has been a star actor he has emphasised his methods until they have become rather obvious. But, although a long list might be made of his mannerisms, he remains a great actor. Moreover, some of his mannerisms are not quite understood by those who criticise him. I refer particularly to his habit of playing to the audience. He takes it into his confidence in a way which has quite gone out of fashion. But in most of the plays in which he acts these asides, expressed by gesture as well as by words, are required. In old comedy, as Charles Lamb pointed out long ago, the actor had often to play one part to the audience and another to the characters on the stage. That is how all the big comic actors made their reputations."

"LIFE, serious life, on the stage is not asked for," writes Mr. B. W. Findon in the Advertiser. "No one wants it, and however desirous a manager may be to hold the glass of fashion up to nature, he cannot risk his all in order to please the least remunerative section of the public. When one takes into consideration these elements in the drama of the day, is it fair to demand of the playwright a drama which will merely give him fame and produce little else? The dramatist would like to write a piece that would reflect the spirit of the age. He would give his soul to produce a drama which might go down to posterity as the mirror of his generation. But who will take his work? Where is the public that will support the theatrical manager by filling his house night after night, and providing him with the wherewithal to carry on what has become one of the most expensive commercial undertakings in an age that is not altogether free from the charge of reckless speculation?"

THE BALLET IN BRITAIN.

When the ballet of action, says Dutton Cook, did make its appearance in England, it was promptly designated a pantomime, and so has become confused with the distinct kind of performances still presented under that name at our larger theatres at Christmas-time. "When one company is too hard for another," writes Cibber, "the lower in reputation has always been forced to exhibit some new-fangled foppery to draw the multitude after them"; which is, however, only a way of saying that managers need the stimulus of opposition to induce them to provide new entertainments. In 1721 there was great rivalry between Drury Lane—Cibber being one of its managers—and the theatre then newly erected in Lincoln's Inn Fields. Of the "new-fangled foppery," which it now became necessary for the one theatre to resort to as a weapon of offence against its rival, singing and dancing had been effectual instances. But singing was not to be thought of under the circumstances; as Cibber writes: "At the time I am speaking of, our English music had been so discountenanced since the taste of Italian operas prevailed, that it was to no purpose to pretend to it. Dancing, therefore, was now the only weight in the opposite scale, and as the new theatres sometimes found their account in it, it could not be safe for us wholly to neglect it. To give even dancing, therefore, some improvement, and to make it something more than motion without meaning, the fable of Mars and Venus was formed into a connected presentation of dances in character, wherein the passions were so happily expressed, and the whole story so intelligibly told by a mute narrative of gesture only, that even thinking spectators allowed it both a pleasing and a rational entertainment." This was certainly a ballet of action, and it is remarkable that the production involved but a small outlay. The managers, distrusting its reception, did not venture "to decorate it with any extraordinary expense of scenes or habits." Great success, however, attended the performance, and from it is to be dated the establishment both of ballet and pantomime upon our stage. "From this original hint, then, but every way unequal to it, sprang forth that succession of monstrous medleys that have so long infested the stage, and which arose upon one another alternately at both houses, outvying in expense, like contending bribes on both sides at an election, to secure a majority of the multitude." Cibber, indeed, waxes very wrath over the matter, and appears to desire that lawful authority should "interpose to put down these poetical drams, these gin-shops of the stage, that intoxicate its auditors and dishonour their understanding with a levity for which I want a name." But Cibber's anger is in truth very much that of a manager vying with the liberal outlay of a rival, and so forced to expend large sums in entertainments.

At an earlier date ballet-dancers had been imported from France. Some time about 1704 the great Mr. Betterton and his company, suffering from insufficient patronage at the theatre in Lincoln's Inn Fields, had been reduced to resort to "foreign novelties." Three of the most famous dancers of the French opera, L'Abbée, Balon, and Mlle. Subligny, were "at several times brought over at extraordinary rates to revive that sickly appetite which plain sense and nature had satiated. In Paris, indeed, the ballet was very securely instituted. The Académie Royale de Musique et de Danse had been founded in 1669, and from that date the ballet, as an entertainment of dancing only, may be said to have come into being. There had been earlier ballets, but these were of the nature of old English masques, and consisted of songs and spoken dialogues, in addition to dances; the term ballet, it need hardly be explained, being derived from the Italian ballata, the parent of our own ballad. At first the French Opera or Academy suffered from the smallness of its troop; vocalists could be obtained from the church choirs, but for the ballet it was hard to find recruits; and sometimes young boys were pressed into the service, and constrained to personate nymphs, dryads, and shepherdesses—"Danseurs," writes a French historian of the Opera, "qui sous un masque et des vêtements féminins, les formes arrondies par l'art et le coton, n'excitaient qu'un enthousiasme modéré." At Court there was no lack of dancers of the gentler sex, however, and at Court the ballet prospered greatly. A ballet performed in 1681 was at any rate strongly cast, since there appeared among the dancers Mme. la Dauphine, the Princesse de Conti, and Mlle. de Nantes, supported by the Dauphin, the Prince de Conti, and the Duc de Vermandois; but these distinguished personages probably sang more than they danced. Louis XIV. frequently figured in ballets, one of his favourite characters being the Sun in Flora, said to be the eighteenth ballet in which he had played a part. Lulli, the composer, director of the Opera, paid great attention to the ballet, occasionally appearing as a dancer; as a singer and comic actor he had already acquired fame. To Lulli has been attributed the introduction of rapid dancing, in opposition to the solemn and deliberate steps favoured by the Court during the early part of the reign of Louis XIV. It may be added that the King held out a measure of encouragement to such of his nobility and courtiers as were disposed to follow his example and exhibit upon the scene. "It is our pleasure," he says in the patent granted to the Abbé Perrin, the first director of the French Opera, 1669, "that all gentlemen and ladies may sing in the said pieces and representations of our Royal Academy, without being considered on that account to derogate from their letters of nobility or from their privileges, rights, and immunities." The dramatic ballet, or ballet of action, is said to have been invented by the Duchesse du Maine, whose theatrical entertainments at Sceaux rivalled the festivities of Versailles, and obtained the preference of many nobles of the Court. The lady, however, unfortunately meddled with the Spanish conspiracy—she should have confined herself to the plots of ballets—and forthwith the establishment at Sceaux was broken up. In this way Mouret, her musical director, who also composed several operas and ballets for the Academy, suffered severe loss; eventually he went mad, and died in the lunatic asylum at Charenton.

Mlle. de Subligny came to England armed with letters of introduction from Thiriot and the Abbé Dubois to John Locke, of all people! Locke probably was not very sympathetic in regard to the lady's art, yet respect for his friends led him to bestow upon her due civility and attention; according to Fontenelle, he constituted himself her homme d'affaires. Another dancer, Mlle. Sallé, whose charms and graces Voltaire had celebrated in verse, appeared in London with letters of introduction from Fontenelle to Montesquieu, then Ambassador at the Court of St. James's. It is clear that the ballet-dancers were becoming personages of real importance.

Mlle. Sallé, it seems, achieved extraordinary success in the year 1734 at Covent Garden Theatre, which a French journal of theat date describes curiously as the Théâtre du Commun Jardin. The lady was an admirable dancer, and brought with her complete dramatic ballets, the characters in which were appropriately dressed according to the time and place of the story they related, for Mlle. Sallé was a reformer in the matter of stage costumes. She discarded paniers and hoops and false hair. As Galatea in a ballet upon the story of Pygmalion, she wore nothing, we are told, "in addition to her bodice and under petticoats, but a simple robe of muslin draped after the manner of a Greek statue." She won great applause, too, by her performance of Ariadne in a ballet called Bacchus and Ariadne, the beauty of her dances, attitudes, and gestures, and her skill in depicting by movements without words, grief, anger, love, and despair, obtaining the warmest approval.

AN ABBE'S CRITIQUE.

The Act or 1737 for licensing plays, playhouses, and players, and legalising the power the Lord Chamberlain had long been accustomed to exercise, although readily passed by both Houses of Parliament, gave great offence to the public, says Dutton Cook in "A Book of the Play." The Abbé Le Blanc, who was visiting England at this period, describes the new law as provoking a "universal murmur in the nation."

The Act was passed in June, when the patent theatres, according to custom, were closed for the summer. Some two months after their reopening in the autumn all dramatic representations were suspended for six weeks, in consequence of the death of Queen Caroline. In January was presented at Covent Garden A Nest of Plays, as the author, one Hildebrand Jacob, described his production: a combination of three short plays, each consisting of one act only, entitled respectively, The Prodigal Reformed, Happy Constancy, and The Trial of Conjugal Love. The performance met with a very unfavourable reception. The author attributed the ill success of his work to its being the first play licensed by the authority of the Lord Chamberlain under the new Bill, many spectators having predetermined to silence, under any circumstances, "the first fruits of that Act of Parliament." The Abbé Le Blanc, who was present on the occasion, writes:—"The best play in the world would not have succeeded that night. There was a disposition to damn whatever might appear. The farce in question was damned, indeed, without the least compassion. Nor was that all, for the actors were driven off the stage, and happy was it for the author that he did not fall in to the hands of this furious assembly." And the Abbé proceeds to explain that the originators of this disturbance were not "schoolboys, apprentices, clerks, or mechanics," but lawyers, "a body of gentlemen perhaps less honoured, but certainly more feared here than they are in France," who, "from living in colleges (Inns of Court), and from conversing always with one another, mutually preserve a spirit of independency through the body, and with great ease form cabals. . . At Paris the cabals of the pit are only among young fellows, whose years may excuse their folly, or persons of the meanest education and stamp; here they are the fruit of deliberation in a very grave body of people, who are not less formidable to the minister in place than to the theatrical writers." But the Abbé relates that on a subsequent occasion, when another new play having been announced, he had looked for further disturbance, the judicious dramatist of the night succeeded in calming the pit by administering in his prologue a double dose of incense to their vanity. "Half-an-hour before the play was to begin the spectators gave notice of their dispositions by frightful hisses and outcries, equal, perhaps, to what were ever heard at a Roman amphitheatre." The author, however, having in part tamed this wild audience by his flattery, secured ultimately its absolute favour by humouring its prejudices after the grossest fashion. He brought upon the stage a figure "with black eyebrows, a ribbon of an ell long under his chin, a bag-peruke immoderately powdered, and his nose all bedaubed with snuff. What Englishman could not know a Frenchman by this ridiculous figure?" The Frenchman was presently shown to be, for all the lace down every seam of his coat, nothing but a cook, and then followed severe satire and criticism upon the manners and customs of France." "The excellences and virtues of English beef were extolled, and the author maintained that it was owing to the qualities of its juice that the English were so courageous and had such a solidity of understanding, which raised them above all the nations in Europe; he preferred the noble old English pudding beyond all the finest ragouts that ever were invented by the greatest geniuses that France ever produced." These "ingenious strokes" were loudly applauded by the audience, it seems, who, in their delight at the abuse lavished upon the French, forgot that they came to condemn the play and to uphold the ancient liberties of the stage. From that time forward, the Abbé states, "the law was executed without the least trouble; all the plays since have been quietly heard, and either succeeded or not according to their merits."

When Garrick visited Paris he declined to be introduced to the Abbé Le Blanc, "on account of the irreverence with which he had treated Shakespeare." There can, indeed, be no doubt that the Abbé, although he wrote amusing letters, was a very prejudiced person, and his evidence and opinions touching the English stage must be received with caution. So far as can be ascertained, especially by study of the "History of the Stage" (compiled by that industrious clergyman, Mr. Genest, from the playbills in the British Museum), but few new plays were produced in the course of the season immediately following the passing of the Licensing Act; certainly no new play can be found answering the description furnished by the Abbé with due regard to the period he has fixed for its production. Possibly he referred to the Beaux' Strategem, in which appear a French officer and an Irish-French priest, and which was certainly represented some few nights after the condemnation of Mr. Jacob's Nest of Plays. Farquhar's comedy was then thirty years old, however. Nor has the Abbé done full justice to the public opposition offered to the Licensing Act. At the Haymarket Theatre a serious riot occurred in October, 1738, fifteen months after the passing of the measure. Closed against the English actors the theatre was opened by a French company, armed with a licence from the Lord Chamberlain. A comedy, called L'Embarras de Richesses, was announced for representation "by authority." The house was crowded immediately after the opening of the doors. But the audience soon gave evidence of their sentiments by singing in chorus, "The Roast Beef of Old England." Deveil, one of the Justices of the Peace for Westminster, who was present, declared the proceedings to be riotous, and announced his intention to maintain the King's authority. He stated, further, that it was the King's command that the play should be acted, and that all offenders would be immediately secured by the guards in waiting. In opposition to the magistrate it was maintained "that the audience had a legal right to show their dislike to any play or actor; that the judicature of the pit had been acquiesced in, time immemorial; and as the present set of actors were to take their fate from the public, they were free to receive them as they pleased." When the curtain drew up the actors were discovered standing between two files of grenadiers, with their bayonets fixed and resting on their firelocks. This seeming endeavour to secure the success of French acting by the aid of British bayonets still more infuriated the audience. Even Justice Deveil thought it prudent to order the withdrawal of the military. The actors attempted to speak, but their voices were overborne by hisses, groans, and "not only catcalls, but all the various portable instruments that could make a disagreeable noise." A dance was next essayed; but even this had been provided against: showers of peas descended upon the stage, and "made capering very unsafe." The French and Spanish Ambassadors, with their ladies, who had occupied the stage-box, now withdrew, only to be insulted outside the theatre by the mob, who had cut the traces of their carriages. The curtain at last fell, and the attempt to present French plays at the Haymarket was abandoned, "the public being justly indignant that whilst an arbitrary Act suppressed native talent, foreign adventurers should be patronised and encouraged." It must be said, however, that the French actors suffered for sins not their own, and that the wrath of the public did not really reach the Lord Chamberlain, or effect any change in the Licensing Act.

AN OLD PLAYGOER'S SCRAP-BOOK.

"In the history of the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Birmingham, 1866," says Mr. T. Edgar Pemberton in his local retrospect of the Birmingham Theatres, "was an eventful and somewhat troubled year. Mr. Swanborough having given up its control, the property was purchased by Mr. James Rodgers, but as he was, owing to other engagements, unable to immediately take in hand the reins of management, he sub-let it for a while to a Mrs. Macready, or, as Mr. Rodgers has himself put it, 'to a woman calling herself Mrs. Macready, and her husband.' This lady was a strange being, who was fond of acting Shylock, and she apparently became so attached to the Birmingham boards that when Mr. Rodgers wished to take possession of his theatre she most strongly resented it. To quote Mr. Rodgers again: 'I went down,' he has said, 'to the theatre one night, on my return from another engagement, and found the stage-door guarded by the husband of this Mrs. Macready and a gang of the very vilest Birmingham roughs, armed with cudgels, and in some cases with axes. I made a rush at them, covering my face with my arms, forced my way through, got at the principal, exclaiming, "You scoundrel," and pummelled him about the face as hard as I could. The rest, seeing that their leader was getting the worst of it, bolted in all directions, and I was left in sole possession, and able at last to enter on my property.' Such was the dramatic part in which Mr. Rodgers first appeared in the theatre which he has for so many years so successfully and creditably managed. His first pantomime was called Lalla Rookh. For such a purpose the subject is a bad one, and though it was well acted by Miss Clara Dillon, Mr. Ellerton, Mr. J. B. Dale, and the other members of the new company, it cannot, judged by the light of what Mr. Rodgers gave afterwards in the way of Christmas entertainment, be regarded as a conspicuous success. The companion pantomime at the Royal—(from the familiar pen of Mr. Charles Millward, who for many years supplied the 'books' at that house)—was Aladdin. Mr. Harry Beckett played the Widow Chow-Chow, Mr. Joseph Eldred was the Emperor of China, Mr. John Barton was the Vizier, Miss Lizzie Willmore, Aladdin; Miss Lucy Raymond, Princess Badroulbadour; and Mr. George Rignold (destined later on to appear on the same boards as the best Henry V. the modern stage has seen) was content to appear in a character bearing the undignified name of Ka-Foo-Zee-Lum.

"During the 1867 season Sothern appeared at the Royal in two new pieces. Neither of them, however, added to his fame, and both A Wild Goose and A Wife Well Won, in which he respectively figured as Robert Devlin and Albert Bressange, must be added to the long, long list of theatrical failures. In the last-named piece he played the fancifully-conceived part of a young Frenchman, who, in some odd manner, comes in for a legacy of three pairs of fairy-endowed 'lucky breeches,' coloured respectively white, red, and blue; but the idea was not strong enough for the three acts which it had to support, and it accordingly fell flat. These two pieces, however—A Wild Goose and A Wife Well Won—did Birmingham playgoers, and as far as that goes, Birmingham folk at large, a good turn, for they introduced them to (then a girl in her teens) Miss Madge Robertson. Yes, whether as Madge Robertson or Mrs. Kendal, this most delightful of actresses has been a good friend to Birmingham. Year by year giving us wholesome and pleasant amusement, and frequently placing her unrivalled talents at the service of our charities, we have good reason to bless the day that first made her known to us. Does anyone, I wonder, remember with me how sweet she was in A Wife Well Won? Hers was, practically, the only woman's part in the piece, and she played it with a charm that was absolutely irresistible. From that night forward her complete Birmingham success was a thing assured.

"Mrs. Kendal, who, like all clever women, is endowed with a keen sense of humour, has some amusing things to tell about the performance here of these two pieces. In A Wild Goose, Sothern, who has been not inaptly described as 'a bundle of nerves,' had in the last act to shoot someone, and (carrying out the tradition of stage fire-arms) the pistol on one particular night failed to go off. Half mad with dismay and mortification, Sothern rushed at the lady who was to be his victim, and despatched her 'with his pen-knife!' Again, when A Wife Well Won was being played, Sothern, who at that time was almost painfully thin, lent, out of sheer good nature, a costly, heavily-padded silk coat that he had had made, to another actor—Mr. Sefton—to play a certain scene in. Mr. Sefton, unfortunately, failed to return it at the right moment, and when his turn came poor Sothern had to go on without any coat at all.

"Other actresses besides Miss Madge Robertson made their mark at the Royal during this season. Miss Rachel Sanger, previously and subsequently best known as a burlesque actress, appeared and made a most favourable impression in such serious parts as Ophelia and Desdemona. Says my scrap-book: 'In every character she has essayed, Miss Sanger has displayed intelligence, and power, and grace. She may never be a great tragédienne, but she is already far beyond many of her contemporaries, and has displayed singular versatility and power.' Miss Sanger was engaged to support Mr. Allerton, an earnest but much too ambitious gentleman, who, later on, made a terrible fiasco at the Lyceum. Concerning Mlle. Beatrice, who appeared in a variety of parts, and about whom I shall have more to say by-and-by, the same authority truthfully says: 'In her acting the greatest triumph of all art is reached, for the art conceals itself, and it is nature only that is set before the spectator. No one thinks of the actress, but only of that which is acted. It is not Mlle. Beatrice at all, but only a woman who has loved not wisely but too well; or a queen whose sorrows have washed our crimes; or a mother longing for love, her own by right, and almost within her grasp, but attainable not yet. It is such things as these that the spectator sees as he sits entranced; he only thinks of the actress when the fall of the curtain, or the bungling of some members of the company, calls him back to reality, and dispels the illusion.'

"Another memory of this year is the appearance of that admirable comedian, Mr. John Clarke—'Lame Clarke' as, owing to an unfortunate accident, he was familiarly called—in Mr. George Honey's part of Eccles in Caste, and his own original character of Hugh Chalcote in Ours. Playgoers, who are only familiar with Mr. Bancroft's impersonation of Chalcote, will find it difficult to believe that the part was originally played—and admirably played too—by a low comedian. The Royal pantomime of 1867-68 was on the subject of Robinson Crusoe. Mr. Harry Paulton, who succeeded Mr. Harry Beckett as principal low comedian at the theatre, played the part of Will Atkins in that peculiar vein of humour that is sometimes termed 'dry'; Mr. Lauri (as his name guarantees) impersonated Friday in the legitimate spirit of pantomime, and Miss Rose Massey (who subsequently made a success with poor Harry Montague at the Globe), and, of course, Mr. John Barton, were in the cast.

"An early experience at the Prince of Wales was the performance of a melodrama by Mr. T. W. Robertson—then in the very zenith of his justly earned fame—entitled Shadow Tree Shaft. According to the playbills this should have made a local hit, for, to quote from them, 'The scene is laid in South Staffordshire, and will give some wonderful pictures of a miner's life. The above piece will be brought forward under the personal superintendence and direction of the author, with every new scene."

THE ART OF ACTING.

The born actor, says Mr. A. B. Walkley in an article on the above subject in "Drama and Life," is the very opposite of the recluse, the sufferer from agoraphobia. The very idea of him involves the idea of spectators and listeners; like the orator and the dandy, he is of those who, in Buffon's phrase, "parlent au corps par le corps." You cannot imagine Crusoe acting on his island. It was not until Friday appeared, and fell to conveying his feelings in dumb-show, that acting began. Evidently, again, the histrionic temperament must be one peculiarly susceptible to external appearances. An actor must be impressed by the outward and visible signs of things rather than by the things themselves. Here, perhaps, is a reason why acting comes more naturally to women than to men. A man with a turn for reading is by nature a "solitary," which, as we have just seen, the born actor is not. No more, for that matter, is the born playgoer. Your typical playgoer is not a cloistered student. He belongs ex hypothesi to the class which is "fond of company"; he would not, even if he could, imitate Macaulay by reading Plato with his feet on the fender; he must have bustle, the sense of human kinship brought home to him by sitting elbow to elbow with his neighbour; he desires to see and be seen. (Parenthetically, I may suggest that this is why dramatic criticism finds its real public of readers among neither players nor playgoers, but the people who, in Pascal's phrase, "sit still in their parlours.")

This question of temperament is interesting enough to warrant closer examination. Every stage character consists of two parts, one determinate (call it a), indicated by the text, the stage directions, and nothing else, the other (x), vague and varying, representing the rest of the character, as it is behind the scenes and was before the curtain went up. The reader of the play forms a mental image of x by deductions from a, and so gets his conception of the whole character $a + x$. I may say in passing that the vice of academic criticism of Shakespeare in this country, as in Germany, is to discuss $a + x$ as an actual person, forgetting or ignoring that a is the only part of the character for which we have the poet's warranty, and that x is merely our own surmise. But that is "another story." The point here is that, while we all have to give a value to x, we none of us give the same value, since no two imaginations coincide. That is why the student of Shakespeare is always disconcerted when first he sees a favourite play either illustrated in a picture or performed on the stage. This, he says, is all very well, but it is not my Romeo or my Cordelia. Now the actor's business with a is comparatively simple. He has to speak the words and do the things set down for him. It is with x that his real difficulties begin; for in place of our vague, floating notion of the character as a whole he has to offer us his own real person and temperament. Here the acting side of him is in the long run far less important than what the man naturally is. For it is, of course, flagrantly untrue, though often spoken of as true, that an actor can divest himself of his own personality and put on the personality of someone else. Just as an author is always really identical with his work ("for, after all," as Walter Bagehot said, "we know that authors don't keep tame steam-engines to write their books"), so the actor's histrionic is always part and parcel of his real, everyday self. You may so paint wrinkles on your brow, so modulate your voice and order your bearing as to pass, behind the footlights, for a mad old King of Britain, but the fact remains that you are Mr. Brown, a taxpayer of to-day, with an address in the London Postal Directory, and a pretty taste in claret and cigars. This fact will for ever prevent you from absolutely realising x. It may even do so in some obvious physical way ("His weak, white, genteel hands, and the shape of his stomach," said Tolstoy, on his visit to Siegfried, "betrayed the actor"). But, even though your disguise be perfect, the fact that the soul within you is not the soul of Lear—or rather, not the soul of Shakespeare as projected in Lear—but the soul of Mr. Brown must for ever mark off a measurable distance between x and your impersonation. The measure of that distance is, inversely, the measure of your success in the part. On the other hand, your reality (the Mr. Brown in you), while it prevents you from fully and satisfactorily representing x—that is to say, coinciding with the spectator's mental image of your part—will give you the great advantage over that vague, pale image of definiteness and substance. What is lost in harmony and perfect propriety of conception is gained in precision and intensity of effect—provided always that your personality is not absolutely at variance with the spectators' conception. You are able to offer him a real man for an imaginary one.

What is the upshot of all this? That your skill as an actor, necessary as it is to get through the plain business of a and to give the spectator that measure of illusion without which play-acting becomes mere meaningless nonsense, is of small account as compared with your real self, your personality, your temperament, call it what you will. Are you what young ladies call a "nice" man? Are you "sympathetic," winning people by the mere manner of you as you enter the stage? Are you "magnetic," endowed with the peculiar property of impressing your fellow-creatures by mere glance and voice and presence? It is by such tests as these that ultimately as an actor you must stand or fall. Salvini, Duse, Bartet, Irving—take any illustrious stage-names you please, and the secret of their greatness will be found not in consummate skill—one takes that item for granted—but in the mystery of temperament.

"HIS FIRST SUCCESS."

"It seems rather a vain proceeding," says Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., in P.T.O., "to talk of 'success' at all in a world where the standard of achievement is so high, but all these things are relative, and what is success for one man may only be a far-off hint of it for another. I had done nothing definite to focus public attention on work of mine until the year 1888, and my heart vibrated with hope when the doors of a possible popularity—not disagreeable to the most modest of human beings, and I was not that—were flung wide, for on March 31 of that year George Rignold, who was once the idol of Drury Lane and the provinces and of the United States as Henry V., produced my first play, an adaptation of Faust, at Her Majesty's Theatre, Sydney, Australia.

"It was a magnificent theatre, which, however, did not do infinite credit to its architect in every particular. It was opened with Henry V., and Rignold had never played with greater dignity, force, and beauty—and he had capacities for all three—than on the night of the opening; but I remember how some of us were troubled at noises which came from the gallery, disturbing to the actor and the audience. The splendid impressiveness of the performance was jarred by discordant voices, whispering, and disturbance. This went on for one-half of the play. Then occurred a scene which I shall never forget. As Henry V. in the scene depicting the night before the Battle of Agincourt, Rignold knelt and uttered the prayer:

'O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts:
Possess them not with fear.'

"The voice rang out plaintive, powerful, appealing, but there was noise in the gallery. Finishing the prayer, Rignold stood up, turned to the audience, and spread out his arms, saying, 'Oh, men, won't you give me a chance?'

"An instant silence fell. There were a few of us who knew how Rignold had worked day and night to get the theatre open; struggling with the then undeveloped elements of electric lighting and all the difficulties of furnishing and getting a new theatre into shape, and had been without sleep or rest or food for days. We understood the agony of mind with which he thought that he was confronting not only all these natural difficulties of the situation but a spirit of hostility from the 'gods.' He was a figure of massive strength and touching appeal. In the silence that followed his words there came a voice down from the gallery, 'S'elp me God, George, we can't see!' Then another voice added, 'Go on, George; we'll keep quiet.' The architect had built the arches in the gallery in such a way that they obstructed the sight of at least one hundred and fifty or two hundred people, and naturally they were aggrieved and troubled at not seeing their idol, which he certainly was. I shall not soon forget the look of relief that came into Rignold's face, or the trembling lip with which he returned to his work.

"And, in a sense, that night had much to do with my first success, because I wrote an article for the Sydney Morning Herald describing the performance and this eloquent scene, with its dangerous innovation of appeal from the centre of an historical play to the people over the footlights. The article was not signed by myself, as, at that time, I was one of the associate-editors of the Sydney Morning Herald, though I was in my very early twenties. George Rignold, however, wrote a letter to the editor expressing his gratitude for the article, which was not a dramatic critic's report of the play, and discovered that it was I who had written it. We had met before in New Zealand, one Sunday night after I had landed at Auckland, from Honolulu; and when we met again it was to renew a delightful acquaintance.

"Then and there, almost at that first meeting, I began to plan with him my adaptation of Faust. They were days full of toil and delight, and one was young enough not to care how much energy was expended and what toll one took of vitality. I was writing leading articles; so-called 'side articles' on interesting topical subjects; essays on travel; an absolute stranger to the country, reading omnivorously and absorbing constantly in order to understand the questions with which one had to deal, and at the same time writing Faust. I should think I then worked on an average fifteen hours a day, having, as my only recreation, an hour's sculling on Sydney Harbour.

"I like to think that I had as my Marguerite Kate Bishop—Mrs. Lohr—one of the truest actresses the English stage has produced, and whose daughter now is charming thousands at the Haymarket Theatre in Her Father, as her mother has done all her life. I had not seen Kate Bishop from the spring of 1899 until a fortnight ago in a little room at the Haymarket Theatre we met again, and I congratulated her on a daughter who was worthily living again her mother's ability and charm. In those nineteen years Kate Bishop had grown to be a white-haired lady, and I was nineteen years older, too. It was only a step, however, back to the night when she played Marguerite, and by her grace and charm, together with Rignold's splendid performance of Mephistopheles—mordant, subtle, cynically whimsical—they gave me the first taste of popularity. Well, you cannot take the first taste of it out of the mouth. It is better than anything that comes after, and the memory of those Sunday newspapers—for the play was produced on a Saturday night—with their two and three columns of praise sometimes puts iron into one's nerves now when the delights of popularity are chastened by rigorous criticism and challenge. Sometimes Rignold and I, as we talked our Faust, took a tram out to Coogee and Bondo, or Botany Bay, and I cannot help but think that something of human warmth got into the play from 'circumstances over which we had no control.'

"The play ran a long time, and made money for Rignold and for myself. It was followed by others; but though they were successes, you never could 'recapture that first fine, careless rapture.' I remember one amusing circumstance which occurred during the production of the play. In Marguerite's last scene—the Prison scene—where she laments her little dead child and the misery she must suffer, and that she has caused, Mephistopheles (Rignold) stood outside her cell, and such was the effect of the green electric light, which, fastened under his hat, threw a grotesque glimmer on his face, that members of the audience laughed nervously. After the performance Kate Bishop came to George Rignold's dressing-room to protest. She said, 'You've queered my scene: you've taken away my best moment.' Now, Rignold, with the co-operation of the author, had done his utmost to give Marguerite as much prominence as could possibly be done, and, conscious of that, he looked at Kate Bishop for the moment dumbfounded. Then, involuntarily pressing the button under his belt, his face glimmered with the green light, and he said, 'Kate, if I haven't worked like the devil for you, I'm damned!' The humour of the situation burst upon us all, and we laughed and had supper."

HARRY ROXBURY'S "PRINCE OF MONTE CARLO" CO. v. PALACE, WEST HARTLEPOOL.

Played at West Hartlepool on June 27, and resulting in a win for Mr. Roxbury's XI. Batting first, the winners ran up a total of 102, chiefly due to the efforts of Fred Guinness, who played a faultless "Jessopian" innings of 60 before being dismissed by a fine catch by Noble off R. Dobin. D. Clarkson scored a very useful 12 not out. The Palace team could only respond with 56, their dismissal being chiefly due to the destructive bowling of Fred Davenporte, who took six wickets for 22 runs, and Fred Guinness, three for 24. Scores:—

HARRY ROXBURY'S XI.—Fred Davenporte, 4; Fred Guinness, 60; F. Raby, 0; Harry Roxbury, 0; M. Lyth, 3; N. S. Connolly, 0; G. Dobing, 1; J. Mack, 7; D. Wilson, 3; J. Dodds, 4; D. Clarkson, 12; extras, 8; total, 102.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1908.

BOGUS AND REFORM.

Whatever may be the differences of opinion between the different associations which are working for the same object—i.e., the improvement of the lot of the actor—they are practically unanimous as to their hatred of "bogus." It is not only the actor who suffers from this evil. The recent slump in theatrical business in the provinces was greatly to be attributed to the disrepute into which theatrical entertainments had fallen in certain places through the "watering-down" of companies. Things had been for some time past moving in a vicious circle. Years of fashion and prosperity had created the belief that attractions could be cheapened to any extent without loss, and that every pound saved in expenses was equal to a pound gained of increased receipts. Thus, by degrees, the provincial public in certain towns became disgusted with the theatre and ceased to support it. This state of things was not only injurious to the manager of the weak company and the proprietor of the meanly-conducted theatre; a lower opinion of the stage as an enjoyment gradually gained ground, and this opinion acted against the efforts of the enlightened and liberal entrepreneurs. The bogus manager is equally the enemy of the high-class manager and the experienced and talented artist.

The truth is very often unpleasant, and it is frequently more profitable to "prophesy pleasant things" with one's tongue in one's cheek than to offend by straightforwardness. The truth, as regards bogus management, is that the real crux of the situation lies in the attitude of the actors themselves, who are slow to combine or take any trouble to fight a case. A whole company interviewed the Actors' Association not long ago; but when the solicitor had been instructed to take proceedings only one of the company very reluctantly consented to go into Court. Two members of the company, people in big positions engaged for three months certain at large salaries, did not receive a full week's salary, but would not prosecute. The influencing motive is, of course, fear of offending managers generally, by making oneself prominent as a champion of a cause. It is a very natural and weighty reason, when we consider the overstocked nature of the profession and the difficulty of obtaining engagements. But the only chance of keeping "bogus" within bounds, and of eventually suppressing it altogether, is to generate a more audacious and public-spirited feeling in the individual actor and actress. The only person who can sue for a debt is the person to whom the debt is due; and the profession who would be "free" from bogus must itself "strike the blow" at it. It is not a question of expediency; in many cases it will be more expedient for an actor or actress to put up with the loss and pocket the indignity of being cheated. But there is a higher law than expediency—the law of humanity. The victims of the bogus manager should hunt him down, if only to discourage the others, and prevent him swindling more actors and actresses.

It is in this way that the Actors' Union and the Actors' Association are doing great and valuable work; and all honour is due to those who, hoping against hope, are working to generate the necessary sentiment in their brethren and sisters of the profession. It is something to get anything done in this direction, to inspire the smallest feeling of enterprise and self-respect in the poorest class of actor and actress. Anyone who wishes to know how provincial companies were paid—or rather not paid—twenty years ago should read Mr. JEROME K. JEROME'S book "On the Stage and Off," published in 1888. Mr. JEROME, in order to improve himself as a playwright, went upon the stage; and he gives a humorous, but heart-rending, description of life in a small provincial company on tour. The work that the modern theatrical associations are doing is the cultivation of the germ of independence in the minor actor and actress. Fiery spirits like Miss ROSE MATHEWS at the Actors' Association, and Mr. BEDFORD, the "lion" of the Actors' Union, are fighting an uphill battle and leading a forlorn hope; but their efforts will not be in vain. The minimum wage, in the opinion of many, is a dream; but the principles of combination, of self-sacrifice for the good of the community, and of brotherly help and sympathy are everlasting realities.

The difficulty of the situation is greatly complicated by the fascination which acting exercises over persons of all classes and both sexes. It is the same to a certain extent with all the arts, painting and music especially; but the attraction of the stage is to hundreds irresistible. The truth of this is shown by the willingness of thousands of male and female citizens to take part in a local pageant. All classes, from the M.P. and his daughter to the shop-assistant, may be seen at these festivals revelling in the delights of wearing costume and pretending to be somebody else. They take no pay, they provide their own dresses, and they labour at long rehearsals all for the pleasure of playing a part. In our recent "Era Annual" one of the short stories dealt with the distress of the understudy who cannot get a chance of showing his talent. It is not sufficient to an enthusiastic actor to be paid his salary; he wants to be acting, to be performing his proper function in the general scheme. This feeling inevitably makes him comparatively indifferent to financial and mundane considerations; and the resultant weakness has to be combated. This can only be done by appealing to another quality of the artistic temperament, its generous sympathy. When actors and actresses as a body realise that they owe a duty to their profession as well as a duty to themselves; that an individual responsibility rests on all of us to help to elevate and not to degrade our calling; that to be a bogus actor, or to tolerate bogus actors, or to hang back from insisting on one's rights, is a crime against the community; we shall see improvement everywhere. These convictions can only be created by the magnetic influence of a few powerful personalities, who stir and stimulate the mass; and what appears to be mere passionate verbiage is only the necessary excitement to action. A certain heat and exaggeration may easily be forgiven in these pioneers, in view of the inertia which they have to overcome. We cannot do without enthusiasm, be the cause or object what it may.

MISS NANCY PRICE, in reply to Mr. Godfrey Turner's query in Life's Pictorial Comedy, writes:—"I have no ambition to be a Queen. I regard it as a much overrated profession. My first wish would be that I were not, and my first task would be to find an efficient understudy; and I would take good care that she frequently played my part—at bazaars, foundation-stones, and drawing-rooms—during the hot weather. Then—I hesitate between the model theatre of Ludwig II. of Bavaria and the ocean-going yacht of the Prince of Monaco. I should have model performances of Wagner and Bernard Shaw; and, should the humour seize me, I might descend from my Royal box, and take the leading part myself. What glorious receptions and criticisms I should receive! When I wanted change I might steam for an island in the Pacific, my sole communication with the world a Marconi installation. But wait! To indulge these hobbies if I were Queen I should certainly be a lunatic; so I fear I must leave your question unanswered."

MME. BARTET, the beautiful leading lady of the Theatre de la Comédie Française, says:—"If I were a Queen, I would try so very hard, and fail so very completely, to follow in the footsteps of your lovely Queen of England, and to look and to be as great and majestic."

MR. JAMES WELCH replies:—"If I were King I would do my level best to remain in the situation. From what I have heard, there's more safe money in kinging than in acting. And the post has other privileges too numerous to mention. At the same time, the duties of a King must be very difficult to perform naturally, and I fear it would take me a long time to learn how to smile as if I meant it when my journeys by train were frequently interrupted by borough Mayors with loyal addresses of welcome, all couched in precisely the same terms throughout. I should find myself listening to them with the ears of an actor-manager, and saying, 'No, no; that will never do! Rotten, my worthy friend—quite rotten!' But we never know what we can do until we try, and I daresay I might in time acquire the secret of looking pleasant under these very depressing circumstances. Anyhow, the money's good, and it would take a lot to sack me when once I was in the job."

MISS FANNIE WARD writes:—

"'O 'tis a glorious thing, I ween
To be a regular Royal Queen!
No half-and-half affair, I mean,
But a right-down regular,
Regular, regular,
Regular Royal Queen!'

like Queen Alexandra! Of course, if I could be such a Queen as all that verse up there amounts to, I would be the best Queen in the world, and then there would be two best Queens in the world—the gracious and beautiful wife of King Edward VII. and myself! But if I were simply Queen Fannie Ward, there would be ructions in Palace and Parliament, for I'm partial to my own way in most things, and would as likely as not kick the shins of the Mistress of the Robes and throw my clothes out of window should his Majesty, my husband, want me to go with him to open a new wing of a charity school on a hot July day!"

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

"A PRINCESS IN BOHEMIA."

A Comedy, in Four Acts, by Gilbert Dayle, produced for the first time on any stage at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, on Monday, June 29.

Sir Phillip Templeton ..... MR. CHARLES BOULT
Hamilton Quirk ..... MR. FRED A. MARSTON
Jimmy Ludlow ..... MR. EDGAR STEVENSON
Mr. Heathcote ..... MR. FRED CASTLEMAN
Vickery ..... MR. EDWARD PETLEY
Judson ..... MR. GEORGE FISHER
Crayley Carr ..... MR. ERNEST E. NORRIS
Miss Joan Herepath ..... MISS LENA DELPHINE
Mrs. Rainsford ..... MISS BESSIE HARRISON
Miss Alma Maxwell ..... MISS EDITH COLEMAN
Lady Delia Kingsfield .... MISS ROSEMARY REES

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The plot of this interesting piece is as follows:—Alma Maxwell, a wealthy young lady, when tired of society hides herself in a little riverside cottage on the Thames. Sir Phillip Templeton, who is living in the neighbourhood, saves her puppy from drowning. They fall in love, she believing that he does not know her to be the rich Miss Maxwell, and that he loves her for herself alone. But he has been told by Lady Delia Kingsfield, an ambitious widow, who secretly admires him. Templeton has a friend who saved his life, an author, Crayley Carr, who lives in a flat on the embankment among a number of artistic ne'er-do-wells, who are called the "colony," and he has been introduced by Miss Joan Herepath, a member, to Miss Maxwell, whom he worships afar off, and who is known to the colony as the Princess. Miss Maxwell is introduced by Joan to the colony on her return to town, and during the visit Templeton, who is to meet her, calls on Carr, and finding Alma there, introduces her to Carr as his future wife, tells Carr he has secured a Government position abroad, and asks him during his absence, if occasion should arise, to help Alma.

In the second act we are introduced to Alma's house in Park-lane, where she is entertaining the colony. During the evening the news is brought to her that her uncle has failed through over-speculation, that he has absconded, and that her fortune is lost in the crash. Carr, anxious to carry out his promise to Templeton, suggests that he shall take a studio for her, that she shall become a member of the colony, and that, as she is a very clever amateur designer in metal work, &c., she must now turn her talents to account, and that, though she is no longer a princess in Park-lane, she shall be the "Princess in Bohemia."

In the following act we find Alma a registered member of the colony, working hard and supporting herself. Templeton returns, and having inquired for Alma in vain, comes to Carr's flat for information. Carr, after telling him of her poverty, charges him with being a fortune-hunter. The news staggers Templeton, who has looked upon Alma's money as a means of his social success. Carr and Templeton quarrel, and are almost proceeding to blows, when Alma enters, and welcomes Templeton on his return.

In Act 4 Alma, on finding that Templeton has deceived her, releases him and accepts the hand of Carr, now famous as an author, to whom she has always been, and always will be, a princess. Templeton pairs off with the ambitious Lady Delia, and the play concludes.

The characters are well drawn and admirably contrasted, the life of Bohemia is attractively presented in the charming little story, and the dénouement in the third act, where Templeton is compelled to admit that from his first meeting with Alma he knew her to be wealthy, helps in sustaining the interest to the finish. The dialogue is at times sparkling, and one cannot but enjoy the author's forte for happy repartee. For a first representation the play went with remarkable smoothness (thanks to the able management of Mr. T. F. Doyle), and a sympathetic audience demonstrated unmistakably their hearty appreciation of the play and the efforts of Mr. Hart's able company. If Mr. Charles Boult was not, on the whole, quite at his ease as Sir Phillip Templeton, he managed well in illustrating how the man of the world was prepared to sacrifice everything for wealth and ambition. Crayley Carr is a strong contrast in point of character, and Mr. Ernest E. Norris represented the unselfish, devoted friend with fervour, without being in the least demonstrative. Hamilton Quirk, the good-natured but cynical pessimist, was an enjoyable performance by Mr. Fred A. Marston, but his aversion to the canting Mrs. Rainsford was just a little too marked. Mr. Edgar Stevenson was energetic enough as the journalist, Jimmy Ludlow. Miss Lena Delphine distinguished herself in a bright performance of the gushing lady journalist, Joan Herepath. Miss Bessie Harrison played Mrs. Rainsford, of the Vicarage, with delightful quaintness. With sympathetic grace and charm Miss Edith Coleman filled the part of Alma Maxwell; Miss Rosemary Rees gave a composed and thoroughly convincing performance of the part of the selfish, scheming, society lady Delia Kingsfield; Mr. Edward Petley was capital as the loquacious Vickery; and Mr. Fred Castleman (Mr. Heathcote) and Mr. George Fisher (Judson) filled their parts acceptably.

FREEMASONS AT WORK.

Chelsea chapter, No. 3098, held its second installation meeting on Friday last, at the Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Mr. J. W. Mathews, assisted by Mr. Albert Le Fre and Mr. Herbert Chenery, the minor offices being filled by Messrs. Geo. Dyball, W. Atlas, W. Vallazzi, Geo. Mozart, Harry Bawn, Wolfe S. Lyon (treasurer), and C. J. Doughty (secretary). A ballot having been taken for Mr. James Simon Lyen, he was exalted according to ancient form, following which Mr. Mathews retired from the chair, and Mr. Albert Le Fre was installed as ruler for the ensuing year, and invested Messrs. H. Chenery, C. J. Doughty, W. S. Lyon, Harry Bawn, Geo. Mozart, G. H. Dyball, and J. Gilbert with the insignia of the different offices to which they had been elected, and then presented Mr. J. W. Mathews, on behalf of the chapter, with a very handsome jewel, and on behalf of the officers who had served under him, with a past Z collar. A visiting companion, Mr. H. E. De Lane, a gentleman well known in Masonic circles, was unanimously elected an honorary member. In addition to the gentlemen already mentioned, Messrs. A. C. Girard, Monte Bayly, Albert Christian, and Frank Hardie were also present. Telegrams of regret were received from Messrs. Harry Coutts, W. H. Hitch, F. H. Pedgrift, &c., &c.

The Earl's Court chapter, No. 2,765, held its installation meeting at the Criterion on Saturday last, when Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon, the retiring M.E.Z., was presented with a handsome jewel, in recognition of his services during the past year.

MR. H. CHANCE NEWTON, with regard to unemployed actors and actresses, says:—"The only thing I can really suggest—until chances of work come up again in September—is that some of those professionals who are in work, and are receiving (often not too deservedly) bloated salaries, should meet together and 'pool' a decent sum apiece for the assistance of their poorer brethern and sisters. In spite of all this distress—in slump times and other times—the profession continues to be vastly overcrowded. At the moment of finishing this article I read that a day or two ago 450 people applied at a certain theatre where six small-part people were needed! Moreover, all sorts and conditions of people in comfortable circumstances, or people who have no need to work for their livelihood, continue to accept theatrical engagements for nothing per week, and many even 'pay' to play!"

SEVERIN-MARS AT THE ROYALTY.

It is certainly very difficult and perhaps somewhat unfair to judge the quality of M. Severin-Mars from the opening performance of his season on Monday night, as many circumstances combined to damp the spirits and depress the judgment of the observer. The audience was small and apathetic, for which, no doubt, the heat was responsible; the waits were long and tedious, the mounting meagre, and the plays so insufficiently rehearsed that the prompter had the "fattest" part of the whole company. When, after a delay of twenty minutes, the curtain rose on Octave, the first of the five one-act plays set down on the programme, it was hard to say whether the humours of the supposed dead man would have met with more appreciative response under more favourable circumstances. As it was, they certainl fell flat, and it is much to the credit of M. Gouget that he sustained the part in the key of cheery bonhomie to the end. M. Gouget gave an excellent picture of a Parisian "bon viveur," a materialist of the first water, who, though finding his mistress unfaithful, his friend insincere, and his trusted valet a time-server and a thief, is, nevertheless, sufficiently light-hearted to make love to the next woman he comes across—in this case a telephone girl! La petite maîtresse was played with a pretty air of mock modesty by Mlle. Dariel.

M. Severin-Mars played the title-part in the second item, Un Honnête Homme. He has at least the virtue of originality; his method is entirely his own. Perhaps it is more the fault of the parts than the player that on Monday night M. Severin-Mars gave an impression of peculiar detachment from his surroundings, which may also account for the "arresting" quality of his work. At times he strikes the observer as being crude and lacking in polish, but that may be the outcome of environment—his reputation, we believe, has been made chiefly in the "banlieux" of Paris. One asks one's self what can be the meaning of the extraordinary gesticulations and facial contortions which are made at the door through which the frightened maid has vanished after surprising her master and mistress in a quarrel. M. Severin-Mars is undoubtedly clever in portraying this initial stage of insanity. In the last, and by far the best, item on the programme, La dernière Soirée de Brummel, he has some really fine moments. He touches with a delicate pathos the character of the ancient beau, who, in his lonely, poverty-stricken exile, imagines that he is still living in the days of his triumphs, when his word was law in the land of fashion, and in the mean salon of his fifth-rate hotel he receives in imagination the great ones of his former world, some long since dead, and with fine, old-fashioned courtesy welcomes and entertains his guests. Finally, with stately dignity, he goes to his place in the carriage which is to convey him to the madhouse, thinking it to be the carriage sent for him by the Regent. M. Severin-Mars made the famous dandy a living, pathetic, and noble figure, and was well supported by M. Gouget as the faithful old valet, François.

In the last item, Fleur d'Oranger, Paul, a college boy of seventeen, is in love with Louison, the pretty servant maid. Louison will not listen to Paul's nonsense; but she gives him a kiss, which turns the white lily on the table a crimson colour (the lily being the emblem of their purity). The sketch is somewhat trivial.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. R. A. Robinson (chairman) presiding.

LICENSING.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported as follows:—"We have had under consideration the question whether the procedure respecting the notices to be given in connection with applications for licences for music, music and dancing, and stage plays might not be somewhat simplified. Such applications are considered by the Council once a year, in the month of November, and applicants are required to give notice on or before Sept. 1 to the clerk of the Council, the town clerk of the metropolitan borough in which the premises are situated, and the Commissioner of Police, of their intention to apply for a licence. In addition there must be posted up on the premises a copy of the notice, and this copy has to be kept posted up until the application has been dealt with by the Council. The notice has therefore to be maintained upon the premises for a period of nearly three months. This period we consider unnecessarily long, and we propose that applicants should be permitted to submit applications up to and including Oct. 1. We also suggest that applicants should not be required to give notice to the town clerks and the Commissioner of Police, as a complete list of the applications made to the Council is compiled by the clerk of the Council and copies of this list are forwarded to the town clerks and the Commissioner of Police about four weeks before the hearing of the applications. The adoption of these alterations will enable the Council to have a simpler form of declaration and will entail a few other alterations of a consequential character." The committee recommended that orders in the form specified be made by the Council as the licensing authority under the Local Government Act, 1888. The recommendation was approved.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The committee reported with reference to the following:—A drawing submitted by Messrs. E. L. Berry, Harrison, and Co., showing the provision of a ventilating fan in the roof of the auditorium at the Kingsway Theatre, Great Queen-street; a drawing submitted by Mr. J. E. Walker, showing certain alterations proposed to be made in the dressing-room block at the Palace, Cambridge-circus, in order to provide increased office accommodation; and an amended drawing submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing a proposal to divide into two portions the proposed waiting room at the rear of Shepherd's Bush Empire. These proposals, recommended for approval, were agreed to.

THE STRAND STATUES.

In reply to a question put by Mr. Walter Reynolds,

Mr. E. White, chairman of the General Purposes Committee, said that that was not a committee of taste, and could take no action in the matter of the Strand statues.

IN the Glasgow Court of Session on Wednesday came up the action by the Grand Theatre and Opera House, Glasgow, Ltd., against Richard Waldon, theatrical proprietor, and William Campbell, wine and spirit merchant, for £3,000 damages in respect of alleged slander. Pursuers pleaded that the defenders in November last falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable cause, presented a petition to have the pursuers' company wound up under the Companies Act, to the loss and injury of the pursuers. Defenders pleaded that the petition was presented in good faith, and they denied that they had slandered the pursuers.

COUNSEL for the pursuers said that he had been informed that the liquidators of the company were not to rank themselves as pursuers in the case, and he thought that the proper course would be that his Lordship should dismiss the action, and the defenders would be entitled to a finding for expenses, for which they could rank in the liquidation. His Lordship said that he would assoilzie the defenders, and find them entitled to expenses. When they moved for decree for expenses he would consider whether the motion was incompetent.

THE "RING" IN ENGLISH.

"The recent performances of Wagner's Ring, or, rather, of portions of the Ring, in German at Covent Garden, have, for many people," writes Mr. Lawrence Haward in the Albany Review, "served mainly to recall the performances in English which were given there a few months ago. Comparisons are misleading. Besides, the German performances have so long been established that all musicians are perfectly familiar with the conditions. But as a criticism of the English performances and an analysis of the methods employed, may serve a double purpose, it may help to explain the immediate success of these particular performances, and may also help us to arrive at one or two general principles, the importance of which, if not previously acknowledged, does at last appear to be gaining more general recognition. The first complete performance of the Ring in English, which took place at Covent Garden in the early part of this year, was greeted with a unanimous chorus of approval. Those who had made up their minds beforehand, and had gone prepared to jeer, came away converted; while those who felt sanguine all along of success can hardly have hoped to have turned out quite such true prophets. Even so stern a critic as Dr. Richter has written to the authorities at Covent Garden to express his gratification at the result.

"To a German it may seem strange that London, with all its wealth and its genuine enthusiasm for good music, should have had to wait so long before being able to hear in English what for years it has been hearing and admiring in a foreign tongue. But operatic conditions in England are very different from what they are in Germany; and no one who realises what it means to be dependent for opera on a private syndicate which is naturally conservative, and therefore disinclined to make experiments on lines that are not obviously profitable, and which also has to do its work without national or municipal subsidies—no one who realises this can be anything but grateful that the English Ring has come in this generation and not the next, or anything but gratified that its coming has been attended with such an unexpected degree of success. Paris, we may remember, has still to wait for the complete tetralogy in French; and Paris, though it has always been Chauvinistic in the matter of music, has a proverbially bigger appetite for opera than London, and, of course, is not handicapped, as we are, by having no subsidy.

"Although the total result of the two cycles was, as we have said, unexpectedly successful, there were, at any rate, three features in the performance about which even the most pessimistic could hardly have been in doubt. In the first place, Richter was to conduct; and in this the wisdom of the syndicate's choice could not be questioned. There may be two opinions as to his reading of Mozart; but where Beethoven and Wagner are concerned he is universally acknowledged to be supreme. Indeed, the mere fact of his conducting the performances was by many people considered a sufficient guarantee of their success; and his high opinion of our singers and players, and his consequent ambition to present an English version of the Ring to an English audience, have long been widely known.

"In the second place, the orchestra employed at the opera house contains some of the best material that is to be found in London. Many of the members belong to the London Symphony Orchestra, and there is hardly a player in it who is not also a capable musician. One reason why the band is so alert and responsive is, that it has obtained its operatic training in various schools. It has to play German opera under Richter, Italian opera under Campanini, and (until quite recently) French opera under Messager. Being worked up to a high pitch of excellence by three such different types of conductors, any band would become plastic where the players were endowed with any degree of musical intelligence.

"Thirdly, in the matter of stage-management the reputation of Covent Garden has been increasing year by year. Herr Wirk in previous seasons, and Herr Hedmondt in this, have shown that it is possible to transplant Bayreuth traditions and make them flourish in an alien soil. In some respects they have even been improved; which is not unnatural, seeing how much the art of the mechanician and the scene-painter have advanced in recent years. It is true that the Rhine maidens at the beginning of Rhinegold swim in a somewhat circumscribed area; they do not come sweeping down head foremost from the top corner of the stage, as they do at Dresden. This is not because we cannot manage these things on the English stage; they do feats just as difficult at Drury Lane, and no children ever flew more realistically than those in Peter Pan. It is simply because singing head downwards while you are being whirled about by four mechanicians, to imitate a mermaid, is apt to make you sick. The experiment may be tried any day at Earl's Court. Similarly, some purists have objected that when Wotan sends Brünnhilde to sleep at the end of The Valkyrie, he does not really surround her with fire; he only makes the flames come up behind, whereas in some of the theatres abroad the fire is actually surging up by the footlights and on the three sides of the stage in such a way as entirely to surround the sleeping figure. But the penalty one has to pay for so realistically representing what Wotan proudly calls his 'Licht-Meer,' is that one loses the marvellous beauty of the orchestration in the hissing and the spluttering of the accompanying jets of steam. So in the final scene of The Twilight of the Gods Covent Garden now prefers to let the house of the Gibichungs fall in comparative silence, like a pack of cards. The earlier and more realistic methods only distracted the attention from the music; and Wagner did not plan his catastrophe on the lines that we find Saint-Saëns adopting in Samson and Delilah, where the fall of the temple of the Philistines is accompanied by the clattering of tea-trays and the banging of gongs by as many of the stage-hands as can be spared. The only piece of stage-management of any importance that still leaves room for improvement is the lighting and the grouping in Siegfried's funeral procession. Night should not fall quite so swiftly; and the procession should contrive, as it does in at least one theatre abroad, to wind in and out amongst the trees before the curtain falls; instead of merely walking up a few steps and then standing still. In the very difficult 'business' of the ride of the Valkyries, the efforts are more successful than anyone could suppose who has not seen them; the cinematograph is infinitely better than the old mechanical switchbacks, and infinitely safer than having real horses, as they used to do at Vienna. Horses, even when they come straight from the cab-rank, should be regarded as clumsy actors; and Brünnhilde at Covent Garden is wise not to try and emulate the example of Frau Vogl, who in the final cataclysm actually used to leap on to a horse which she had broken in herself, and plunge into an apparently glowing pyre.

"To come to the last feature of the stage-management that calls for praise, it would be difficult to imagine anything more beautiful than some of the cloud effects. Particularly striking was the management of the rolling masses of mist in the last act of Siegfried at the moment of transition from the depths of the forest, with the fire flickering up in the heights behind to the clear, tranquil atmosphere at the summit of the Valkyries' Rock; and very few stage skies that have been seen in London (including even Hawes Craven's famous sunset in the scene of the Kelpie's Flow in Ravenswood) have been more poetical than the one which we are shown in the last act of The Twilight of the Gods, with its gradually-changing tints of orange, amethyst, and gold softly reflected from the bars and belts of cloud in the silvery-blue waters of the Rhine below."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

MR. FRANK ALLEN, the well-known Moss Empires director, has been in luck's way this week from more than one point of view. He has been taking a well-earned golfing and motoring holiday in Scotland. The weather has been superb, and Mr. Allen has been singularly fortunate against the champions he has met in the land of Golf. For instance, on Wednesday last he played a foursome over the Kilspindel Links, having for his partner Miss Maud Titerton, the present lady open champion, against two celebrated Edinburgh golfers. After a most exciting match, Miss Titerton and Mr. Allen won by two up and one to play, also winning the bye. The victory was a most popular one.

THE great surprise in next week's Coliseum programme is the star line announcing the engagement of Mme. Yvette Guilbert. The two weeks madame will be seen at this theatre constitute positively her last appearance on the variety stage. She will sing four French songs in English—"Ma Tete, "Les Cloches de Nantes," "Les Housards de la Garde," and "La Fille de Parthenay."

MISS MARIE LLOYD, after a five weeks' seaside tour, will return to the Oxford with Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's latest big "winner," "The Directoire Girl," and several new numbers from the same busy pens. Miss Lloyd herself pronounces the "Directoire" song, which is published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., one of the finest she has sung for years. Miss Lloyd has placed her business in the capable hands of Mr. Harry Day, of Effingham House, Arundel-street, Strand.

MISS MURIEL MARSDEN, playing heroine in Joseph Hart's Futurity Winner at the London Hippodrome, confesses to being a very self-willed young person. The daughter of a country doctor, she received an excellent musical training. Then one day papa married a lady one year younger than his only daughter. Muriel expostulated, and papa told her to mind her own business. She did—by immediately packing up her belongings and taking train for London. Next she boldly bearded Mr. Geo. Edwardes in his office, and demanded of him a leading part at the Gaiety. The theatre magnate gazed at the little girl in short frocks with great amusement, but took her across to the theatre to a voice trial, which resulted in his giving her a small part.

SINCE then Miss Marsden has done the usual amount of touring with "conventional monotony." This has been shared by a prize bulldog, one of the most ferocious ever seen, but in reality the mildest mannered of his kind. Miss Marsden received last Friday a surprise visit from her doctor brother whom she imagined to be in India. He had only landed that day, and the first thing he noticed was his sister's name on a Hippodrome poster at the docks.

MR. ALFRED BUTT will considerably revise the programme of the Palace Theatre on Monday, when he will introduce Rock and Fulton, two American comedy artists. In the United States these artists have been generally termed "the Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss of America," which is, perhaps, a sufficient index as to the character of their work. Miss Dorothy Kenton, "the American girl with the banjo," is another acquisition; and what should prove a novel turn is to be provided by Humpsti-Bumsti, two eccentric burlesque artists, on a first visit here.

TSCHAIKOWSKY'S famous "Casse-Noisettes," in which are introduced the fanciful dances of the Sugar-plum Fairy and Arabian and reed-pipe dances, are to be interpreted by Miss Maud Allan at the Palace Theatre, on July 13. This suite dates from the last years of the composer's life, and was written about the same time as Iolanthe. The scenario is founded on one of Hoffmann's fairy tales ("Nutcracker and the Mouse King"), which relates the story of the imaginative little girl to whom the Dream King makes so many promises.

THE craze for classical music as a means for the exposition of "impressions," both terpsichorean and dramatic, on the part of dancers, has rapidly extended since Miss Maud Allan went to Mendelssohn and Chopin for her inspirations, and to the former composer especially for the dainty creation of a nymph dancing to the tender and joyous strains of the Frühlingslieder.

Now we are given to understand that Miss Isadora Duncan, who claims to have been the first to introduce bare-foot dancing to the London stage, is to repeat on her return there shortly her impression of Tschaikowsky's "Pathétique" symphony, which is said to have created a sensation in Russia, the country of the deceased composer. In London she will also include in her performance Glück's Iphigénie, a tragic subject, and waltz music by Chopin, Brahms, and Schubert.

MR. GEORGE LEYTON, who has done such splendid work for the cause of the veterans of the Crimea and the Mutiny is busy rehearsing his new military scena, The Last Muster, founded, we take it, on the celebrated picture of that name by Sir Hubert Herkomer, which received the Grande Médaille d'Honneur at Paris in 1878. The libretto is the work of Mr. J. P. Harrington, the author of Lucknow, with which Mr. Leyton is scoring this week at the Paragon. The music is by Orlando Powell and J. W. Tate. It is to be produced at the Oxford on July 13.

THE Rats and their guests for the motor-trip to Brighton witnessed about mid-day on Sunday at the Vaudeville Club the unveiling of two large pictures. One of them, the famous painting by Walter H. Lambert, known in the ranks of the profession as Lydia Dreams, ventriloquist, contains something like 300 portraits of variety celebrities of the past and present. It is entitled "Popularity," and has been acquired by Mr. Peter Bijou (of Bijou and Bella), whose excellent taste, judgment, and kindly thought in presenting the work to a representative body of his brother and sister artists was warmly acknowledged by Mr. W. H. Clemart, King Rat, who thanked the donor on behalf of the fraternity.

THE other picture, which is given in these columns, by the kind permission of Mr. W. H. McCarthy, Scribe Rat, is a reproduction by Mr. Hana, of no fewer than 111 portraits of the Rats fraternity. The picture was started about five months ago by a portrait group of thirty-six of the brethren, and has been added to from time to time as opportunity offered. The work has been so skilfully managed by the photographer that the effect is as if the whole number had been taken at one sitting. The walnut frame, columned in the Corinthian style, has been specially designed by Mr. Hana.

MM. DEBASTA AND ROZENBERG, the new directors of the Apollo, Paris, have nothing to do with the former directorate of that house. Their management will commence on Sept. 1 next, and they will make at once numerous alterations and improvements, and intend also presenting only first-class attractions. Thus they hope to place the Apollo at the head of the music halls in Paris. M. Debasta has been director of L'Horloge, Concert Parisien, Européen, a founder of the Parisiana and the Jardin de Paris.

THE Swindon Empire closes from to-night till Aug. 3 (Bank Holiday). The Kirkcaldy Hippodrome has also shut down for the summer.

THE Opera House, Northampton, is closing to-day for the summer vacation, reopening on August Bank Holiday with a star company in varieties.

THE Royalty, Chester, closes to-day for a three weeks' vacation, re-opening on July 27. Variety has been running there successfully for a twelvemonth.

THE Palace, Attercliffe, closes to-night for cleaning and decorating, re-opening on August Bank Holiday. Mr. J. Lacy Lyne, the popular acting-manager, terminates his engagement there after nearly four years of successful management.

THE Hastings-Hippodrome will close to-night for one week, and will reopen on Monday, the 13th inst., with Mr. Walter Norman in his old position as assistant-manager. The syndicate running the place will be slightly reconstructed, and Mr. Fred Higham will still continue to do the booking.

MR. HICKMAN-SMITH'S Royal Entertainers have been creating a record success at the Claremont Pier, Lowestoft, where they are concluding a five weeks' engagement. Large crowds have patronised every performance, despite the numerous other attractions.

MR. HARRY BURDETTE, the popular manager of the Coliseum, Glasgow, has been laid up for the past few days with a very sharp attack of influenza. He is now better, and resumed duty on Monday. During his absence, Mr. S. Gething, the district-manager, took charge of the Coliseum.

MR. GEORGE HARRIS, manager of the Palace Theatre, Belfast, has been appointed manager to the Hippodrome, Portsmouth. Mr. Harris was a great favourite in the linen capital, and his departure is much regretted. In the meantime his duties are being undertaken by Mr. James M. McCann, the courteous manager of the Theatre Royal, Belfast.

A POWERFUL syndicate have acquired the Royal Hall, Gainsborough, which is shortly undergoing several important alterations and improvements, and will be opened in September as the New Empire Hippodrome, Gainsborough, and run twice nightly with advanced vaudeville. The town is large and prosperous, and the success of this enterprise is assured.

THE BOHEMIANS, who were engaged at the Hippodrome, Accrington, last week, had the misfortune to lose the whole of their instruments, patent drums, scene, dresses, and music, but they appeared with great success on Monday night at the Hippodrome, St. Helens, with a completely new set of instruments.

MR. SAMUEL LLOYD, the popular and energetic manager of the Pavilion, Glasgow, started off on Tuesday on a motor tour, which includes many places of interest in Scotland and England, and will extend to Brighton, Bournemouth, and the Isle of Wight. When in town he will be securing many top-liners for the autumn season, to keep the Pavilion in the front rank of provincial variety theatres.

IT is not generally known that Mr. Edwin Leslie, a representative of the De Frece circuit, who is at present stationed at the Hippodrome, Portsmouth, is a journalist of ability. "Teddie," as he is familiarly known in the naval town, has for years written short stories, mostly on theatrical and music-hall subjects, for magazines and weekly papers. For some time he wrote humorous interviews with theatrical celebrities for the Manchester Sunday Chronicle.

MR. LESLIE has opened up various Hippodromes for the De Frece circuit, including Belfast, Southampton, Wolverhampton, and Portsmouth. He is recognised as one of the most successful "boomers" in England, and the Portsmouth Hippodrome has been "quickened" by his ingenious methods.

MR. HARRY MERRILEES, a young Scotch comedian, who has been making a hit in several towns in the North recently, has secured an engagement in a West-end London hall, and opens there on the 27th. He goes provided with an excellent dame song, "Wull ye gang awa', Wullie?" the tune and patter being both of special merit. The newcomer is a nephew of the late Jamie Merrilees, and has evidently a good share of the family humour. He ought to make a hit in London, judging by his success elsewhere.

MR. CHARLES HOWARD, during the period that he was resident-manager of the Royal Hippodrome, Eastbourne, won, by his unfailing courtesy, the respect of a large circle of friends; and on Thursday (25th ult.) a presentation was made to him at the Clifton Hotel previous to his departure. Mrs. W. Webb, the proprietress of the Devonshire Hotel, was really the originator of the proposal, and, with the assistance of Mr. W. A. Simmons, opened a testimonial fund, upwards of £53 being collected. Among the numerous subscribers were Mr. E. A. Brown (manager of Devonshire Park), Mr. G. Hayes (manager of the Eastbourne Pier), Messrs. Murray King and Clark (Devonshire Park Theatre), and Mr. and Mrs. Webb.

MR. SIMMONS, who presented Mr. Howard with a purse containing the money, said that although a few knew him at Brighton, Mr. Howard was a stranger to the majority when he came to Eastbourne. The friends had rallied to their support more than he had anticipated. They thought they might raise £20, but that sum was more than doubled. Mr. Simmons then handed the purse to Mr. Howard as a "token of the esteem in which he was held in Eastbourne by his friends and late patrons." Mr. Howard's health having been drunk with musical honours, he briefly replied. A very enjoyable musical programme was contributed during the evening.

MR. A. DOUGLAS F. BOSTOCK, acting-manager of the Paisley Hippodrome, won the five miles motor cycle race at the Glasgow Police Sports held in Celtic F.C. Park, Glasgow, on Saturday. The race was an invitation one to Mr. T. A. Carter, the well-known London path racer, and Mr. Bostock, who has made quite a name for himself in winning this season two of the stiffest hill climbs competitions in the West of Scotland. Mr. Carter, who started from scratch and conceded half a lap, was unable to overtake his opponent, and Mr. Bostock came in a popular winner. The race proved one of the most interesting in a long list of events.

MR. NELSON BARRY, who next Monday takes over the management of Mr. Stoll's Manchester Hippodrome, leaves Portsmouth Hippodrome midst many regrets and the best wishes for further success. Mr. Barry is no stranger to Manchester, for, prior to going to Portsmouth, he was the popular manager of the Palace of Varieties, where he made innumerable friends and identified himself with the Crimean Veterans' Association. In Portsmouth also Mr. Barry founded a branch of the Association. He is a member of the Indian Mutiny Association, and serves on the Executive Committee, of which Lord Roberts is president. Mr. Barry has had a wide theatrical experience, and when "he walked the boards" gained a knowledge of the ins and outs of stage life that has been invaluable to him.

THE Theatres and Music Halls Committee of the London County Council have extended the date of application for licences from Sept. 1 of each year to Oct. 1. This is a wise ordinance, and should have been passed years ago.

THE testimonial dinner to Messrs. Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, and Wal Pink will be at the Boulogne Restaurant, Gerrard-street, W., on Sunday, July 12. Mr. Joe Elvin will take the chair at 7.30 sharp.

SHAREHOLDERS in London halls may be interested to learn that Moss Empires, Limited, have issued £200,000 six per cent. mortgage debentures, at a price of £98 per cent. They will be redeemable by annual drawings at £105 per debenture.

THE majority of our readers will hear with much regret that Mr. Fred Miller severs his connection with the Canterbury at the end of this month. Mr. Miller took service under the late Mr. George Adney Payne in 1883, as secretary to the late Mr. Arthur Tressidder, and afterwards to Mr. Will Lennon. On the death of the latter he was appointed manager of the Paragon, and went to the Canterbury as general-manager of the two houses named on the resignation of Mr. Fred Holden.

THE Canterbury will again be tried as a twice-nightly house in September. The experiment was tried three years ago, but was quickly abandoned.

MISS FANNIE LESLIE, we understand, is busily engaged in making arrangements for opening, somewhere near the centre of theatre-land, an academy where she will devote her energies to teaching acting, singing, and dancing. The popular lady's long and varied experience in all these departments seems to point her out as an ideal instructress for stage aspirants.

MISS PEGGY FAME, daughter of the popular Harry Wright and Nellie Gannon, will be married to-morrow (Sunday) to Mr. Ben Whiteley (of the Five Whiteleys) at Christ Church, Brixton-road. The ceremony will be at 1.15, and the wedding breakfast will be given at 69, Vassall-road, Brixton. On Sunday evening the happy couple will start for the Continent on their honeymoon. Congratulations.

MISS TOPSY SINDEN commenced her variety engagements last week at the Holborn Empire, where she was a great success in her new song, "The Banker's Daughter." She has introduced a whirlwind dance, which is becoming especially popular. This week she is at the Croydon Palace.

MR. W. B. FAIR has met with an accident. A workman dropped a plank on his left foot, and it has become so painful that he will have to give it an entire rest and possibly undergo an operation.

THE many friends of Mr. Stanley Rogers will be sorry to learn that he is at present suffering from a severe illness, and all, we feel sure, will wish him a speedy recovery.

PAPA BROWN is remaining at Brighton by his doctor's advice, and is getting along exceedingly well considering the serious nature of his taxicab accident a few weeks ago. His permanent address now is Holland House, Durand Gardens, Stockwell, S.W.

MR. TOM E. MURRAY, the well-known pantomime comedian, having recovered from his recent illness, is about to make a short tour of the Continent. Mr. Murray is grateful to his many friends who have made inquiries, and also to the managers who have consented to the unavoidable postponement of dates for his tour.

ON Thursday at about 1 p.m. Mr. Hayden Coffin, riding in a hansom, was quickly turning a sharp corner in Wellington-street, Strand, when the vehicle ran into a Talbot motor-car, in which were Mr. Reginald Cuerton and Mr. Kyburn-Dellar (associated with The Pixies' Revel production). By the promptitude of their chauffeur a very serious accident was averted. The hansom swayed and nearly overturned. The splash-board of the car was considerably damaged.

THE Royal West London Theatre, which, under Mr. William Bailey's management, has kept the flag of melodrama flying so many years, has become for the nonce a picture playhouse, the dramatic subjects for the week including The Fireman's Daughter, with a rescue 'midst the flames, and The Chauffeur's Dream, a bit of screaming comedy. Miss Florrie Robina, "the English rose," is most successful in her illustrated songs.

ADVICES from America speak in unequivocal terms of the hit which Miss Lucy Weston has made both in Atlantic City and on the roof-garden of the New York Theatre with John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's specially-written number, "I'm out Fishing," in the new revue The Follies of 1908, in which she is "starring." Coming on top of Mr. Harrington's other two successes, "Be Good" and "As you walk down the Strand," for the same lady, this speaks eloquently in favour of English compositions for Yankee consumption.

MISS ROSE EDOUIN, a member of the well-known family of that name, who has lately returned from a lengthy sojourn in the Antipodes, where she has earned for herself the title of "the Ellen Terry of Australia," will produce at the Palace, Camberwell, on Monday an original comedy sketch, written by herself, entitled A Shakespearean Lunatic. Judging by the press notices from down under of this little piece it should prove a welcome addition to the variety boards of the mother country.

MISS GLADYS MAVIUS and Mr. George Barclay, jun., were married by special licence at the Registry Office, Clapham Common, on Saturday last. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Col. Salusbury Davenport, of Bramall Hall, Cheshire, and great-granddaughter of the late Sir Allan Napier McNab, Governor-General of Canada. George Barclay is the son of the popular music-hall artist Miss Kate Carney and the well-known variety agent George Barclay. Congratulations, good wishes, and presents galore have been showered on the happy couple.

MISS DOLLY HARMER, who has been having an enforced holiday this week, owing to the Hippodrome, Accrington, being burned down, has had another bit of ill-luck. During Tuesday night someone got into the sitting-room where she is staying and removed three new summer gowns that had just come from the costumier, also her husband's overcoat, and a few small articles. Fortunately Miss Harmer is well booked up, and returns to Africa next year, Australia to follow, so she is just as bright as ever.

THAT inimitable comedienne, Marie Lloyd, has been affording Brixtonians a rare treat this week, and has been accorded a reception such as is reserved only for established favourites. "Don't grumble at home" and the rollicking "Rumtiddley-um-tum-tay" are a couple of amusing numbers which enable the merry Marie to display her versatility, and her "Directoire Dress" number, in which she so piquantly warbles of the lady who "showed the boys much more than they ever saw before," also created merriment. So cordial was the greeting extended the popular artist that she graciously obliged with a fourth contribution, "Hello! Hello! Hello!"

THE Shoreditch Hippodrome has closed for alterations, and will re-open on August Bank Holiday.

VASCO, "The Mad Musician," had the honour of appearing before their Most Gracious Majesties the King and Queen at the Earl of Lonsdale's house last night, and was highly complimented. His engagement has been prolonged at the Empire until the end of July.

MR. FRED D. HARRIS, formerly manager of the Star, Liverpool, the Olympic, and the Queen's, Poplar, is now running the Baring Hall Hotel, Grove Park, S.E., near the railway station, where he is always pleased to see old professional friends.

BRIEN MCCULLOUGH presents his up-to-date version of "After Balaclava" at the Surrey, Monday next. Pictures of Mac as the old soldier will be sold in the auditorium, and the proceeds handed over to the Veteran Relief Fund.

MISS CRISSIE CROSS, who has many admirers, both in America and in England, has recently added to their number by a solid success in Africa. She is just now journeying home, and is due to arrive to-day, commencing on Monday at Queen's, Poplar.

MR. CHAS. DALY AND MISS KITTIE O'BRIEN, the "tanglefoot" dancers, arrived on s.s. Cedric on June 26, and open at the Tivoli Theatre, Dublin, on Monday. This will be their first European appearance. They will make their début in London in a few weeks.

MR. STAFFORD SMITH, the well-known actor, who was for so many years associated with the late Wilson Barrett, will produce on Monday at the Standard, Pimlico, a dramatic episode, entitled The Shadow on the Blind, written by himself, and will be supported by a first-class company.

A NEW sketch, entitled A Friend in Need, by Richard Purdon, will be played on Monday, and throughout the week, at Sadler's Wells by Messrs. Harry Lock-Purdon and Miss Lily Merton.

HARRY LEYBOURNE, on the Stoll tour, is producing an entirely new impersonation act by Fred E. D'Albert.

MR. CHARLES HANNAN has written a new humorous monologue called The Man Who Walked a Thousand Miles, which has been secured for representation by Mr. Malcolm Scott, who will shortly produce it in the halls.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY COUTTS, together with Mr. and Mrs. A. Cohen, are touring the principal cities of Holland previously to the former opening on Monday next at the Hackney Empire.

MISS ROSE FORTESQUE, better known on the halls as Frankie Manners, has recently joined Mr. Henry Coutts' clever protean sketch, entitled Outflanked. She doubles the characters of a barmaid and a nurse of the Red Cross, and is a decided acquisition.

A REVISED version of the exciting sketch, Black against White, by Mr. Worland S. Wheeler, which in its original form was produced at the Paragon a month or two since, is to be given at the South London on Monday.

MR. HENRY HERNE and Ida Millais will present for the first time in London at the Palace, Hammersmith, on Monday, a new comedy sketch entitled A Merry Widower.

OUR Birmingham correspondent writes:—"The appearance in Birmingham this week of both the Griffiths Brothers and the Poluski Brothers opens up a whole vista of memories. But few would remember The Fairy Well of Windermere at Day's about 1879, in which the vivacious Maud Beverley played the speaking part. It was the custom then at Day's to have a Christmas ballet, which used always to run at least eight weeks, and vied with the pantomimes.

"THE last of these ballets was King Koko, in which Macdermott appeared, and which was attacked by the Chief of Police, Major Bond, who had taken a violent antipathy to Mac, and used his position ever after to gratify that feeling. Anyway, though the prosecution (for presenting a stage play without a licence) failed, it cost Day's a pile of money, and they never produced another.

"MACDERMOTT for some years after went to the 'Museum,' which the writer found the other week was being used as a market gardener's store-room. It was in The Fairy Well of Windermere that the Bros. Griffiths became famous to Birmingham, and they were snapped up instanter for several seasons at the Prince of Wales's Theatre in the capital of the Midlands, appearing with Jenny Hill in Aladdin, and in Blue Beard (1881-2) with Nelly Power, Nelly Moon, J. L. Shine, Victor Stevens, and the Harlow Bros.

"DURING the run of The Fairy Well of Windermere at Day's Miss Vesta Tilley was even then appearing in male attire in the first part of the programme, singing 'Squeeze her gently at the door,' &c., and her father, Harry Ball, was appearing as a comic singer, with a canine assistant. The Bros. Poluski—not exactly the same pair as at present—were at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, in the identical pantomime, The Forty Thieves, in which Macdermott sang 'Here stands a post' and 'We don't want to fight'; and Mrs. Will Poluski (Miss Nettie Waite), now happily alive and well, was then the highly charming Cinderella at the Prince of Wales's, her sister Emma playing the Prince.

"THEY (Mr. and Mrs. Will Poluski) were married during the run of the pantomime. In Cinderella were Canfield and Booker, Jolly Little Lewis and Julia Bullen (Mrs. Lewis). Mr. E. M. Robson played Hassarac to Macdermott's Abdallah—and what an excellent contrast the two! Jack Robinson and His Monkey was the extra attraction for the Poluskis' benefit, Will playing the Monkey; and Macdermott, for his 'bespeak,' put on The Colleen Bawn, with himself as Myles. They were stirring times then!"

THE London Pavilion staff had their 21st annual outing on Sunday last. The trip up river to Marlow last year proved so enjoyable that it was decided to repeat the experience, and the result fully justified the selection. A merry party of some 120 assembled at Paddington and entrained to Taplow; a pleasant walk from there brought them to Boulter's Lock, where they embarked on the steam launch Empress of India for Marlow. Here an excellent luncheon was provided at the Crown Hotel, presided over by Mr. Frank Glenister, who had supporting him Messrs. William Cobbett, "Patsy" Sayers, and F. L. Rose. Guests included Mrs. Glenister, Mr. and Mrs. Montague, and Mr. and Mrs. Lapsley. A very pleasant feature was the presentation of a clock and signet ring to Mr. T. Prior, who has acted as hon. secretary to these excursions for twelve years.

MR. FRANK GLENISTER, in making the presentation, uttered some happy allusions to the services rendered by Mr. T. Prior, and remarked that if the clock were as regular in its habits as Mr. Prior was in the performance of his duties, then it would indeed be a timepiece to be prized! Another lovely river trip; after which the party returned to town, tired but happy.

THE ranks of variety agents are to be swelled by the acquisition of Mr. Leon Zeitlin, who is launching out into partnership with Mr. George Brooks, whose offices are at 36, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.C. To-day Leon finishes his long association with Mr. Henri Gros. It was as "Mr. Leon" that he first entered the ranks of the variety profession, and, at the age of sixteen, he became shorthand writer to Mr. Henri Gros, during the rebuilding of the Metropolitan. This was in 1897. After he had occupied this position for a few months he became Mr. Gros' private secretary at the age of seventeen.

IN 1904, having attained his majority, he was appointed acting-manager at the Chelsea Palace. Here he had as a guide and counsellor the well-experienced Edward Swanborough. For a year he remained as acting-manager. Following this, he was appointed by Mr. Gros to the more responsible post of acting-manager at the Metropolitan in October, 1905, and held the position until June 30 of this year. During this period he worked under perhaps the most astute business man in the variety world, namely Mr. Henri Gros, and gained his first experience of booking by assisting Manager Jack Edgar.

ON the minutes of the Watch Committee coming up for consideration at the meeting of the Manchester City Council on Wednesday, Mr. Ross-Clyne moved an amendment referring the minutes back until satisfactory explanations had been given of a deputation of police officers to the committee, complaining of public criticism of the police force, and of the action of the committee in reference to a proposed performance by Miss Maud Allan in Manchester.

THE deputation of police officers, Mr. Clyne said, was not representative. At least twenty officers had told him they know nothing of it. It was rather a sad state of affairs when a Watch Committee required a testimonial as to its honour and so forth from thirty officers. Would it not be thought preposterous if thirty privates and non-commissioned officers of a battalion were to go and attempt to whitewash their colonel and the Secretary of State for War?

MR. CLYNE proceeded to make allegations against members of the deputation, one being received with cries of "Shame!" and a request that the speaker should confine his remarks to his amendment. Amidst interruptions, Mr. Clyne said if he could not prove his case he would resign his seat on the City Council, an observation which was greeted with a loud "Hear, hear."

"OH, yes," Mr. Clyne said, "I know some of you would like it." He was proceeding to the Miss Maud Allan incident when the Deputy-Lord Mayor, who was in the chair, pointed out that he had exceeded the time limit for speeches. The Council negatived Mr. Clyne's amendment.

THE cricket team of the Empire, Camberwell, played a match with the Camberwell Amateurs on Tuesday. The scores were: Amateurs, all out, 150; Empire, 62 for 6, the game being drawn. Next Tuesday Mr. Sam Mayo's eleven will visit the Empire's ground, Freeman's (Champion Hill). Play will commence at 12 o'clock sharp.

"COPPELIA" is still the great feature of the Empire programme, and Mlle. Adeline Genée's sensational success has crowded the theatre every night since her return from America. Oh, Indeed! which has now reached its last few performances, is the only production in which current plays are burlesqued and the topics of the hour passed in review. Misses Sybil Arundale, Valli Valli, Messrs. Arthur Playfair and Farren Soutar are still filling their original parts.

MR. ARTHUR HERVEY, who has resigned the position he has filled with much distinction as chief musical critic of the Morning Post for close on seventeen years, is a composer of considerable gifts, and his song, "Once," has been sung for years on the music-hall and theatrical stages.

"BABS," the baby elephant at the Crystal Palace, was christened by Miss Maud Allan on Thursday afternoon, but she was not responsible for the blackleading. That was done in the morning by an artist, and the more or less fortunate "Babs" positively glistened for the ceremony. The Persian title of King Zarar was bestowed upon him the while Miss Allan showered champagne between his eyes.

COLETTE ORIGNY, reputed to be the most beautiful woman in France, makes her début at the Tivoli on Monday, at 9.30, in a sensational wordless playlet entitled La Double Epouvante, written by Paul Franck, with music by Edouard Mathé. The action takes place at midnight in an actress's bedroom, wherein events of a sensational character occur, and the lady partially disrobes. Paul Franck, who will support Colette, is the famous pantomimist who has appeared with La Belle Otero, Cleo de Mérode, Liane de Pougy, and Loie Fuller at different times.

MR. J. H. CURRY, managing-director of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Grimsby, has been appointed provincial grand organist for the Province of Lincolnshire Freemasons, an honour upon which he is greatly to be felicitated.

MISS ADA ROSCOE and company will present at the Bedford on Monday, for the first time in London, the successful dramatic episode, A Baby's Shoe, produced under the direction of Mr. James Rice Cassidy. Miss Roscoe has won a considerable reputation in the provinces as an impersonator of the rôles of fascinating adventuresses.

A DISTINGUISHED company, including the Mayor and Mayoress of Hackney, assembled at Hackney Empire on Wednesday afternoon, on Mr Stoll's invitation, to inspect the new decorations. The theatre, always noted for its beauty of design and brightness, has been thoroughly redecorated and refurnished throughout. The colour scheme of rouge and cream, with a delicate green background, topped with gold, forms a dainty picture. Over 50,000 leaves of gold have been used in the embellishment of the house.

THE Mayor of Hackney, after the reception by Mr. Christie, the London district manager, and Mr. Percival, the manager, thanked Mr. Stoll, who was unavoidably absent, for providing such a high-class house of entertainment. Everyone, he said, must appreciate the elevating influence of Mr. Stoll's theatres. There was a marvellous difference in entertainment at variety houses within the last twenty years, and he assured his hearers that no one need be afraid—not even the most sensitive—to bring their wives and daughters to Mr. Stoll's entertainments, notably to Hackney Empire. He was proud to think that the present generation had developed such a high-class and elevating entertainment. Mr. Christie and Mr. Percival had ever been forward in the cause of humanity, not only giving their services but their money. He had come with pleasure to express appreciation for their efforts.

MR. CHRISTIE conveyed Mr. Stoll's regret at his enforced absence, and thanked all who had patronised and were patronising the Empire. Mr. Percival in thanking the Mayor for his kind words, emphasised the fact that Mr. Stoll had always, and would always, provide an entertainment at once elevating and amusing, and fit for all. Selections were given under the able conductorship of Mr. Creco, and Mr. George Ridgwell sang a song and played a difficult piece on the cornet.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

"IN THE TWILIGHT," a valse specially arranged by Hermann E. Darewski, jun., is the latest number added to Messrs. Francis, Day and Hunter's orchestral list, and will be issued early next week.

THAT charming singer Miss Margaret Radcliffe will make her reappearance on the stage on Monday next, when at the Tivoli, Manchester, she will sing "Won't you be my honey?" a number issued by Mr. David Day's firm.

MISS WINIFRED HARE, who has been appearing at the Empire Theatre, Dublin, has been singing with charm and expression her now celebrated number "It's better than being a Carnegie," issued by Messrs. Francis and Day as a "Six-penny Pop." It is by Hermann E. Darewski, the words being by Edgar Bateman.

MISS MADGE TEMPLE made her first appearance at the Oxford on Monday, when she was accorded a hearty reception. Miss Temple looked very charming in a beautiful white lace gown (a most costly frock) and a large blue picture-hat. Her rendering of "Esau" is piquant and fetching.

THE new intermezzo, "Paquita," is taking a firm hold on London and the provinces. It was played by no less than 250 bands, including those of Mr. Dan Godfrey, Mr. J. M. Glover, Mr. Norfolk Megone, Mons. Petcheck, Mr. W. Bings, and Mr. Cuthbert Clarke, during the past week.

NOTWITHSTANDING the heat wave, the London Coliseum has been thronged during the week, one of the premier attractions being Mr. George Lashwood, who has been delighting patrons with no fewer than four numbers, all of which emanate from Messrs. Francis and Day's publishing house. They are "Hang out the front-door key," by Benjamin H. Burt; "March, march, march (You're proud to be a soldier)," by Nairn and Mathews; "Dear Mr. Admiral," by Fred W. Leigh; and "In the twi-twi-twilight," by Chas. Wilmott and H. E. Darewski.

THE Monte Carlo Publishing Co. are issuing a few free permissions for music halls of Messrs. John P. Harrington and Joseph Tabrar's new comedy song, "Make haste! and send me on a girl!" and professional copies are now ready. As it is highly probable that the Berners-street firm will only issue these permits for a very limited period, intending singers may be advised to make early application for same to the publishers.

ONE of the biggest seaside hits featured by every al-fresco troupe of note, from Paul Mill's and Adeler and Sutton's downwards, is Mellor, Lawrence, and Gifford's "Parasol for two," published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. Other songs issued by the same firm which have achieved great success at our principal watering-places are "Lovelight," "Goo-goo," "I want to be among the boys," and "Float me."

MISS YVONNE LAMOR, who purposes producing Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's latest skit, "The New Salome," on the 6th inst., will also "feature" Messrs. Barnes and Weston's strong comedy coon song "The coon's conscience," published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.

IT is a big feather in the cap of Archie Mills, of the Colwick Hall Pierrots, Nottingham, to have written a song which Mr. Walter de Frece, one of the keenest living judges of a ditty, immediately acquired for Miss Vesta Tilley. That brand-new Benedict Maurice Scott, who was the means of introducing the number to Mr. de Frece, has set it to a charming melody, and the title of the song is "That's the time a fellow wants his ma." Mr. and Mrs. de Frece are just now entertaining a houseful of friends at their delightful up-river seat.

MISS HETTY KING'S newest song has just been acquired by Messrs. Francis, Day and Hunter for immediate publication. It is from the facile pens of George Arthurs and Hermann E. Darewski, jun., and is called "Are you the little girl I met the other evening?"

FEDERATIONS AND FUNDS.

THE sum of £169 19s. 9d. is the total reached by The Era Shilling Fund, 1908. The amount grows bigger each year, and it is hoped that we shall attain £200 in 1909.

As announced last week, the Fête, Gala, and Sports in aid of the newly-formed Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund are to be held at the Herne Hill grounds on Aug. 12. Mr. Albert Le Fre, the Sports chairman, will be pleased to receive suggestions for funny interludes.

MR. JOE ELVIN, the president of the Fund, has promised a handsome prize, and is taking a special interest in the affair. To him the Committee are indebted for several excellent suggestions. Fun is to be furnished by means of side shows, comic contests, and humorous interludes. A meeting of the Sports Committee will take place to-day.

MISS MELINDA MAY succeeds Miss Anna de Grey as Secretary to the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, which is now installed in offices at Room 63, Albion House, 61, New Oxford-street, where an At Home is held every Wednesday from 3.30 till 5. Members and friends are cordially invited.

THE annual general meeting of the members of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel, York-road, on Wednesday next at 2 p.m., when the annual election of the committee and officers will take place. All members who are in London are invited to attend.

THE 567th meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held at the offices of the Association on Wednesday. Mr. Albert Voyce, in the chair, was supported by Messrs. W. H. Atlas, G. H. Smythson, Harry Bancroft, Harry Blake, Fred Herbert, and C. Douglas Stuart, secretary. The agency of Swansea was transferred to Mrs. Rosser at the Grand Hotel, and a resolution of sympathy was passed with the relatives of the late Dr. Fell, the Association's medical officer, in Barrow.

A REQUEST from the Music Hall Sick Fund for the use of the committee room for the Fund's Committee was refused, as the Committee, having regard to the extra work entailed by the inclusion of the V.A.B.F., were afraid such a course would tend to dislocate the working arrangements.

MUSIC HALL HOME.
"THE ERA" SHILLING FUND, £170.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am directed by the chairman and committee of the Music Hall Home to acknowledge receipt of cheque, value £110 15s. 6d., the balance of the total amount, £169 19s. 9d., collected through The Era Shilling Fund, 1908, in aid of the above Home. My committee desire to thank the subscribers and the energetic collectors who have so materially contributed to the funds of this institution. I am also asked to express the hope that the committee of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund will arrange not to make their collection for their fund at the same time that the Shilling Collection is being made for the Music Hall Home. For the past five years that period has been between the months of January and March in each year. The collection for both funds going on at the same time seriously affects the total result of each. The committee desire to thank most heartily The Era and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, for the assistance which has resulted so successfully.—Yours faithfully.

BEN WOODGER,
Secretary Music Hall Home.
31, Wilson-street, Camberwell, S.E.

MISS JOSIE COLLINS has been scoring heavily at the Oxford during the present week with two of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s publications, viz., "My Pyramid Girl" and My Cuban Girl," both of which are songs quite out of the ordinary, both in style and vocal range. Miss Collins will sing the same two songs when she opens at the Tivoli shortly

THE RATS MOTORING.

On Sunday the members of the "Grand Order of Water Rats," the most widely-known and most influential fraternity and charitable organisation of the variety profession, held a highly successful motor-car run to Brighton, some 250 members and friends taking part. Apart from the celebrated Rats themselves, it seemed that every well-known person in the variety profession was present, with the exception of those whose bookings kept them the other side of the kingdom. The motor-cars for the run had been promised by various friends of the Rats, and these began to assemble about 10 a.m. outside the Vaudeville Club, Shaftesbury-avenue, on Sunday morning. All the cars had previously been notified as to their numbers, and the chauffeurs on arrival had merely to apply for their number—in the form of a huge rat with the number in the centre—and affix it to their car. Each member knew the number of his car, hence it was an easy matter to place it. The crowd was so much larger than had been expected that the officials found the number of cars at their disposal—about fifty—would have to be supplemented. They, therefore, chartered about a dozen taxi-cabs, taken from the ranks near Trafalgar-square, the Ritz Hotel, and other places, and here it were well to place on record the ready help of Mr. Edgar Cohen, chairman of the General Motor Cab Company, who promptly assisted Mr. Tate out of his difficulty. Eventually sixty-three cars were actually dispatched to Brighton, and so the whole party were able to make the trip without any discomfort. Crowds of people lined the whole of the route, and more especially was this noticeable on the return journey.

Mr. Harry Tate, who organised the run, also acted as chief marshal, and there was much stir and a large crowd in Charing Cross-road when the big procession of cars left the doors of the Vaudeville Club, the headquarters of the Rats, between twelve and one o'clock, the majority arriving at Brighton about three. No scorching was permitted on the road, the main purpose of the event being to demonstrate the possibilities of a pleasant day's motoring without in any way ignoring the regulations as to speed limit, and members were impressed with the importance of making no attempt to evade the law. With his usual practical commonsense, in order the better to attain this desirable consummation, Mr. Tate had engaged a pilot car with a tested speedometer to head the procession the whole distance. The pastoral scenery of Surrey and Sussex is noted for its beauty, and the pretty wooded uplands of both counties looked their best in their full summer dress, beneath the sunshine of a brilliant June day.

The weather, indeed, was perfect, and the invigorating run down to "London-by-the-Sea" greatly enjoyed. The whole affair passed off splendidly. There was nothing in the shape of a mishap, and the only delay was caused by a puncture to the car in which Miss Marie Lloyd travelled. Will Oliver, one of the first of the Rats fraternity, met with a slight mishap to his car; but he and his party were accommodated on other cars. Much credit is due to Mr. Harry Tate for conceiving the notion and for his superhuman efforts to assure the comfort of everybody. Harry, who is nothing if not thoroughly good-natured, however, made one mistake in trying to do all the work himself, and next time he will probably put on a staff of stewards so that he can experience less anxiety and enjoy himself more. But he seemed perfectly happy, and with several trusty helpers at the dinner, it appeared that there were "no complaints."

Among the party were Miss Marie Lloyd, Miss Marie Loftus, Messrs. Harry Tate, W. H. Clemart, Wal Pink, Fred Ginnett, Will Poluski, George Mozart, Sam Poluski, Walter Kelly, and a host of other celebrities of the variety world. At the Royal York Hotel, the headquarters at Brighton, where the genial "rodents" and their friends sat down to luncheon provided by the host, Mr. H. Preston, a large concourse of people waited the arrival of the cars, and gave each well-known artist a hearty welcome.

The following is the lunch menu:—

SOUP.
Reliability. Give it a trial.

SALMON.
A fish from Loch Lomond. Hoot, mon! (Don't ask who caught it.)

DESSERT.
As you like it (if any).
Coffee, Liqueurs, Cigars, Cigarettes, and Toothpicks ad lib. at Consumers' Risk and Expense, and
No COMPLAINTS.

Mr. W. H. Clemart, who holds the office of King Rat, presided, supported by Mr. Fred Ginnett (Prince Rat) and by a large number of the fraternity, the company including many shining lights in the profession. A number of witty speeches were made, Miss Marie Lloyd's reply for "The Ladies" keeping her audience rippling with laughter. Mr. James Nelson spoke to the toast of the day, "The Grand Order of Water Rats," to which King Rat Clemart replied. Mr. Wal Pink, in his customary witty style, proposed "Our Visitors and Supporters, the Motorists," a toast that brought Mr. F. C. Baisley (who lent three Gladiators) and Mr. A. C. Hills (of the Hills-Martini Co.) to their feet. Mr. Walter Kelly, the "Judge from Virginia," said some nice things about Harry Tate, who thanked his motoring friends, the Hon. Chas. Rolls, Mr. Sidney Girling (the famous Gordon-Bennett race driver), Mr. Theodore Cook (of the Darracq Co.), Mr. Chas. Jarrott, Mr. D'Arcy Baker, Mr. F. C. Baisley, Mr. Walter Dewis, Mr. Len Stewart, and others. The cars, some of which were driven by ladies, moved off between six and seven o'clock, their departure being witnessed by a large crowd. The only unfavourable feature of the run was the huge amount of dust on the roads, especially on the homeward journey.

Among those who enjoyed the run and the Rats present were as follows:—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tate, Mr. W. H. Clemart, Mr. Fred Ginnett and Mrs. Ginnett, Papa Brown and Mrs. Brown, Mr. W. H. and Mrs. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. George D'Albert, Mr. Fred Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Wal Pink, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Martinetti, Mr. Joe O'Gorman, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reece, Mr. Will Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Pinaud (Florrie Robina), Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Ryland, Mr. Jack Collinson, Mr. and Mrs. Will Poluski, Mr. Jack Lotto, Mr. Burt Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Will Collins, Mr. and Mrs. George Mozart, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Nolan, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Woottwell, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Bartram, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Le Fre, Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Chester, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Bayly, Apollo (Mr. Wm. Bankier), Mr. and Mrs. J. THE LATE JOHN KEMBLE.

Mr. John Kemble, who passed away on June 11, had a most interesting career. Though generally regarded as an American, he was an Englishman, and was born in the year 1842, so that he was sixty-six at the time of his death. He was originally trained as an artist, and had considerable talent in that direction. An enthusiastic American interviewer—a lady—wrote thus of the deceased gentleman: "Above me as I write hangs a vigorous bit of colour in pastel, drowsy with the spirit of Eastern poetry and gorgeous in colours of the Orient. It is 'The Harem,' pencilled by John Kemble, and has just arrived from London, England. John Kemble, artist, England, does not mean much to benighted Columbians, but John Kemble, middleman, of Arlington, Cotton, and Kemble's Minstrels, awakens recollections of the greatest interlocutor minstrelsy ever knew. The ex-middleman and the amateur artist are one and the same. Kemble lives in cosy quarters in Shepherd's Bush, London. He is interlocutor, stage-manager, and playwright at St. James's Hall, where Moore and Burgess Minstrels have their home. Kemble is an unusual man, gifted with a keen insight into humanity, sparkling humour, broad intelligence, and a wealth of talent branching off in many directions. He is a comedian of marked ability, a painter of merit, an engraver, a writer, something of a poet, and the master of an envied secret which enables him to mix the greatest Manhattan cocktail made in Victoria's domain. Nobody else could throw so much dignity into the time-honoured business of a middleman of minstrelsy. He was the only man in the centre who ever spurred on the end men to arduous endeavours by perfectly scientific play into their hands. He always had so much unspoken wit in his own composition that he fed the fun-makers by adroit hints leading to clever impromptus and unexpected hits." All that belongs, however, to the gala days of burnt cork, when no visitor from the country to London thought the jaunt in the metropolis complete without a visit to the Christy Minstrels at St. James's Hall. Both are gone, and the deceased interlocutor, always a modest and retiring man, had been forgotten by a public to whose enjoyment he contributed by work that was instinct with fun and refinement.

MR. WALTER HOWARD'S Jollity Boys are meeting with great success at Bognor this season.

THE annual outing of Mr. George's Black's Northern circuit of picture theatres' staff, comprising over forty, took place on Sunday last. The party proceeded in a special boat up the river Tyne to Newcastle, then entrained for Whitley Bay. Various recreations were indulged in, such as boating, bathing, &c. Excellent dinner and tea were provided at the Panama House. Special musical items were rendered, and a hearty vote of thanks accorded Mr. Black. The party then broke up, after a most enjoyable day.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

LONDON PAVILION.

Into the London Pavilion scheme of amusement this week comes Miss Mabel Sinclair, a lady ventriloquist, who made her first West End appearance at the same house, to which she has returned to renew her triumphs of a year or two since. In the interim she has been developing her art and adding to her fame and experience in America, where the art of polyphony is highly prized by audiences, who welcomed Miss Sinclair's clever entertainment as something exceedingly fresh and unconventional. Miss Sinclair during her stay on the other side learnt something of the cosmopolitan claims of her act, something also of the exacting nature of those who wondered at her vocal agility and sense of character. Both of these requisites to a successful presentation of polyphony she possesses in a full degree, as one learns who listens to her turn at the fine house in Piccadilly Circus. Her voice-endowed figure, "Jack," through her clever instrumentality, is enabled to carry on a conversation in which repartee is pre-eminent; and there is a Tyrolénne, which adds most appreciably to the versatility and variety of a turn which is as agreeable as it is clever. Miss Sinclair's success is unmistakable.

Miss Nora Brocklebank has beauty and charm, and her introduction to London Pavilion audiences by Mr. Frank Glenister is completely justified by her success. In her first song she is the bonne vivеuse who cries "A fig for to-morrow; let us enjoy to-day," Bohemian philosophy that receives hearty endorsement at the hands of the audience. Her second song, which concerns the irrepressible and elusive Cupid, is very cleverly written, the music reflecting admirably the piquancy of the verses. In her rendering of this song Miss Brocklebank is costumed as a boy, and a very pretty boy too! Mr. Arthur Aldridge sings agreeably of "Sweethearts," a subject for the poets since the days of Ferdusi, the Persian. Mr. Charles Matthews causes genuine astonishment by jumping over chairs and in and out of barrels. Incidentally he clears a piano on the "higher" system. He is introduced by a sprightly and pretty girl, who issues all sorts of challenges on behalf of Charles.

The Harmony Four, who have just returned from Africa, were announced on the week's bill, but their place on the night of our visit was taken by Harry Tate and company in the famous sketch, Motoring, which, in spite of the fact that it has suffered by imitation, still holds its place as one of the most hilarious sketches ever produced at a variety theatre. Motoring has made thousands laugh, and its mirthful mission is far from finished yet. It goes as well as ever at the Pavilion.

Mr. Albert Le Fre is one of those versatile entertainers who could take up a whole afternoon in the exploitation of his varied accomplishments. The ease and certainty of his effects are due to the fact that he has gone through the mill, and commenced to learn at a very early age. A delightful dancer and a born comedian, Mr. Le Fre maintains his high position as an entertainer who can go anywhere and do anything.

Miss Lily Harold returns in the scena "Cherry," which has already been noticed in these columns; Miss Emilie Hayes sings very prettily; Dome manages to put plenty of humour into his clay-modelling; and a hilarious fifteen minutes can be spent in company with Hayman and Franklin, the American Hebrew impersonators, in the farcical legal skit, A Suit for Divorce. Mr. A. Bond Sayers directs an orchestra that plays most artistically.

THE CANTERBURY.

Among the announcements at the Canterbury, where Mr. Fred Miller is spiritedly carrying on the campaign against the torrid weather, we find that of Mr. Francis O'Flynn, "the man who makes the banjo talk." Mr. O'Flynn, like his celebrated namesake, is possessed with a soul for music, and the eloquence of his thrumming makes a most powerful appeal to audiences at the "over-the-bridge" hall. And such thrumming, too! The American march comes with a whirl, in its precise and stirring strains; and then plaintively the artist melts into tenderness at his finger-tips, and enthrals us with a solo that is absolutely inspiring in its tunefulness. The Hungarian Rhapsody used to be played on the piano by the famous Liszt, and O'Flynn has made a clever study of it on his instrument, and the Czech melodies in their wild grandeur are characteristic of a remarkable race of people. Humour is presented when the player imitates the tones of a parson's voice addressing a newly-married couple, and the whole entertainment concludes with "The Old Folks at Home." O'Flynn meets with an enthusiastic reception.

In the Westbrooks are to be recognised the two daughters of a well-known agent and manager, and hereditary ability once more asserts itself. They present, with a male companion, a dancing scena, Two Little Maids from School, and dance several measures with both grace and spirit. There is plenty of go about the whole thing, and the song by the veteran gets home.

Roars of laughter almost raise the sliding roof when Mr. Lew Lake and company play what is called on the bill a petite comedy-drama. It is a sequel to The Bloomsbury Burglars, and is known as My Pal Jerry. Jerry and Nobbler, the principal characters, evoke manifestations of mirth when they, as convicts at Pentonville, make the complaints—the one that he has no piano in his drawing-room, and the other that there are no tomatoes with his breakfast bacon. A more pathetic note is dwelt on at the end, and the production is entirely to the tastes of the house. Mr. Herbert Clifton announces an imitation of Miss Phyllis Dare in her Sandow girl song in The Dairymaids. In its presentation Mr. Clifton seems to have forgotten the fact that entertainments at the variety theatres are on a higher plane of refinement than formerly. Miss Katie Marsh has a rag-time melody, to which she does full justice, also proving herself to be an excellent dancer. Mr. Edward Clark and his Winning Widows have a pretty and interesting show, in which Mr. Clark himself scores most unmistakably by his impersonation of a turf tipster. Mr. G. H. Elliott is immensely popular here as elsewhere in his tuneful melodies and admirable dancing. Canty's grotto is a vision of cascades glittering beneath coloured lights, and the Doreen Girls, Constance Mori, the Brewsters, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope are other attractions.

THE PARAGON.

Sketches and monologues make up the major portion of the programme at this palace for the people in the Mile End-road, and the liberal nature of the current entertainment presented under the direction of Mr. Charles Beecham is striking, even to the visitor accustomed to the amplitude of the schemes of amusement in the variety theatres of the West-end. The chief novelty of the present week's bill is a dramatic monologue, The Strike, founded on La Grève des Forgerons, of the late François Coppée. It is M. Edouard José—an actor, we believe, of Dutch origin—who impersonates the old blacksmith. He has swung "his heavy sledge" for the last fifty years for the same firm. There has been a dispute with the master, and the men have come out on strike. The sight of his wife and children starving drives the old man to make a frantic appeal to his mates to allow him to work. Their taciturnity is not penetrated apparently by his distressful plaint, and they are all silent, except one. He hisses between his teeth the word, "Skunk!" Rage succeeds despair in the old man's breast, and a hasty challenge is uttered to fight with hammers. The elder kills his younger opponent, and is arraigned on a charge of murder. This is being tried by judge and jury in a court scene. The twelve good men and true listen to the blacksmith's self-accusation, and without any comment by judge or counsel, immediately return a verdict of "Not guilty!" On this declaration the curtain falls. M. Edouard José is impressive and dramatic, and succeeded on Monday in completely holding the attention and eliciting the sympathy of a Paragon audience.

Mr. George Leyton's Lucknow puts into dramatic form one of the most stirring events of the upheaval in India in 1857-8. Ten survivors of the Indian Mutiny appear, and the patriotic verse of Mr. John P. Harrington, which has been set to stirring rhythms by Mr. James W. Tate, rouses much enthusiasm. It is declaimed with eloquent warmth by Mr. Leyton, whose heart is in his work, and whose personality fits his part exactly. The sketch is in two scenes, the first being the banqueting hall, and the second the precincts of Lucknow outside the Residency. Then we have a realistic tableau of Sir Colin Campbell and the Sutherland Highlanders relieving the Residency, the scenery being from the brush of the accomplished Mr. W. T. Hemsley.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Fred Karno presents his company in Moses and Sons, a pantomimic absurdity that is played entirely by Jews and Jewesses, with the exception of Mr. Fred Kitchen, to whose fun we have already given ample praise in these columns. Mr. Kitchen's dealings with "showers of gold" are provocative of the heartiest laughter, and his general behaviour is as ridiculous as any lover of farce can possibly wish.

Mr. G H. Elliott's coon songs are chorused throughout the vast building; Mr. Tom Woottwell's lively and droll song, "Blowed if I didn't wake up," is immensely popular; no daintier dancer could be desired than Daisy Dormer, who is acclaimed enthusiastically by gallery, pit, and stalls; there is much merit in the versatile doings of the Brewsters, a banjo, song, and dance quintet of considerable attainments; and the Herald Comedy Four find plenty of appreciation for their singing, dancing, and farcical business. Other attractions are Luis Hardt, in athletic scena, Flights of Imagination; Miss Katie Marsh, comedienne; King and Benson, comedy duo; Miss José Collins, comedienne; Miss May Marton, comedienne; the Sisters Caselli, speciality dancers; the sketch, Memories, presented by Miss Eugenie Magnus and Mr. Lionel D'Aragon's company; and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

Despite the tropical heat of the past week Messrs. Jesse Sparrow and Harry Bawn have drawn splendid houses twice nightly at their cosy and cool variety theatre. This excellent result is undoubtedly due to their knowing just what their patrons require in variety fare; they also know full well the value of detail. The entrance to the Empire smacks of a West End theatre. At the door one receives the salute of Ben Woodger, in officer's uniform, with moustache to match. In the vestibule the guest meets the courteous Mr. Percy Ford, the acting-manager, in immaculate evening attire, whose watchful eye is ever for the comfort of Empire patrons The current programme, so rich in fun and enjoyment, is fully deserving of the liberal support of Camberwell pleasure-seekers. The principal item is the appearance of Mr. Fred G. Brooke and his carefully-selected company in an exciting dramaette entitled A Lost Woman. A vile French hypnotist, Felix Lascelles, has used his mesmeric powers to bring into his den of infamy in Paris the young and pretty wife of the Rev. Harry Tracy, whose father he has already murdered. The distracted husband finds his wife in Lascelles' house surrounded by a group of demi-mondaines, and Lascelles makes Phyllis, while under his influence, act as though one of them. The husband casts her off, and tells her he never wishes to look on her again. But she finds a friend in Louis Cordelle, an artist living in Lascelles' house, and Pierre Cousset, a French detective, who, after many vicissitudes, manages to get the young wife out of the villian's power and prove her innocence to her husband; while Lascelles goes to pay the forfeit for murder and many other crimes. This little playlet is admirably staged and acted, and is of absorbing interest. As the man-hunter Pierre Cousset, Mr. Fred Brooke is to be congratulated on a really excellent performance; most of the hard work falls on the shoulders of Mr. Wellesley Draper, who as the villainous hypnotist has plenty to do, and does it thoroughly and well; as his female accomplice Emilie Lousaine Miss Dora Deane handles a difficult character with delicacy and skill; Mr. Harry Hiller as the Rev. Harry Tracy presents a careful character study, and as his pretty wife, Phyllis, Miss Nancy Roberts invests her part with a sweetness and charm that win all hearts. As her friend the artist Mr. Hamilton Vaun is decidedly good, and all the minor parts are portrayed with care and attention to detail.

A fine turn is that presented by W. D. MacKenzie and his choir of youthful choristers in a charming musical scena entitled Moments with the Masters. Programme:—

Introduction and Entry.....Theo Ward
Chorus....."Soldiers' Chorus" (Faust)..Gounod
Intermezzo.."Cavalleria Rusticana"....
This is sung by the Human Ocarina in his natural voice.
Part Song and Chorus
"Torpedo and the Whale"..Audran
Trio and Chorus.."Excelsior".....Balfe
Solo and Chorus
"Land of Hope and Glory"...Elgar
Chorus....."Light as Air" (Faust)...Gounod

A distinctive and novel feature is the marvellous singing of the youngster who as the human ocarina gives such unique expression to the intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana. Mlle. Haydee stages a pretty miniature show with her marionettes, and introduces a distinctive feature in the wonderfully clever performance of her lilliputian magician Ling-Soo. Rose Pink is a smart and youthful dancer; the Brothers Hamilton are smart cross-talkers and clever dancers and gain much applause; Chas. Cautley, a fine baritone, splendid appearance, and with cultured enunciation, gives point and effect to his two fine descriptive songs, "My drummer-boy" and "Good-bye, Australia," the latter having a tuneful marching chorus that is eagerly caught up by the audience. There are very few actor-vocalists about of the calibre of Mr. Chas. Cautley. The Brothers Danube indulge in some smart and skilful acrobatism cloaked by some merry patter; Delaforce uses plenty of "force" in his memory solos on the xylophone, very commendable for their physical energy and endurance; George Prince, with his eccentric appearance, yodels about the many strange scenes to be seen among "The ruins of Pompeii"; Kelvin and Groves, Scotch cross-talkers and dancers, are a very amusing duo; and Jeapes' Empire picture, Frightened by Burglars, forms a fitting ending to an entertainment rich in fun and enjoyment.

The stage-management of the above important productions is in the hands of the capable Mr. W. Nutt.

Miss Aidee Mellor, a new aspirant for honours on the variety stage, has been appearing at the Hippodrome, Oldham. She had a most flattering reception. With a sweet voice and pretty songs she should rapidly make her way. Mr. Ernest Dottridge has taken charge of her bookings.

The many friends of Miss Clara Reid (Reid and Power) will be pleased to hear that she has recovered from her serious illness, and resumed work at Darlington Hippodrome on Monday with her novelty duologue, The Chambermaid.

ACCRINGTON HIPPODROME BURNED.

The Accrington Hippodrome, a corrugated iron structure situated on Ellison's Tenement, and owned by Messrs. Willmot, Vandy, Potter, and Weisker, was totally destroyed by fire on Friday night (26th ult). The two performances had been successfully given in the evening as usual, the second performance terminating about 10.50, and shortly afterwards the building was discovered to be on fire at the stage and dressing-room end of the premises. Information was conveyed with all despatch to the fire-station, and the brigade, under Supt. Barnes, were quickly on the spot. The conflagration had, however, spread with amazing rapidity, and the whole of the building, which contained a good deal of woodwork, was blazing to such an extent that it was at once realised that it was doomed.

Before half-past eleven the whole of the roof was well ablaze, whilst the interior was in such a state that the fire was raging at white heat. As the destruction of the roof proceeded tongues of flame shot high in the air and illuminated the sky with a lurid glare, which could be seen for miles around. The firemen directed the whole of their energies to the stage-end of the hall, and by twelve o'clock, the flames having somewhat subsided, it looked as if a considerable length of the exterior would be saved. As to the interior, it was completely gutted from end to end. But just before midnight a large mass of the lower side fell in. Up to then the top side near the entrance end was practically intact, but it was obvious it would not remain so very long, and shortly after almost one-half of the corrugated side from the roof to the ground tumbled outwards with a loud crash; then another large piece came away, followed by a number of supports, and the building, of which the only part of any size remaining was the entrance end, presented a wrecked and ruined appearance. It is estimated that the damage amounts to about £3,000, and this is only partly covered by insurance.

The artists who have been performing at the Hippodrome during the week mourn the destruction of their property, as in consequence of the rapidity with which the outbreak spread it was impossible for them to save their belongings. The principal sufferers in this respect are the Waldrons, who have been appearing in the sketch The Silly Burglar, and who have lost a considerable quantity of pantomime dresses and valuable properties. Bugler Carr also has suffered greatly, and the Bohemians, Tiny Arnold, Vesta Fay, Joe Dale, and Keith and Kent are amongst the unfortunate performers who have lost the whole of their effects. A strange coincidence is that Mr. Fortune, the leader of the orchestra, who was in the habit of taking his violin home, should on this particular night leave it in the building, and therefore paid the penalty by losing his favourite instrument.

RUINS OF ACCRINGTON HIPPODROME.

Mr. J. B. Ormerod, the proprietor and manager of the Prince's Theatre, on hearing of the disaster, very generously offered to give a matinée on behalf of the artists that have suffered. The performance will be arranged as early as possible, and the Prince's stock company will give their services, with many well-known music hall turns, from neighbouring towns.

As to the probable origin of the fire, nothing is known, as Mr. Walter Mould, the resident-manager, went through the building just before eleven, immediately after the audience had dispersed, and everything appeared to be safe. The building was then locked up for the night. Scarcely ten minutes had elapsed when the fire was discovered.

"THE MAJOR'S MANŒUVRE."

A Comedy Sketch, written by Frank Webber, Produced at the Bedford on Monday, June 29.

Major Mumps .....Mr. Charles Leverton
Billy Binns .....Mr. Frank Gordon
Rev. Mr. Snookley .....Mr. Frank Webber
Mrs. Molly Dashem .....Miss Emma Stockley

This very lively sketch, which was produced on Monday last, should have a very prosperous future. It is a pleasant change from the customary drawing-room set which is usually the background for most sketches. The scene represents a coach on a corridor express running at full speed, and it is a clever piece of staging. There are three compartments, and three passengers and the guard. The slight story is of Major Mumps, who is returning from his military duties, and takes advantage of being alone in his compartment to change into civilian costume. While the transformation is in progress Mrs. Molly Dashem enters, and the Major has to take refuge behind a rug. A very funny scene follows, and a fainting fit on the part of the widow leads to a climax. The Major proposes and is accepted. The amount of fun which is extracted from the situation is wonderful, and the whole play goes with a rare swing, and the audience are kept in a high state of hilarity. Mr. Charles Leverton was excellent as the Major; and Mrs. Molly Dashem was played in a capital manner by Miss Emma Stockley. Mr. Frank Webber as the Rev. Snookley was very diverting; while Mr. Frank Gordon lends valuable aid as Binns, the guard. The sketch has been produced under the direction of Mr. Herbert Reeves and Mr. Frank Webber, and scored an immediate and pronounced success.

Iris Miyako, 18, a Japanese subject, was charged at Stratford with stealing from a dressing-room at the Walthamstow Palace a half-hoop diamond ring, valued at £30, the property of Miss Daisy Dormer. On the night of June 26 Detective-sergeant Phipps saw prisoner at the Walthamstow Palace, and said to her, "I am a police-officer, and am inquiring about a diamond ring which was missed by Miss Daisy Dormer on the 24th from a dressing-room. I understand you were in the dressing-room with her." Prisoner hesitated for a moment, and then she said, "Well, I will tell you the truth. I had it, and I pledged it for £15." She then gave to Phipps a contract note showing that she had pledged a ring with Attenboroughs, of Oxford-street. Prisoner was remanded on her brother's bail of £20.

M.H.A.R.A.

It is most regrettable that the Scottish railway representatives do not see eye to eye with their English confrères in the matter of the twelve-mile radius rule, which has ceased to operate north of the Tweed. The privilege was an exceptionally valuable one, as it enabled medium artists—not stars—entertaining at smaller townships within twelve miles of Glasgow—for instance—to put their names down on vouchers, and—thus combined—to obtain the three-quarter rate.

That this is so no longer shows a little short-sightedness on the part of the managers of the companies, for many smaller artists, relying on the concession, have been able to accept smaller remuneration. This they will be unable now to do, and considerable loss to the companies will result. Recently a deputation waited upon the Scottish railway representatives, who, we hope, will see their way to fall into agreement again with the Southern lines and restore the concession. Liberality almost invariably pays in railway management, and we feel sure that when the rapid growth of the variety profession is considered by the Scottish railway directors they, as business men, will recognise the commercial importance of acceding to the request of the Association as embodied in the annexed courteous and temperately-worded letter to the Caledonian, North British, and Glasgow and South-Western Railways of Scotland:—

(Copy.)

Dear Sir,—We are in receipt of your favour dated the 12th of June, and beg to express our extreme regret that you cannot see your way clear to grant those of our members who may be within the twelve-mile radius of Glasgow the privilege of placing their names on the Glasgow vouchers.

"The twelve-mile radius" arrangement has, as you are probably aware, already been vouchsafed to our members for several years by the English railway companies, and it has been of inestimable service, not only to our poorer members, but also to the railway companies concerned; inasmuch as it has enabled many smaller artists to accept engagements in certain minor towns (where the music-hall managers find it impossible to pay ordinary salaries), and has thereby materially added to the business of the railway companies.

Many performers would have been compelled to decline these lesser engagements had it not been for the prospective chance of obtaining the three-quarter rate within a radius of the principal towns on the return journey, and particularly Glasgow.

We would sincerely beg the courtesy of your further discussion of this matter, and we would respectfully point out to you that the salaries of variety artists are on the decrease, and if, added to that, they have to lose the concession, a great number of artists will be reluctantly compelled to refuse to accept contracts in Scotland.

We shall be happy to send you a representative deputation of variety artists to thoroughly explain the serious position which is likely to arise in our profession in consequence of your decision in the matter, and we feel sure that when once you have heard our case you will not hesitate to give the matter once more your kindest and fullest consideration.

Thanking you for past favours, and awaiting the courtesy of an early reply,

We remain, yours respectfully,
For the Music-hall Artists' Railway Association—
W. H. Clemart, President.
Albert Voyce, Chairman of Committee.
Fred Herbert, Vice-Chairman of Committee
Arthur Rigby, Hon. Treasurer.
C. Douglas Stuart, Secretary.

"ALMIGHTY GOLD."

A decided novelty in the Empress, Brixton, programme, this week is Kopski's song-scena, Almighty Gold. The story tells how men and women stop at nothing in their efforts to acquire wealth. After an introductory verse a couple of impressive episodes are acted at the back of the stage. The first "living picture" shows a man and woman at the altar rails, about to be united in matrimony, but the unexpected appearance of a lady in black—his lawful wife—on the scene prevents the scoundrel from committing bigamy. The other episode represents an enterprising burglar in the pale moonlight breaking into a house, and apparently searching for "yellow boys," or valuables on which he can raise them. He is interrupted in his pilfering by the aged master of the house, and a struggle ensues, in which the burglar finally gains the upper hand, and stabs his would-be captor, covering the dead body with a cloth ere he departs. This thrilling incident was most realistically presented, and the curtain fell to abundant applause. Mr. Herbert Summers admirably rendered the song, and all the characters were ably enacted, the scenery, by Mr. F. E. Boden, also fulfilling all requirements. The song-scena has a tuneful waltz refrain, and the music throughout, including the march prelude, was excellently rendered by the orchestra under the bâton of the accomplished Kopski. Almighty Gold, produced under the direction of Mr. Royston Keith, should prove a popular item wherever presented.

Carter, American magician, writes under date May 21:—"We have just opened in the Philippines, at Manila. Our first night's house was 2,400 pesos ($1,200 gold), which is the biggest house that has ever been known in Manila. This is a wonderfully thrifty town, all due to American energy. It reminds one, in appearance, of some of the Mexican towns, though with this difference, that everywhere one sees evidences of activity and improvement. We shall probably be here eight or nine days, after which we move on to Hong Kong for one week, thence to Shanghai for three weeks. We may play at Cavite, where Admiral Dewey sank the Spanish Fleet. It is a short distance from Manila, across the bay. There are other Army posts which have invited us to exhibit before them, and if time permits we shall accept such invitations. The Elks own the city, as every white man of any prominence is a member thereof. Our reception and treatment have been royally cordial. Kind regards to all."

FRANCIS AND DAY OUTING.

The founders of the firm of Francis, Day, and Hunter are now reduced to one, and Mr. David Day alone represented the original trio of world-wide fame at the Seventh Annual Staff Outing, which was celebrated by a visit to Godalming on Saturday last. Happily, Mr. Day is in the prime of life and in the enjoyment of robust health, while to maintain the prestige of the house there is also his son Mr. Fred Day, who heads the firm in America, and Messrs. Arthur and William Francis, both of whom are associated with the mother house in London. Mr. C. J. Smith and Mr. W. Eyke were retained for the positions respectively of chairman and vice-chairman which they have filled so ably in former years, and accompanying the party were Mr. Charles Wilmott, Mr. Hermann Darewski, jun., Mr. Edgar Bateman, Mr. Fred Leigh, and Mr. H. E. Pether. Great satisfaction was expressed at the presence among the excursionists of Mr. "Bob" Berridge, the oldest employee of the firm, who, though not quite recovered from a recent illness, was able to be there. It was Mr. Berridge to whom the quaint "6d. Pop" emblem of last year was due, and this year he had not failed to furnish a distinctive favour, for around the neck of each 6d. Popist was a tie upon which was engraved the music of the "Veleta" waltz. Another old employee in the company was Mr. "Charlie" Rooker, buoyant as ever, and quite ready to respond to the demand for a song during a halt at a wayside inn, even venturing upon an excerpt from Trial by Jury, while Mr. Pether persuasively pounded the piano.

In high spirits the excursionists set out from Waterloo by reserved corridor coach, reaching Godalming shortly after ten. Arrived at their destination, many of the party indulged in boating on the picturesque River Wey, which takes its devious course through the town. Others sought the cricket field, where a match was contested between teams headed respectively by Mr. Fred Day and Mr. Wm. Francis. The former side scored a decided victory, its captain so punishing the bowling that after making many boundary hits he compassionately decided to retire. Bicycle records were attacked on the half-mile track, and though in their enthusiasm one rider took a header into the hedge and another ingloriously bit the dust no new records were established.

Dinner was discussed at the King's Arms Royal Hotel, and after the meal had been eaten, Mr. David Day rose to propose that they should drink in respectful silence to their late friend Mr. William Francis, who passed away in January last. Those who had known his old friend knew that he possessed sterling qualities of geniality and kindliness, but those who had known him longest could discern another quality, and that was an indomitable British pluck that enabled him to face and surmount insuperable obstacles. The toast was drunk in reverent silence, and was acknowledged by the sons, Messrs. Arthur and William Francis, both of whom were deeply touched by the expression of affection for their late esteemed father.

The Chairman proposed the toast of "The Firm," alluding to their kindness in granting a day's holiday and in subscribing substantially to the outing fund. The toast was acknowledged by Mr. David Day, who complimented the staff on the unanimity with which they worked for the good of the house.

The Vice-Chairman gave "The American Branch," and in doing so welcomed the presence among them of Mr. Fred Day, who so well represented the firm in the United States, and whom they were always delighted to see. Mr. Eyke also referred sympathetically to Mr. John Abbott, who was away doing his duty in America, but was, he was assured, with them in spirit.

Mr. Fred Day acknowledged the toast, and said that though his work lay in lands beyond the seas, he always knew where to come for a holiday. He was proud to represent the grand old firm in America, and hoped it might extend its activities still further. He proposed the health of the staff, adding that he was sure there were no more loyal employees anywhere to be found.

Mr. Charles Wilmott responded on behalf of the staff, and said he had not been with them so long as some of his hearers, but he had been long enough to realise what it was that made Francis, Day, and Hunter the premier music firm not only in this country but throughout the two hemispheres. He was confident that the house would maintain that tradition for many years to come.

The Chairman, in eulogising the work of the committee, said that they had acquitted themselves ably, but added guardedly "up to the present." Mr. H. Harris, speaking for the committee, which also included Mr. G. Morley and Mr. Fred Leigh, said they hoped they would continue to acquit themselves satisfactorily, and the party generally echoed the sentiment.

A congratulatory telegram from Buxton, where he is taking the waters, was read from Mr. Warwick Williams, and a wire was despatched in return.

A ride through leafy lanes and wooded slopes followed, in brakes provided by Mr. W. B. Richards, of Guildford, and a most enjoyable journey was taken by way of Milford, Elstead, Cutmill Ponds, and Puttenham. Many and varied were the devices for promoting enjoyment during the trip. One gentleman who lingered too long during a stoppage got left behind, and though search parties were despatched to his aid, he could not be found. With plucky determination, however, he started to walk, and, though no light weight, was able to rejoin the party at the railway station, after having tramped a distance of some ten miles. Upon such men, it was maintained, are the foundations of England's greatness laid. Then there was "Judges up." "Judges up," be it known, is a guileless game, at which any number may play, but none might win. After the mystic words alluded to have been pronounced, anyone uttering the words "Yes" or "No" had to pay a penalty of one halfpenny. The most ingenious attempts to extract the forbidden monosyllable from reluctant lips were resorted to, with results so successful that a sum of 5s. was added to the Hospital Fund Collection which on Saturday dominated the town. Tea was followed by a pleasant hour or so on the river or a ramble through the country, and the return journey was begun at 8.45, town being reached about 10.

Miss Letty Lingard, a charming burlesque artist, terminates a successful run of ten weeks at Dover, and will return to Folkestone shortly. She will run her own company again in September.

Mr. W. Doland's Under the Red Cross company deputised on Thursday last week for Mr. Arthur Roberts at the Empress, Brixton. This dramatic episode, written and invented by Mr. Harry Barron, only plays ten minutes and has several very effective situations. It was capitally performed by an efficient company, Mr. Doland acting powerfully as the German officer, and the Australian actor, "Lux," being impressive as the priest. Miss Queenie Grey made an ideal sister of mercy. The playlet was enthusiastically received.

London's furore over the wonderful telepathic performances of the Zancigs is likely to be excelled by the latest addition to the various free entertainments given at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court, to visitors. Mr. Fant Abbot, the celebrated memory magician, thought-reader, and lecturer on the "intangible," is demonstrating in the open air of the Imperial Court and in "The Hungarian Street" his wonderful gifts from the bandstand and rostrum at 2.45 to 3 p.m. and 9 to 9.30 p.m. No charge whatever is made to witness Mr. Fant Abbot's displays, which will be repeated daily at the times mentioned.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Fairs Ahead.

THE fairs ahead for next week are Bognor, on the London, Brighton and South Coast; Bradford (Yorks), on the Midland, Great Northern, and Lancashire and Yorkshire; Haxey, on the Great Northern and Great Eastern; Chipping Norton, on the Great Western; Sampford Courtenay, on the London and South-Western; Taunton, on the Great Western and Midland; Burnley, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Headless Cross, on the Great Central, Great Western, and Midland; Leeds, on the London and North-Western, North-Eastern, Lancashire and Yorkshire, Midland, and Great Northern; Menston, on the Midland; Ringwood, on the London and South-Western; Stroud, on the Great Western and Midland; York, on the London and North-Western, Great Central, Midland, North Eastern, Great Northern, and Great Eastern; Chapel-en-le-Frith, on the London and North-Western and Midland; Holmesfield, on the Midland; Hawick, on the North British; Motherwell, on the Caledonian; and Llanllyfni, on the London and North-Western Railways.

The Guild Chaplain on Tour.

THE REV. T. HORNE will visit Scotland this week-end. Arrangements are being made by Vice-President John Wilmot for the Organising Chaplain to address a mass meeting of showmen on Sunday next (to-morrow) at Greenock Fair. The place of meeting will be McIndoe's show, and the time 3.30 p.m.

THE veteran showman of the Northern fairs—General John Wilmot, V.-P.—is, we are glad to learn, recovering from a somewhat severe attack of illness which has compelled his absence from business for some little time past. As Greenock Fair is one of his greatest enterprises, it is to be sincerely hoped that he is well enough to take his place in the control of so important a fixture, and that he will be able to preside over the gathering on Sunday next.

Largs Fair.

WHILST dealing with the Scotch round, we have to report the very interesting and successful fair at Largs in Ayrshire. The principal shows and machines and other amusements included Carter's cinematograph theatre, Chapman's educated birds and hares, John Wilmot's switchback motor-cars, and J. Wilmot, jun.'s similar set, P. Swallow's galloping horses, and Hobday's steam circus. The shooting concerns were those of Messrs. Dawson, Cook, Newton, Moore, and Irvine. Throwing games and variety stalls were provided by Messrs. Knight, Cook, Grey, Smith, Stevenson, Valenski, and others. Side shows by Messrs. Bodwell, Nelson, and Harkpool.

News from the West.

CAMBORNE FAIR, principally provided by W. C. and S. Hancock, whose well-known superb cinematograph theatre was the centre of attraction, and their fine set of motor-cars occupied the centre of the fairground and afforded immense amusement to the crowds of eager patrons. White's giant lady was an interesting side show, and there were sets of park swings, high-fliers Winchester ranges, rifle saloons, and other varieties provided by Mrs. Lock, and Messrs. Smith, Whitelegg, Charles, and Lock.

Notes from Wales.

THE Gelli Fair has profited by the continued fine weather, and large crowds were attracted. H Studt and Son's magnificent motor-cars were an immense draw; Dooner's superb bioscope was the big show, and H. Gess with school of boxers and athletes did excellent business. Amongst the minor attractions were Matthews' merry-go-round, North's throwing games, penalty frames and variety stalls with a crowd of minor attractions provided by other Welsh showmen, constituting an excellent fair.

WADBROOKE' electrograph is reported as still being at Tylorstown. The excellent variety company with this concern includes Mlle. Melita, speciality dancer; Miss Maude, cornet soloist; and the display of up-to-date pictures under Mr. Jeffries' able direction give tremendous satisfaction. Mr. J. North, jun., with his shooting gallery, throwing games, and striking machines, is, with H. Scard, on the same ground.

JACOB STUDT has been having a season of private business at Chepstow, where his mammoth cinematograph theatre had drawn both town and country. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Studt's beautiful Pullman car living van is a source of great admiration in the towns they have visited this season. Mr. and Mrs. Studt are justly proud of their palace on wheels.

Halifax Fair.

WITH this fair the great Yorkshire cycle of pleasure fairs begins. There were, as usual, as many big concerns, both shows and machines, as the Corporation fairground could possibly admit. Amongst these were Procter's London circus, Farrer and Tyler's No. 1 cinematograph theatre, and Enoch Farrer's two concerns—the new living picture show and the fine art gallery; Relph and Pedley exhibited their unique freak show and their machine set—the racing porkers. John Collins exhibited galloping horses and the twin ships in the air. The switchback gondola and motor-car sets were those of Aspland (B. Howden and Son), and Waddington; a fine set of racing ostriches by P. Collins, galloping horses by Kershaw, and steam and manual swings by Morley and Shaw.

THE avenue of shooting concerns included those of G. H. Cornwall, Ratcliffe, Jameson, and Seed, and amongst the providers of throwing games, &c., were Brook, Turner, Joy, Stewart, Doubtfire, and Mrs. Illingworth.

Mexborough Feast.

THIS excellent mid-Yorkshire fixture was under the management of the Doncaster firm—Messrs. Tuby and Sons, who exhibited their colossal cinematograph enterprise and two big machine sets—the Gordon-Bennett motor-cars and the galloping horses. The other entertainers included Professor Watson with school of boxers, Corrigan and Son with steam yachts and throwing games, J. Amos with steam swings, and Messrs. Pullen, Fisher, and Tuby with park swings, Bentley with big boats, and Messrs. Brannan, Pullen, Fisher, Shaw, Easthope, Lockwood, and Tuby, sen., with shooting concerns. Throwing games, variety stalls, dart boards, penalty frames, and all the fun of the fair were provided by Messrs. Calver, Doubtfire, Pullen, Doran, Lloyd, Hepworth, Norman, Moore, Fletcher, Middlebrook, and Waugh.

GUILD SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR 1908.—Per Mr. C. Shaw, E. Lockwood, 5s.; A. Silverwood, 5s.; J. J. Shaw, 5s.; A. Fisher, 5s.; J. Moore, 5s.; W. Pullen, 5s.; Mr. Walker, 5s.; per Mr. Shuttleworth, Lorenzo Crick, 5s.; R. Layland, 5s.; H. Redfern, 5/-; J. J. Butterworth, jun., 5s.; per Mr. Mitchell, C. Wright, 5s.

Shifnal Wakes.

MRS. S. SHEPHERD'S motor cars, overboat, cokernut shies and juvenile horses, W. Davies' electric jumping horses and motor cars, Sagar's Premier Picture Exhibition, Turner's Winchester ranges and shooting galleries, stalls by Culliss, Lewis, Turner, Winsper, and Murphy, and a host of minor attractions were at this capital fair.

EXCESSIVE TOLLS AT PENZANCE.

An extremely important principle was fought for and most tenaciously upheld by the organised showmen at Penzance a fortnight ago—the right to combine for a common object, and to carry out the principle by collective bargaining.

It is too late in the day now for Corporations to take the high and mighty line of dictating to showmen, "You must take our terms or keep away." Showmen, like other traders and craftsmen, have learnt the art of combination. It is not so easy for Corporations, as in the bad old times, to set individual showmen in trade competition against one another. Showmen have learnt by sad experience that they must hold together or go under. Hence the growing power of the Showmen's Guild.

Penzance a Case in Point.

Corporations are beginning to recognise that when the accredited agents of the showmen's trade organisations approach them officially, and ask to be heard on trade matters, that it is not good business to try either to ignore them or to play the ancient game of "bluff."

Showmen have fought, and have upheld, against powerful Corporations the important principle of "free trade in pleasure fairs"; that is to say, that if the Corporation will not provide at reasonable terms a fair ground for the showmen, the showmen are well within their rights in providing one for themselves. Parliament for years past has refused to give public authorities a monopoly in fair rights.

It has cost the organised showmen of the Empire years of hard work and thousands of pounds to secure this principle of free trade in fairs. Corporation after Corporation have endeavoured to secure monopoly fair rights in private Acts of Parliament, but by the watchfulness and care of the Showmen's Guild this has been prevented. Halifax and Rotherham were notable examples. Scores of public bodies have sought excessive powers of control over the fair ground industry, but in every case the watchfulness of the Guild executive has prevented these restrictive proposals becoming law.

The Extraordinary Claim of the Corporation of Penzance.

Under their ancient charter the Mayor and Corporation claim a complete monopoly in fairs in and around Penzance. It is this extraordinary claim that obviously made the Corporation insistent in maintaining the excessive scale of tolls at their Corpus Christi Fair. They ignored the possibility of reaching a breaking-point, and dictated terms in the best approved methods of absolute masters of the situation—the usual curt "take it or leave it" answer. The organised showmen in the end, having failed to arrange matters amicably, took an independent attitude, with the result that the Corporation lost its pleasure fair revenues, and the showmen lost their fair, holding a carnival instead outside the borough boundaries.

THE REV. T. HORNE AT PENZANCE.

The People of Penzance and their Fair.

All that we have set out in the present article up to now is sad reading, and only illustrates the need of more effective methods of negotiation and combination on the part of Corporations when dealing with the organised industry of the fair ground.

There are, however, extremely important considerations and popular interests that both showmen and Corporations are too often inclined to ignore. We refer to the fair rights and the ancient holiday rights of the people—the toilers and the workers to whom the annual pleasure fair is a real time of recreation, and of necessary cessation from arduous and exhausting toil. What answer will the Corporation give to the people of Penzance for the loss of its fair in 1908?

Public Opinion on the Question.

The local Press publishes columns of letters from indignant writers on the question, and the leading Penzance daily paper has taken a most impartial, yet popular, line on the matter.

In a most humorous special article, the Cornishman treats the dispute as a battle between the invading forces of the allied showmen and the home forces of the Corporation.

"The Battle of Corpus Christi."

"The invasion by the combined forces of circular cavalry, armoured switchback railway, aerial swing boats, scouts, brass bands, and other mounted and infantry forces, assumed a serious aspect on Monday night.

"The combined forces were utterly routed on their first attempt on the Recreation Ground, and it was decided not to assail that position again.

"General Hancock, Captain Rowland, Brigadier Brewer, and Miss Hancock as the modern Joan of Arc held a council of war. After sending scouts throughout the neighbourhood, they endeavoured to find a weak point in the fortifications. They almost effected an entrance both to the east and west of the town, but the Council Brigade, acting in concert with the Land Owners' League, concentrated their fire, and the attacking forces were again repulsed. After a halt for refreshments it was resolved to execute a flank movement, and take the borough in the rear. The advance guard scored a temporary victory at Heamoor, where they effected a breach in the walls of Fort Poltair, and on Monday night the falling masonry seemed to indicate that the besiegers would be enabled to march in and occupy the position.

"The Council forces, however, slept with both eyes open. Again rallying the Land Owners' League, they blocked the gaps, Colonel —— lending the full weight of his support, and effectually barricading the breach made by the invaders.

"General Hancock discovered that he could expect no help from his cavalry, as they were decidedly off their corn, and could only be ready to take the field under much more favourable conditions. However, the rolling stock of the Great Western Railway was requisitioned, and by Tuesday morning the terminus was blocked with all kinds of military paraphernalia, including three dwarf ponies, evidently intended for dispatch riders, and apparently last ridden by the Boers during the South African War.

"Declaration of Martial Law."

"Excitement in the borough ran high, and the utmost consternation prevailed. The juveniles hoped that the invaders would either camp on the Promenade or storm the Recreation Ground, and gain entrance on their own terms. The tradespeople wondered if their goods would be commandeered, and if so whether the Corporation would pay the bill. The Council Brigade wondered what would happen when the war budget had to be faced, and the burghers would find themselves saddled with an extra rate of a halfpenny in the £. All was suspense, and when a charge was fired at Penlee Quarry some inexperienced visitors wondered if the artillery had opened fire. In the meantime General Hancock and staff officers were seen in an armoured locomotive speeding about the district. Whether their object was to capture the Mayor and hold him as hostage, or whether they were bent on abducting the Market Committee, was not apparent.

"The situation was so serious that we have engaged war correspondents to go to the sea front or any other point from which operations can be watched. Whatever tidings we receive from them will be promptly published, but we shall scrupulously aim at disclosing no secrets, which will bring us under the censorship of the military authorities.

"Heamoor, Monday Night.

"Our Heamoor correspondent writes:—Messrs. Hancock, Brewer, Anderton, and Rowland yesterday arranged with Mr. J. K. White, Boscathnoe, to take the field known as 'Poltair Lawn,' and which is situated at the foot of Madron Hill. The above showmen have taken the whole of this spacious field, and will sub-let to the smaller show people. The event has caused quite a sensation in the place. In all probability the fair will be in full swing on Wednesday night.

"Penzance Railway Station, 12.15.

"At the present moment operations are, to a certain extent, confined to the station yard, where nineteen trucks are waiting to detrain. Our special correspondent this morning visited the station, and found the place in a state of 'armed neutrality.' A truce had been called, following on the intimation that an encampment could not be formed at Poltair, and the commanders-in-chief of the invading party (Messrs. Hancock, Rowland, and Anderton) made a reconnaissance in their motor car. Those left in charge employed themselves until the next move was called by chasing one another around the yard, varying this unmilitary exercise by joking outrageously with their sympathisers, who assembled in large numbers, and cast longing eyes upon the covered wagons.

"At any hour the main body of the invaders is expected by road, and then the opposing force will have to reveal their hand. A couple of Town Councillors—members of the Army Council would perhaps be a better title—are convinced that the attacking party is engaged in the historic game of 'spoof,' hence an indifference on their part to the mustering of forces at the station. With the return of Messrs. Hancock and Co. there may be something interesting to report, but, just now, affairs are deadly dull.

"Causewayhead, 1.45 p.m.

"Irate Townsman: I suppose this is what those —— Methodys have done. They've built a chapel up there, and are now keeping the show brigade out.

"Parade-street, 2 p.m.

"Ratepayer: I'm with the Corporation. Let the Council save their dignity, even if we lose the money. Why should we take it lying down? If we lose the £140, we can still live on bread splits and gingerbread nuts. I shall go to Poltair, but not often, and in the dark, when they won't know I'm a Penzance man.

"Market Jew-street, 2.5 p.m.

"Captain Rowland's staff: Yes, we hear that one of our big machine guns, with a platoon of cavalry, has gained entrance to Poltair. The Colonel has withdrawn his opposition, and has ratified the treaty with Field Marshal White.

"Then the armoured train with baggage moved on in the direction of Heamoor.

"Morrab-gardens, 2.15 p.m.

"Burgess: I say it is a thundering shame. Why should we lose £140 and tramp a mile? It will cost £10 to put the ground in order again, but the Council could have made a clear gain of £100."

Local Champions of the Showmen.

Mr. Barnes Richards, in a most informing letter to the Cornishman, puts the case for the showmen thus:—Competition has run high, prices for pitches have gone up, breaking-point has been reached, and, like other incidences in this commercial life of ours, when things come to the worst they must mend. The showmen agreed to sink differences, bury the hatchet of disagreement, and now they live in harmony in a glass house of good resolves, for the Corpus Christi week at least agreeing to stand or fall together under penalties of £50 to each other, if violated.

"This agreement for business purposes our Corporation apparently never gave a thought of the possibility or probability of happening, but probably relying more on the old-standing jealousies and bitterness still existing, with rivalries naturally following animosities and feuds, that these showmen would be found in the 'Recree,' as per usual, wrangling for place and position.

"The Corporation are hoisted with their own petard. At the last moment the authorities are non-plussed. The leading showmen, having seen the error of their ways, have fallen on each others necks and loved one another. In their embrace they amalgamate their interests—a labour organisation if you like, as a leading authority calls it—with the Corporation as the Masters' Federation on the other side.

"So far so good. There is this difference, however:—The Labour organisation are winners, by their action of taking a new field, with thousands of sightseers following them; whilst, on the other hand, the Masters' Federation are bosses over an empty (or comparatively empty) Recreation Ground. During the ancient pleasure period—saint week of Corpus Christi—that has hitherto enjoyed an unbroken record of nearly three hundred years in this ancient borough. (To be exact, in 1914 the ter-centenary of the ancient charter granted of Penzance, could, and is to be hoped, will be fittingly held; but this is by the way).

"The empty Recreation Ground this week means empty coffers to the borough of anything between £100 and £200, to say nothing of losses, or at least, much inconvenience, to many tradesmen who have prepared in certain directions, anticipating, as usual, the course of events this week, following the ways of time immemorial.

"Kindly permit me to explain one item of the trouble. Let us place five coppers in a row in the order 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. These represent three roundabouts and two switchbacks. The main entrance to the Recreation Ground is from the left or lower part, whilst the shows are placed on the higher ground to the right. Rows of toys and other standings run parallel to this side of these numbers.

"Crowds of people pass from the left entrance into the avenue thus made. Experience teaches that the tendency of the public is to steer for the middle attraction, roundabout or switchback 3, thence to 4 and 5, on towards the shows, ignoring 1 and 2, which are, as it were, in the cold. The payment for these two pitches, the show people contend, should be much lower than the Corporation are willing to concede to. In brief, positions 3, 4, 5, and the prices paid, are not so much the bone of contention as the ruinous prices for 1 and 2, considering their bad positions.

"An erroneous notion also prevails that the fair could advantageously be discouraged on more than one ground. I am a stickler for upholding of certain good old institutions—the good old Corpus Christi Pleasure Fair is one. Some institutions can well be allowed to be lost in the limbo of the past.

"To assert that vast sums of money are taken out of the borough by the show people I cannot allow to go unchallenged. I do not think this can be so. I will admit it is a case of "shifting" and changing hands with a great deal of money. This is highly beneficial to any community. Many hundreds of little children every year, in anticipation of the coming fair, have always had their little boxes wherein to place and save up, against the fair, their loose coppers, interspersed sometimes with small silver.

"For instance, take last Empire Day, when over 2,000 dear little children walked in grand procession. It will be no exaggeration to say that at least 1,500 of these have their little Corpus Christi Fair cash-boxes ready to break open this week. Even if only 1s. each as an average be accumulated, it will mean £75 ready to be spent in the fair field. No one is robbed, no one is the loser; but a mighty lot of jollity and joyousness to be got out of it, by spending it on toys, sweets, shows, &c.

"Then there are shop-keepers who in many ways are gainers by purchases made from show people. Hundreds of show people and attendants thereto have to be fed and maintained, and all this must benefit some people.

"Again, very many households augment their incomes during this week by show people paying for lodgings, &c. All do not live in vans, though most travel on the road.

"Some contend that the fair damages tradesmen—before and after—perhaps so. So does Christmas bring its annoyances as much as its benefits. There is this difference. Inconveniences, financially considered, are easier borne in summer with fine weather prevailing, than in the depth of a dreary winter, with its cold winds and its icy rain. Whatever inconveniences are associated with the fair, it might well be contended that the gain, privileges, benefits, joyousness and pleasure generally, are much greater, and far outweigh the groans and moans of our miserable Pecksniffs."

"Penzance Points."

In a chatty article on the dispute, the writer of "Points" in the Cornishman summarises the position as follows:—"In the game of 'bluff' between the show proprietors and the Corporation, the latter appear to have come out second best. The result is that the town loses probably about £140 in ground rent, people have to walk or ride a mile farther than usual to the 'Open-air Carnival,' and the show people will spend less money than usual in Penzance shops. The Council argument is that inasmuch as they held the whip-hand last year, and induced the showmen to bid against each other and pay more than usual, they could repeat their success this year. But the showmen, learning by painful experience, combined under a £50 penalty payable to each other, and sent a group tender instead of individual tenders. The Market Committee knew this, but apparently reckoned on the certainty of no other ground being obtainable in or near the borough boundary, and failed to see that the showmen held the trump cards. The latter had offered to pay the average of the last five years, and their present offer stands good for next year. There is no fixed standard of value for the ground at fair times, except that if a roundabout pays £20 for a stand, it has to give more than 4,000 rides to make up this money before it begins to earn wages for the staff or profits on the capital invested. Taking it for granted that the Corporation are entitled to get what they can, this does not alter the fact that this year they were not in as good a position to bargain as last year, and they would have been well advised to modify their conditions.

"What have they gained? They have saved their dignity and lost £140, while thousands of townsfolk and countryfolk have the indignity of going outside the borough boundary or seeing Corpus Christi Fair collapse. If you met a lion and you hadn't got a gun, the most dignified plan would be to compliment the lion on its excellent set of teeth and fine whiskers. Possibly the lion would purr, and you might go cheerfully on your way. If on the return journey you had your gun, and again met the lion, it would be 'up to him,' as the Americans would say, to admire your weapon and to ask if it was loaded. We repeat it was not a question of price or principle, but of power. Last year the Corporation had the power; this year the showmen have demonstrated that 'unity is strength.' Lord Randolph Churchill 'forgot Goschen' when he made a 'bluffing' resignation of the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Corporation forgot Heamoor when they named cast-iron terms for the fair folk. It requires no pluck to be merely stubborn, and committees make poor diplomatists. One shrewd business man, if given a free hand, would have realised that the showmen held the winning cards, and would not have allowed the Corporation to 'cut off its nose to spite its face.' The loss to the ratepayers this year will be equal to more than a halfpenny rate. Some may save this by staying home from the fair, but most people will take the country walk or drive to Poltair, at the back of Heamoor, where the Open-air Carnival will be in full swing."

The Rev. T. Horne as Mediator.

The showmen have fully empowered the Guild Chaplain to act as official conciliator in the matter as regards their interests. He has already on the spot opened up negotiations, with a view to the reconsideration of the question of tolls, and he is in possession of the mind of the showmen of all grades as regards a reasonable scale of rent for Corpus Christi Fair, and better conditions locally for carrying on the trade and business at the fair.

We understand that the Corporation has submitted their claim under their ancient charter to a monopoly of fair rights to eminent counsel for opinion, and we do not anticipate that any further steps will be taken until that opinion comes properly before the Borough Council.

The Charter, the Spaniards, and the Fair.

On May 9, 1614, His Majesty King James I. decided that Penzance should be one of the boroughs of England. The preamble of the charter sets forth in Latin, in the name of Jacobus Angliæ Scoticæ et Franciæ Rex:—

"That our vill of Penzance is an ancient vill and port both populous and of great force and strength to resist the enemies that shall there invade, and to defend the country there adjoining. . . . and is also a vill that exercised merchandise from time wherein the memory of men existeth not, and also having much commerce in and upon the high sea by means of the port of the same vill, and whereas the inhabitants of the same vill in times past have been manifoldly burthened and are daily heavily burthened with expense in fortification and defence of the vill aforesaid and of the fort of the same, and in the maintenance, reparation, and support of divers sea fosses, banks, ways, and of a certain pier or key formerly built, erected, and constructed; and all other necessary charges in the same vill and the precincts of the same, and especially in the taking and apprehending of pirates and marine felons and robbers upon the high sea, and very lately in the erection and re-edifying of the vill aforesaid, which was by the invasion of the Spaniards invidiously and in a hostile manner demolished and burnt to the injury of the inhabitants."

Seven fairs were allowed to the town, the chief of which, and the sole survivor, being the Corpus Christi Fair. The charter vested the government of the new borough in a mayor, recorder, eight aldermen, and twelve common councillors. The first mayor was Mr. Maddern, whose tomb is to be seen in Madron Church.

We are indebted to the Cornishman for the above extract from the charter. The point of most interest is not covered by the extract. The showmen want to see the clause on the charter that sets out that "no fair must be held within seven miles of Penzance."

This important point would of necessity have to be cleared up in any action taken by the Corporation to assert its charter fair rights. We sincerely hope that no recourse to law will be necessary, but that a mutual agreement will be arrived at, and the grand old Corpus Christi Fair and the Penzance holiday for the workers will be secured to both people and showmen.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

BY THE REV. T. HORNE.

"THE PIPES AND THE DRUM."

[Copyright.]

Shall I tell you why we all love it,
That well-thumped, weather-worn drum?
Like the pandean pipes above it,
With a voice that is never dumb.
It speaks of a time in our history
Which none of us wish to forget,
Or to cloak it around with mystery,
As some do who move in our set.

Yes, the yarn of the pipes and the drum
Is a tale well worth repeating,
To the honour of dad's old chum
(That's his son you heard at the meeting).
As partners together for many a year,
Better men never worked at their graft,
When they cackl'd their wheezes 'twas good to hear
How the yokels all tittered and laughed,

'Twas the day of the one-waggon walk-up,
When one prad dragged the whole lot,
When you had to Parade and "talk up,"
When a solda was all that you got.
Their round was in one-ey'd Wales, sir,
They were stuck at a place call'd Cumbran,
The folks were as hard as nails, sir,
The takings not paying for scran.

Then the horse sickened and died, sir,
And father caught cold and was bad;
But Jim, like a true pal, tried, sir,
To cheer up and strengthen the dad.
Misfortunes fell fast and furious,
For the Toberman seized for the rent;
And the people, suspicious and curious,
Thought the devil his angels had sent.

For three weary weeks dad was ill,
And Jim, like a great-hearted friend,
The fever fiend fought with a will,
And was ready to fight to the end.
Tho' the slang was in pawn for the rent,
Says Jim to the dad, "Never mind;
As long as you're well, I'm content,
And a way out of this hole we'll find."

With a Punch frame, the pipes, and the drum,
They started for Glo'ster one day,
Busking the road, dad and his chum,
Till the old man broke down on the way.
How they got into Monmouth, God knows,
There a pitying soul took them in;
She'd a kind heart for showmen and shows,
For pity makes all the world kin.

Dad had a relapse, was worse than before,
He couldn't bear Jim from his sight;
In his ravings would "patter" and "door,"
As though on the steps and all right.
Jim would answer, "Hi, hi, Mr. Master,"
To father's "Walk up; be in time,"
Playing the pipes and drum all the faster,
All pathos was that pantomime.

One night as he humoured the dad,
Softly playing the pipes and the drum,
Poor Jim, himself almost mad
(For the turn of the fever had come),
Was startled by knocks at the door,
And a well-known voice said, "May I come."
'Twas George Wombwell who stood on the floor,
Drawn there by the pipes and the drum.

His show at the toll-bar delayed,
George heard the queer music close by,
And his way to the cottage soon made,
He didn't leave dad there to die.
Tenderly taken to George's own van,
Fed on the fat of the land.
To be with friends is life to a man,
'Tis a tonic that wealth can't command.

So now, sir, you hear the true story,
"The Romance of Dad and his Chum,"
And that is the Halo of Glory
Surrounding the "Pipes and the Drum."

Welsh Notes.

AT Haverfordwest Mr. W. Haggar's fine new Bioscope is drawing crowded houses nightly, in spite of the hot weather. Some beautiful up-to-date pictures are depicted nightly, which are of a highly entertaining character. The genial proprietor is well known in Pembrokeshire for his many charitable actions.

Staithes Fair (Yorks).

THIS pretty fishing village kept its annual feast last week. To help the fisher folk keep their fair were Harker with his galaxy of open-air amusements, Caris's roundabouts, Robinson's swings, Rich's juvenile horses, Harman's shooters, and other novelties.

FOSSETT'S CIRCUS visited Bangor on Monday, and, favoured by delightful weather, drew large crowds to the afternoon and evening performances. An entertaining programme of equestrian turns was provided, and the variety attractions included Mons. Henri's wire act, Joseph Holloway's bar act, the Sisters Rolands, Alfred Seigel (strong man), and Capt. Zola's troupe of performing dogs.

SOME SHOWMEN WORTHIES.

THE LATE CHARLES TYLER.

Under date June 26, 1908, the Coalville Times pays a worthy tribute to the memory of a most notable character. Mr. Charles Tyler, of Coalville, whose serious illness during this last winter was a matter of common knowledge, met with his death under somewhat sudden and tragic circumstances. It appears that on Monday, the 22nd, the deceased gentleman was riding in his carriage down High-street, Coalville, when he had an apoplectic seizure. The coachman drove at once to the Engineer's Arms, where he was seen by Dr. Jamie, who ordered his removal to his residence in London-road. He died there about four o'clock on the following morning.

Although Mr. Tyler has not been following the active pursuit of the business which made him famous on the fair grounds of the United Kingdom, he was without doubt one of the most highly respected and successful men of business in the showman world. At the time when the art of photography was in its infancy, Mr. Tyler saw its vast possibilities, and started out with a portable photographic saloon, which in its day was one of the best-equipped concerns of its kind travelling the fairs of the United Kingdom.

About fifteen years ago, however, he became the licensee of the Engineer's Arms Inn, Belvoir-road, and remained so up to the time of his death, though latterly the house had been managed by his son, Mr. E. Tyler. During all the years he has followed the somewhat difficult calling of a licensed victualler his house has been well conducted, and he enjoyed the esteem of his fellow-townsmen. Being of a very genial disposition, he was popular among all his acquaintances. Mr. Tyler never held any public office, though on one occasion he offered himself as a candidate in the Central Ward for a seat on the Urban Council. This was on the occasion of the by-election caused by the resignation of the late Mr. W. D. Stableford, but he was defeated by Mr. Joseph Lager. Deceased was the owner of the Public Hall and a good amount of house property in the neighbourhood. He was seventy years of age last December, and leaves a widow, eight sons, and three daughters, for whom much sympathy is felt. One of the sons is Mr. A. W. Tyler, the proprietor of the Red House Hotel, Coalville.

Twenty years ago, when the showmen began to organise themselves for the purpose of trade defence and the vindication of their character as law-abiding citizens, both Mr. and Mrs. Tyler took a very active part in the defence movement, and were amongst the earnest group of active workers whose zeal and energy brought about the formation of the Showmen's Guild. We are quite certain that the sympathy of showland will go out to the members of the Tyler family, and in that tribute of sincere condolence and respect for the memory of a veteran of the road we wish to take our part.

THE FUNERAL.

The interment of the deceased took place at Coalville Cemetery, in the presence of a large concourse of people. The service in the Parish Church and at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. A. S. Dowling, Rector of Ravenstone, the Coalville vicar being in London. The mourners were Mrs. Tyler, the widow, Albert and Arthur, sons, and Alice, eldest daughter, in the first coach; three sons, Henry, Frank, and Edwin, and the second daughter, Florence, in the second coach; Ernest and Fred, sons, Mrs. A. W. Tyler, daughter-in-law, and Miss Suett, sister-in-law, third coach; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Massey, nephew and niece, and Mr. and Mrs. James, cousins, of Wymeswold, fourth coach; Dr. R. W. Jamie, medical adviser, Mr. J. J. Sharp, solicitor, and Mr. Mee, representing Messrs. Trueman, Hanbury, and Buxton, fifth coach; and Father O'Reilly and Councillor M. McCarthy in the sixth coach. Walking at the head of the procession were several members of the Coalville and District Licensed Victuallers' Association—Messrs. W. Sheffield, W. Colver, T. W. Coulson, J. W. Goacher, J. Billings, Coalville; W. Blythe, J. Hough, Swannington; G. Bramwell, Forest Rock; J. Shepherd, Osgathorpe; S. Rudkin, Bardon; and P. W. Griffin, Whitwick; also Councillors O. Lindley and F. Griffin, Messrs. Sansome, F. J. Bayliss, F. Goddard, H. W. Joyce, the Altons, and W. Liggins, Ashby. Immediately preceding the hearse was deceased's pony and carriage, laden with a magnificent floral composition in the shape of wreaths, harps, crosses, and anchors. The body was enclosed in an oak shell in a panelled oak coffin, with brass mountings, the breast-plate bearing the inscription, "Charles Tyler, died June 23, 1908, aged 70 years." It was lowered into a white glazed brick grave, which Mr. W. Haggar had nicely lined with laurels, beech leaves, marguerites, and carnations. The bearers were Messrs. Geo. Toon, F. J. Baker, C. Allen, J. Lenton, W. F. Moore, and T. Mackay.

A touching cablegram was received by the family from deceased's seventh son, Mr. Chas. Tyler, who is a veterinary surgeon in South Africa.

There were twenty-six beautiful floral tributes from the following:—His devoted and sorrowing wife; Harry and Mary, son and daughter; Ernest and Charlie, sons; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Tyler, son and daughter, of Burton; Flo and Maud, daughters, and Tom; Albert, son, and family; Arthur and Annie, son and daughter; Fred and Alice, son and daughter; Frank and Edie, son and daughter, of King's Lynn; Miss R. Suett; Alf. and Lizzie Massey; a few old friends; Mr. and Mrs. M. McCarthy; Arthur Reeve and Geo. W. Webb; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Moore; members of the Royal Hearts of Oak Coalville Lodge; Mr. and Mrs. O. Lindley; Mr. and Mrs. Parramore; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Sharp; Southam and Co.; and A. Dakin, White Lees, Coalville; Mrs. Davenport, Ashby; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Land; Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Brown; Coalville and District Licensed Victuallers' Association; Messrs. Coleman and Sons; and Mr. and Mrs. C. McKenna, Bardon Hill.

Mr. A. B. Moss ably carried out the funeral arrangements.

THE LATE BROWNLOW TRIBE BURNETT.

On Wednesday, June 23 last, there passed away after a long and painful illness a showman who, in his day, made his mark and was famous in the world of shows. B. T. Burnett was one of those men who, from time to time, enter the ranks of travelling showmen, and bring into the business original ideas and singular enterprise. After a distinguished career in the Army, with an unbroken record of good conduct during twelve years, he purchased his discharge in 1879.

He took the novelty-loving public of Great Britain by storm with an entirely original show, "The Military Tournament." His first wife, who died six or seven years ago, was a member of the celebrated Whaite family, who were famous as painters of show fronts and panoramic scenery.

B. T. Burnett, like the late Charles Tyler, was an earnest champion for the rights and liberties and the good character of travelling showmen. He gave most devoted service, and was on the executive committee of the Showmen's Guild in the early years of its work. He received the honour of being called to the presidential chair in 1893, and again in 1896. The latter years of his life had been somewhat chequered by adverse fortune. After having amassed considerable profits with his military tournament concern, he enterprised with other show and roundabout ventures. He suffered a most staggering blow through a big fire on a show ground in Dublin, where he had great interests, both in machine and show novelties. From this reverse, in spite of all his struggles, he never recovered.

His second wife has been most devoted to him all through the days of his misfortune, and has herself nursed him up to the last moment. He leaves behind him a family of three small children and the young widow utterly unprovided for.

His last enterprise, in which he was materially assisted by Mr. P. Collins, was to open his show at the Fun City, Olympia, for its last winter season. Although Mr. and Mrs. Burnett worked unceasingly to make it a success, it unfortunately turned out a failure. It was during this disastrous season at Olympia that the first symptoms of the fatal malady from which he died began to manifest themselves. Two months ago he entered St. Thomas's Hospital, and was treated for cancer in the lower jaw. Unfortunately the terrible disease had spread too rapidly to be effectively dealt with. He was thence removed to his home in Kennington-road, and was under the immediate care of his wife until he passed away on the date already mentioned.

The funeral, strictly confined to members of the family, took place on Monday, the 29th, at Tooting Cemetery. In this instance, too, we doubt not that the full sympathy of the showman world will be given the widow and children left without the breadwinner.

DEATH OF A WELL-KNOWN LANCASHIRE TRAVELLER.

We are sorry to have to record the death of James Hibbert, of 19, Bloom-street, Stockport, aged sixty-four years, which took place at his residence, as above, on Sunday, June 28, at 6.30 p.m. The deceased was one of the oldest roundabout proprietors on the road.

The funeral took place on Thursday, July 2, in the family vault at the Borough Cemetery, Stockport, and was attended by the family and a host of personal friends, amongst whom we noticed the following:—Mr. Linny, Market Inspector, Stockport; Mr. Holt, Market Inspector, Stalybridge; Mr. John Collins, Liverpool; Mr. McDermot Ashton; Mr. Priestley Ashton; Mr. T. Hurst Clifton, who attended to represent the Vandwellers, and also the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union; also R. and J. Ingham, and others representing the Lancashire and Cheshire Stallholders' Union.

The funeral cortège consisted of open glass hearse and twelve coaches. There was upwards of sixty wreaths, amongst which we noticed a magnificent one sent by the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union, of which the deceased was a member. As showing the respect in which the deceased was held, the blinds were drawn all along the route to the Cemetery, which was crowded during the interment.

LORD JOHN SANGER'S hippodrome and menagerie paid a visit to Edinburgh last week, and gave a series of performances before crowded and enthusiastic audiences. The resources of the company were well displayed in the variety of the programmes which were submitted—daring feats of horsemanship in the arena by the Austins; remarkably good acrobatic performances by the Marco Troupe; admirable examples of horse training shown by Miss Lina in her introduction of a beautiful animal; dashing turns by the Airless Troupe on the flying trapeze; and extraordinary feats of strength by Cyclo—comprising a few of the numerous exciting items of an entertainment brimful of interest from first to last. The clown, Pimpo, is one of the most genuinely funny wearers of the motley we have seen, and his clever fooling was received with shouts of laughter. The programme concluded with a stirring representation of Dick Turpin's Ride to York; and at the close the audience had an opportunity of inspecting the well-stocked menagerie, which contains many striking specimens of wild animals.

OPPOSITION TO THE MOVABLE DWELLINGS BILL.

In order that our readers may understand the present position of the organised opposition to Lord Clifford's Movable Dwellings Bill we give the latest particulars. From every important centre of show life petitions have been sent to the Guild Executive for presentation at the right time to the House of Lords. The petition is worded as follows:—

"To the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled.

"We, the undersigned, being showpeople attending the fairs of the United Kingdom, do protest against the Movable Dwellings Bill now before your Honourable House. The terms of the Bill include within its provisions and penalties all van-dwellers and users of tents and booths. We deny that such drastic legislation is necessary for our trade and mode of life. Further, we regard its all-inclusive provisions as insulting to us as a body of lawful traders, and we pray your Honourable House so to amend the Bill that Showmen and Fairground Traders shall be exempt from its provisions."

The petition is being extensively signed all over the country, and it is confidently hoped that when it is presented it will show the House of Lords the importance of the trade and industry of the fairground threatened by Lord Clifford's proposed legislation.

Protest Meetings on Fairgrounds.

Indignation meetings of showpeople have been held at a great number of the fairs since the beginning of the show season, notably at Blackburn, Wrexham, Huddersfield, Birmingham, Leicester, Lincoln, Boston, Darlington, Redruth, and Perth.

Before the Bill comes on for its Committee stage, meetings will have been held at a number of other great centres of show life, and Parliament will be in possession of the facts as far as they affect the trade and business of the fairground, and also will be made fully aware of the serious objections held by showmen against any such restrictive legislation.

Opposition to the Bill from Other Sources.

The Guild Chaplain has received the following important letter from the Executive Council of the Gypsy Lore Society:—

"Dear Sir,—In case your Association is taking active steps to oppose the Movable Dwellings Bill, I write to suggest that you should communicate your views to Earl Russell, who has expressed strong dislike for the measure, and in answer to a letter written on behalf of the gypsies, stated that he was not disinclined to continue his opposition. What he needs, of course are facts, and these you will no doubt be able to supply.

"Our interest in the gypsies is largely scientific, and we have not collected any statistics which are of much use; but you may be able to speak with authority of the whole body of 'travellers.'—Yours sincerely, "R. A. SCOTT MACFIE.

"June 29, 1908."

The scathing criticisms of the Bill by Earl Russell on its second reading in the House of Lords will be well remembered by our showmen readers. The ground of the noble Earl's opposition was not particularly to defend the gypsies as a class, but to conserve the general understood liberty of every British citizen to use a tent or van for either pleasure or trade, so long as he kept well within the safeguards of ordinary law. We were present at the debate, and were glad to see that the noble Earl carried the sound sense of the House with him, and that both friends and foes to the measure admitted that to pass the Bill at all it would have to be amended along the lines indicated by Earl Russell and the other critics of the Bill.

The Case for the Gypsy and other Users of Tents and Vans.

We have no doubt that even the poor despised gypsy will find friends to speak up for him in the British Parliament. The honourable traditions of the Mother of Parliaments as the champion of individual liberty within the security of the Common Law will find many a champion in both Houses of Parliament.

Although we have repeatedly stated that the case for the showman is separate and utterly distinct from the case for the gypsy and other casual users of tents and vans, it is a matter of satisfaction to us that even the much misunderstood and harassed gypsy will find someone to speak up for him in this crisis of faddistic legislation.

We have already indicated that the Showmen's Guild is at the present moment negotiating with the promoters of the Bill with a view to the better definition of its terms and the drastic amendment of its liberty-destroying proposals, in order that if the measure passes Parliament it may injure as little as possible the trade and business of the travelling showman.

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

ABRIDGEMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

1,609.—Amusement apparatus. Cooper, J. E., of Stratford, London. Relates to a reciprocating stairway, and consists in arranging between two stairways (a, b) which reciprocate in opposite directions, a second way (c) formed in two parts (*c*1, *c*2), which are also reciprocated in opposite directions, and in directions opposite to the respective adjoining ways (a, b). The ways are provided with fixed hand-rails as d, but preferably the inner rails (*d*1, *d*2, Fig. 4) are connected to and move with the stairways, the supports (e) for the rails being crossed so that the support for each section is attached to the adjacent section, and reciprocates in a direction opposite to its own stairway. The girders between the sections are recessed to allow the rails to reciprocate. As shown, the two outer ways are reciprocated by eccentrics (k) on a shaft (j) driven from a motor (g), and the sections (*c*1, *c*2) are reciprocated by eccentrics (*k*1) on a counter-shaft (*j*1) driven at a reduced speed from the shaft (j). The driving mechanism may also actuate a circular rack on a turntable (*n*1) provided with a hand-rail (o) at the top of the stairways, to prevent crowding at the top. According to the provisional specification, flexible outside hand-rails formed of wooden blocks on a driven sprocket chain may be used.

1,265.—Recreation apparatus. Hurst, T. C., of Manhattan, New York, U.S.A. A body (1), which may represent a motor-car, street or railway car, cab, carriage, boat, &c., is suspended by rods (3) and eyebolts (4) from a frame (2), and is fitted with seats. The car is given motion similar to that of a running vehicle. It may be swung laterally by means of a steering-wheel (5), which operates a drum (6), around which is passed a cord (7) fixed to the frame (2), so that the effect of running around a curve is produced. To give the effect of moving up or down hills, the car is swayed forwards or backwards by means of a lever (16), which moves the car bodily and at the same time, through links (17, 18, 19), raises or lowers a dashboard (15) to enhance the effect. Pictures from a kinematograph, &c., may be produced on the front or sides of the car. The car body is vibrated by means of a wheel (8) mounted in bearings (9) provided with an eccentric weight (10), the wheels being driven by a motor (11) controlled by a rheostat (12). Elastic fans (14) cause a rush of air through holes in the dashboard.

JOHN SCOTT'S Royal British Circus visited Wilton on Saturday last and presented a first-class programme to a packed house, including the following artists:—Mr. Joe Hastings, champion jumper; Mlle. Ameda, hand and foot equilibrist; Mr. George Freeman, high leaper and somersaulting over horses; Mr. G. H. Scott, jockey act rider; Mlle. Flora, wire act; Miss Nellie Gillis, bareback equestrienne. The troupe of clowns deserve special mention; they were headed by Poor Billy, and their jokes and antics were much above the average. The performance was brought to a close with the Imperial Bioscope, when a splendid selection of pictures were given, which were very steady. The band, under the leadership of Mr. J. Benedum, played some pleasing selections.

"THE TOP OF THE BILL."

Musical Extravaganza, produced at the Standard, Pimlico, on Monday, June 29.

Jack Danby .....MR. WILLIAM GREEN
Ida Downe .....MISS DORA LANE
Lesser Columbus .....MR. TESTO LEWIS
Colonel Downe .....MR. H. BUCKSTONE CLAIR
Crichton .....MR. E. E. GILES, JUN
Nancy .....MISS M. SADIE

Mr. Charles Carey's extravaganza, The Top of the Bill, is a bright and entertaining musical comedy interlude that met with a cordial reception on its production at the Standard on Monday evening. The action takes place in the ballroom at the Splendid Hotel, where Jack Danby, a gay young spark, proposes to pretty Ida Downe, the daughter of Colonel Downe. Jack, it must be explained, is a widower, and he receives the unwelcome news that his stepdaughter, a "golden-haired, blue-eyed girl" whom he has never set eyes on, is coming to visit him. Instead of the "blue-eyed babe" expected, it is a quaint-looking female of uncertain age that makes her appearance in the ballroom. Nancy is her name, and she has occupied the proud position of "top of the bill" on the halls, but her mother having left her a heiress, she has given up the stage and is anxious to get into society. On the condition that she does not disclose her relationship to Jack, he promises to find her a husband, and almost persuades his impecunious friend Crichton to propose to Nancy. At the last minute, however, Crichton begs to be excused, notwithstanding the lady's wealth, and Col. Downe decides that he might do worse than wed his future son-in-law's step-daughter. Miss M. Sadie created much hilarity by her droll impersonation of Nancy, very amusing also being her singing of a coster ditty and another number, "The Fancy Ball." She was admirably aided in the fun-making by Mr. E. E. Giles, jun., who cut a very grotesque figure when disguised in an ill-fitting military uniform, the love scene between the couple being most laughable. Mr. William Green was an admirable Jack Danby, his song in praise of coaching being an excellent number well rendered; Miss Dora Lane made a dainty Ida; and Mr. H. Buckstone Clair contributed an effective portrait of Colonel Downe. The comely ladies of the chorus and their smart male partners largely contributed to the attractiveness of the production, which was under the able direction of Mr. Buckstone Clair.

An old favourite in Mr. T. S. Dickie's entertaining programme is Mr. Tom Bass, who gives a funny impersonation of a sailor who enjoys the confidence of the commander of the Channel Fleet, and is also evidently quite the ladies' man when ashore. Mr. Bass is also reviving a song that must be new to many present-day music hall habitués, "The last, last man," brought up to date with references to the Suffragettes and the Limerick craze. Miss Daisy James, a popular comedienne, sings with much point a ditty concerning a knowing young miss named "Melinda," also describing a Cockney girl's adventures in the Gay City, both songs being loudly acclaimed. The Markies have a well-worked and amusing comedy and musical interlude in From Pavement to Stage; and the Brothers Diamond are exceptionally smart one-legged equilibrists, and aroused some of the heartiest applause heard during the evening.

Laughter was almost continuous during the occupancy of the stage by Dale and O'Malley, a couple of really amusing cross talk comedians, who have some new jokes and a particularly droll way of relating them. Mr. Shirley Liggins and his coloured companions submit a pleasing entertainment of song and dance in An Alabama Plantation. The Edisonograph has a couple of funny subjects in The Student's Revenge and Jones Has an Evening Out, and a pathetic one in For He's a Jolly Good Fellow; and other enjoyable items in the programme are given by Mr. A. E. Clifford, comedian; Miss Ada Parker, comedienne and dancer; Gicardo, a skilful young juggler; Miss Bessie Benson, comedienne; and Mr. Fred Dunstone, comedian.

THE EMPRESS ANNIVERSARY.

The ninth anniversary of this popular hall was celebrated on Friday, the 26th ult., and the programme arranged by Mr. Nelson Francis, the popular manager, assured for the public a most pleasant evening. The interior of the house was most tastefully decorated for the occasion, and unbounded enthusiasm prevailed throughout the evening. Turn followed turn with great rapidity, and the smartness with which the programme was presented speaks volumes for those in charge behind the scenes, everything working splendidly, and it being close upon midnight before the closure was put in force.

After a crisp and well-rendered overture by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Robert Allington, we passed on to the more serious business of the evening, and it is difficult to say who carried off the greatest honours, so excellent were the various turns. A prominent place must be accorded to Tom Wootwell, who gave a capital number entitled "Wait a minute." This is well suited to this comedian's peculiarities, and he was the recipient of most hearty applause on concluding. Arthur Roberts, a great Brixton favourite, presented Till Sunday, another of his side-splitting screamers. Much has already been written about this, so it will suffice to say that whilst he was in possession of the stage nothing but roars of laughter were heard. He was ably supported by a most capable company, including Miss Ruby Celeste, of whom all too little is seen. Another great favourite, Tom Leamore, sang his "swell" song with great success. Miss Alice Hollander's fine voice was heard to the greatest advantage, and she had many times to bow her acknowledgments on concluding. Sam Mayo scored in his usual fashion, and the name of Miss Daisy Wood should soon be as popular as that of her more famous sisters.

The appearance of the daughters of Mr. Nelson Francis was the signal for a perfect hurricane of applause. These two clever little kiddies sing and dance in a manner that would do many of their seniors credit, and each on concluding was the recipient of a handsome bouquet. Will Evans in his song about a breach of promise case was very amusing; Harry Pleon, in a sort of mimetic monologue, had a great reception; and the Three Orleans sang and danced in a manner that called for nothing but praise. Carnival Time, an amusing musical sketch, presented by Henry Gregory and company, scored an instantaneous success, and Miss Tots Davis, a charming comedienne, should certainly feel flattered at the tremendous applause she received. The Sisters Caselli are dancers of the very first water; and the fine singing of Angus Strong was much appreciated. Other contributors towards a most enjoyable evening were Dora Healy, Hamilton Hill, Maidie Scott, Zena Day, Nellie Dulwood, Rose Cambry, Harry Clark, George Nano, the Milton Trio, and Sam Williams. The front of the house was well looked after by a most excellent committee, of whom the acting-manager, Mr. Francis Winchcombe, was always a conspicuous figure. The stage was under the capable direction of Mr. Leon Bridgman, whose henchmen included Messrs. Will Oliver and R. L. Gaston.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

VARIED and comprehensive are the subjects treated by the all-embracing kinematograph this week, and events of comic, dramatic, patriotic, and topical interest are included in the newest issue. Eight novelties are to be placed to the credit of Pathé Frères.

A SCENE of comic and fantastic effect is presented in A DUEL WITH DYNAMITE. Two rivals, having quarrelled, each swears to wipe out the insult with blood. The adversaries attack one another with equal ardour and enthusiasm, so that neither is the victor. A renewed attempt proves no more satisfactory, and the seconds eventually decide that the opponents shall settle their difficulty with dynamite. The machine is fixed up, each one is given a torch, and they hunt each other in desperation. Fate, however, wills it that both machines shall be ignited exactly at the same time, with the result that both combatants are blown up into the land of moon and stars. A few seconds after a little surgeon, all dressed in black, gathers up their several members and carefully puts them together. The process proving quite satisfactory, the two men stand up, shake hands, and are reconciled.

UNUSUAL COOKING is a film of the trick order. The world is evidently going awry, for the spoons and forks and knives, with a head and two arms each, carve the cook and cook him, and the brooms, after putting the house in order, go back to their allotted corner. Cooks, kitchenmaids, and scullions are therefore able to have a good time on account of their work being done without their having even to superintend it. THE MESMERISER is a portrayal of dramatic and realistic scenes that happened in Spain. A money-collector having been killed under mysterious circumstances, we are enabled to assist at thrilling experiments which will help to trace the culprit. The sister of the victim submits herself to the influence of a medium, and under the magnetic spell sees the crime as it actually took place, and discovers the murderer in his own house. A GAME OF HIDE-AND-SEEK provides a series of comic scenes. A bevy of children are let loose in a flat, and go through numberless playful tricks, filling the house with their laughter and exhilarating the beholder with the display of youthful spirits.

COMIC also is the presentation of MR. AND MRS. THOMAS AND BABY. Father is left alone, smoking and reading his paper. In an incautious moment he rings for nurse, and asks for baby. When discovered the little girl is in the act of eating some rich sweets, and her delight on learning that papa will take her for a walk is unbounded. Outside a toy-shop baby wants a wooden horse, so papa buys it and drags it along after him. Papa waxes hot, but no matter. The little girl sees a bicycle and wants a ride. Anyone who is in the habit of taking out a small child will grasp our meaning! Father does as desired. A man passes with balloons; papa buys one for his pet. She soon gives it to him to take charge of, when the wind rises and poor daddy is taken right up in the air. Fortunately the cord snaps, and papa descends and is taken to the arms of his small daughter.

Subjects of a varied kind are also provided in THE STORY OF A GENTLEMAN'S JACKET, a droll depiction of the misadventures of a coat; PILGRIMAGES AND FAIRS IN BRITTANY, with its scenes of many-sided interest; and THE CUSTOMS OFFICER'S REVENGE, a dramatic representation of an encounter with smugglers.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

"TOPICAL" is the watchword of the Urban Company this week, and some very fine specimens of current events are furnished. A film upon which much store will be set is that of the REEDHAM BOYS' FESTIVAL DRILL, on June 24, a function which is reproduced annually by the Urban Company, and is always eagerly anticipated in every clime. A fascinating display of beautiful and intricate movements is furnished by the evolutions of the admirably drilled lads, who combine in column movements forming the word "Reedham," and afterwards changing to wheels, stars, flowers, and other picturesque patterns. The designs seem to be still more elaborate than in former years.

THE International Horse Show at Olympia on June 22, to which we made a brief allusion last week, is presented in a complete form. The arrival of the King and Queen, amid the cheers of a distinguished assembly, and of the Maharajah of Nepal are faithfully depicted, and the subsequent events form a thrilling display. Competitions among tandems, four-in-hands, pair- and single-horsed turnouts are all shown, and supply a remarkable exhibition of driving. The high-jumping display at Hurlingham in which the English and foreign officers, representative of seven nations, who competed at the International Horse Show took part on June 27 constitutes a separate film, and affords quite a sensational jumping display, with many hairbreadth escapes. The march-past of the competitors, numbering more than a hundred, in brilliant array is most inspiriting.

PICTURES of current interest are also those of the international swim through London on June 27. The competitors diving to positions and the start are vividly shown, and an animated scene is presented when between thirty and forty competitors, male and female, cross the line. Scenes en route to Blackfriars are presented, and the kinematographic comparisons of the methods adopted by the competitors will prove of value to all who practise the natatory art. Close portrait views of the various winners are also given.

TROOPING the colour on the King's Birthday forms, without doubt, the most stately and impressive military demonstration the world can show, and is presented in vivid detail. The King is seen taking the salute surrounded by a brilliant staff and by ambassadors, field-marshals, generals, &c., and the evolutions of the troops are reproduced with all the photographic quality for which the firm is famous.

Gaumont Company.

THE Theatrical Garden Party at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, on Tuesday, is a very interesting topical picture issued by the Gaumont Company. It was shown at the London Hippodrome and the Coliseum the same evening. The events of the day are realistically portrayed, various stage favourites being easily recognisable.

ON Monday Gaumont's are issuing another masterpiece, entitled NAPOLEON AND THE BRITISH SAILOR, which no doubt will be finely portrayed. The well-known author and actor-manager, Mr. Herbert Darnley, whose likeness to Bonaparte is remarkable, has been secured to take the part of Napoleon. The company are issuing a special pamphlet giving a full description of this subject. The matinée-hat nuisance is a subject about which much has been said, and Gaumont's have dealt with the question in a very clever novelty, showing how the gentlemen scored against the ladies who would persist in wearing their all-obscuring confections.

A NOVEL trick-subject, finely coloured and interesting, is THE KING AND THE DWARF. A page being banished from the king's Court for making love to the princess, a fairy comes to his aid and changes him into an ugly dwarf. Thus transmogrified, he goes to the king and curses him, telling him that at every hour his head shall be transformed to the head of a wild beast. As the hours strike the fulfilment of the curse is seen. The king heads an expedition to kill the dwarf, but is himself taken captive. The queen and princess are sent for, and the dwarf promises to break the spell if the king will consent to his marriage with the princess. The king consents, and the spell is broken. The scene of the betrothal is next witnessed. The fairy comes forth again, and the dwarf is changed into a handsome prince.

AMONGST other films issued this week by Gaumont's special notice is due to that entitled MR. JONES HAS AN EVENING OUT, a laughable story, and to A TRAMP IN CLOVER, a subject of up-to-date quality.

Nordisk Films, Ltd.

THE German Derby at Hamburg Horn has been turned to kinematographic account by the Nordisk Films Company. The Kaiser was present at the race, which is regarded as an important event in the Fatherland, and close views of His Imperial Majesty and his sons are afforded. The pictures of the English Derby have a quick sale abroad, and exhibitors in this country could not do better than take this means of returning the compliment, as the progress of the race is clearly shown from start to finish, and furnishes an engrossing spectacle.

The New Bioscope Co.

MR. F. R. GRIFFITHS, of the New Bioscope Co., has acquired the Balham Empire, which for some time past has been devoted to the purposes of the living picture, and has gained a wide popularity among residents of the suburb. Coupled with the hall at Holloway, Mr. Griffiths may now be said to be in posession of two of the prettiest and most successful picture halls in England. No material change in the character of the entertainment, we understand, will take place, and pictures supplied by all the principal makers will be presented.

DURING the whole of next week pictures showing the actual experiences of a patient at the London Hospital will be included in the programme at the Holloway and Peckham Public Halls, the Grand Theatre, Forest Gate, and Crown Theatre, Peckham. Mr. G. Griffiths, the proprietor, has kindly consented to devote the greater part of the receipts taken at these special performances to the London Hospital.

Boom of Bostock.

"JULY 4" CELEBRATIONS IN THE GREAT JUNGLE AND ARENA, EARL'S COURT.—Americans all, who throughout the world will be fittingly upholding the glories of Independence Day to-morrow (the 4th inst.), should greet with delight the news that special national displays are also to be given by the furred and feathered denizens of Mr. Frank C. Bostock's great jungle and arena at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court. This will be the first occasion on which these wild beasts, snatched from the bush, jungle, and forest, and trained and tutored in the United States, have celebrated that country's anniversary under the Union Jack instead of the Stars and Stripes. Flags of the latter will wave amid the palms and float over the caves to the strains of popular American melodies, while Tusko, the huge elephant, about whose weight much conjecture is arising; Wee-Wee, the smallest horse living, aged 5 years and standing but 23in.; Consul I., the human chimpanzee; Wallace, the untameable lion; and even the Uneeka and the sacred beasts will do their respective parts in making the great day a red-letter one. The baby elephant, which has developed an early liking for tobacco, and coolly puffs a cigar like a precocious youth, is to have an extra box placed at his disposal, and it is hoped that Nero, the lion, may be flashing his new glass eye on the visitors.

Amusements in Aberdeen.

HUMBER'S WAXWORKS.—Miss Clair Laroche, the "half lady," who is now in the third week of her highly successful engagement, continues to draw large crowds of deeply interested spectators. The many other attractions in the saloon are all much appreciated.

THIS week is the first of four weeks that will be divided up by Lancashire towns into their annual holiday week. "Wakes" are more numerous in Lancashire at this season than they are in Ireland during an epidemic. The Lancashire lads and lasses have a strong predilection for the seaside, and in their division of favours New Brighton always receives a large share of attention, and under the new management, with greatly improved attractions and numerous additions to the shows and amusement devices, New Brighton Tower is especially a place of resort this season.

ON Saturday last, the first of the holidays, nearly 10,000 people from the milling districts visited the Tower and enjoyed the many amusements provided for them, and especially delighted in the realistic performances of Colonel Cummins, the cowboys, Indians, bucking horses, &c., that constitute the Cummins-Brown Wild West, which is the big feature attraction at the Tower this season. This show seems to have struck the popular fancy just right, for it is drawing large crowds, and constant repetition does not seem to wear away the novelty in the least, but rather, in fact, to increase the attractiveness and popularity of this particularly realistic and daring exhibition of Western life.

DIRECTING MANAGER Mr. Calvin Brown, of the New Brighton Tower, is determined that the Sunday concerts given this season shall have as much of merit as the talent available will permit. For Sunday night the principal vocalist was Mlle. Zélie de Lussan, who has just returned from an extensive tour in America, and who on this occasion made her first appearance for the season in England, and was greeted by an overwhelming house; and although Mlle. de Lussan was on the programme for only three numbers, yet the demands for encores necessitated her singing eight songs, and had she complied with all the requests, eighteen would have been nearer the mark. The lady was in her best form, and was ably seconded by the Tower orchestra under the masterful bâton of Mr. Thomas Rimmer, who has improved this organisation wonderfully during the short time he has been at its head. For next Sunday the management will introduce to the Liverpool public Miss Tina Lerner, the phenomenal Russian pianist, who last October made her début in London with Kubelik, and who since that time has charmed the music lovers of the capital with several recitals at Bechstein and Steinway Halls. Miss Lerner will be assisted by the beautiful coloratura soprano, Miss Bertha Schofield, and the eminent 'cellist Mr. Jean Schwiller, and the Tower orchestra will form an important part in the programme.

THE LONDON v. WILL EVANS.

At the Shoreditch County Court on Tuesday the proprietors of the London, Shoreditch, sued Mr. Will Evans, the well-known comedian, of Laurel-road, Barnes, to recover £45 as damages for the breach of an agreement made on Oct. 14, 1904, to appear at the London Music Hall for two weeks, commencing March 11, 1907, at a salary of £22 10s. a week. Mr. A. Engelbert (instructed by Messrs. Strong, Mercer, and Co.) appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Walter Payne (instructed by Messrs. Amery, Parkes, Macklin, and Co.) for the defendant.

Mr. Richards, plaintiffs' manager, deposed to the signing of the agreement, which, he said, was not carried out, owing to the fact that Mr. Evans was away in America. He waited until defendant's return to see what arrangement he would make. He saw defendant on June 29 and discussed the matter, defendant suggesting that he should play two houses a night for £30 a week by way of settling it.

His Honour suggested a settlement, but counsel said it was impossible to come to terms.

Mr. Munroe, assistant-manager at the London, said that on June 29 Mr. Evans came to his office to make some arrangements with reference to the missed engagement in March. He said he had broken that contract, and after he had been with Mr. Stoll he would give them two weeks in lieu. He agreed to take £30 for each hall, and to play twice nightly at each for one week.

Do you suggest that the first thing Mr. Evans said was: "I have broken my engagement for March"?—I do not suggest that. It came out in the course of conversation.

Was a considerable time taken up in discussing the American business?—Not a great part. It was a matter of a few minutes.

Did not Mr. Evans say he was quite prepared to carry out the contract as originally made for July, to play one house a night for £22 10s.?—He may have said so.

Which would have suited you very well?—It would not.

Was it suggested that he should play twice nightly at an increased salary?—I suppose it was.

How do you arrive at the figure of £30?—We told Mr. Evans it was customary to increase the salary 25 per cent.

Did not Mr. Evans say he did not care about custom—he wanted twice the salary?—He certainly did not.

Why did you offer £45 in December?—Mr. Evans did not want to come to town, and made his price high.

At the same interview was there a discussion as to future dates after July?—It was agreed that Mr. Evans should see Mr. Stoll and make some arrangement with him, submitting to us his suggestions as to the dates.

Did you know that Mr. Evans was booked up to 1910?—I do know that. That was why we let him go away without any definite arrangements.

His Honour: For every night up to 1910?

Counsel: I think it is possible, your Honour. (To the witness): Do you remember anything being said to Mr. Evans about him not having anything in writing concerning the consent to his going to America?—I think the matter was discussed.

Did Mr. Evans say that Mr. Richards had agreed to cancel the dates?—He certainly did not say so.

Did you take the view that the permission was given?—I am not in a position to think.

Mr. Will Evans, the defendant, said that on Oct. 14, 1904, he entered into an agreement to appear at the London, which at that time was conducted on the one-house-a-night principle. Some time in 1906, or early in 1907, he was negotiating to go to America, and took steps to make arrangements with reference to contracts which would have stood in his way. He telephoned to Mr. Richards, and that gentleman let him off, on condition that he made it up at some future time. That was a common arrangement to be made. Messrs. Gibbons and Payne had let him off before that. He went to America, and on his return he had a letter asking him to see plaintiffs. He saw Messrs. Richards and Munroe on June 29, and was asked what he intended to do, and he said he would fulfil the contract at one house as arranged. Then it was suggested that as plaintiffs had obliged him by letting him off he ought to oblige them, especially as he had nothing in writing to show, and could be sued for breaking the March contract. It was just a saying on Mr. Richards's part, that was all. It was suggested that he should play at two houses a night, and he replied that he should want double salary. Mr. Richards said: "You ought to let us down lightly, as we let you go to America," and ultimately it was agreed that he was to accept £30 to play two houses a night, instead of £45, and that was to settle the dispute between them. That was the "amicable arrangement" he referred to in one of his letters. He performed for one week, twice nightly, at each hall for £60. He played again in December and got £45. He was not in the habit of breaking contracts, and had never done so in his life.

Cross-examined: It was very important for him that he should get permission to go to America. It would have spoiled him if he had not got it.

Mr. Engelbert: Is it not a customary thing to confirm telephone messages by a letter?—Not so far as I am concerned.

Did you not think the matter sufficiently important to write about?—I asked them would they let me go, and they said yes, if I made it up later. It was a favour, but I have done many favours for them.

And the arrangement to play two houses a night for £30 was by way of wiping out the favour we had done you?—Yes.

Do you think that was an adequate reward?—Well, they lost nothing.

They could have held you to your contract?—Yes.

People do not give something for nothing?—Quite right.

Did you think the £15 reduction made up for their loss?—I do. We do not like two houses a night. The early turns affect our throats, and are too soon after meals.

Did you understand that it was salary and a quarter for the two houses a night?—I said I wanted double salary if I played two houses.

Mr. Payne: Did you get written consents from the other managers?—I had it from Mr. Gibbons by word of mouth. There was no trouble with the others.

His Honour again suggested a settlement, but without result.

In giving judgment, his Honour said he had to determine two things. One was whether the interview on the telephone before defendant went to America took place; and in the next place, what transpired at the interview on June 29. He must, to some extent, be guided by the correspondence, unless he came to the conclusion that it was not reliable. It was possible that Mr. Richards might have forgotten the conversation, but it was curious that when defendant was written to about the broken contract he did not write and say: "What on earth are you talking about? You know you gave me permission." Instead, he said that he had cut down his price from £45 to £30 in settlement of their claim in respect of the March dates. He came to the conclusion that this was not so, but an independent arrangement altogether. On the whole, he came to a conclusion in favour of the plaintiffs, although he did not suppose they had lost a penny. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs, with costs.

[To all whom it may concern. The salary paid to me at the London, Shoreditch, was £45 per week, except on one occasion, as stated in court; not £22 10s.—WILL EVANS.]

MERRY MAID, MARIAN.

A Tabloid Musical Comedietta, written by Mr. George Burton, produced at The Cosy Corner, South Shields, on June 29.

Merry Maid Marian ..... MISS MAY TUDOR
Hiram Tubb ..... MR. BERT ALBERT
Wilfred Beverley ..... MR. GEORGE RUSSELL
Flip ..... MR. CHARLES ROSS
Flop ..... MR. LAURIE RAY
P.C. Wiggins ..... MR. ALF. POTTS
Mary ..... MISS PATTIE BURTON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene is the exterior of a village inn. Hiram Tubb discloses the secret of Marian's parentage. Her father and mother stayed at the inn eighteen years ago, with her, a child of three years. Her father went to America. The boat went down, the father was drowned, the mother died of a broken heart, and left with the innkeeper a casket, to be given to Marian on her twenty-first birthday. The casket discloses that Marian's father was young Lord Eustace, and Marian is heir to the Eustace estates and a rent roll of £10,000 a year. Wilfred has secretly opened the casket, and is desirous of making Marian his wife. Marian, however, is betrothed to Sir Henry Fitzgerald, who is in possession of the Eustace estates. Marion gets the innkeeper to promise not to disclose the secret of her birth till she marries Sir Henry, so that she will not take the estates from him. She has decided to give them to him as a wedding present. Wilfred hires two ruffians to kidnap her, so that he can keep her in captivity till she consents to be his bride. Their plans are frustrated by the timely aid of P.C. Wiggins. Wilfred is nonplussed. Hiram is disappointed, and everybody is made happy.

The dialogue is crisp and clever, and with plenty of laughter and good music the sketch does credit to Mr. Burton, the author, and to all who take part in it.

AT the Empire Music Hall, Wrexham, the Three Rochesters, society entertainers, are a big attraction; Vela, the original tramp on the clothes line, is smart; the Cedrics are clever equilibrists and comedy artists; and Miss Gladwys Marion is a dainty singer and dancer.

AT the New Brighton Winter Gardens Shawlene, the whistler, is retained for another week owing to his success; Fredo, continental hatter and juggler, gives a remarkably clever and neat performance; Miss Ethel Thomas sings delightfully; Mr. Koyli is very good in patriotic scena, The Veteran; the Musical Morellis score in their vocal and instrumental interlude, and Cling and Clency are excellent dancers. Herr A. Spiegler plays his violin solos with rare skill and finish, whilst the animated pictures are admirable.

DR. LYNN'S WIDOW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am the widow of the late Dr. Lynn, who was for many years at the Egyptian Hall, and whose sudden death at our residence, Brooklyn Villa, 30a, Birkbeck-road, Acton, left myself and four young children (girls) practically unprovided for. A short time after his death three of them were taken ill with fever (one of them dangerously), and at this time my second son wrote, telling me that if I refrained from asking for assistance, he would allow me so much a week. This he did for a time, and then was unable to continue this help. However, I have managed to bring the children up, but it has been a terrible strain, and I feel that I cannot endure it longer, unless I have rest and some help. Through my illness this winter rent has got behind, and I have lost hope.

The patrons of my husband were so many that the late Duke of Edinburgh, on my husband asking him whether his Highness had seen his entertainment, said he was ashamed to say he hadn't. He performed before our King and Queen, Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh (Saxe-Coburg Gotha), Duke of Albany, Duke of Connaught, Duke and Duchess of Argyll, Prince Napoleon, to whom he presented De Capile Parlenta and snake charmers, and all the nobility. I accompanied and assisted him in India, Australia, New Zealand, North and South America, and Africa, Egypt, and Ceylon. Any assistance will be thankfully received by—

Yours faithfully,
K. E. LYNN.

39, St. Stephen's-avenue,
Shepherd's Bush, July 1, 1908.

THIS week the chief turn at the Pier Pavilion, New Brighton, is Mr. Gilbert Girard, who gives very clever imitations of animals and birds. The company includes Mr. Frank Hook, Mr. Clifford Grey, Mr. Tommie Isherwood, Mr. Stanley Holt, Miss Harriett Greene, who are all excellent and are well received.

AT the sacred concert on Sunday last in the huge Tower Theatre, New Brighton, Mlle. Zelie de Dussan scored a distinct success, singing no less than eight items. The band played several selections in fine style. During the week the Wild West and the old plantation show still continue in the grounds.

BEACH ZOO.—With the advent of real summer weather, business has greatly improved at the Zoo. Mary, the fine Bactrian camel, is now employed in carrying children up and down the sands. She adds a decided note of picturesqueness to the Beach. A large number of new specimens have been added recently. The place is admirably managed by the proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

VARIETY ARTISTS' DISPUTE.

A case of considerable interest to members of the music hall profession was heard by Mr. Curtis Bennett at Bow-street Police Court on Friday, 25th ult. Mr. Joseph O'Gorman, chairman of the Variety Artists' Federation, appeared to answer a summons for an assault against Mr. Frederick Mortimer, alleged to have been committed in the Wellington Hotel, Strand, on the afternoon of June 18. Mr. Charles Doughty (instructed by Messrs. Judge and Priestley) appeared for the defendant, and the prosecution was conducted by Mr. Kenneth Poyser (instructed by Messrs. Morris and Rickards).

Mr. Kenneth Poyser, in his opening, stated that the case was a very serious one, and he asked the magistrate to take it seriously owing to the position of the parties and the circumstances under which the assault took place. Mr. Mortimer recently had occasion to bring an action against Mr. O'Gorman—an action for indemnity in connection with the music hall strike—and the case was before Judge Woodfall at Westminster on June 18. At the end of the day's proceedings—the case had only been part-heard—defendant became very abusive toward Mortimer outside the court. Complainant returned to the court to complain to the Judge, but as nothing had been done within the precincts of the court the Judge had no jurisdiction. Mr. Mortimer then left, and went with some friends to the Wellington Hotel. They had been there only a few minutes when O'Gorman and his friends entered. O'Gorman's friends tried to persuade him to go out again, apparently knowing he was a violent man, but their persuasion was unsuccessful. Defendant again commenced to abuse Mortimer, and eventually struck him a violent blow in the eye. There was no doubt about the assault, and he had evidence to show there was no provocation whatever. No mud was thrown; no attack upon the character of Mr. O'Gorman. The County Court case turned upon a purely technical point, and gave no occasion whatever for an assault of this kind.

Complainant gave evidence bearing out counsel's statement, and was afterwards cross-examined at length by Mr. Doughty.

"You failed in the first action," observed counsel, "and brought a second one in another name, which was also unsuccessful?"—"The case stands adjourned."

At the trial O'Gorman had no reason to feel undue animosity against you?—Possibly not.

Did not you tell him, when the Court adjourned, he was fighting the case in a dirty way?—Nothing of the kind.

Had he stated you accused him at the first hearing of having received money from the Federation funds during the strike and arbitration?—No. My counsel may have put that to me in examination.

Don't you know that in your instructions on that case Mr. O'Gorman was mentioned as having received money?—I have no knowledge of his receiving money. Of other defendants I have full knowledge.

If any such suggestion was made, do you desire to withdraw it?—No, I do not.

Did not you remark, in the hearing of everybody in the bar of the Wellington Hotel: "I would like to be getting as much out of the Federation every week as you are getting" (referring to O'Gorman).—No. It is a mis-statement. I might have said I should have been pleased to have made as much money during the strike as he had done, meaning, of course, through his work.

Then it was that Mr. O'Gorman attempted to strike you over the shoulders of two men?—No. It happened some minutes afterwards.

You had been endeavouring to irritate Mr. O'Gorman so that he would strike you?—That is absolutely untrue.

Did you not say, immediately you were struck, "That's it. That's what we have been waiting for"?—There is not a particle of truth in it.

What did you do when you were struck?—I went for a policeman. (Laughter.)

Mr. James Wharton, an insurance broker, said defendant's manner was offensive, and he struck complainant a very cruel blow on the cheek. Witness told him it was a cowardly blow.

Mr. Frederick Brooks, complainant's brother, said that outside the Court O'Gorman wanted to fight without the slightest provocation. He called complainant coward, cur, and other names, all for nothing.

This concluded the case for the prosecution.

Defendant then entered the witness-box, and stated he was chairman of the V.A.F., and had been so since its foundation. He had been twice King Rat in the Grand Order of Water Rats—as many times as its rules would permit. In June Mortimer ceased to be a member of the V.A.F.; he thought it was when he found he could not run the organisation himself. Witness did not appreciate his conduct in regard to the actions; but was satisfied, having carried his own points all along the line. Outside the Court on the day in question Mortimer said to him, "Aren't you ashamed of the cowardly manner in which you are fighting this case? Look what it has cost me to-day?" Witness replied, "You should not bring an action like this against the Federation. We artists should be fighting as one man in the interests of each other." Mortimer "got a little offensive," and witness added, "By the way, did you tell the Judge yesterday I had taken money out of the funds of the V.A.F.?" He replied, "What if I did?" "Because, if you did, you lie," witness rejoined. After that witness went away, though greatly provoked, and went to the Wellington, having no idea Mortimer would be there. There some remarks were passed, ending in Mortimer's repeating his statement about money made out of the Federation. Witness reached over the shoulders of two men, and tried to give him a back-handed slap in the face, but was not sure whether he reached him or not. "That's what we have been waiting for" some of them shouted. "Go for the police!"

In answer to Mr. Poyser, witness said he was not aware Mortimer had gone back to the County Court, or he would have returned with him. He did not think there was anything peculiar in complainant going back to the Court if nothing occurred.

Mr. Poyser: Have you ever been in this Court (Bow-street) before?

Mr. Doughty did not think the question a fair one.

Witness: Fourteen years ago there was a certain case. They have been waiting for this opportunity to throw this at me.

The Magistrate: We will let the dead bury their dead. (Applause).

Mr. Monte Bayly, secretary of the V.A.F., said O'Gorman only attempted to strike complainant after he had imputed dishonesty with regard to the Federation funds.

Mr. Claude Bartram, a journalist, expressed the opinion that the defendant did not reach the complainant. O'Gorman gave no provocation whatever. In the bar of the Wellington Hotel, O'Gorman took exception to something Mortimer said, and reached over the witness's shoulder to strike. Witness did not hear any sound of a blow, but immediately someone shouted, "That's it," and four of them—Mortimer's friends—dashed off for a policeman.

Mr. W. H. McCarthy, secretary of the Water Rats, gave corroborative evidence, supporting the contention that defendant did not actually strike Mortimer.

Mr. Doughty observed that he had other evidence to put forward, but Mr. Curtis Bennett intimated that he had "heard enough." This was the second case arising out of disputes between variety artists that had been before the Court within a few weeks. He hoped this kind of thing would soon cease. In this case there appeared to have been provocation on both sides. Defendant had straightforwardly admitted he did strike at complainant, but he did not think he succeeded in reaching him. He (the magistrate) was inclined to think he did not succeed in his purpose.

At this point Mr. Doughty mentioned to Mr. Curtis Bennett that the parties concerned in the two cases just alluded to were not members of the Federation.

Mr. Curtis Bennett: Well, I intended my remarks to apply to variety artists generally. It would be better for the profession and the public if these quarrels were avoided. Mr. Curtis Bennett added that in his opinion plaintiff himself did not come out of the case as a Simon Pure. He would bind both complainant and defendant over in the sum of £20 to keep the peace towards each other for the next twelve months.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

A programme full of good things is that submitted at this hall, and, consequently, the weather is not exercising so great an effect over the patronage as might be expected. At the top of the bill are Bella and Bijou, who are much appreciated. In their first item, a Spanish episode, they create a vast amount of laughter; but it is in their second number, a topical one, that they score their greatest success. This is entitled The Suffragette, and amusingly hits off the domestic life in a house where the wife gives her attention to matters very far removed from the home. The lady of the duo works hard and with great humour as the militant feminine, and her male partner, as the much-bullied husband, who asserts himself in such an unexpected manner, also adds greatly to the amusement. Mike Nong proves himself to be a refined artist and an accomplished dancer, and is warmly greeted. The Four Jumels, in an instrumental turn, do well. Herbert Shelley, in Dan the Outlaw, gives a turn which comprises the acting of a sketch with some half-dozen characters, all but one of them being impersonated by himself. The interlude is very cleverly worked. Mabel Bardine and company, in a sketch, Nell of the Halls, submits an interesting little play, dealing with the subject of the husband neglecting his wife and family for a music hall artist, a visit to the artist by the heart-broken wife, and the subsequent reconciliation of them both by the influence of the actress, who renounces the husband.

It is effectively played by Miss Bardine as the actress, Miss Leila Russell as the wife, and Mr. William Brandon as the husband, all of whom act well, their efforts meeting with a hearty reception. Marie Empress, a smart comedienne, makes a hit with "Where are all the girls?" singing with plenty of go; George Ridgwell, billed as the late solo cornet in H.M. Coldstream Guards, appears in the triple rôle of conductor, singer, and instrumental soloist, singing "To-morrow will be Friday," and giving "The Better Land" as a cornet solo, conducting both items himself. The artist sings and plays with genuine taste and expression, and gains much applause. Phil. W. and Nellie Peters, in a turn comprising singing, dancing, cross-talk, and instrumental items, contrived speedily to get on the best of terms with the audience, who were loth to let them conclude.

The Ten Ji Troupe, who share the place of honour at the bottom of the bill, give a clever mystical turn, the best trick in which is undoubtedly their manipulation of the fountains. The merit of their act was speedily recognised in no uncertain way. Jack Pleasants sings two songs. "I'll be cross" suits this artist's peculiar style admirably, and in "For 14s. 6d. a week," equally good as a dame song, he made a decided hit. The Bioscope has much-appreciated films of local interest; and Mr. Walter Greco's fine orchestra is heard to great advantage in Elgar's march "Pomp and Circumstance." Mr. Percy Percival is most courteous in the front of the house.

"THE LITTLE ASCOT HERO."

A Sporting Sketch, Words and Lyrics by Tom Petrie, produced at Sadler's Wells Theatre, on Monday, June 29.

Colonel Lester	MR. H. ROBINSON
Jim Dawson	MR. CHAS. CLEYTON
Bill Seaton	MR. THANE GARTH
Scottie	WEE WULLIE
Violet	MISS HELENE FOREST
Freddie	MISS JESSICA BLACK

We are never allowed to remain long on the borders of sadness during the progress of Mr. Tom Petrie's sketch which has been running at Sadler's Wells during the week. Freddie, the "little Ascot hero," who is left on guard near the stable door of a favourite for the big race, has to encounter a determined wrong 'un in the person of his own father. The boy remembers the treatment of his mother by the brute, and how it brought about her death. The chestnut and the bay are both competitors for the event on the morrow, and Colonel Lester's hopes of winning will be dashed to the ground unless Freddie remains staunch and true to his trust. He is aided in his guardianship by Scottie, a small Highlander, who is, however, drugged by the would-be nobbler. The career of the "bad lot" is brought to a temporary end anyway by a shot from the pistol handed to Freddie by the old trainer, Jim Dawson, and the Ascot hero takes his owner's colours to the front. Miss Helene Forest plays with much charm the rôle of Violet Lester, the daughter of the Colonel, and in that character Mr. H. Robinson sings a pleasing ballad or two. Miss Jessica Black is well placed as Freddie, and we have some witticisms from Wee Wullie, who is seen to advantage in the part of Scottie. Mr. Thane Garth plays the turf tout with no lack of callousness or brutality.

MUSICAL COPYRIGHT CASE.

At Bow-street on Monday Sir Albert De Rutzen gave his considered decision in the case in which James Connor, a hawker, was summoned for offering for sale a pirated copy of a musical work, namely, a perforated music-roll, being the pianoforte accompaniment of a song called "The Bandolero."

Mr. R. D. Muir (instructed by Mr. Percy H. Beecher) appeared on behalf of Messrs. Chapoell and Co. in support of the summons; Mr. Scrutton, K.C. (with him Mr. George Elliott), defended.

This was a test case brought for the purpose of deciding the rights of composers and owners of copyright in relation to mechanical devices for the reproduction of music. A similar summons against the defendant in respect of a talking-machine disc was not gone into.

The magistrate said it was held by the Court of Appeal in the case of Boosey and Wright, in 1900, that a perforated roll was not a copy of a sheet of music within the Copyright Act of 1842. Since then two new Acts dealing with musical copyright had been passed, and it was contended on the part of the prosecution that the law was thereby altered with regard to perforated rolls. He (the magistrate) had, however, come to the conclusion that there was nothing in the two later Acts to lead him to suppose that the Legislature intended the words "written or printed copy of a musical work" to apply to a perforated roll. The summons would therefore be dismissed, but without costs.

Mr. Muir asked for a case to be stated, and his worship, in readily agreeing to do so, said he should not be at all sorry if his decision was held to be wrong.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD AND DISTRICT,
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

THE RAGE OF AMERICA! READ THIS!!

Extract from a Two-Column Notice, NEW YORK HERALD, June 11, '08.

I hope Miss Lily Lena is not making her "farewell" to America. I hope she stays till I know her and her songs by heart, that some day I may tell of her and teach them to somebody's children's children.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

that was the inquisitive title of her song. It will wander all over the land like the "Are-there-any-more-at-home-like-you" sextette. Its melody goes through you—positively! In at the ear and out by the mouth. Nobody asks you to join in the chorus (Miss Lena is far too clever for any device so trite), but nevertheless you do join in, and barely below your breath.

NOTE.—A limited number of permits will be granted for this GREAT CHORUS SONG.

ARE YOU PREPARED?

Have you heard the popular Irish Tenor, Mr. DAVE CARTER, sing

"WHERE THE RIVER SHANNON FLOWS?"

Pronounced by Mr. Carter his most successful Song.

"IN THE SHADOW OF THE PYRAMID,"

Sung by Miss MAY MARS.

NOTE.—Artists and Managers will kindly take notice that Miss May Mars has the exclusive singing rights for our song, "In the Shadow of the Pyramid," for the Music Halls. Immediate action will be taken against anyone infringing her rights.

Two absolutely new songs by ERNEST R. BALL, the composer of "LOVE ME AND THE WORLD IS MINE? Note the titles:

"ALL FOR LOVE OF YOU" AND "SOME DAY YOU'LL COME BACK TO ME."

THE CUSTOMS OFFICER'S REVENGE.

Code Word, "ELOGE."

The officer, on duty on the rocks, looks out for anything unusual which might attract his attention; everything being quiet, he falls asleep with his gun beside him. Smugglers with their goods land from the sea, and passing behind the sleeping man, they bind him with ropes, and go their way, laughing at the now impotent officer, who is not freed from his bonds till the next morning, when his fellow-officers come to relieve him. But he is dismissed, and he works out his revenge by winning the smugglers' confidence so that he can deliver them over to the police.

824ft. The Subject, £13 14s. 8d. Toning, £1 5s. Cd

THE STORY OF A GENTLEMAN'S JACKET.

Code Word "ELOCUTION."

A swell having received a pot of paint on his brand new jacket, he makes the clumsy painter exchange it for his own. The house decorator takes that of a gentleman asleep on a bench, leaving the dirty one in its stead. The other forces it upon a cabwoman, taking her coat in exchange. After sundry other incidents, all the plaintiffs meet at the police-station, where everybody has to take back his or her own garment, under the supervision of the stern police-inspector.

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d.

THE MESMERISER.

Code Word, "ELEVATION."

This happened in Spain; a money collector having been killed among mysterious circumstances, we assist at very thrilling experiments which help to trace the culprit. The sister of the victim submits herself to the influence of a medium, and under the magnetic spell she sees the crime as it actually took place, and discovers the murderer in his own house.

610ft. The Subject, £10 13s. 4d. Toning, £1 0s. 0d.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS AND BABY.

Code Word "EDIFICE."

Father is left alone while mother has to go out, and he rings for nurse, and asks for baby. Dad will take his little daughter out for a walk, that will be lovely! Outside a toy shop baby wants a wooden horse. Papa buys it, and drags it along after him. He does look nice! Papa is hot, but never mind; the little girl sees a bicycle, and wants a ride. Father does as desired. They go and have a rest in a café. A man passes with balloons. Girlie must have one, but she soon gives it to him to hold, however; but unfortunately Daddy is taken right up in the air. Baby cries and frets. Fortunately the cord snaps, and Father comes down and falls into the arms of his fat little daughter.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s. 0d.

UNUSUAL COOKING.

Code Word, "EMPHASE."

The world is going awry, for the spoons and forks and knives, with a head and two arms each, carve the cook carefully and cook him, while the brooms, after sweeping the floor, go back to their allotted corner. The picture ends with the cooks, kitchenmaids and scullions having a good time on account of their work being done without having even to superintend it.

198ft. The Subject, £3 6s. 0d. Colouring, £1 17s. 0d.

PILGRIMAGES AND FAIRS IN BRITTANY.

Code Word, "EMULE."

These pilgrimages and fairs attract every year a great number of people, who go there to ask for the protection of their patron saints, either for their cattle or the members of their families. The different pictures thrown on the screen are headed by the following titles:—Going to the Fair—The Cattle Fair at Carnac—The Horse Fair at Guilligomarch—The Poultry Fair at St. Cado—The Chickens are Sold for the Benefit of the Church—The Tree of St. Anne.

460ft. The Subject, £7 13s. 4d.

A DUEL WITH DYNAMITE.

Code Word, "EMAIL."

Young Nigel, having been insulted by his rival, is going to have a duel with him. Evidently the god of battle did not wish for their lives, for, after a first attack and a second, the witnesses decide that the two opponents shall settle their difficulty with dynamite. The machine is fixed up, and each one is given a torch. After both have hunted each other in desperation, Fate lights both machines exactly at the same time, and they are both blown up into the air. A few seconds later a surgeon gathers up their several limbs, and puts them together very carefully; then the two men stand up, shake hands, and all is forgotten.

460ft. The Subject, £7 13s. 4d.

A GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

Code Word, "EFFORT."

A bevy of children, pretending to play at hide and seek, are let loose in the flat, which they fill with their laughter and playful tricks.

180ft. The Subject, £3 0s. 0d.

Pathé's Films

SAMSON.

This is the well-known story taught us by the Bible, which has been staged and coloured in a most magnificent way. In it are depicted—The Consecration of Samson, His Carrying Away the Gates of Gaza, His Meeting with Delilah, Delilah Cutting Off His Hair, His Work in the Prison, The Falling in of the Temple, &c.

Code Word, "EDUCATION." 1088ft. The Subject, £18 2s. 8d. Colouring and Toning, £12 2s. 2d.

LAST WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

The Mountaineer's Son.

It is a dreadful thing that a mere boy, in order to save his father, a poacher, from prison, should think of pushing the accuser down into the abyss, thus leading the authorities to think it was by accident that the man died. Such is the knot of this story, full of thrilling interest from start to finish.

A Young Sportswoman.

This very amusing film, we are pleased to say, has been received with enthusiasm by the public, for it is a new departure, and anything on novel lines is sure to attract attention.

The Pretty Flower Girl.

What would have the Marquis done if he had known beforehand that his fickleness would be found out by his wife, who brought him to her feet very penitent and humble. Surely he would not have risked the adventure. This story is full of wit and subtleness, and it has been appreciated at its just value by everybody.

A Double Suicide.

When two young people want to take leave of the world and its inhabitants, they must feel disappointed at seeing all their attempts foiled, as the couple in this picture did; but as the story ends happily, and everybody is pleased, there is no need to dwell upon their misfortunes, but only to rejoice with them.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Financial Times, Jan. 28:—
"The Era" Annual, 1908. This well-known almanac and annual is replete, as usual, with information of all sorts regarding the dramatic and theatrical world, and will be found not only useful to those directly connected with the stage, whether in a histrionic or literary capacity, but also interesting to the average member of the playgoing public, who is regaled with some forty pages of "Stories Told by Well-known People"—mostly actors and actresses. Dramatic authors will appreciate the importance of the very full list that is given of new plays and important revivals at the London and provincial, as well as Paris and Berlin theatres during the past year. The publication is well illustrated with portraits of theatrical and music-hall celebrities.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Daily Express:—
An interesting illustration of the proverb, "Brevity is the soul of wit," is given in some correspondence between Mr. Robert Arthur, the theatrical manager, and Mr. Lennox Pawle, published by the latter in "The Era" Annual for 1908.

In the title part Mr. Robert Hall acts with dramatic skill; Miss Ellen Armor gives a spirited representation of Bessie Merrybright; Mr. Larrey Clements is a humorous Pat Mahoney; Dr. Brinkton is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Thompson; Mr. Leonard Yorke is a conspicuous success as Jack Salt; Miss Florence Delmar is an effective Louise; Mr. Laurence Stevenson a satisfactory Albert Stormking; and Miss Amy Seacombe a smart Cora Vanderbilt. Mr. H. Creagh Hunt proves himself a capable Arnold Tyson, and Mr. Ted Oswald is good as Robert Owen Jones.

ABERDEEN. — PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The engagement of Chung Ling Soo, the Chinese illusionist, has proved a prodigious success; indeed, such feats as his have never been seen before on the local stage, and the huge audiences are unrestrainedly enthusiastic in their approval. The other members of the company are all well received. These include Miss May Fayre, a clever comedienne; Miss Florence and Rose Showell, capital duettists; the Brothers Dean, expert whistlers and dancers; Bert and Dora, resourceful comedy artists; the Fimans, in their highly-amusing fire-station sketch; and Miss Flo Hilton, the popular male impersonator.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. David Thomson.—As usual, the programme for the week is changed, and as all the artists are exceptionally clever and versatile, the entertainment continues to be extremely well patronised. Mr. Thomson looks especially well after the interests of his patrons in front. All the turns, which include those of Misses Violet Davidson, Nellie Riach, and Daisy Taylor, and Messrs. Chorley, Connor, Thomson, Jack Marson, Sydney Locklynne, and Vulcaris, the piano expert, are encored.

ALHAMBRA MUSIC HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair; Manager, Mr. George B. Lee.—In spite of the various counter attractions, the house continues to be well filled at both the evening entertainments. Whimsical Willie Wilbert and Merry Madge Warner appear with great success both as vocalists and instrumentalists; the clever pair are frequently encored. Mr. Dove Paterson provides a deeply interesting hour's cinematograph display; all his films, whether dramatic or humorous, are exceedingly realistic.

ABERTILLERY. — THE PAVILION. — Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce. —The Rogues of the Turf is being presented here by Mr. John F. Preston's company. There is a stud of thoroughbred race-horses, and the whole drama shows the temptation and trickery of the turf. Mr. John F. Preston as Joe Flaxman receives high appreciation; Sammy Flaxman, an apprentice jockey, by Mr. Horace Custance is good; while Marion, Lady Heathcote, is excellently performed by Miss Mabelle F. Barlow.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—The stock company is this week presenting Lured to London here. Mr. Sydney C. Cranston as the Rev. Leslie Carrington is fully equal to the demands of the character; Mr. Robert Faulkner acts with artistic finish as Geoffrey Carrington; Mr. J. G. Maine gives a fine rendering of Jake Gamble, and Mr. Graham Winsford submits a capital portrayal of Squire Carrington. Mr. Allan Carruthers is very amusing as P.C. Christopher Coppard, and is ably assisted by Miss Violet Temple as Rosannah Lovejoy; Miss Mabel Mannering well maintains her high reputation as Natty; as Lily Sterling Miss Maude Townsend acts with charm and ability; and Miss Francesca Strickland proves efficient in the rôle of Constance Stuart.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—Fred Karno's company in His Majesty's Guests has produced unbounded mirth this week. Mr. George Hester as Sergeant Lightning is as original and funny as ever, and the catchy sextette "Six Little Burglars" goes with its old swing; and housebreaking as expounded by the Karno troupe almost ranks as a gymnastic exploit. The principal rôles are undertaken by Messrs. George Hestor, Roy Jackson, C. Usher, S. Kearns, Tom Marnardo; Misses Edith Ager, Kitty Brunton, and Blanch Lynd. Mr. J. B. Helm is general manager for the company, and the orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Scott.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—A drama in which the human affections play a conspicuous part is being produced here for the week, entitled The Old Home. Mr. Roland Yorke's company is responsible for the varied character interpretations. As the Rev. Eric Armstrong Mr. Lonsdale gives us a type of the English clergyman which wins the admiration and approval of all who champion the cause of the weak and the oppressed; Mr. Chas. Franmore gives a really fine character-study of Daddy Dean, the father of the girl who is deceived and deserted by a scoundrel; Miss Gertrude Bonser wins sympathy and tears by her pathetic picture of Hazel Dean; Mr. Roland Yorke, the author of the drama, sustains with conspicuous ability the part of Lord Avondale; Miss Mara Collings as Bridget and Mr. Fred de Vere as Sam are responsible for much of the humour introduced; and much ludicrous comedy comes from the acting of Mr. Jas. Lea Hair, and Miss Gertie Douglas, Mr. Claude Agnew, and Mr. Walter Osmond in other important characters.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons.—R. Peel's Band is a feature of the week with opening overture "The Mikado." Something novel and diverting is put forward by Bennett and Stirling, the American comedy entertainers; then comes Louie Herman, who sings in charming manner her own copyright songs; Ormonde Penstone challenges attention as a prestidigitateur; a comedy sketch, Ferde's Ma-in-law, is well presented by Miss Ethel Lonsdale, Mr. A. Richardson, and Mr. A. Gordon-Laws; Mike and Lena furnish some good fun as Dutch lovers in a Dutch duologue; Jack Foley is a good comedian; Les Rallis introduce The Artist and the Monkey; and Mlle. Naveeda has a novel and sensational illusion, Eve in the Garden of Eden. The Bioscope illustrates the Troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—The picture entertainments inaugurated here some eighteen months ago still continue to attract large audiences. This week's selection of films include The Wreckers, Troubles of a House Agent, Billy's Bugle, Even a Worm Will Turn, The Motherly "Pram," and The End of a Dream. Illustrated songs are given by Mr. Glanmore Jones.

BARNSLEY.—NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Barnsley Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson.—La Faille Troupe appear here in a remarkable gymnastic and equilibristic act; La Troupe Espagnole Juanitos do clever feats of tumbling and acrobatism; the Marvellous Woodwards appear in a daring equilibristic cycling act; and the Albas, a thrilling wire performer. Other good variety turns are those of the Two Walonells, comedy acrobats and triple bar performers; and Salida and Vone, American Creole novelty singers and dancers. Nellie Ridgway, comedienne, works adroitly on a wire, assisted by Andrew Martin, eccentric comedian; Vera Mayne, chorus comedienne, and Andie Burns in song, story, and dance, and the Palascope complete the entertainment.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Mr. G. M. Copping's company is here in Love Rules the World. Mr. Richard Vane is an effective Harold Kingston; Mr. Alex. Wilson Wynne a capital Paul Carruthers; and Mr. Stephen Langton plays well as the villainous Stephen Blight. Mr. Mat Russell as Billy Binks lightens the drama with some good comedy; Mr. Sydney Rennef gives a sterling portrayal of Jim Dixey; and Miss Gertrude Sterroll is a sympathetic Maud. The Flo Morton of Miss Constance Medwyn is a particularly bright and clever character; and Miss Annie Brunette as Mother Grimble and Miss Nellie Freeland as Kitty Snowdrop both do well.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—E. H. Bostock's baboons, introduced by Captain Graham, are the premier turn here; their acrobatic feats are exceedingly clever, and they create roars of laughter with their comical antics. Barnard's Mannikins are another capital item; the dolls are worked in an exceedingly clever and lifelike manner, and the dresses and stage effects are very tasteful. Other good turns are the Two Kays, Elade Clare, Welda and Wynne, Ralph Neucombe, and Vernon's Bioscope.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—There is an exceedingly good programme of pictures here this week, which is being thoroughly appreciated. Capital variety turns are given by Messrs. Fred Rex and Corri and Foote.

BARRY DOCK. — THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Bogden.—Under Two Flags was played here on Monday to a crowded house. Miss Doris Gilham as Cigarette well maintained her high reputation; Mr. Werham Ryott as Louis Victor proved himself a talented actor; Mr. H. Harley West did justice to the part of the brother; as Ezra Baroni Mr. Harry Leander left nothing to be desired; the Princess Corona of Miss Dorothy Last was well portrayed; Miss Daisy Carlton made a lively maid; Mr. C. E. Johnson gave an excellent interpretation of Colonel Chateawroy; and the parts of Lord Royellieu and his friend were well handled by Messrs. Arthur North and Charles Brooke.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Leoni Clarke is once again here, exhibiting his large and varied collection of domestic animals, which is quite an entertainment in itself, and, as is customary, he is received with much enthusiasm; the club-juggling and dancing of the Claymores is rightly voted first-class; Slippere, the well-known blind musician and vocalist, meets with a cordial and sympathetic reception; Elma Morris, vocalist, creditably renders ballads; as a tramp cyclist, Dick Bradley does many clever feats; Mint and Mart execute paper-tearing cleverly, and also introduce much humorous patter; the Sisters Leon, duettists and dancers, Rose Nicholson, coon singer and dancer, and Harry Bold, comedian and raconteur, also appear. Raymond's Bio-tableaux retain their popularity.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Good fare is provided at the theatre this week by Kennedy's Komiks. Nat Abatt, a musical clown, received a warm welcome, and his musical turn was exceedingly good; Mr. Chas. Bland, the excellent tenor, delighted the company with his songs; and Val Priestman gave a clever display of clay modelling. Miss Garibaldi's contralto songs, the contortions of Knoto, the singing and dancing of the Sisters Raymond, and the animated pictures are other elements of a highly-successful entertainment.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ffed W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—The star turn here is Mr. Ivan Berlyn and company in Fagin. Mr. Berlyn's acting fairly thrills the audience with its intensity. The Ashmed-Ibrahim Troupe perform some really marvellous acrobatic feats; and a warm welcome has been bestowed on Miss Lily Burnand, one of the most accomplished comediennes before the public. The Three Sisters Sprightly produce character impersonations in their own finished style; and also appearing are Mr. Wilson Hallett, mimic; Hayes and Watson, comedians; Les Cabiacs, comedy acrobats; Miss Minnie Warner, comedienne; and the Palace pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmot and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Mr. John Tiller's company of comedians again top the bill, and this week produce with much éclat Jolly Jack, the smart nautical ballet, always attractive, in which Miss Gipsy Iris, Mr. Fred Danvers, &c., appear to great advantage; the eccentric juggler Raglus takes well, and deservedly so; and a hit has been made by the Sages (Will and Jenny), comedy artists. Miss Jenny Hartley, a charming comedienne and smart dancer, Mr. Alexander Prince's concertina solos, the Van Host Trio, Continental eccentrics, the clever Passmore Brothers, and the Hipposcope are other attractions.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The leading attraction here is provided by Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten in their juvenile comedy; Mr. Will Godwin, who is assisted by his wife and daughter, appear in Silence is Golden; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden produce, with much effect, one of their exhilarating comedies; and Miss Gracie Grahame, a comedienne with some good songs, is loudly and deservedly applauded. Mr. Harry Simms, light comedian, makes a hit, as does Olivo and Owen, in The Roadside Tinkers; Vandinoff, described as "the world's lightning artist, Miss Katie Butler, a dashing comedienne, and the Bioscope complete a fine programme.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Another fine exhibition of Animated Pictures has been submitted this week, including Black-eyed Susan, The Nihilists, Father Buys a Picture, Wanted, an Owner, &c. In addition, the Sisters Henderson, expert dancers, appear with much success; also Graham and Edwards, clever speciality comedians.

BILSTON.—AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Battersby.—The Imperial Pierrots continue to attract good audiences here. Mr. Alf Brookes amuses with his comical songs; Mr. Harry Plant's burlesque Jimmy Law is extremely laughable; Miss Flo Holyroyd sings in capital style; Mr. Fred Fields, baritone vocalist, meets with appreciation; and the programme concludes with an amusing sketch, Modern Society.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Miss Go-Won-Go Mohawk and her company, in Wep-ton-no-mah, have long enjoyed a large measure of support in this town, which has in no way diminished on the occasion of this, announced as their farewell, visit. Miss Mohawk repeats her very successful and picturesque rendering of the title-rôle; Mr. C. W. Charles is still the able representative of Colonel Stockton; and Mr. Edward Leroy enacts the Spanish desperado, Manuel Lopez, with a finish which denotes a long familiarity with the part. Mr. Alfred Lafolle as Sam White, Mr. Guy D. Hackney as Garry Cullen, and Miss Jessie Hart as Miss Matilda Sniffles furnish the comic business with great verve and proportionate success. Miss Blanche Leroy is an efficient Nellie Stockton; and Mr. Julien Mitchell is a good Captain Franklin. Mr. H. P. Burton is commendably realistic as Chief Ga-ne-Gue. Some trained horses are introduced with effect.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—A really attracted combination is headed by the Eight 'Varsity Girls, whose clever vocal and terpsichorean entertainment is received with great eclat; Sam Lowenworth and Charles Cowan, clever Hebrew comedians, are going strong; and the Brothers Hayes, assisted by Spot, score heavily in their amusing sketch, entitled Revels in a Billiard Saloon. Miss Jessie Merrilees is a vocalist of ability; Jessie Barlee and Phil Smith, entertaining vocal duettists; the Rinders, with illustrated songs; Frank Coyle, a capital comedian; Chas. Lestree, an exceptionally able juggler; Clara Victor, comedienne; and Brown's Royal Bioscope, all furnish prominent turns. Mr. Ernest Denney is musical director.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Edwin Adeler.—The popularity of the pierrot entertainments is well maintained by the excellent company, which includes Mr. J. H. Scotland, basso; Mr. Alf. Maynall, comedian; Miss Elsie Steadman, comedienne; Mr. Douglas McLaren, comedian; Miss Dorrie Courtnay, banjoist; Mr. Austin Mahony, tenor; and Mr. Frederick Arthur, accompanist.

BIRMINGHAM. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—A Gambler's Daughter is making a big success again, on its return engagement, with Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's company. Both these well-known favourites appear in the play, Miss Hill's fine emotional powers finding full scope in the double rôle of mother and daughter; while Mr. Ayrton finds popularity in the congenial rôle of the ubiquitous Irishman, O'Dare. The support is good all round, the principals being Mr. Alfred Sanders as Solomons, Mr. Harry C. Robinson as Stephen Brand, Mr. H. Barham as Captain Stanhope, Mr. Mortimer Hancock as Tom Brand, Mr. Edward Finlay as Gillman, Mr. George Vinn as Jack Grant, Miss Lizzie Gordon as Carmen Sancho, and Miss Henriette Loydall as Auntie Zeb, &c. Under Two Flags was given at the matinée on Wednesday, when Miss Hill and Mr. Ayrton were in high favour as Cigarette and the Hon. Bertie Cecil respectively.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Mr. Alfred West's pictures continue to attract, those of this week showing Pekin Wall, Jack and His Sweetheart, Naval Officer's Wedding, and many other interesting sights connected with "Our Army, Our Navy, and Our Colonies." This is the fourth and last week of "the pictures."

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Great Vaudeville and Universal Animated Picture Company give excellent variety again, and in addition there is a great dramatic episode by Mr. Frank Ayrton, The New World, which is attracting much attention. This is powerfully played by Messrs. J. B. Murray, J. P. Kennedy, Caspar Middleton, W. S. Stephenson, W. J. Morley, and Miss Nelly Moore. The pictures score, as usual; and Willie Hicks, descriptive, and Rose Everette, comedienne, are very successful.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake. — A Stolen Birthright, with Mr. Charles Draycott's company, meets with appreciation here. Mr. Draycott's acting of the evil genius, Marco Taddeo, is a salient feature of the performance; Mrs. Charles Draycott shows her ability to signal advantage as Princess Mirando; Mr. George Steel undertakes the arduous rôle of the soldier hero, Prince Andrea, with conspicuous success; Mr. Ernest Stidwell is an admirable portrayer of the faithful friend, Prince Michele; and Messrs. Eldon Selby, Harry Scatchard, and Dane Clarke play useful parts. Miss Eva Norman is graceful as Fidelia, Miss Ethel Vinroy plays the vivacious Nita well, and Mr. Harry Harrop is a capable and humorous Pedro.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—East Lynne holds sway here, with Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company, who give the Heath-Wilson Barrett version. Mr. Cecil Du Gue's sound acting-powers come out well in the part of Carlyle; Mr. Benson North gives full play to the despicable character of Levison; and Miss Julie Kennard's poignant acting as the unfortunate Isobel wrings tears and compassion from all. Mr. Alfred Tate scores in the all-important rôle of P.C. Bullock; and Mr. Harry C. Rutland as Richard Hare, Miss Kate Evelyn as Barbara, Miss Mabel Bishop as Joyce, Miss Ethel Hardacre as Cornelia, and others shine in the company.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—The excellent programme provided this week is headed by Arthur Roberts, with his company, in a new sketch Till Sunday, which has attracted large audiences; Miko S. Whallen is a popular Irish comedian; Ludwig Amann, one of our finest character quick-change artists, is loudly applauded for his clever impersonation of well-known politicians; Alexandre and Hughes, the Merrions, Tom E. Finglass, the Simms, Orpheus, and Frances McNulty are prominent turns.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—Chas. T. Aldrich appears here in a clever quick-change act; Tom Foy, in the sketch The Yorkshire Lad in London, is exceedingly droll; Tom Costello makes a hit in his song "My home is far away." The bill includes also William Lee and Helen Bentley, Sisters Allen, Howie and Andie, the Brennans, Callagan and St. George, and the Schiavonys.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—The long programme arranged here is most attractive. Horace Mills and W. H. Rawlins have an amusing sketch Mashing the Missus; the musical entertainment provided by Ethel Walker is refined; and Lyster and Cook are musical astronomers; Edith St. Clair is a dainty comedienne; and Barbara Babington, Ryder Slone, Harry Zetter, the Saletos, Smart Bros., and Leonard Gautier's animated toy shop are much appreciated turns.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles Owen.—Owen Moran is the attraction here, his exhibition of the "noble art" is watched with interest; the Currans are exceedingly funny, as also is Dammerell and Rutland's company in their sketch House Full; the Markies in From Pavement to Stage make a good turn; Webb and Branston are applauded for their operatic duets; Freddy Butler makes a good impression as a comedian; and Spencer and Mark have a novel act.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—The most frequent visitor to Blackpool is Mr. W. W. Kelly's A Royal Divorce company, which has possession here this week, and which still draws big houses nightly. Napoleon is again in the capable hands of Mr. Frederick Victor, who scores all along the line, whilst Josephine is played on this occasion by Miss Beth Elliott, who fully justifies her selection for so important a rôle. Miss Maude Lacy as Stephanie, Mr. W. T. Ellonby as General Angereau, Mr. Tom Robertson as Talleyrand, and Mr. Geo. Hudson as the innkeeper likewise prove their histrionic power.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—The New Barmaid, played by Miss Violet Osmund's company, is proving attractive here this week. Many new features have been introduced since the last visit, and all with good effect. Miss Osmund plays Dora Heather with vivacity and charm, and Miss Grace Walters is entirely successful in the title-part. Mr. Alexander Loftus repeats his amusing sketch of Bertie White, and is ably assisted in the fun-making by Mr. James Grant as William White. The music is bright and catchy, and Mr. W. E. Vaughan ably directs a good orchestra.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—The Savonas are back again here this week, and their musical scena is warmly applauded nightly. Other good turns are contributed by Raie Walters, comedienne; Lily Lonsdale, character vocalist; Talbot and Pearce in a musical duologue; Clive Watts, entertainer and dancer; Ben Albert, comedian; the Carmos, jugglers; the Gothams, vocalists; and Ernie Myers, a very popular comedian.

BOLTON. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones's company is the attraction here this week, in the drama, Life's Sweetest Sins. Mr. John Davidson gives a fine rendering of the hero, Captain Harold Marston; Miss F. Melrose Millett shows careful study in her portrayal of the character of Doreen Rivers; Mr. David McFarlane plays well the part of the villain, Dr. Colbrooke; Mr. Edgar Morgan is lively and humorous as Bob Tanner, and is capably supported by Miss Nana Flensberg as Bess Grayson. Mr. James Lewis is good as Sergeant Bates; and Miss Nellie Lawson shines as the doctor's daughter, Fay Colbrooke.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—A good variety company here is headed by the Piccolinis, Lilliputian midget wonders, who, by their astounding exposition of shooting, wire walking, acrobatics, cycling, and other feats, fairly fetch their audiences, and are deservedly applauded. Other excellent turns are Amos Howard, American dancing comedian; Charles Fields, society juggler; Les Bollingers, "the original rag painters of Paris"; the Marvellous Avolos, in a gymnastic novelty exhibition; the Loader Trio, in a comedy act, A Bit Too Clever; Ena Corelli, a dainty little comedienne; Richard Finberg, in a series of character studies from famous plays, &c.; Stuart and Stuart, eccentric comedy entertainers and quaint dancers; Maurice De Riaz, champion Swiss wrestler; and the Premier Imperial Bioscope.

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Wilmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The favourite American drama Shadows of a Great City is being presented this week by the stock company. Mr. Albert Sember plays well as Tom Cooper; Mr. Cyril Grier is a good Abe Nathan; Miss Effie Macintosh deserves special mention for her praiseworthy performance of Biddy Roonan; Miss Nina Vaughton is a charming Helen Standish; Mr. Stanley S. Gordon is strong as George Benson; and Mr. Tom H. Solly makes a most amusing Jim Farren.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—The Brothers Horne are here with The Biter Bit, and are much appreciated; W. H. Clemart, ventriloquist, with his wonderful mechanical assistants, gives a clever performance; Will Driscoll has a very hearty greeting; Mlle. Yetta shows great dexterity on the slack wire; George Prince creates amusement by his humorous songs; Beatrice Willey contributes old songs in pleasing style; Maudie Ford's dancing and singing are worthy of note; and the Bioscope pictures conclude an interesting bill.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Councillor Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N Hepworth.—A Wrecker of Men is again being played by Mr. C. Watson Mill's company. Miss Amy Ellam fills the character of the vile Rissa Mallison with great power, and she has fine support from Mr. Eric Campbell as the lion-hearted giant Jim Murley. Miss Gwendoline Talbot is charming as Doris Melville, and as the nondescript Slopper Miss Beatrice Reynolds is amusing. Mr. Milner Noble fills the part of the Egyptian Pharosaphus with effect; Mr J. Ansdell Wilson is vigorous as Railton; as Eric Melville Mr. Thompson Carruthers is intensely dramatic; Mr. Douglas Campbell plays Reggie Verincourt humorously; and all the remaining parts are in good hands.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Mr. John Lawson and his company are here this week appearing in a repertoire of sketches, including Pigs in Clover, The King's Minister, and The Monkey's Paw. Mr. Lawson's acting is much applauded, and he is admirably supported. Boden and Bell are clever juvenile vocalists and dancers; George Westland's Scotch comedy is excellent; in her usual lively style Lily Langtry delights her admirers with her songs; Fred Poplar's comic songs are well received; in a capital sketch, viz., "Hello!" Frank Bernard and company are very diverting; Kitty Wager submits an acceptable comedienne turn; Albert Whelan, the clever mimic and entertainer, is on a return visit as amusing as ever, and there are some fine pictures shown by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Alice Raymond and her Band of Arabs, in a musical extravaganza A Night in Egypt, present an entertainment of some merit; George Acre's vocalism is of acceptable quality; the Lannons (Will and May) are good duettists and dancers; Madge Field presents an acceptable comedienne turn; duets by the Sisters Varley are received with favour; a genuine success is achieved by Harry Nelson, comedian, who is distinctly quaint and amusing; the Florias submit a novel and very clever entertainment as equilibrists and wire performers; Victor Niblo's very wonderful parrakeet and cockatoo talk astonishingly, and win great applause and much laughter; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are very entertaining.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL PRINCES' PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Mr. Norfolk Megone, the newly-appointed conductor of the municipal orchestra here, is quickly establishing himself in favour. The vocalist this week is Mr. W. A. Peterkin, a basso of finished style and fine compass. The attraction at Mr. Flockton-Foster's entertainments in the Grand Pavilion is Miss Lillie Shaw, "the toy Vesta Tilley," a really clever little artist; Mr. Will Emmerson and his Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures are well received, and give great delight.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Herr Simon Wurm and his Imperial Viennese Band commenced their season's engagement here on Sunday with two concerts, and gave some choice selections in a finished style. During the week they are giving promenade concerts twice daily to delighted audiences. The vocalist is Mr. Fred Hudson, a baritone, who receives most hearty applause for his fine rendering of the songs allotted to him in the programme. Mr. Surrie Lindon and his vaudeville entertainers are giving some excellent programmes of songs, dances, and sketches, and meet with great success, and at their evening entertainments in the Opera House they give great delight, as do also the fine Animated Pictures shown by the Spaograph.

SUMMER GARDENS. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—The entertainment at this popular place of amusement draws large audiences, who are highly entertained by the capital programmes of the Waterloo Pierrots. This week they are presenting a most amusing burlesque pantomime Cinderella; or, The Little Glass Slipper, which is quite to the taste of the audience, who loudly applaud the various performers for their amusing portrayal of the various characters in this laughable production.

BRIGHTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—Dear Old Charlie is performed here this week by an excellent company under the direction of Mr. Charles H. Williams; and the farcical comedy, produced by Mr. Cyril Vernon, is very cordially received. Mr. George Lesto[illegible] gives a vivacious and delightful impersonation of Charles Ingleton—dear old Charlie; Miss Marjorie Chard makes a charming and graceful Agnes; the merry Gabriel Peploe and the melancholy Thomas Dumpie have admirable exponents in Mr. C. Douglas Cox and Mr. R. S. Trelawney respectively; Mr. Duncan Young is well suited as Colonel Fishbourne, whose wife is ably represented by Miss Leonora Braham; and admirable support is rendered by Mr. Stanley Arthur as Purkitt and Miss M. E. Ellis as Reeve. The play is preceded by The Cause, in which the characters are well sustained by Miss Leonora Braham and Mr. Cyril Vernon.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. Carpenter's stock company is doing excellent business here this week with Shall We Forgive Her? Miss Kathleen Russell submits a charming and convincing impersonation of the heroine, Grace West; Mr. A. H. Hallett, jun., is forcible as Oliver West; Mr. Ronald Adair makes a manly and popular Rev. Paul Elsworth; Mr. Ellis J. Preston is powerfully effective as the villainous Neil Garth, and is ably supported by Miss Amy Venimore as Joanna Lightfoot; and the comedy element is admirably presented by Miss Lucy Murray as Aunt Martha, Miss May Day as Nellie West, and Mr. Charles A. Preece as Reggie Walton. The remaining characters are satisfactorily sustained, and the drama is finely staged and mounted.

ALHAMBRA.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Ernest Lépard.—There is a capital company here this week. Dutch Daly, the concertina soloist and dialogue artist, is enthusiastically received; Ernie Mayne, "the simple one," contributes very amusing songs and patter; My Fancy is a smart and popular sand dancer; Carl Lynn, "the king of animal mimics," achieves distinct success; Rose and Calvert's comedy business is warmly appreciated; Hyram Travers is very entertaining with his original cockney character creations; Vi Adele is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Clack and Clack are clever lady acrobatic barrel-jumpers; Kathleen Grey, comedienne, is cordially applauded; Monnie Emerald is a dainty vocalist and dancer; and the Alhambrascope pictures are interesting and amusing.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—An attractive programme is sustained here this week. John Humphries and company appear with great success in the farcette Ancient Britons; Charles Vincent, comedian, evokes hearty laughter with his medley of popular songs; Queenie May sings in pleasing style; Gena Manon, comedienne, is well received; the Wakeman Quartet contribute their vocal selection delightfully; Will H. Fox's clever trick pianoforte playing and amusing patter win hearty applause; Tray and Rich are smart patterers; Dan Crawley achieves great success with his comic songs; the Villions are clever and daring in their cycle act; Charlie Jerome sings and dances himself into high favour; and the Barrascope pictures are interesting.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Leslie Faber and company opened here on Monday with The Manœuvres of Jane. Mr. Leslie Faber gave an admirable impersonation of Lord Bapchild; Miss Winifred Arthur-Jones made a bright and charming Jane Nangle; Miss Muriel Pope as the scheming Constantia Gage was highly effective; Miss Elizabeth Watson's Mrs. Becchinor and Miss Beatrice Ainley's Pamela Beechinor were well played; and praiseworthy enactments were submitted by Mr. F. G. Thurstans as Mr. Nangle and Mr. Charles Combe as George Langton.

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mr. Leigh Lovel's company is here this week with In the Soup. Miss Octavia Kenmore merits warm praise for her admirable impersonation of Judith Gillibrand; Mr. Leigh Lovel is well suited as Horace Gillibrand; Mr. Arthur McCullock's Abernethy Ruppershaw, Miss Katherine Maynard's Mme. Moppert, and Miss Fay Garnet Vayne's Dephine are effectively played; Mr. Norman Clark's M. Moppert is a neat character study; and Mr. Stanley York ably impersonates Paul Hemming.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. M. Barrasford; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Fred Bauer.—The animated pictures here prove very attractive, and three daily exhibitions are well attended. The film representing the leading incidents in Macbeth merits especial notice. The Gambler conveys a dramatic story; The Shipwreckers is highly sensational; The Organ-grinder's Child is an interesting and exciting picture; and prominent among the humorous ones are Jones and the Lamp-post, and The Irascible Father. Mr. J. R. Dobson contributes songs in good style. Mr. Arthur W. Briggs adds considerably to the effectiveness of the various pictures by his clever and appropriately descriptive pianoforte accompaniments.

BRISTOL. — PALACE. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Paul Cinquevalli heads the programme; his juggling feats are as perfect as ever, and he has an enthusiastic welcome each evening. Fred S. Peake and company score with their dramatic sketch, The Hypocrite, the parts being well taken by Mr. Peake, Mr. Edwin Morton, and Miss Dora Davis. Winnie Derson is a pleasing comedienne; Charles Ashdowne, comedian, introduces some smart legmania dancing; the Spanish Goldini Troupe amuse with their carpet-spinning speciality, and also introduce some tumbling, &c.; Harry Anderson, vocal comedian, obtains applause; Dolly and Madge McCalla, juvenile song and dance artists, are successful; Harold Thorley has a good baritone voice, his songs are well selected, and he sings effectively. This week we have two sets of animated pictures, depicted by Vernon's Bioscope, one very effective set of films representing The King and Queen on Board the Royal Yacht, and the other, The Dog Outwits the Kidnapper.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—George M. Marriott and company are successfully presenting their military sketch, The Flag of France, the parts being capably taken by Miss Edith Finlay, Miss Ada Dare, Messrs. G. M. Marriott, Frank Seton, T. M. George, and J. H. Boyde. The sketch is founded on Ouida's Under Two Flags, and it is well staged. Randolph King is an exceptionally clever quick-change artist, his sudden changes being sufficiently effective to be quite startling; Florrie St. Roy, comedienne, introduces some smart acrobatic dancing; Eugene and Willie amuse as double fiddlers and acrobats; Gene Selby scores as a coon comedian, dancer, and bone soloist; Sidney Brothers are expert trick cyclists; and Johnny Danvers, comedian, obtains considerable applause. The performance concludes with interesting animated pictures.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—There is again a grand series of pictures on show this week. On the Chronomegaphone Miss Victoria Monks with her favourites is the principal attraction, and on the Bioscope some of the latest living pictures are to be seen.

TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, the Corporation; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Sherratt.—Mr. Nat Travers, the popular comedian, and a company of variety artists opened on Monday, and met with a cordial reception. The following are appearing nightly:—Nat Travers, Rosa Davis, Rose Gower, Ashley and Wells, Kitty Lorraine, Arthur Kingston, Harry Harvey, Ivan Coherney, and Rose Lyndon.

BURY (LANCS.). — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Closed. Will open August Bank Holiday.

CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The animated pictures are still proving a great attraction here. The series this week includes The Old Composer, Wrongly Accused, Nervous Twitching, Chauffeur's Nightmare, and others. The variety turns are Miss Sylvia Bond, an American soprano vocalist, and Mr. G. V. Campbell, a quaint comedian.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Buxton Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings this week we had Mr. Trevor Lowe and Taylor Platt's company in You Never Can Tell. The piece was greatly enjoyed and really excellently played. Miss Katherine Stuart delineated Mrs. Clandon admirably; and Miss Gwladys Morris was exceptionally good as Gloria. Miss Clara Earle made a piquant Dolly Clandon; and Mr. Donald Calthorp was quite at home as the youth, Philip Clandon. Mr. F. Cremlin acted consistently as the disagreeable Mr. Crampton; and Mr. Trevor Lowe was an excellent Finch McComus. Mr. George Howard was a capable Bohun; Mr. Leslie Hamer's Valentine was a piece of fine, all-round acting; and in Mr. Chas. Daly we had a delightful William.

CARDIFF. — EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—Whit Cunliffe, a comedian of exceptional ability, is here; Harry Thorpe and Zoe Coe in My Burglar display fine histrionic powers; Franco Piper's banjo playing and juggling are extraordinary; Nell Emerald, a sparkling and sprightly comedienne, appears in song and dance; Mason and Bart, novelty comedy gymnasts, are excellent; Harry Tate's company in Motoring causes roars of laughter; and the New York Nippers, in an original dancing act, are very clever. Nellie Martell is a first-class comedienne. The special Bioscope pictures of the C.T.I.E.C. Carnival have been shown with remarkable and striking clearness.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—A clever and startling performance is given here by Alber's Polar Bears; the Three Arleys appear with success in a pot-pourri, with their trick cycling dogs; Zeta Grey and company take exceptionally well in the musical sketch The Lancashire Lass; Thornbury is a particularly smart chromographist and artist in sand and smoke. Other delightful turns are done by W. E. Wiltle, American ventriloquist; Violet Nunn, coon artist; and Ruby Parsonage, a sprightly comedienne. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are also to the fore.

CARLISLE.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, who top the bill this week, are on a return visit, and their comedy cycle act has lost none of its popularity. Josh Dixon, with some capital songs, is a big favourite; Ada Cerito, a dainty comedienne with good songs well sung, again delights audiences; something quite out of the ordinary in an acrobatic act is introduced by the Calbas, whose performance is distinctly novel; Bernard and Weston, too, have a style quite their own as patter comedians. Some good pictures by the Pepiscope conclude.

NEW PUBLIC HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. F. W. Bolam and Sydney Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sydney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Uden.—Edison's Pictures still continue to be a popular attraction. Among those attracting special attention may be mentioned the reproduction of the race for the Cumberland Plate, which was specially taken for the patrons of this hall. Other capital films are The Eagle's Nest and A Child's Prayer, both very interesting items. Some capital variety turns are engaged.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—This popular house was crowded to excess on Monday to again witness a fresh series of humorous, pathetic, and instructive animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. These pictures are forming the chief attraction during the summer months, and the attendance of such large audiences is truly astonishing. At intervals Madame Lizzie Casey, in illustrated songs, is applauded for her dainty and artistic vocalism.

CHATHAM.—BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Edie Veno tops the bill here. Sandy McNab's antics as The Mummy prove highly amusing; Ellis and Watts are successful as dancers; Brayne and Lloyd's absurdity, The Tree of Truth, is a much-liked novelty; Mlle. Marjutti gives a pleasing acrobatic scena; and Arthur Kingston, comedian, and Victoria Glenn, a promising singer and dancer, complete the variety turns. Lacey's Erascope has fresh pictures.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Captain H. S. Davis; Manager, Mr. E. G. Woodhouse.—The hit of the evening is made by Verno and Voyce in their topical act The Fly Far Man. A very entertaining item is The Red Domino, contributed by the Misses Beryl Martingale and Molly Maguire. The comedy-sketch Poor Master is a triumph for Mrs. Bennett, who appears as Mrs. Flareup; Ethel Dunford's songs are highly appreciated; Terry and Bently's act is freely applauded; and also appearing are Bessie Benson, comedian and dancer, and Frank Weir, comedian. Views by the Edisonograph complete a popular bill.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harold Montague; Business-Manager, Mr. G. Ivor Sparke.—Mr. Darcy Clayton's company, The Gipsies and their Jester, present a refined and humorous entertainment here. Mr. Will Gane (the Jester) makes the house laugh heartily; with Miss Florence Croft (Carmen) he pleases greatly in the humorous duet, "Molly Malone." Mr. Walter Grigg (Don Carlos) sings "The Vagabond" and "The Bandolero" in grand style, and with Miss Dorothy Francis (Maritana) scores in the duet, "Irish Courtship." This latter lady evokes an enthusiastic encore with her rendering of "In Sweet September." The songs and dances by Miss Inez de Baisson (Valeta) are charmingly rendered; and Mr. Edgar Berte (Rinaldo) makes a decided hit with his monologues. The trio, "The Dear Little Shamrock," by Miss Florence Croft, Mr. Walter Grigg, and Miss Dorothy Francis, is deserving of special mention. In the interval Montague's White Ladies' Orchestra renders some excellent selections.

WESTCLIFFE GARDENS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Bentley.—Miss Emily Foxcroft (contralto) is a great attraction here. Mr. Walter Montagu provides a musical treat in his clever manipulation of various instruments. Humour is supplied by Mr. Bert Graham, Mr. Bernard Russell, and Mr. Will Bentley.

COLCHESTER. — HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—That well-known illusionist Carl Hertz tops the bill this week, and his most versatile show is followed with intense interest from start to finish; Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, has a flattering reception; L. W. Harris, a light comedian, has an easy style and good delivery; Wright and Elton, comedy artists, work assiduously, and with success; Lillian Farrar goes particularly well in her patriotic song; Zeta Russell is a pleasing vocalist and dancer; and the Pathé novelties on the screen conclude a good entertainment.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—At the World's Mercy, a musical comedy, is a great attraction here. The piece is written and presented by Mr. Carr Loates, who has a capable company. Miss Cissie Milford undertakes with marked success the dual rôle of Skittles and Kitty Knott; Alice Lloyd is pleasingly impersonated by Miss Molly Bee; Mr. Carr Loates is responsible for some fine acting as Jabez Barber; Mr. G. D. Knight does well as Morris Goldstein; Mr. Terry Davies effectively takes the part of Frank Manley; "Dot" (Miss Stella Locke) and Charley Smart (Mr. Jess Boxer) are responsible for much fun and humour.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry.—The Bouncing Dillons, comedy gymnasts, do some astounding tricks here on the horizontal bar; the Venetians' vocal songs and living statuary have a good effect; Maestro and Cretta are novel equilibrists and tumblers; Alec Kendal keeps the audience in roars of laughter by his patter and songs. Other artists engaged are Cromo and Hamilton, in Artful Aladdin, and Reid and Power, in a comedy duologue, entitled The Chambermaid.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—Green and Wood appear here in a clever comedy knockabout turn; The Six Æolians do a pleasing vocal and dancing act; the Cole de Losse Duo, in a comedy wire act, are smart; Will Johnson is a lively and entertaining comedian; Daras, comedian, dancer, conjurer, and impersonator, is well received; Jock Mills, Scotch comedian, and Daisy Martell, comedienne, contribute capably. The Bioscope pictures conclude.

CROYDON.—HIPPODROME AND NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Jackson Hayes; Managers, Mr. Samuel James and Mr. Newman Maurice.—Miss Rose Moncrieff and Mr. Fred Southern's company is here with The Curate. Mr. Ross Challis gives a fine, manly portrayal of the Rev. John Audley; Mr. Harry Gilbey submits a graphic impersonation of Gilbert Westwood; Mr. L. Hocking appears to considerable advantage in the dual rôles of Gregory Verner and Sergeant Snipe; Mr. Fred Southern is very droll as Simon Peter Muggs; Miss May Emery is a charming and interesting Mabel Verner; and Miss Rose Moncrieff is a great favourite, and scores at every point as Dick, the trumpeter. Varieties are supplied by Miss Lillian Violet, a pleasing juvenile comedienne; Mr. E., in comic patter and picture act; the Evalos, in a smart juggling act; Capt. Devereux, with his clever performing dogs; and a series of novel animated pictures. Mr. Newman Maurice is a capital manager, and Mr. Frank Bradsall proves himself an excellent musical-director.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hal Cummings.—Fred Karno's company is here with the musical extravaganza Saturday to Monday. Miss Julia Basset as the Bride gives a capital portrayal; Miss Ada Maskell is clever and vivacious as Belina Dobbs; as Violet Perrin Miss Elsie Molly is successful; Mr. Ainsley Burton as John Willie Jaggs causes roars of laughter; Mr. H. Aston is funny as Alphonse de Gagge; as Mr. Black Mr. W. H. Morgan does well; Mr. Harry Fisher is well up in the part of Mr. Potts; Mr. Victor Smith is also seen to advantage. Masters F. Dance and F. McDonagh are well balanced as John Willie Jaggs and Bartlett Jaggs. Other members of the company work valiantly.

NEW HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C Hersee.—A strong programme this week. Alec Hurley and company in the sketch The Coster's Friendly Lead are enthusiastically received; the Cromwells are exceptionally good; Miss Carlotta Levey is an excellent turn. Other attractions are Barney Vox, ventriloquist; Gus Hindell, comedian; Eugene Joly, cornet soloist; Farr and Farland, aristocratic comedians, and Robb Gilmore, corkscrew dancer.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Owner and Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—Occupying first place this week are the Ten Genis, risley acrobats, whose novel turn proves a distinct success; at the other end of the bill are the Austral Trio, capital all-round artists, who find ample scope for their abilities in their act, entitled A Musical Evening; Dunn and Reano, parody gymnasts, submit a clever act, interspersed with droll byplay; Vernon Harcourt gives impersonations of notable characters in a particularly fine style; the Brothers Harrison, comedians, soon make themselves popular; Tom Bassett is a pleasing actor-vocalist; Happy Attwood, described as the "little lump of fun," causes uproarious merriment; and Vena Valma, in song and dance, gains well-deserved applause. The Bioscope concludes with a laughable set of pictures. On Wednesday Mr. Charles Denley, assistant-manager at the Grand, and Mr. Herbert Taylor, assistant-manager at the Palace, took their annual benefit, and had the pleasure of presenting a most liberal bill of fare to large and enthusiastic audiences.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—A Master of Millions is being produced this week, and on Monday evening was well received by two large audiences. The title-rôle is admirably sustained by Mr. Alex. C. Grant, who is part author; as Reginald Carrington, Mr. A. E. Winnington is a distinct success; while he has two able assistants in Jeremiah Moggins, a tutor of the young (Mr. Frank Lester) and Bill Donivan, the smasher (Mr. Harry Moroney). Mr. John L. Schofield acquits himself excellently as Eric Gordon; and the part of his wife is creditably played by Miss Isobel Edbrooke. The lighter element is supplied by Miss Amelia Herries, who is an expert dancer, and Mr. Leo Whamboult, in the humorous rôle of Widow Murphy.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Geo. S. King.—Mr. C. Watson Mills's company are producing an interesting domestic drama, entitled A Warning to Women. Mr. Leonard Lawrence admirably impersonates Dr. Marcus Dread on the machinations of whom the play hinges; Miss Lillian Herries as Moira Kennion is deservedly appreciated for a creditable rendering of a difficult part; Mr. Sydney Ernest is amusing as GIVEN AWAY.

ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE.

A WONDERFUL BOOK ON MONEY-MAKING.

Within the last few weeks there has been an overwhelming demand for a remarkable book dealing with a subject of absorbing interest, a subject that interests both young and old, rich and poor alike. This little volume does not ascend into the realms of visions; on the contrary, it tears aside the curtain that so often obscures our understanding of things, and it deals with plain, cold facts. It enlightens the man who is interested and instructs and informs the man who is ignorant. It tells of new fields and pastures green, and points—without fear or favour—to where those fields and pastures lie.

This is not a book for the library shelf. It is a book to be read, and can be read by the young as well as the old. It will serve as a fund of information for the former and a source of inspiration to the latter. For every careful, thrifty man or woman it is one of the books that is essential. One's education is not complete without having read its thrilling and fascinating pages. The subject of money-making by modern methods is fully explained, and considering the invaluable nature of the information imparted, it is done in such a masterly manner that your interest is at its highest pitch from beginning to end.

Nearly two hundred thousand copies of this publication have already been distributed, and those who have read it through have sent for

Lord Eversleigh, a scion of a noble house; and Miss Douglas Hicks is also deserving of particular mention.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—In the interim which always occurs in Douglas during the seasons Mr. T. R. Wood is keeping the Grand Theatre warm by presenting his own show. The audiences have been most satisfactory, the entertainment having secured the appreciation of large and delighted houses. The animated pictures have been excellent in idea and intention; Miss Kate Twist, who has a resonant contralto voice, vocalises ballads pleasantly; and Miss Nellie Hewitt introduces a new musical act, which catches on. This young artist is a clever musician, and should get "there." Mr. Tom Odlin also is a comedian of real humour, his Son of a Millionaire sketch being distinctly original. Uno Udono's whistling and mimicry are well worth listening to; Bural, the happy Dutchman, also scored by his concertina playing GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—Sowing the Wind, admirably enacted, has been the attraction at this playhouse for the current week. Miss Kitty Cavendish's Rosamund Athelstone was quite a surprise. Playgoers knew she was an accomplished actress, but her pathos rang true. Mr. Arthur Gibbons as Brabazon was quite in the picture. His portraiture was keen and incisive. Mr. Frederick Moyes as Ned Annesley was picturesque and romantic; Mr. Frank Bradley's Lord Petworth was a sketch that Thackeray might have outlined; Mr. Edward Nainby was adequate as Watkin; and Mr. C. W. Standing, Miss Mabel Innes, and Miss Mabel Sealby satisfactorily filled important rôles.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—The principal feature at the Palace this week is Mr. Arthur Pinero's old playlet Hester's Mystery, enacted by Mr. Horace Pollock and a full company. Miss Lola Patey secured success as a Dutch colleen; the Sisters Carina presented a refined and entertaining turn; Mr. John Macauley, a character ballad vocalist, the Three Merrills, and Vernon's Bioscope have also proved attractive.

DERBY CASTLE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Kelly.—An excellent programme is presented at Derby Castle. The grand ballroom has been packed. The variety turns include the Lukushima Troupe, Miss Ina Lorrimer, Mlle. Ada Gatley, Mr. Charles Rogers, the Velter Bros., and Vernon's Bioscope.

BUXTON'S PIERROT VILLAGE, with new songs and interludes, catches the conscience of the public.

MR. F. G. CONNOR, at the Hippodrome, made on Monday the most successful opening he has experienced in Douglas; and he knows the requirements of Douglas.

OTHER entertainments are Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's Pierrot Troupe on Onchan Head; Mr. Charles Dare at the Empire; two houses nightly at the Empire and on Douglas Head.

DOVER.—PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter.—The star turn is that of the Great McBanns, who give a wonderfully smart exhibition of club manipulation, and are thrice recalled at every performance. Next in merit comes the impersonation of the "Lady in Black" by Russell Wallet, whose excellence of make-up and the all-round cleverness of his show are highly commendable. Mr. and Mrs. Shelley have a bright little duologue in Miss Summerson's Baby, and an exciting performance on the slack wire is contributed by Celest; the methods of Archie Pitt, comedian, are exceedingly humorous, and he scores heavily with his "Simple Willie" song and "I don't think." Coon songs are sung pleasingly by Nellie Chandos, who also dances with considerable skill, Ida Kathrena giving a pretty dance in the guise of an automatic doll, and being heartily applauded.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The annual Hippodrome season started here on Monday on the two-houses-a-night system. It is some time since R. G. Knowles has appeared in this city, and his songs and patter were most heartily enjoyed. De Gracia's Royal Assam elephants were indeed a treat, and one of the best and cleverest performances we have seen here; Tiller's Twelve Palace Girls did some clever dancing and singing, for which they were heartily applauded; Francis O'Flynn gave a capital display on the banjo; Roze and Challoner displayed clever comedy in their sketch The Porter and the Singer; the Les Montaldos were most entertaining in their equilibristic and slack wire performance, introducing highly-trained parrots and cockatoos; Leo and Roland gave a very novel and hand balancing performance; Miss Laura Vere appeared with success as a vocalist, and the Royal pictures by Louie were interesting and most enjoyable.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr W S. Pearse; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Hereford Jones.—This place of amusement has an excellent display of pictures here this week, including the great wrestling match Hackenschmidt v. Madrali, An Arabian Legend, Kempton Park Races, The Land of Nod, Getting Rid of Ma-in-Law, The Roll of Lino, Our Cousins from Abroad, A Cold and Frosty Morning, A Free Pass to the Theatre, Hostage, &c.; and the turns presented by Will and Roze, in a pot-pourri act, Le Café Magique; the Arnolds, in a cabinet illusion act; and Bob Pearson, humorist and guide, are of a high order. Full houses are the rule.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Jack Lorimer, a clever versatile Scotch comedian, tops the bill, and scores a great success; Frank Hartley, boy juggler, gives a clever performance, and Adey Spencer, "the girl from the hat shop," is an attractive turn; Hilda Jacobsen, musical comedy artist, is an immense favourite and loudly applauded, and J. W. Rickaby is an amusing comedian; Frank Couch, patter comedian, scores, and Stella Stahl, comedienne and dancer, makes a decided hit; Kisbey, "the call boy," is, as usual, entertaining, and the Empire pictures are much enjoyed. The performance concludes with the Empire tournament.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr Charles; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Daly and O'Brien, who head the bill here this week, are a clever pair and high in public favour; whilst Alf Gibson, quaint comedian, also proves very popular. Leo Tell causes a good deal of amusement with his mimetic imitations, and the Countees, harmonising duettists, create a favourable impression; the Three Moxons score well as acrobatic performers, and the Nicholsons are an up-to-date and smart comedy duo; in a clever shooting act on the slack wire Langstow is deservedly applauded, and Maude Vera sings and dances in capital style; as a comedian Will Owens is successful, and the latest events are portrayed on the Bioscope.

PAVILION (KINGSTOWN).—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's Vaudeville Entertainers are the attraction here this week, and give a dainty and refined entertainment. Miss Lilian Barnes, a pleasing contralto vocalist, is well received; Harry Herbert, comedian, keeps the audience in good humour; Elfie Vincent, comedienne and dancer, provides a capital turn; and other artists deserving of mention are Gerald French (tenor), R. H. Stephens (entertainer), Aline Sudbury (soprano), Maynard Dakin (comedian), and Jack Macdermott (humorist).

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C A. James.—A capital programme includes the Dellars, comedy duettists; Alice Oxford, descriptive vocalist; Alf Blydon, comedian and champion dancer; Jim Deller, vocalist and dancer; Charles Coll, light comedian, and the cinematograph.

EASTBOURNE.—NEW PIER THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Miss Annie Hughes and a well-selected company are appearing in The Mollusc. Miss Annie Hughes as Mrs. Baxter is a perfect embodiment of the indolent and selfish "mollusc"; Miss Lilias Waldegrave, abundantly endowed with Nature's charms, is a sweet, sympathetic, and womanly Miss Roberts; Mr. Athol Stewart, delightfully natural and frank, is perfectly successful as Tom Kemp; and Mr. Cecil Rose, easy and refined, does ably as Mr. Baxter.

THE Russian giant Machnow continues his promenades along the pier, and during each evening Mr. Albany Ward gives an exhibition of his fine animated pictures.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray, King, and Clark.—On Monday and Tuesday evenings the children attending the Roman Catholic schools gave a very creditable performance of the juvenile operetta Princess Ju-Ju. The children were trained with splendid results by Miss Kirk and Miss Trist, and Mr W. Webb, of the Devonshire Hotel, was again a prominent and substantial help, as is usually the case, in all good causes.

THE ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—At the top of the bill are Mr. Arthur Rigby and company, who are appearing in a finely-staged little musical comedy, The Isle of Ooma. Mr. Charles Paton scores well in the song "The march of the married men"; Mr. Mark Leslie is a successful coon artist; the Three Sisters Duquesne have a pleasing and novel singing, dancing, and skipping act; Mr. Kid Johnson and Miss Maisie Pelham are a versatile couple in The Golf Match; Mr. Sid Bandon sings his songs with feeling; Daley and Collins patter and amuse the audiences, and new pictures are added.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. William Mollison's revival of Rob Roy, which started a short season under favourable auspices on Monday evening, comes opportunely for summer visitors, and, in the hands of the strong company engaged, the production should enjoy a new lease of prosperity. Mr. Ben Davies, in the rôle of Francis Osbaldistone, was received with much warmth and cordiality, his artistic singing of the many songs introduced into his scenes being greatly enjoyed. Every song was loudly encored—a distinction shared by Miss Kitty Brownless for her delightful rendering of the vocal numbers allotted to the part of Diana Vernon; Mr. William Calvert made a stalwart and effective Rob Roy, and Helen Macgregor was very vigorously interpreted by Miss Evelyn McNay; while a characteristically dramatic Rashleigh was found in Mr. Whitford Kane; the Dugal "Cratur" of Mr. R. B. Drysdale, the Major Galbraith of Mr. Tom Walker, and the Andrew Fairservice of Mr. Wm. A. Mackersy were realistic impersonations; Mr Henry Deas and Mr. Leslie Newton did well as Captain Thornton and Mr. Owen; and Miss Ethel Armit gave a very interesting and successful study of the smaller part of Mattie. The crowning glory of the performance was Mr. Mollison's masterly presentment of Bailie Nicol Jarvie, a most excellent and lifelike picture of the famous old worthy of the Sautmarket.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—The Zancigs are attracting crowded audiences here this week. Their entertainment remains as mystifying and wonderful as ever, and the rapidity with which Mrs. Zancig describes articles handled by her husband evokes repeated applause. Signor and Mme. Borelli give their clever musical act, containing so much that is musically and mimetically attractive; the Sisters Anderson dance with exceeding dash, their skipping-rope dance being marked by especially novel features; the Wille Brothers, in their daring acrobatic and balancing feats, compel the enthusiastic plaudits of their audiences, and Miss Aida Martin approves herself an admirable comedienne and dancer; Barton and Ashley are very amusing in a new humorous sketch entitled Adam the Second, while Little Zola rouses loud laughter by his really droll sketches; Miss Lena Verdi deserves more than a passing word of praise for her clever singing and dancing; Miss Rhoda Paul's male impersonations are distinctly good, and views shown by the Bioscope conclude a capital programme.

GATESHEAD.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Joe Peterman's company in The Pawnbroker occupies the leading position on the bill submitted here this week; Clark and Hayden in musical comedy duologue provide a delightful turn; Sim Maree is a clever and original contortionist; Dan Whitley makes a decided hit; Estrella dances uncommonly well; Beattie Bloom, comedienne, Wisper, comedy juggler, Madge Allan, comedienne, and the King's Pictures complete a good bill.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Mr. Junius Booth's excellent company is presenting Monte Cristo here. Mr. Booth's impersonation of Dantès is one of the finest pieces of work ever presented to Gateshead audiences; Miss Conyers Radcliffe is also entitled to much praise for her interpretation of Mercedes; Mr. Millar Anderson presents a notable Noirtier; and Mr. Ed. Coates is seen to advantage as Mondego. The part of Danglars is treated with care by Mr. A. Bowerman; Mr. C. W. Crowe is well suited with Villefort; and Albert de Morcerf is realistically portrayed by Mr. Kendrew Milson; Miss Violet Carter makes a delightful Sophie Danglars.

GLASGOW. — METROPOLES, LTD. — Managing Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Greed of Gold is being presented here this week by Mr. T. Morton-Powell's company. As the unscrupulous rogue (Harry Hood) Mr. Murray Yorke succeeds in obtaining the execrations of the audience; Mr. James Jarrett plays with vigour as Tom Wolstead; Mr. Alf. Stretton acts in good style as Arthur Erroll; Mr. Sydney Bryant as Cull Sing keeps the house in a ripple of merriment; Miss Elma C. Turner as Dora gains much approbation; Miss Annie Barclay as Mrs. Maxwell contributes an admirably conceived impersonation; Miss S. Bryant as Patty Marfield is a pleasing dairymaid; Mr. Victor C. Rolfe is well placed as Mr. Brightstone; and the rôle of Cecil is sweetly played by Miss May Ediss. As the rollicking Irishman, Con Creamer, Mr. Denis Campbell fulfils all requirements. Between the acts the phonograph gives selections, and a fine series of animated pictures concludes the performance.

EMPIRE. — District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Walter Passmore is again here with The Constable and the Pictures, in which he is now assisted by Miss Mary Fraser and Mr. Charles Childerstone. Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery create much fun with their Would-be Actors skit; Bert Weston is a very smart light comedian, with lots of clever patter; Will English's coon songs and dances take extremely well; Burnetti gives an excellent musical turn with imitations of well-known performers; King's College Boys contribute several well-harmonised choruses, and illustrated songs are given by John Donald; Max York introduces his cleverly-trained fox terriers; Leonie Dixon is a smart serio and neat dancer. The Bioscope concludes a good programme.

Zoo-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Geo. B. Reno and company cause roars of laughter with their amusing turn, American Nonsense; the Three Dreadnoughts give a marvellous shooting act, with many new and ingenious feats; the Cattaneo Troupe display great agility in an acrobatic act; Hampton and Bauman in old and new negro melodies provide a very enjoyable turn; Nat Watkins is a smart eccentric comedian, with a good style; Alice Lorette and her statue dog again prove a popular item; Jenny Sneddon contributes two illustrated songs; Ernesto is very clever as a juggler and musical equilibrist; Elton and Elma are most amusing in their triple-bar display; and several clever films are shown on the Bioscope.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—The negro sketch, The Sunny South, with its clever songs, dancers, and comedy business, heads a good bill; the Denwartz Troupe of acrobats give a wonderful display of agility and strength, the feats of the ladies being simply marvellous; the Waldrons cause much fun with their sketch, The Silly Burglar; the Maritana Operatic company give selections from that opera on the earlier evenings of the week, and later from The Bohemian Girl; Wright and Lawson are a smart couple of dancers, knockabouts, and contortionists, with lots of new business; Walter Barrett is a baritone vocalist of special merit; Edna Latonne sings several songs with taking choruses; Marie Vere is a pleasing soprano; and Stuart and Evans are clever comedians and patterers.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—A good company this week includes Herbert Rule, a smart and original comedian; A. J. Gamble, the favourite Scotch comedian and eccentric dancer; the Falcons in their neat and clever acrobatic turn; Rae and Calden, the transatlantic comedy duo; and Ferguson and Mack, comedians and patterers; Dolly Harmer's character songs take well, and the catchy chorus songs of Minnie D'Aubyn prove popular; Marie Stroud is a clever comedienne; an enjoyable sketch is provided in A Slippery Day, an original oddity registered and copyrighted by Mr. Rich. Waldon; Mr. Rolands Martin (the shoemaker) and Mr. Jas. Chippendale (the lawyer) are very good as the quarrelsome neighbours, who are continually playing jokes on one another, and lots of knockabout fun is provided by a trick staircase. The Bioscope concludes.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—The Five Mowatts appear here this week with great success, their lightning dexterity with the Indian clubs astonishing all beholders; Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink's spectacle, St. George and the Dragon, proves a highly entertaining production; and an amusing sketch of cross purposes is When the Clock Went Wrong, performed by Matthews and Cowper; Peggy Lennie and Walter Hast display versatility in their operatic fantasy, The Sea Nymph; the instrumental act of Les Frasettis is a good item on the programme; another pleasing feature being the illustrated chorus songs of Anthony Hope; Hall and Earle, the Chinaman and the tramp, cleverly combine comedy and acrobatic skill; Florence Yayman's coon caricatures are highly diverting; a smart pair of comedians are seen in Hans and Lux, and coloured films are shown on the American Bioscope.

GAIETY, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—The Bioscope, the principal item here, shows amusing and interesting pictures. The variety programme is sustained by the Three Royal Temples, popular operatic vocalists; Bros. Lunelle, vocalists and dancers; Miss Evie Edwards, comedienne; Wallie Gilbert, descriptive vocalist; and Penley and English, sprightly and amusing comedy artists in duologues of a most diverting pattern.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Miss May Stebbing, a pleasing comedienne, takes well here; Alf. Handly is really smart as a dancer; in a comedy turn Melvin and Max succeed as acrobatic, buck, &c., dancers; and Cissie Wallace is refined and finished as a singer and dancer.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE. — Messrs. Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—Tony Iveson as the ragman at the piano gives a very entertaining turn; the Vyponds, society entertainers, go well; Pringle and Grey are good in Kitty's Night Out; Yeager and Da-Costa, in American coonisms, are a lively pair; Lily Hales is an excellent dancer; the Calcotta introduce a neat musical scena, Rags and Tatters; Smith and Johnson, coloured artists, are successful; and Frank Hardie and company play For the Honour of the Regiment. The Palacescope concludes.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—At this hall during this week Rose Cabani, refined comedienne and dancer, has done well; Harry Kent, a comedian of the light order, has scored nightly; the Sisters Reno, eccentric and acrobatic dancers, have proved themselves a good turn; the Three Dares, instrumentalists, vocalists, and dancers, are highly amusing; Bert Williams is a clever ventriloquist; Royston and Royce, vocalists and dancers, have received much applause; and Larola, the clever man with funny ways, has caused endless laughter.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Walter Maxwell's company in The Lion and the Mouse is occupying the boards here. Miss Christine Silver's charming personality, coupled with intense acting, as Shirley Rossmore makes her a big favourite with the audience; Mr. Leslie Carter gives a masterful rendering of John Ryder; Mr. Martyn Roland displays marked ability as Jefferson Ryder; Mr. Dan Dyer gives a clever character sketch of Dorkins; Mr. A. W. Baskcomb is excellent as the Hon. Fitzroy-Bagley; Mrs. Rossmore has a clever exponent in Miss Violet Greville; Miss Margaret Murray as Mrs. Ryder hits off the grand dame perfectly; Miss Florence Read is a winsome Kate Roberts; Mr. Douglas West a dignified Alfred Stott; and Mr. John Wheatman a good Whitmore Roberts, M.P. Mr. Herbert Greville is general-manager for Mr. Walter Maxwell.

Mr. Leicester Cooke gives a clever equestrian turn; the St. Johns are very smart comedian-musicians; Rex Fox presents a novel ventriloquial act; the Ettenas give a clever performance on the rolling sphere; Haley's Juveniles are a turn of exceptional merit; Addison introduces three cleverly-trained dogs; Ada Webb and Water Nymphs continue their fine aquatic display; and Doodles is funnier than ever, and at every appearance is greeted with laughter and applause.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.—Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Miss Veronica Brady and company are presenting a smart Dutch scena, entitled Miss Gretchen. Mr. Lewis Wigley's singing and dancing are much applauded; Pulo is a clever juggler; Miss Maggie Strachan's songs at the piano are smart; Mr. Carl Osmond, the tramp cartoonist, is excellent; Mr. Frank Lawton, of The Belle of New York fame, delights everyone with his whistling and dancing; Mr. Charles Ulrick is a clever barrel jumper; and excellent pictures are being shown on the Britanniscope. Mme. Angless's band performs some fine selections.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, the Great Yarmouth Corporation.—The Orchids (Mr. Fred Rome, Miss Haidee Hamilton, Mr. Dalton Murray, Miss Ada Wheeler, Miss Laura Caffyn, and Mr. Wilfred Stracey) are presenting a very refined and artistic programme here.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS. — Proprietress, Mrs. S. Lawton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Barker.—The new turns here this week are Miss Blanche Marion, a very pleasing comedienne; Miss Ray Randall, comedienne; and Ryde and Beeman, exceptionally clever comedian-acrobats.

MINSTREL ARENA.—The Black Diamond Minstrels are presenting a new programme, and are still very popular.

GREENOCK.—EMPIRE.—Lessees, the Greenock Empire Syndicate; Responsible-Manager, Mr. Edward McCormick; General-Manager, Mr. T. J. Colquhoun.—The Prince Edward Animated Pictures are still proving attractive here. The films shown include The Fight in the Eagle's Nest, Angels, Funny People, Rival Cyclists, The Wonderful Overcoat, and Storm and Sunshine.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company is presenting two of his popular dramas. The visit commenced with the performance of The Price of Sin, and a capital representation was given. Miss Violet Carlyle takes a prominent part as Nancy Crawford, and her charming acting wins complete approval; Mr. Graham Woods is excellent as Lieut. Ray; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan suitably represents the schemer, Frank Foster; Mr. Russell Bogue accomplishes sterling work in the pathetic part of the veteran, Jake Foster; Mr. William Heilbronn is quite equal to the requirements of the part of Major Crawford; Miss Gwynne Warren gives a spirited impersonation of Kate Creleyn; and others taking important parts are Mr. Tom Roydan as Jack the Welsher, Mr. Val Gully as the Rev. James Small, Mr. Francis Serle as Jim Trotter, and Miss Cissie Podmore as Charlotte King. The other play presented during the week is When the Lights are Low.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—A dramatic story of Canadian life is told in the sketch Under the Maple Leaf, which is well acted and smartly staged by John Henderson and company; the Columbia Trio are popular comedians with original and amusing business; Beau and Belle are a couple of vocalists whose voices blend excellently; the Sprees introduce good songs, dancing, and patter in their scena Twickenham Ferry; Abalo and Hurst appear in a very laughable comedy speciality; Princess Pauline is a charming comedienne who is scoring a distinct success; and Allsopp and Beckwith provide an amusing turn.

HALIFAX.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod's company is here this week with The Prodigal Parson. Mr. L. Darra makes a good impression as the Rev. Tom Godley; Enoch Jaggins is well played by Mr. P. Beckett; as Ben Jaggins Mr. C. Ashwell is successful; Mr. Garrod takes the part of Phil Drive very acceptably; Miss E. Edoni is good as the excitable Gretchen; Miss Violet Hammersley is a success in the part of Fern Godley; and Miss Madge Gillard shows ability as Myrtle.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—The Pasquali Bros. are creating a sensation at the Palace this week with their acrobatic entertainment; Annie Lang is a good dancer; Professor Norton gives a smart conjuring turn; Harwood's Juveniles are clever in a Children's Christmas Eve; Natalia and Diana are graceful lady gymnasts; the Violas gain unstinted applause for their second-sight exposition; the Bartholomew Girls sing very acceptably; Robins and Collier create roars of laughter in an acrobatic display with comedy of a high order; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux conclude.

HAMILTON.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. René Clayton.—The Warsaw Brothers are deservedly popular here; Silbon's Circus introduces some cleverly trained cats and dogs, and a pony; W. G. Weber, bass vocalist, is warmly applauded for his rendering of well-known songs; the Whittakers do a smart comedy act, Dick Whittington; May de Rowse sings and dances prettily; Chummie La Mara takes the fancy of her audience; Mallia and Bart are smart in a acrobatic sketch entitled The Baggage Smashers; Farrell and Dunn, patter comedians, and the Bioscope conclude the entertainment.

HANLEY. — GRAND. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatre and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—A fine programme is again being put on here by the management, and business continues first-class. Fred Lincoln is a clever comedian with catchy songs; the Sisters Wingrove appear with success; Cull Pitt is good; The House of Tinn is cleverly put on and well played; the Elvio Trio are quite artistic in their original act; Ross and Grayson win loud applause; Joe Boganny's troupe of lunatic bakers cause roars of laughter; Selma Broatz, lady juggler, is heartily recalled; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows an interesting and instructive picture depicting the training of French police-dogs.

KING'S.—Lessees, Messrs. Kennedy and Moore.—Acting-Manager and Operator, Capt. F. Shaw.—Another superb collection of up-to-date films is shown this week. They are as steady as a rock and very clear. The chief are Stop those Barrels! which is a screamer, The Black Princess, Tormented by Ma-in-Law, Freddy's Magnet, Woodland Tragedy, Walter the Postman, and Day of Robbery. Miss Alice Verti sings some fine songs cleverly.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—The theatre opened on Monday after cleaning and renovating, and looked very smart. A large audience was present to see Mr. Haldane Crichton's company in the ever-popular play The Dandy Fifth. Miss Pauline Hague repeated her well-known impersonation of Kate Lorimer, and won hearty plaudits for her sweet singing; Miss Isa Bowman was good as the girl Polly, and Miss Maud Nichols amusing as Mrs. Von Blitzen; Mr. Will Smith was the Colonel, and Mr. Frank Barclay was well placed as Dick Darville, Mr. George Beverley being excellent as Sergt.-Major Milligan and Mr. Jack Crichton appearing to advantage as Trooper Brown. For the latter half of the week the same company played The Dancing Girl of Spain, followed by Office Hours.

THE KURSAAL.—General-Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—During the serious illness of Mr. Julian Clifford, Herr Max Heymann, of the Bath Orchestra, has been engaged. For this week Miss Violet Elliott (contralto) is the vocalist, and Mr. Ernest Hastings, the entertainer, is proving very popular. Mrs. Max Heymann was announced as the solo pianist for the Wednesday symphony concert, and for a special matinée to-day Miss Margaret Cooper will give songs at the piano.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg.—Another week of pictures is being fully appreciated by well-filled houses, considerable interest being shown in the films depicting Romeo and Juliet, Across the Atlantic, The Counterfeiters, and The Little Ship Boy. Amusement is supplied by Tommy in Society, Depilatory Powders, The Chauffeur's Dream, and The Super's Début.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—This attractive house was re-opened on Monday by Mr. Lewis Waller's principal company, on a week's visit, in the romantic comedy, Robin Hood. The company is under the direction of Mr. F. Clive Ross and stage-managed by Mr. C. Bruce Winston. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, in the name rôle, was forceful and picturesque, and finely showed the romantic personality of the outlaw in the third act; Miss Lilian Stennis was quite the lady of quality as the Lady Marion de Vaux, and showed an excellent conception of the character, and quite won the sympathies of her audience. Fine support was afforded by Mr. Laurance Tessier, a manly and virile Will Scarlet; Mr. Spencer Lloyd as Alan A'Dale, whose songs were finely rendered; Mr. Clive Ross as John Little, whose sturdy physical proportions made him a formidable opponent at quarterstaff; and Mr. C. Bruce Winston, who was a humorous Friar Tuck. Miss Laurie Flockton was piquant and winsome as Adela, maid to Lady Marion; Miss Irene Malvesyn made an austere and stately Queen-Dowager; Mr J. N. Briant was impressive as King Richard; Mr. H. Elliott Ball presented a clever characterisation as Prince John; Mr. Richard Fielding as Hugo de Longespee, the evil genius of the piece, gave a consistent impersonation of the rôle; and Mr. Herbert Gray was an imposing personage as Fitz Alwynne.

ROYAL CONCERT HALL.—The Royal Italian Circus, of which Mr. Edwin Gilley is general manager, concludes its three weeks' visit here to-day. It has throughout that time provided an excellent entertainment by its exceedingly well-trained animals, and Directeur B. Volpi has had every evidence of appreciation from his audiences.

HIPPODROME.—Closed for renovation.

PIER PAVILION.—Entertainment-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Payne's Bio-Photoscope, with some up-to-date pictures, are well to the front. Some of the most effective scenes are Romeo and Juliet, Bobby's Fire-engine, and The Pony Express. Local talent is secured by the appearance of Mme. Amy Atkins, a soprano vocalist; Mr. Drew Mackintosh and Miss Annie Stalman are associated in the pleasing duologue The King's Messenger. This incident, which occurs on the Russian frontier, is remarkably well acted. An admirable performance is given by Doroswami, a skilful violinist; Mlle. Flora Lumiere submits a pleasing exhibition of electrical dancing; the musical interlude, Who'll Shut the Door? is given by Miss Blanche Bayley, Mr. J. D. Hunter, and Mr Charles Hawker; Mr. Charles Diamond and Miss Beatrice introduce some lovely duets on the harp and saxophone.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—The Wallis-Arthur Syndicate Co. here give every satisfaction to its numerous audiences by its enjoyable entertainment. Mr. Blackmore scores in Hastings because he gives to the public a clean, clever show.

PUBLIC HALL.—The London Animated Picture Co. continue its exhibition of animated pictures, which are of a varied and pleasing character; the films are steady and bright, and the pictures remarkably clear.

ST. LEONARD'S PIER.—The Kimonos, a Japanese costume concert company, are performing here with success. The various songs and choruses are rendered in excellent style. Special credit is due to Mr. Alan Thorpe for his well-rendered tenor songs; also Mr. Alban Booth, for his clever solos on the zither banjo; magical problems are expounded by Yettmah, the Japanese prestidigitateur, assisted by Miss Sasa San.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—The attractions here during the week are Miss Agnes Spadoni with her trio of beautifully-trained ponies; Ford Williams, bass vocalist; Athalan, a clever juggler; Walton and Lester, comedians; Miss Marie Jones, ably supported, in her quick-change sketch How to Win a Bet; Fred Land, an effervescent comedian of ability; the Onalisw Trio of acrobats in their unique specialities with the slack wire; and amusing films on the Bioscope.

HULL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. A. Morton; Manager, Mr. Tom Bogue.—The happy idea of a light entertainment which Mr. Morton has hit upon for the summer season has evidently met the taste of his patrons; the sketch, the pictures, and the songs have been the means of attracting many who have no care for more substantial amusement at this season of the year.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, MORTON'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Morton; General Manager, Mr.

About six weeks ago I was suffering with

PIMPLES

ALL OVER MY FACE,

brought on probably by painting my face for my eccentric business. I was also suffering with SCURF IN THE HAIR. Being rather alarmed, I asked a friend's advice, and he recommended me to take "Clarke's Blood Mixture." I purchased a 2/9 bottle, and within a week I found marked improvement. The pimples and the scurf is entirely gone. I cannot tell you how thankful I am at having taken "Clarke's Blood Mixture," and I shall recommend it to everybody, as I think it only right that such a remedy should be known.—(Signed), JOHN HENRY JONES, known as "Little Johnny," Llandudno's Popular Comedian, Thorndale, Llandudno, Feb. 24, 1908.

VANISHED LIKE MAGIC,

Proprietors: THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

Geo. Morton.—A vast amount of water has run through the bridges since Man to Man was first introduced to a Hull audience by Mr. Bounce. On this occasion, however, Messrs. Ed. Lloyd and Frank Adair's company are responsible for the show. Mr. F. R. Robertson is well cast as Geo. Gordon, whilst the Ethel Maythorne of Miss Louie Adair is a very presentable performance. The comic relief is efficiently handled by Mr. Herbert Williams, who cast as Samuel Plumtree produces any amount of merriment. Mr. Frank Adair is seen to highly-satisfactory effect as Richard Ellerton. There is apparently money in Man to Man for many years to come.

GRAND THEATRE.—Closed for redecoration, &c.

ILKESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Kennedy's Komiks are still amusing, the following artists appearing this week:—Little Hatch, comedian; the Gelders, illusionists; Dolly Vince, vocalist; the Incemore's marionettes; West and West, duettists; Ivy Dene, dancer; Eric Incemore, comedian; Frank Lyndon, musician; and a series of pictures.

IPSWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. B. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Head.—The bill here this week includes Miss Clarice Sefton, a graceful dancer and singer; Fraser and French, with marvellous powers in clog-dancing; and Florence Esdale, soprano vocalist. Mlle. Paula has a very clever animal show, in which ponies, dogs, and baboons figure; the Sisters Brooke are spirited dancers; Tom Edwards is an excellent ventriloquist, and Alfred How mimics musical instruments, animals, and birds in quite a realistic manner; Dick Thomas and Lincoln Taylor have a quick-change scena entitled Fun on the Midland.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—The above theatre was closed last week for redecoration. This week Messrs. Herbert Skardon and H. Sherwood Martin's company is here in The Way of the World. Mr. J. P. McBride is an excellent Cecil Montague; Mr. H. Skardon plays with force and skill the part of Captain Fred Slade; Mr. Clarence Temple shows himself a talented actor in the part of Matthew Malyon; and Mr. Hammond causes much amusement as Horatio Bluff. Miss N. Delacy does justice to the part of Kate Montague; Miss Marie Fontaine does well as Polly Bell; and Miss Sidney Crowe gives a very powerful rendering of the part of the unscrupulous Adela. The comedy is in the capable hands of Mr. D'Arcy Kelway as Joe Sparrow.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—Amy Flanagan is a capital male impersonator; Morimura, described as a Japanese magician, performs a number of bewildering mechanical conjuring tricks; A. C. Spry is distinctly out of the common run of quaint comedians; Jenny Alexander is a promising child entertainer, and her imitations of Vesta Tilley and Harry Lauder were particularly good; Charles Leighton is an amusing tramp pianist; whilst Harry Brown, the American coloured comedian and eccentric dancer, is the chief success of the entertainment, which is brought to a close by Spry and Monti with an amusing sketch.

KEIGHLEY. — QUEEN'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Carson and Kendall; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Carson.—Messrs. Carson and Kendall are to be congratulated on the talent they have secured for this week. Large audiences are the rule, and they are delighted with the fare provided. Mr. Hugh Brady's sketch combination met with great success on Monday; Mr. Algy Spalding was amusing and vigorous; Miss Polly Denville acted with ease and grace; Mr. Dobson Clyde was thoroughly efficient in his part; and Mr. Freddie Bentley lent capital support. The Gascoignes gave a first-class entertainment; Will Willis, comedian, is amusing; and Frank Street's yarns are much appreciated; Mons. De Lil succeeds in perplexing the audience; and Hulbert is a capable ventriloquist. New pictures are projected on the screen by the cinematograph.

LANCASTER. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Francini Olloms and Page are at the head of the bill this week, being nightly recalled for a clever performance. Mons. Salmon, trick cyclist, is paying a return visit, as also are the Sisters Silcott, vocalists and dancers. The Belmoir Sisters dance well; Frank Lynn, comedian, has some good patter; and Harry Cotton sings capital songs. As an operatic vocalist Mollie Wolstenhulme is decidedly good. The Hippograph is still acceptable.

LEEDS.—THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—District-Manager, Mr Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—The Ten Loonies in Dotty are causing roars of laughter, their diverting sketch being well received; Marie Kendall is as popular as ever; Clown Zertho's dogs give a fine exhibition of animal intelligence; a clever dancing turn is given by Nipper Lupino Lane; Alice Maydue's songs are well appreciated; and other good turns are provided by Foreman and Fannan, Steve McCarthy, Howard and St. Clair, and Fred Earle. A special feature this week are Biograph pictures of the Royal visit.

QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush—Everhart, the timber scientist, gives a unique turn and one that is appreciated; Lisbon and Barker, Geo. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Wordley, Hulse, Chas. Wilson, and Probyn and Bates also provide cause for mirth, and Les Rubens give a turn that is out of the ordinary and one that hits the popular bull's-eye.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Harry Roxbury, "Prince of Monte Carlo," is delighting the audiences at the above house this week; the Three Comedy Chanters render their songs in a delightful way; Lieut. Travis gives a turn that finds an appreciative audience, and Kathleen Cogan, the Tafonas, Ted Cowan, Gicardo, Della Sisters are also well received. Terris and May give a diverting turn, and other good turns are provided by the Three Cunards and Ruby Bijou.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Doody and Wright, Charles Penrose, Prince Milner Trio, Clifton and Gibson, and the Royal Welsh Vaudeville company provide the amusement and entertainment at this house this week, and crowded houses are testifying to their ability and mirth-provoking qualities.

LEICESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont.—The attraction is provided this week by a visit of Mr. Harry Tilbury's company in the romantic comedy-drama The Blind Foundling. Mr. George Fry makes an excellent impression as Gerald Dalton, and Mr. Horatio Sinclair plays well as Mark Redman; Miss Belle Tilbury is seen to considerable advantage as Isabel; Mr Harry Tilbury is very funny as Dick Dobbins, and sings a song in commendable style; Miss Arline T. George is vivacious and smart as Winnie Dobbins; Little Phyllis deserves special praise as Fairy, the blind foundling; and Miss Annie Newall as Viola Waterford; Mr. Bernard Webb as Jasper Waterford, and Mr. Fred Owen as Parson Ray are others who should be signed out for portrayals of merit. This place of entertainment will close this (Saturday) evening until August Bank Holiday for alterations and redecorations.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertie Rayland.—The lead in a thoroughly good and versatile bill is taken here this week by canny Neil Kenyon, who is on a first visit. His Scottish character studies and stories are delightfully given, and the ovation accorded him from all parts of the house is well deserved. The Leslie Bros., eccentric musicians, bottom the bill, and are scoring their usual success with their mirth-provoking and clever instrumentalism; Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford are again presenting their really funny and cleverly played comedy incident Getting Even, which is splendidly received; the Huxter Brothers display marvellous agility and smartness as acrobats and tumblers, being great favourites; Fred Elton, in his speciality scena at the piano, uses a good voice to considerable advantage in a turn of special merit; Pip Powell and Katie Vesey are very good in their refined and amusing dialogue A Perfect Woman, the dancing of Miss Vesey calling for high praise; Lilian Lowe is aptly described as a charming vocalist; Lozelle does some clever feats as a gymnast; the Seven Wulfrunas are entertaining in their comic acrobatic speciality, Fun in a Café; and the Bioscope shows a beautiful dramatic subject in ten tableaux entitled The Pardon.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—The chief attraction this week is supplied by Carlotta de Yonson and her popular sketch company in the scenic detective dramette The Case of Coiners, which is meeting with a cordial reception. Mr C. Douglas Carlile (the author) is seen to conspicuous advantage as Sexton Blake; Carlotta de Yonson displays her well-known ability as Annette Conre; Mr. Chas. A. Carlile does full justice to the part of Jim Railton, and Master Le Gilbert is capital as Tinker. The sketch is especially well staged. Chester and Lee's electric theatre des fantoches provides a thoroughly entertaining turn; Fred Pearce and Kitty Ward are good comedy artists, their burlesque boxing evoking screams of hilarity; Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is a special feature with beautifully-shown pictures, including The Black Princess, Three Ladies and a Bull, and J. A. Jarvis's Swim Through London. Other entertaining turns are given by the Sisters Thorne, comediennes and dancers; the Brothers Tarrant, comedians and dancers, and Rene Leyton, vocalist.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. A. Hurley.—The usual full programme of moving pictures and vaudeville is given here this week, the principal films, thrown with their usual clearness, being From Earth to Moon, Magic of Music, The Angel of the Village, For Baby's Sake, The Phlegmatic Gentleman, &c., which are interluded with enjoyable turns by Ada Scott, contralto vocalist; Dean and Wilton, comedy acrobats; and Master William Edwards, the winner of the singing competition, in illustrated song. The various singing competitions held here have proved so successful that the fourth in succession is taking place this week

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—Mr. Felix Pitt and company are this week presenting Across the Continent. Mr. Pitt is again seen to advantage in the rôle of Mr. Goodwin; Mr. Charles Halling acts with vigour in the rôle of Joe Ferris; Mr. Edward Warden gives an excellent interpretation of John Adderley; Miss Muriel Dean acts excellently as Louise; Miss May Warden is well placed as Clara; and the comedy is well looked after by Mr Hyland O'Shea and Miss Edie Martin in their respective rôles of Knuckle Bone Johnny and Susan. The theatre will now be closed for the summer vacation until further notice.

LIVERPOOL. — ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn has been here this week with his company, presenting Send Him Victorious and The Woman Who Was Dead, both of which plays paid a first visit to this city. In the former, which met with every acceptance, a manly and dignified Captain Allison was portrayed by Mr. Beaudyn; Mr. Frank Holyoake did justice to the rôle of the King of Ravonia; Mr. G. M. Montanini figured prominently as Colonel Kaufmann; the Major Strauss of Mr. Arthur Tomlin afforded general satisfaction; Mr. James Archer proved an excellent governor; Miss Cecilia Crawford as Gretchen, and Mr. Harry Oates, in the character of Geordie Walker, were responsible for some capital comedy; Miss Marie Robson did well as Countess Kara; and the Ethel Hardinge of Miss Irene Munroe was pleasing.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—The attraction here this week has been A Woman's Past, presented by an able company sent by Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Charles V. Sandford. Miss Maisie Hanbury made a most charming Bessie, her sympathetic and intelligent reading of the part gaining cordial recognition; Mr. Jerrold Heather played David Heath with distinction; Miss Mary Mallalieu was very satisfactory as Dorothy Heath; Miss Gertrude Harrison creditably impersonated Clara Darrell; and good support also came from Messrs. Charles V. Sandford (Frank Dellaunoy), Oswald Cray, Philip Nailor, A. Hamilton Warden, William Berson, Wilson Munroe, and Cecil Dainton.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Foremost here this week was W. C. Fields, the quaint juggler, who caused roars of laughter; the popular Arthur Lennard had a cordial reception; Terry and Lambert proved as merry as of yore, their humorous character sketch, English Types Through American Eyes, being especially diverting; Ernest Charles Gittens and company provided an admirable military episode, The Daughter of the Regiment; Fred Curran had some quaint songs and parodies; St. George Sylvesta, assisted by Miss Vera De Courtney, performed a number of smart conjuring tricks; and others who contributed to the programme were Lena Willard, comedienne; Bert Woodward, trick cyclist; and Betty Green, juvenile comedienne and dancer.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Defending His Honour has been produced here during the week.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Top of the bill here this week was Jan Rudenyi, who, with a capable combination of artists, presented a gratifying musical sketch, The Power of Music; Tom E. Conover raised endless laughter with his absurdity, The Drink Cure; Cliff and Mont were a merry vocal and dancing duo; Cyril Carle sang several pleasing numbers; Burley and Burley, as quaint acrobatic comedians, were a capital turn; the ridiculous Recco proved an amusing burlesque acrobat; and the programme also contained the names of the Stowe Bros., and Dolly Ross, comedienne and dancer.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan. John E. Coyle was in big type here this week, and his latest songs have been richly enjoyed; another prominent liner was Sam Elton, who proved as funny as ever; Barney Armstrong had a gratifying reception; some remarkable legerdemain was gone through by the particularly able Satsuma; Ernest Montefiore and company pleased with the dramatic and musical sketch, The Little Colonel; Cullen and Carthy, along with the amusing little Cluley, did work which created shouts of laughter; as acrobats and equilibrists the Mayos gave every satisfaction; the Three Sydney Girls pleased with their singing and dancing; and Mlle. Edwin, contortionist, also appeared.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole. —Divorced, from the pen of R. P. Rutter, has been played by the stock dramatic company this week, the principal characters being undertaken by Messrs. Sydney Grant (Sir Edwin Kelmar), Cecil Ravenswood (James Rookley), Harry Tresham (Leonard Minton), E. D. Allen (Colbrook Chugley), Robb Wilton (Digby Chicken), R. Seath Innnes (James), Miss Lilian Radbourne (May Minton), Miss Florence Palmer (Violet), and Miss Nancy Mitchell (Polly Sparks). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed some capital pictures.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Miss Vesta Fay, male impersonator, has appeared here this week. The Bioscope continues to please audiences.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—An exceptionally pretty and interesting spectacle, entitled Jack, the Giant-killer, presented by George Auger, the giant actor, and his liliputians, occupied the top of the bill here this week. The audience greatly enjoyed the remarkable contrast between Mr. Auger and his assistants. The ever-welcome Winifred Hare was given a most cordial reception for her latest successes, which comprised "It's better than being a Carnegie"; Nellie Wallace, another favourite, earned loud applause; Harry Weldon, the swell entertainer, proved an excellent turn; Stelling and Revell were a funny pair of comedians; a clever singing and dancing act came from Cline and Clark; the wonderful equilibristic efforts of Kioto evoked loud applause; and also in the list were the Sisters St. Julian, duettists and dancers; Charles Stevens, character vocalist; and La Belle Nello, contortionist.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Heading the bill here this week were the Musical Twelve, under the direction of Edward Hesseltine, whose able musical mélange, The Bohemian Girl, was greatly enjoyed; Carr and Rose had a pleasing operetta, A Winning Double; Jenny Manningo presented a skilful juggling entertainment; Burke, Andrus, and Frisco amused very much with their absurdity, Trafalgar-square, London, 4 a.m.; the singing and dancing of Lily Palmer found general acceptance; a neat ventriloquial turn was provided by Alpho; F. A. Martell showed some wonderful skill in balancing himself on his fingers; and also in the list were George Don, comedian; Handel and Lee, smart musicians; Rose D'Aulby, vocalist; and Harry Morris, comedian.

ROSCOMMON.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Millmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. M. Crewdson.—The stock company here under the direction of Mr. Percy Boucher, has this week given A Child of Misfortune and the farce, Love in a Kitchen. On Friday evening a complimentary benefit was enjoyed by Mr. Crewdson, when the programme consisted of variety turns.

LLANDUDNO.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. A. P. Pugh.—For six nights this week Mr. Lionel Brough and Mr. Tom Craven's company is appearing in a triple bill, viz., The Lady in Red, The Yarn Spinner, and Milky White. The various parts of The Lady in Red were capably undertaken by Mr. Stephen Adeson (Mr. Johnson), Mr. Tom Craven (William), Miss Clara Milvain (Mrs. Johnson), and Miss Isabel Collier (Cora). The duologue The Yarn Spinner, in which Mr Lionel Brough and Miss Mary Brough appear, is received with roars of laughter. Milky White, in which Mr. Tom Craven undertakes the title-rôle, is excellent. Messrs. Adeson (Dick Duggs), Jackson Wilcox (Archibald Good), Miss Mary Brough and Miss Isabel Collier contribute greatly to the success.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Mr. Charles Harrington's company is here for six nights in Uncle Tom's Cabin. Mr. J. Carr makes a capital Uncle Tom; Mr. E. A. Massingham's Phineas Fletcher is good; Mr. Dudley Wynton as Mr. St. Clair is well placed; Miss May Turner as Mrs. St. Clair is effective; Aunt Ophelia commands attention in the person of Jenny Malcolm; and as Topsy Miss Annie Watson is all that can be desired. Walter Langford is clever on the banjo, and Rowe and Holden are excellent cake-walkers.

PIER HEAD PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—Mona Vivian (formerly Wee Mona) tops the bill here, and captivates all by her pleasing manner and clever dancing; Mr. Albert Chapman is a baritone above the average; Mr Clifford Grey is original as a raconteur; Mr. R. Sutcliffe contributes some good songs in an able manner, and Mr. Tom Stewart's impersonations are first-class. Miss Theresa Foote ably presides at the piano.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—This building is closed till July 27, when the first of the musical comedies will be presented —The Merry Widow.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—The British Biograph are presenting another delightful series of pictures, which are well received by large audiences nightly. The variety bill includes De Henau, who presents a wonderful turn with his toes, which embraces paintings in oils and the manipulation of sundry musical instruments; the Zedoras excel as Oriental gymnasts; Blanco and Emilie are a clever vaudeville couple; and Mlle. Aladina displays excellent training with a number of cockatoos.

MAIDENHEAD.—PAVILION PLEASURE GARDENS. —Proprietor, Mr. George Gude.—The Cadets are well patronised this week. Mr. Colin Gent is recalled for a fine rendering of "Mona"; Miss Twort makes a hit with "You'll be Daddy and I'll be you"; and Miss Delamere is pleasing in the song and dance, "The Booby Boo." Mr. Jack Anders takes well with "Have you got another girl at home like Mary?"; Leo. Fallowfield puts a lot of amusing business into his rendering of "Put me among the girls"; and Will Harris is laughable as conductor of a concerted piece on the lines of "Jimmy Law."

MAIDSTONE. — PALACE THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester. A successful engagement this week is Fred Karno's company in their popular sketches, Early Birds and Mumming Birds. The humour of the pieces appeals to crowded audiences, who thoroughly enjoy the pantomime work of the clever company. Alf. Chester is a popular comedian; Rita Bell, "the jolly little Dutch girl," soon dances herself into favour; Morrin and Cardiff, cross-talk patterers, and Jim E. James, instrumentalist, are popular; and other attractions are Vela, on the wire; The Cedrics, speciality comedy jugglers; and the Bioscope.

MANCHESTER. — METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Andrew.—Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company provide the attraction here this week in the shape of F. A. Scudamore's well-known drama, Is Life Worth Living? Mr. Douglas Vigors gives a manly representation of Lionel Roy, and is well matched by the charming Madge Roxton of Miss Lillian Earle; while Miss Jeannie Burgoyne acts finely as Isabel Corsby; Mr. Herbert Hollister makes an effective villain as Randolph Kerr; and Mr. Frank Denis distinguishes himself in the rôle of Ronald Roxton. The play is well staged, and is quite sensational in the second act.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The Six Brothers Luck, in Lift 'Em, Limited, provide a brisk and amusing top turn here this week, the next principal places of honour being filled by the famous Craggs in the smart comedy sketch, Billy, and the beautiful Mlle. De Dio in a series of magnificent picture dances. The Daunton-Shaw Troupe add a wonderful cycling act; Sanford and Lyons, cross-talkers and simultaneous dancers, are remarkably smart and amusing; and other clever and entertaining turns are provided by Hugh Barclay, baritone vocalist; Irene Rose, in a neat vocal incident; Fred Keeton, eccentric comedian; the Three Prestons, in the absurdity, The Liftman's Rise; and Vickey Delmar, acrobatic dancer and instrumentalist.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Happy Fanny Fields is the top star here this week, to the delight of good audiences, who accord the clever little lady a big reception; Miss Marquis introduces with success her stud of highly-trained cobs; the Kurios are seen to advantage in a vastly amusing act; Ray Maskell, comedienne, sings nicely and dances in fine style; Sydney Lee manipulates cards in surprising fashion, his act of "deceiving" being extremely neat and well received; Frank Seeley, a comedian of the eccentric order, takes well; Charles Fisher's Comedy Opera Company are capital in The Music Master and excerpts from Faust; and the Vasilesque Troupe of gymnasts on the triple bars are something out of the ordinary. Two vocal items by the choir, and A Bird of Freedom—an excellent film—on the Bioscope, complete.

KING'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company are the attraction here this week in that sensational melodrama, A Sister's Sin, adapted to suit two performances nightly. The company is a good one, and includes Miss Mabel Scudamore, Miss Edie Macklin, Mr. Hugh Carmichal, Mr. T. Arthur Ellis, Mr. Will Percy, Mr. Harry Lyndon, and the Misses Clara Santley, Patricia Conaughton, Mabel Ray, and Violet Bales.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr Walter de Frece; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Leighton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Harry Gratton, assisted by Tom Taylor and William Benson, is here this week in his domestic incident entitled Man, the Brute, a highly funny sketch, which is well acted and creates roars of laughter. Christmas Eve, a midnight episode, is a neat little sketch, well played by Irve Hayman and Little Marie Montague; the Lyons Trio are very clever and amusing in a capital pantomimical and dancing act; Minnie Mace dances exceedingly well; Violet Stockelle is a pleasing vocalist and dancer; Larry Lewis, comedian, takes well; and on the occasion of our visit Martin Conway, a popular eccentric comedian, and the Wastana Trio of lady jugglers (acting as deputies for Charles Austin, comedian, and Joe Nightingale and Arthur Stigant) contributed excellent items. Pictures, good as usual, complete.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—The programme here this week is one of all-round excellence. Millie Legarde, the well-known comedy artist, meets with a fine reception, especially for her song, "Maimie, I'm a-waiting with the motor"; Luna Love, a charming comedienne, also is highly successful, her singing and dancing being very taking. A Cosy Couple, a clever duologue adapted from a story by Sir A. Conan Doyle, is very well presented by two unnamed artists, and is greatly enjoyed; Margaret Radcliffe, vocalist, sings nicely; Rose and Wold, as the Sentry and the Maid, are exceedingly clever in their wire act; Rich and Radford have smart patter, and are good dancers; Fred Cadwall and Daisy Verne are capital in a comedy scena, introducing a smart dance; and excellent dancing is also done by the Sisters Clarette and Queenie West, comedienne. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope pictures are excellent, especially A Trip through Savoy.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A delightful scena is presented here this week by Messrs. Dottridge and Instone's company, entitled Rosie's Birthday Party, the singing and dancing being done in admirable style; Victor and Louis, comedians and vocalists, make a decided hit as The Golfer and the Caddie; the Olympians demonstrate the art of ju-jitsu self-defence; and the Ramsey Trio, knockabout comedians, are responsible for much laughter; Nat Gould, character comedian, and Bert Danson, comedian, are both capital; and good turns are also those of Daleno and Stream, patter comedians, and Slavo, comedy juggler. Bioscope pictures complete.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—Dolly Elsworthy and company top the bill here this week in The Orange Girl, and are warmly applauded; Fanny Wentworth, the well-known Society entertainer, is excellent in her sketches at the piano; Beattie and Babs, those exceptionally clever juvenile entertainers, are charming in their pretty song and dance scena, A Pavement Rehearsal; and Curwen and Belle are smart burlesque artists. Other enjoyable turns are offered by Spangles and Sawdust, in comedy stage aerial act; Leo D'Alvar, in novel gymnastic act; Will Hebden, comedian; and Maddison Brothers, comedians and burlesque boxers.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Assistant-Manager, Mr. George Phillips.—An excellent programme is offered here this week by Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's entertainers, including the following popular artists:—Marriott Edgar, comedian; Marjory Moore, comedienne; Emilie Tait, soprano; Fred Field, humorist; Frank Gordon, light comedian; and Bernard Knox, at the piano.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Hardy.—Mr. Julian Graham's company has been appearing with Juno, the Living Statue. Mr. Arthur Lenville has been amusing as Timothy Twinkle; Mr. Fred Carrington has played with success as Samuel Strong; and Mr. Richd. Teasdale has made the most of the part of Detective Murphy. Miss Kate Graham Beck has played Juno effectively.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Jack's the Lad, the musical extravaganza, by the Jake Friedman company, heads the bill this week, and is briskly played by Mr. Fred Lester (as Jack), Mr. John Sargent (Capt. Salt), Mr. Ted Black (the Sheriff), Mr. Frank Hawthorne (Jack's mother), Mr. V. Coleman (the Bailiff), and Miss Rosali Jacobi (Mirabella, the belle of the village). The other turns include Rosie Bartlett, comedienne; Vincent, acrobatic table expert and tumbler; Gladys Mavius, Canadian coon; Jack Rae, comedy gymnast; Billy Williams, comedian; and the usual series of Bioscope pictures.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, H. W. Player.—A Woman Worth Winning is played here by Mr. Percy Norman's company. Mr. Gilbert Standing presents a capital impersonation of Amos Pauloff; Mr A. B. Mackay is an excellent General Borinski; Mr. Carthage Coldcleugh gives an able impersonation of Ivan Burdoff; Mr. George Edwin Cleve makes the most of Fergus Lovinsky; an admirable study of Roma Pauloff is presented by Miss Chrissie Dunbar; Miss Trixie Leighton merits praise as Lola; and Katerina Kloss is well represented by Miss Ida Mackay.

MEXBOROUGH.—NEW PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—A fine series of pictures is being shown here this week. A beautifully-coloured film is entitled Modern Sculptors. Other pictures include: Tragedy of Mont Blanc, Loved too Late, Treasure Cave, Pierrot and the Devil, &c.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—The Idler is being presented by Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft's company. Mr. Phillip Cuningham has had many successes in Middlesbrough, but he has never been seen to better advantage than in his impersonation of Mark Cross; Mr. Stephen T. Ewart gives a remarkably fine interpretation of the rôle of Sir John Harding; and as his wife Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft shows herself to be an artist of exceptional ability; Mr. William Attfield is good as Simon Strong; and for the part of Mrs. Cross a clever representative is found in Miss Elspeth Dudgeon. Miss Zoe Davis gives a charming impersonation as Kate Merryweather; and Miss Rida Treiselle is good as Mrs. Glyn-Stanmore. Mr. Richard Dalton as the General and Mr. Haldane Dalton as Bennett also do full justice to their respective parts. Captain Swift has been also produced during the week.

OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Edward Jowsey; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—The Dandy Doctor is being played here this week by Mr. Edward Marriss's company. Mr. Charles A. Stephenson plays with amusing briskness the American millionaire, and he meets with general favour; a good deal of the success of the piece is due to the rare low comedy of Miss Florence Smithers; as Jane, the general servant, she had only to appear with the inevitable smudge upon her face, and the house was convulsed. Miss Smithers has varied opportunities in the piece, and whether as the slavey, or as the mistress, whom she is called upon to personate, she is always most amusing. The choleric old Colonel is well taken by Mr. Herbert Pearce; Mr. E. H. Bertram as the smart young doctor and lover is very successful; while Mr. Leslie Martin as the locum tenens is very amusing. The Colonel's Daughter is taken by Miss Mollie Wynne, who admirably fulfils all the requirements of the young lady in musical comedy. The rest of the company, not forgetting the Empire Girls, the Dutch Girls, and the chorus and troupe of dancers, fully keep up the standard of excellence. The scenery and costumes are exceedingly pretty.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—The renowned Boissets create roars of laughter in their sketch, entitled The Dock Strike, here this week; while Malcolm Scott scores a great success with his patter; the banjo efforts of Emil and Ediss are much appreciated; and Hughes and Elliott give a delightful singing and dancing turn; Edith Cummins possesses a fine voice; and other items are given by Nellie Atherton and company, Marguerite Ismay and Coons, and Marie Longden.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—Mackinnon's Scottish Meisters, a comedy quartette, deservedly occupy the star position here this week; and Ingram and Irving present an amusing farce. Some good singing is provided by Adah Dyson and Reginald Payne, Joe Humphreys, and Ada Fawn; and other entertaining numbers are given by the Three Panamas, acrobats, and Will Freedo, comedian.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. C. M. Julian.—Mr. Sydney Spenser's company has been enjoying a good week's business here, with My Sweetheart and A Wonderful Woman. The cast is an excellent one, and Mr. Ed. Rawlinson scores a genuine success as Tony; whilst Miss Lizzie Hall makes a dainty Tina; Mr. Spenser makes the most of Joe Shotwell, Mr. Wilton Hardinge is good as Harcourt, and Miss Gipsey Alexander plays Farmer Hatzell's wife to the life. Other parts are well filled, and in the second-named piece Mr. Spenser himself is excellent as the Marquis de Frontignac.

WINTER GARDENS.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—The bill is topped here by Gustave Fasola, in his clever illusions, and he has proved very popular; Marin Zona has a good juggling and equilibristic act, in which there is new and novel business; Sandy and Carl amuse with neat patter and eccentric dance; Ugo Nap proves himself a most versatile entertainer; Stidder and Dunbar have a most amusing musical act, in which there is also some excellent 'cello playing by the gentleman. Bennett and Martell, Harry Briggs, and Jack Hayten are also in the bill.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—The well-known drama Her One Great Sin is the attraction here this week, and is proving very popular. Mr. Frank Lennard gives a powerful performance in the leading rôle, whilst as the erring wife Miss Lydia Donovan is convincing. Other leading rôles are ably played by Mr. C. Q. Tulford and Mr. A. G. Raymond.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—Mr. Jas. Hare's company in the romantic Servian drama A Destroyer of Men proves good entertainment here this week. The chief part, Count Starevitch, is powerfully interpreted by Mr. F. Harker, whilst Mr. L. Clarke as his son plays the rôle very creditably. Valuable assistance is also given by Miss Irene Clifford.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells.—The programme here this week is of the highest order. George Gilbey at the top of the bill proves as popular as ever; Mr. Paul Barnes—of New York—who shares with George Gilbey the premier position on the programme, is a monologist with a taking style, and his patter (mostly Yankee) goes extremely well; in the sketch Adventures of a Happy Tramp Howard and Harris find ample opportunity to display their talents as clever knockabout artists; and Charles Frazer and company with a new comedy illusion, Jona, prove very interesting. The Herald Comedy Four are vocalists of special note; Peter Bermingham, a Scotch comedian, dispenses any amount of good fun; and Cissie Curlette, a dainty comedienne, finds much favour. Other talented artists appearing are the Northern Troupe, Bi-Bo-Bi, and Billy McClain and company. The Bioscope completes.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—Frank and Jen Latona head an exceptionlly strong bill here this week, and once again their songs, music, and drollery prove popular. Marcel and Boris provide some wonderfully clever handbalancing; the Westwoods introduce trick cycling of unusual merit; Geoffreys and Benson, comedy duologue artists, prove vastly amusing; and a novel dancing turn by the Berthos goes well. Other artists contributing meritorious turns are Dorothy Gould, Stacey and Williams, J. W. Gallagher, and Harry Friskey.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The bill here this week is headed by Messrs. Macdonald and Huntington, American eccentric comedians, who have been warmly greeted. Lieutenant Chard and his dogs have also been received with much favour, and Miss Alice Maye, soprano, renders her songs in capital style. Kendricke and Laura, versatile artists, meet with hearty applause; Miss Olive Sara, speciality artist, has made a hit; Mr. James Mack, comedian, sings funny songs; and the Mouldoscope is as much enjoyed as ever.

Voice and Throat.

Mr. SIMS REEVES, the World-Famed Tenor, writing on "The Art of Singing," said:—"Condy's Fluid clears the Throat and braces up the uvula, which in some singers interrupts the pure emission of the Voice."

Used as a gargle 8 drops of Condy's Fluid in a tumbler of water instantly clear the Throat and Strengthen the Voice. Condy's Fluid is guaranteed to contain NO Permanganate of Potash, which is poisonous. Insist on having "Condy's Fluid."

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Berzac's juggling sea-lions and seals are meeting with much appreciation; W. H. Harries, Alan Borthwick, and Co., in a farce called Half a Dollar, are immensely amusing; Godfrey James, the "singing collier," has an excellent voice; Hyde and Cody Trio are clever acrobats; Poppy Lytton and Jack Bland, in a sketch, A Lesson in Love, are appreciated; Stevens and Rennior, comedians and dancers; the Sisters Terry, duettists and dancers; and Ivy Aberdare, comedienne and sand dancer, with the Hippo. Bioscope, complete the programme.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—A splendid reception is given R. A. Roberts, who is appearing this week in two sketches, Dick Turpin and Ringing the Changes; Griffiths Bros. afford huge delight by their never-ceasing comicalities; Ella Shields makes herself a general favourite in the songs, "Walking round the world," and "Do you want any coal"; another interesting turn is provided at the piano by Rosa Loader. Hearty congratulations are showered on La Belle Titcomb for the marvellous management of her trained horse; and Harry Drew draws applause for his rendering of bass songs. A clever musical sketch, The Itinerant, is presented by the Norman and Leonard Trio; and Walter Wade is rewarded for a humorous monologue. Dancing by the Three Cape Girls, also Wania, in a Russian dance, earn merited applause; and the Bioscope supplies some admirable films.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Stanley Carlton and company are here in A Secret Wedding. Mr. Stanley Carlton gives a manly impersonation of Edgar Hartington and his vindictive cousin, Herbert, is ably played by Mr. Marshall Meade. Miss Ruby Maude as Grace Edmondson acts in a clever manner, and is well received; Miss Maggie English as Jack, a waif, gives a faithful representation of the character; and Miss Ruby Hamilton Belasco makes an excellent Elise Marchand; Miss Ethel Lawson is good as the Avenging Angel; Miss Emily Lewis as Polly does excellent work and ably assists Mr. Seymour Perry as the poetic Billy Barton; Mr. Edgar Garth and Mr. Fred Conway as the twin brothers, Jim and Ted Ward, are capital; and Mr. Charles Cameron is good as Ben Drummond. A Marriage of Vengeance will be staged during the latter part of the week.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—A Mother's Love is being presented by Mr. Fred L. Connynghame's company. Miss Rosa Mervyn appears as Winnie Wingate, and she quickly gains the approval of the audience; Miss Mabel Durham is a capable Ellaine Mervin; and Miss Gladys Lloyd is excellent as Marjorie; whilst Miss Dorothy Monkhouse is a capable Mary Stewart; Mr. Arthur Mervyn is a manly hero as Paul Wingate; Mr. Robert Gilbert as the villainous Geoffrey Mannering is very smart; Matt Ruddock keeps the house roaring with laughter, the part fitting Mr. Connynghame like a glove; Mr. S. Clifton as Rolf Mervin is very good; and Mr. Tom Taylor makes a capital Joe Jackson. A comedy sketch, Balmy, precedes the drama, and the various characters are capably played by Messrs. Connynghame, Mervyn, Taylor, and Gilbert.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kilrow.—Mr. Hymack is the star here, and his act is clever and mystifying; the Clement Trio, in a comedy trapeze act, are very popular; Charles Norton in his mimetic monologue was well received; the Society Quartette sing and dance in a capital manner; Leo King, vocalist, sings his songs well; and Winifred Ward is an excellent male impersonator; Miss Ida Kessanly's Royal Fox Terriers are pleasing in their clever tricks; Roland Carr, comedian and dancer, does well; and a laughable picture on the Dottoscope concludes.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Frank Stuart's company is this week giving an admirable presentment of The Curate and The Ticket-of-Leave Man. In The Curate the title-rôle (Rev. John Audley) is convincingly and most realistically portrayed by Mr. P. C. Wentworth; while Mr. A. W. Thompson ably sustains Gilbert Westwood; and Mr. Chas. Ninian does well as Gregory Verner. Mr. Frank Stuart impersonates the robust Sergeant Snipe excellently; and Mr. John Hitchings is very amusing as Simon Peter Muggs. Miss Mona Hall achieves distinction, and sings admirably as Dick, the Trumpeter; Miss Belle Russell is good as Mrs. Muggs; and Miss Theodore Henries shows dramatic skill as Katinka Vodski. Miss Winifred Stuart contributes a very graceful, feeling, and charming performance as May Verner.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—A capital programme is provided here this week, at the top of it being the name of Morris Cronin, the wonderful juggler, assisted by his equally clever troupe; one of the cleverest and most remarkable entertainments ever seen at this house is contributed by Wylie's dogs; the Two Mohamed Labas are accomplished Arab jugglers and tumblers, and have a splendid reception; the comedy episode, My Lady Betty, provides much amusement, being capitally sustained by Miss Nellie Stevens and Messrs. Frank Elliston and P. G. Twyman; R. A. Speedwell is entertaining in his lightning sketches of famous statesmen and others; Lina Leslie, comedienne, gives a pleasing turn; Dave Summerhill, Scotch comedian, is successful in his songs; Charles McLaren, a youthful vocalist, is highly appreciated; and the Hippodrome Bioscope continues to interest and entertain.

PENTRE.—TIVOLI PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—The Szarvasi Ferencz Family are a clever troupe of Hungarian singers, dancers, and acrobats; Henry and Tyler, comedy cyclists, are skilful and clever; Jimmy Shields, one-legged comedian dancer, is excellent; Frank Boyce, character comedian, in up-to-date songs, is a decided success; Leo, ventriloquist, deserves warm praise; Perette and Mona, in their quick-change musical act, Teasing the General, are exceedingly good; Scotch humour and comedy are introduced by Jessie Star; the Tiviliscope in a series of up-to-date films concludes a smart bill.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Edmund Tearle's stock company is this week appearing in East Lynne. Mr. Tearle personally undertakes the rôle of Lord Mountsevern, his deep and sonorous voice being particularly well suited to the part; Miss Kate Clinton created an impression with her impersonation of Lady Isabel, and Miss Wanda Beresford fulfilled high expectations as Barbara; Mr. Fawcett Lomax is at home as Justice Hare; and Mr. Stuart Black forcibly brings out the creditable features of Carlyle; Mr. J. Cooke Hinton makes an excellent villain; and Miss Ethel Storey, as Cornelia, shows herself to be an actress of ability.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Miss Marie Lloyd is here for the week. She has lost none of her old vivacity, her latest "Directoire" song catching on immensely; Tom Hughes is a delightfully unconventional comedian, and has a splendid repertoire of down-to-date witticisms and gags; Burns and Danvers have a fascinating burlesque operetta, of which the outstanding feature is the lady's excellent soprano voice; and Trick and Trixie score in a turn of a similar nature; Kreamer and Braun have a distinctly novel attraction, consisting of mechanical contrivances by which horses and cyclists can be matched against each other; one of the Macs works hard as a knockabout comedian; and Alice Blandford, a New Zealand vocalist, created a good initial impression.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Heading the bill are the Lizette Troupe of lady acrobats; they are prettily costumed, and their daring and clever feats win much admiration. Patty Yole makes a commendable success by virtue of a pleasant voice and graceful dancing; Sam Ropely as a comedian, causes much laughter; the Yorkshire Mill Lasses (Mona and Gladys Wells) discourse harmony of a high order, and are warmly applauded; Edwards and Dacre, in a duologue, What a Life, are comical; the Izons (Arthur and Ada) do some clever dancing, and their patter and songs add to the general entertainment; Harry Keeble's ventriloquial turn is much appreciated; Molly O'Guarde, with good songs, is successful; while Mr. Arthur Alexander and Co., in a dramatic episode, For the Honour of the Family, give a performance of considerable merit. Animated pictures are also shown by the Alexandra Bioscope. The orchestra, under Mr. A. Richardson, is exceptionally good.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—The attraction this week is the company of Messrs. Sutton and Raynor, in a répertoire of powerful plays. On Monday and Tuesday Camille was given; on Wednesday and Thursday, Moths, and on Friday Harvest. Gaston de Rieux, in the first-named production, was powerfully portrayed by Mr. Raynor; the Comte de Varille was ably characterised by Mr. Cecil Wynne; Armand Duval was successfully presented by Mr. Conrad Heywood; Georges Duval was ably played by Mr. Milton C. Curtis; Jean was cleverly delineated by Mr. Chas. R. Bickell; and Messrs. Reginald Winter and Thomas Crossley left nothing to be desired as the Comte de Geary and the Comte de Noir respectively; and most praiseworthy acting was contributed by Miss Henrietta Schrier, Miss Dorothy West-Symes, Miss Lisa Coleman, and Miss Nellie Statham.

PORTH.—THE PALACE.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Topping the bill here we have Ross and Lewis, comedy artists, in their humorous dancing idiosyncrasy. The Boston Twins, burlesque boxers, are a capital pair; Miss Henriquette Maude, the London Daily Mirror's New Zealand girl, presents her unique act in picture and story of her daring experiences round the world, and is accorded a warm reception. She scores well as an elocutionist. Jack North extracts much merriment as the peculiar comedian; Little Pam, the American boy comedian, singer and dancer, is a great success, and is accorded a warm reception; Bros. St. Clair, comedy knockabout cyclists, are exceedingly clever; Edie Gray and Coons are thoroughly appreciated; Tate and Tate meet with approval; and Mueller and Coyne are also worthy of mention. The Palascope delights everyone.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Charley's Aunt is being presented here this week, by Mr. Brandon Thomas and his company. Owing to sudden indisposition Mr. Thomas has not played, and Mr. McCausland Stewart has acted most ably, in his place, the part of Sir Francis Chesney. Mr. G. A. Seager caused plenty of hearty laughter by his personation of Lord Fancourt Babberley, his acting in the name-part being all that could be wished; Stephen Spettigue was admirably presented by Mr. Roy Byford; Mr. Hastings Lynn was a successful Jack Chesney; Charley Wykeham was capitally taken by Mr. Basil Lynton; and Brasset found an able representative in Mr. Sydney Compton; Miss Vere Gerald played with distinction the rôle of Donna Lucia; Kitty Verdun was charmingly portrayed by Miss Olivia Glynn; Miss Grace Russell made an agreeable Amy Spettigue; and Miss Evelyn Grey made a winsome Ela Delahay. The comedy is preceded by the one-act play, The Lancashire Sailor.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—The musical comedy drama, One Woman's Wickedness is staged here for the week by Mr. Chas. H. Phelps and his good all-round company. Mr. Phelps taking the rôle of the hero, Phillip Beaufort, with most commendable energy and ability; Mr. Ernest Vaughan as Jem Craggs makes the very best use of his opportunities; Mr. Clifford Spencer is also very good as Lord Algernon Fitznoodle. Messrs. Montague Corri (Limpi Larry), Frank Hertie (Paul Rogue), Frank Rogers (Sam), all do capable work in their respective parts; Miss Millie Domis acts cleverly as Jennie Jiggles; Miss Marie Pemberton did well as Marrienne Beaufort; Miss Madge Douglas as the heroine, Lillian Craggs, was responsible for some excellent acting; and Miss Irene Carrington gave a well sustained impersonation of Janet Raymond, the woman giving the name to the play.

KING'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Bertram.—Messrs. Edward L. Garside and J. Forbes Knowles' able company are here with a dual bill for the week. On Monday evening, The London Fireman was played, Mr. Frank E. Petley acting powerfully and incisively as Colonel Fleming and Hal Curtis, the London fireman. Mr. Edwin J. Collins as the smooth-tongued villain, Viscount Fleming, displayed very marked ability; Mr. William Burgess plays effectively as Henry Curtis; Mr. John W. Ryder is excellent as Abel Fortnum. The lighter side is well looked after by Mr. George E. Scully as Nixey Stinger and Miss Olive Lloyd as Polly Bramble. Miss Gertrude Price makes a capable Grace Curtis; Miss Nellie Weddington, as the Countess Fleming, acquits herself admirably; and Miss Helena Walbran, as the much persecuted heroine, Ida Curtis, plays the part with conspicuous success. The powerful drama, Saved from the Sea, is to be given on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The chief attraction here this week is the animal act of the well trained and docile troupe of ponies, bears, dogs, and baboons, presented by Carl and Mary Ohm, which gave unbounded satisfaction; Vere and Royal, a pair of comedy artists, show vocal ability, and please well; the Comedy Girls, Sisters Pine, in golf scena, are brisk and most amusing; as very capable vocalists and instrumentalists, the Four Watsons were highly appreciated; the Leonards, in a smart and diverting comedy act, well deserved the applause they received; E. J. Sheldon shone in song and dance; Farley, Rennie, and Farley, in excellent fooling sketch, Fun at a Railway Station, scored; J. W. Winton gave a very clever ventriloquial entertainment with the aid of McGinty and others, and had a most gratifying reception; Happy Tom Parker, star comedian, caused great hilarity by his droll singing and dancing; Payne's Bio., with up-to-date pictures, concludes.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Topping the bill for the week here, Garland, Douglas, and company, in original musical mélange, entitled, Pull-Man Porters, give an extremely satisfying turn; Haig and Novel, comedy artists and tumblers, were well received; Sisters Herbert, a pair of juvenile duettists and dancers, were heartily encored for some capable work. The item submitted by Mr. Will Van Allen, tramp musician and raconteur, was enthusiastically greeted, and was recalled for his very clever musical efforts; Miss Flo. Cecil, a bright and piquant comedienne and dancer, was much liked; Bros. Bright, gymnasts du salon, did some exceedingly smart hand-balancing; Mr. Edward Crosland's Melody Makers, in their phantom scena, The Burglar's Dream, were meritorious, and gained two curtains; Burns and Bentley, comedians and dancers, work hard, and please. Hippo. pictures of an agreeable character, and the very sagacious performance of Lockhart's Elephants, introduced by Captain Taylor, fill the programme.

PRESTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. Fred C. Summerfield and company, in Geoffrey Langdon's Wife, are here this week. As Felix Beverley, a consummate scoundrel, Mr. F. C. Somerfield holds his audience from rise to fall of the curtain, and portrays a by no means easy character in a masterly manner; as Mary Geoffrey Miss Cecilia Dare wins the sympathy of the audience by her finished and earnest rendition of the part; Mr. Ed. E. Louis is a manly and convincing Jack Stirling; and Mr. Wilson Summers scores as Geoffrey Langdon; Mr. Marcus Grey is decidedly good as Colonel Miles; Mr. Percy Brown and Mr. Percy Dawsone as Thomas and Charles are responsible for the light comedy, and they thoroughly succeed in keeping the house in good humour, and they are ably supported by Miss Katie Lever, who as Sweet Nancy is most piquante and refreshing. Miss Cissie Bellamy fulfils the part of the adventuress, Mrs. Sands, in a most finished and realistic manner; Mr. Ivan Mavis as Arthur Bellairs imbues the character with the requisite vapidity; and Mr. Harland Brookes and Mr. John Turnbull both prove themselves capable as Detective Blake and Inspector Froest respectively.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—John C. Brandon and company top the bill, in a melodramatic sketch, entitled The Girl and the Tough. The characters are well sustained by Messrs. J. C. Brandon, Leslie Tylor, and Miss Rose Dane. The story is decidedly original. Adkin gives a ventriloquial turn; Ted Waite, eccentric comedian, receives a rousing reception; Wallace Whitney, character comedian, brings down the house with his song and patter, "Tubby, the footballer," and scores with his local allusions; the Sicilians give some finished trios, and are accomplished performers on the mandoline and guitar; Dunningarto, the sleight-of-hand king, succeeds in mystifying his audience, and gives a very clever exhibition of card palming; Beattie Foster, comedienne, contributed a couple of songs, and was much applauded; Nelson's Newsboys are a quintette who present some capital songs and clever dances. The Elixir of Life on the Bioscope concludes.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—Good houses have been secured at the Royal Victoria Theatre by Mr. George Warters's company, in The Gay Deceivers. It is an extremely lively piece, and the music is very bright. Mr. Mark Lester's Joseph is the hit of the production, but all the artists are capable comedians. Special reference should be made to the work of Miss Dorothy Chard, Miss Ciceley Stucky (Winnie), Miss Kate Chard (Mrs. Dewar), Messrs. Guy Williams, G. Delaforce, and F. Stanmore. Miss Pauline Prim, danseuse and sifflleuse, makes a popular appearance; and the other members of the company are excellent, the Directoire Girls contributing much to the smartness of the production.

ROYAL PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Melvin.—At the above theatre, on the first three nights of the past week, Mr. Gilbert Payne's company appeared in the musical farcical comedy, The Honeymoon. The play concerns mainly the adventures of a young man who, having married against the wishes of his rich uncle, endeavours to pass his wife off as a widow who keeps house for him. The impossible situations which arise can be well imagined. The piece provides a great deal of amusement, and gives Mr. Gilbert Payne the opportunity to be simply immense in the part of Nathaniel Noodle, who is on his honeymoon. The part of Jack Armstrong, the nephew, is well played by Mr. Leslie Erle; Mr. Chris Anslie does capitally as Colonel Vandyke Brown, the peppery old uncle; and Mr. Fred Fulton gives a laughable impression of a "Johnny" from town, Archie Mashington. Miss Celestine Brandon, who fills the rôle of Madge Armstrong, the alleged widow and housekeeper, appears to considerable advantage; and Miss Myra Douglas (Stella Le Brunn) and Miss Rosie Kearns (Emeretta Noodle) add considerably to the attractiveness of the piece. There are some very clever speciality dances by the Four Godfrey Girls. The scenery and general mounting is excel'ent, and, altogether, The Honeymoon is a nice, bright show.

MARINA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. F. C. Dew and L. Valeriani; General-Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—The Marina Theatre has been well patronised during the past week, and the standard of the pictures is maintained. There is again a capital selection of films, and the electric manipulation is a manifest improvement on the old system. The management is introducing a sacred entertainment next Sunday evening.

READING.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—Herbert E. Terry's company are appearing in His Brother's Keeper, which is extremely well rendered. The farce Three in a Pickle, by Freda Sharlotte's company, creates great amusement; the Tiger Lily, a coloured lady, gives a good exhibition of acrobatic dancing; Texas Hattie, another coloured performer, supplies a clever tight-rope display; the Primrose Four, a quartette of Welsh vocalists, sing very harmoniously; Norah Noble is a pleasing comedienne; the Sisters Hall, vocalists and dancers, are well received; Lieut. Albini, illusionist does some clever tricks; and the entertainment concludes with some good Bioscope pictures.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Animated pictures by the Empire Bioscope continue a source of great attraction here. The Pretty Flower Girl, The Mountaineer's Son, The Irascible Father, and Over the Sticks proved most interesting and enjoyable. Variety turns are submitted by the Eldons, musical comedy duettists; Mabel Robarts, in illustrated songs; and Beatrice Hill, operatic and ballad vocalist.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—La Milo creates an undoubted sensation, and her artistic posing is received with rapturous and well-deserved applause. Cruickshank's pictorial films are responsible for the reproduction of special items from La Milo's répertoire; Mark Henton is an excellent humorist; Miss Clara Pledger is heard to great advantage; the Forsyths score heavily in a speciality act, The Tramp in the Nursery; Pallister's American Bioscope gives a splendid selection of living pictures. A touching episode, The Galley Slave, is included in the programme. Mr. Howell Webb gives a powerful portrayal of Henri Peton, and Mr. Charles Bennett is a smart Sergeant Debroche; Miss Magdalen Moore is pleasing as Mme. Ducharme, and Miss Pauline Desborough scores as Margot; Miss Mabel Rose is pretty as Jeanne. Messrs. Lambert and Hands submit a refined vocal scena, and Les Currys are responsible for a very clever musical act.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant.—During the first half of the week Mr. Will Dennis's company created an excellent impression in the well-known piece, Little Lord Fauntleroy. Miss Gertrude Netterville as Mrs. Errol and Mr. Francis Roberts as the Earl of Dorincourt both acted with exceptional ability, and they were well supported by Miss Marian Fawcett as Minna, Miss Beryl Grayham as Mary, and Messrs. George Roberts and William Lockhart.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Julian Malvern's company is presenting this week the powerful play I Defy the World, full of sensational incidents. Mr. Lewis Gilbert capably sustains the part of Leon Darville; the villain, Count de Beaulieu, was well portrayed by Mr. O. Douglas; Miss Gladys Harting-Walton is a charming Pauline Delaporte; Miss Mary Ainslie makes an excellent Blanche Darville; Fanchette is well played by Miss Florrie Green; Mr. Charles M. Julian is very comical as Samuel Wozzle; and the comedy business is also well sustained by Mr. Newton Pearce as Najack, Mr. Dalton J. Bosher as Bochon, and Miss M. Lillian as Marie Wozzle.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Cissie Lawson (Mrs. John Lawson) drew a large audience on Monday evening, when she appeared as Fay Faber in The Devil's Sunday, a clever sketch of the smart set; Otto and Olga gave a good comedy and musical act; the Three Sisters Thurban, vocalists and instrumentalists; Jessie Jukes, comedienne and dancer; George Benson, boy mimic; Oakes Trio of vocalists, dancers, and comedians; Ivy Gallard, comedienne and dancer; E. W. Selman, character comedian; and Graham and Baron, patter comedians and expert dancers, also gave smart turns.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Ye Dame Rowland Hill, comedian, keeps the house in roars; a pretty aerial gymnastic performance is given by Ariel and Astarte. Other excellent turns are given, including Arthur Harris, actor-vocalist; Musical Morellis, great comedy musical and vocal act; Fritz Kornau, whistler; Fremel and Fremel, patterers and eccentrics; Helm and Cozens, in The Doctor and the Patient; W. G. Wesley, character comedian; Three Cascaleas, smart acrobats; and Thierry and Liell (Georgette and Bernard), in an incident of the French Revolution.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Lester King.—The cinematograph pictures (shown twice nightly) are an excellent draw each performance. This week's pictures include Golden Tree Tournament, In a Submarine, Separation Wanted, Franco-British Exhibition, Father and Son, Monty Buys a Motor, Love or Victory, Witch's Kiss, and Lady Doctor's Husband. The audiences heartily join in the chorus with Mr. Lester King in "The Singer was Irish."

SEACOMBE.—IRVING THEATRE.—Lessees, The Excelsior Animated Picture Co.; Manager, Mr. George Barry.—The fine selection of films, which include the celebrated Romeo and Juliet series, continue to draw well here; Musical Zelda displays her versatility on a number of instruments; and Wal Owen, the silent comedian, causes much laughter by his queer antics.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. H. D. Lyle.—For this week Miss Grace Warner has been engaged in a répertoire of plays, including The Scarlet Clue, The Little Widow, and Lady Audley's Secret. On Monday the first-named was presented. Mr. George Gordon played the part of Michael Stanton with great success; Jack Esmond and Harry Esmond were ably impersonated by Mr. Terence O'Brien; Edward Croker found a good exponent in Mr. A. B. Lyons; Billy was cleverly drawn by Mr. W. Black; as Crazy Jim Mr. V. Garnet-Vayne gave satisfaction; Sir Desmond was well presented by Mr. J. Clarence; and Miss Grace Warner gave a finished portrayal of Sal Scarlet; Eisie Dane being charmingly interpreted by Miss Evie Conway.

SHEERNESS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Sheerness Hippodrome Co.—The Parisian beauty, La Freya, is original and clever; Sid Cotterell and company in The Substitute score a decided success; the Four Sisters Victoria are smart instrumentalists and dancers; O'Malley and Brown are successful in a comedy sketch; the Three Delaries present some good acrobatics; and Lottie Govell, comedienne and dancer, is appreciated. Amy Elcock is a dainty comedienne; and pictures by the Bioscope complete the entertainment.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Manager, Mr. F. R. Griffiths.—Chief amongst a particularly good show of pictures are A Briton's Promise, The Bargee's Daughter, March Winds, &c. Nat Lewis, character and actor vocalist, scores highly.

SHEFFIELD. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—The Old, Old Story is being presented by Miss B. Carlton's company. Miss Bonwin Carlton makes a vivacious soubrette; Miss Marie Dempcer secures warm sympathy as Nettie, and Miss Kitty Maynard makes a pretty and interesting Jessie Hazel; Mr. Edward Surrey grips the attention of the house as the detective Grimshaw; Mr. P. Watson's John Hazel is a convincing performance; the villainous James Marlow has a dramatic representative in Mr. Cowell Clarke; and good work is done by Mr. T. Squires, Mr. H. J. Butler, Mr. T. Macdonald, and Miss Esther Lamont. The play is effectively staged, and its pathos and humour exactly hit the tastes of the Royal patrons.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—It's Never Too Late To Mend is being played here. Mr. Hugh Montgomery succeeds John Wainwright in the part of Tom Robinson, and he gives an admirable reading of the reformed thief; Mr. Cecil Melton is good as the honest, single-hearted Fielding; Miss Gertrude Entwistle is a graceful Susan Merton; Mr. T. G. Warry repeats his amusing impersonation of Jacky; and other well-played characters are Mr. Charles F. Johnson's Rev. Francis Eden, Mr. Harry Cave's Crawley, Mr. Edwin Davies' Levi, Mr. Leonard Marshall's William Fielding, Mr. W. R. Wilson's Captain Hawes, Mr. W. R. Weldon's Mr. Merton, Mr. C. E. Linney's Mr. Meadows, Mr. H. Lawson's Boy, Miss M. Ashton's Mary Lee, and Miss Millie Wilton's Joseph.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The bill is headed by that charming and refined character vocalist Miss Lil Hawthorne, whose delightful songs were cheered to the echo on Monday by a crowded audience. Mr. Tom Woottwell is another local favourite appearing with success; Mr. Jack Pleasants caused much hilarity; Roma and Romani submitted a pleasing musical entertainment; and the screaming comic ballet The Houseboat, smartly rattled through by those expert comedians and pantomimists the famous Leopold Troupe, was provocative of loud laughter and hearty applause. Others engaged are Mr. Leo Stormont, the popular vocalist; Howard and Howard, in a very amusing act; Miss Irene Lee and her smart Candy Boys in an up-to-date interlude; Knowles and Barrett, duettists; and Miss Amy Marsden, a pleasing artist. Some new pictures were well received

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—The star turn here is Mr. Julian Rose, who on Monday was enthusiastically received in his laughable monologue "Levensky at the Wedding." Miss Mabel Le Blanche, a talented dramatic vocalist, was loudly applauded; a conjuring act on entirely original lines was done by M. Picitt and Mlle. Lizette in their sketch The Crazy Cook; Brull and Hemsley kept the house thoroughly amused in their clever musical and terpsichorean burletta Fun in a Music Shop; a well-mounted and novel version of Dick Whittington was introduced by the Cheers, in which several well-trained cats also assisted with characteristic feline grace; Mr. Bert Brantford sang a parody on the popular coon ditty; a smart ladder act was performed by the intrepid Silvas; and Mr. Jay Laurier won cordial applause; and the Four Geraldos did some expert club juggling feats. The Barrascope pictures, by Pathé Frères, were heartily cheered.

GRAND THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—Mersano, in the character of the gallant little Captain Kettle, is giving his unique mystery performance to good houses; and other diverting artists at the comfortable and well-managed downtown theatre are Stuart and Evans, a clever duo; Miss Cissy Esdaile; Learto, with his new and pleasing entertainment; Miss Flo Burnett, Mr. Dan Connor, Mr. Jones (with illustrated songs), and the pretty and talented Sisters Lavender. The new and artistic animated pictures are well received.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Lessees, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred W. Holmes.—The new arrivals on Monday were the well-known Testo Bros., Mr. Herbert Bates, and Miss Nellie Walton; A Trip to Morocco, The Cat Came Back, The Organ-Grinder's Daughter, and other pictures are deservedly applauded.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The musical comedy, entitled The New Girl, was on Monday, by a delightful and favourable presentation, accorded a magnificent reception, and Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne have capital assistance from a talented company. The play, which has only one interval, causes real good amusement, the humour is clean, catchy songs prove popular, and the dances are cleverly executed, while the choruses give every satisfaction, Mr. Julian Rutt ably directing the

A Remarkable Testimonial

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT

"Thirteen Years Ago."

The Proprietors of Player's Navy Cut recently received the following letter from John Fenn, Esq., Solicitor, 27, 28 and 29 Furnival St., London, E.C.

"Last evening I opened a 2oz. box of your Navy Cut purchased by me at Sandown, I.W., thirteen years ago which I had put by. Trying a pipe I found it excellent and in perfect flavour. I have another box (square pattern) fifteen years but not yet opened. I thought you would like to know this."

augmented orchestra. Mr. Arthur Poole is a strong exponent of Colonel Bullett, V.C., who maintains his reputation for both acting and singing with marked success; Miss Rosa Bennett in the name part early establishes herself a favourite by clever acting, singing, and dancing, and gets heartily received; Mr. Ralph Lynn makes a capital Bertie Holbrook, and who is even more successful in masquerading as a schoolmistress and with smart dances. Mr. Edgar McIntyre as Harry Harrow is decidedly good, and he also shares singing honours; Miss Beatrice Sutherland in the dual rôle of Little Flossie and Jane, a maid, is eminently suited, while her step-dancing with Mr. Kenneth Black, jun. (a comedian who pleases immensely), has many recalls, both artists being seen to great advantage in this respect. Miss Ivy Leighton as Cerise gives a good portrayal; and Miss Victoria Douglas makes a prominent schoolmistress in Martha Grim.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—Another excellent variety programme is submitted this week in the theatre, and for which Miss Beatrice Harold's Palace Troupe of Gipsy Girls have been retained, while their costume scenas are creditably portrayed; Griffin and Ardel give evident pleasure in their eccentric acrobatic feats; Mr. Ernest Bishop, with concertina, is well received; Miss Eva Rosslyn, burlesque actress, wins hearty applause; Miss Carmichael is popular with skipping-rope dances; and Mr. T. E. Cliffe pleases as a comedian. A good series of entirely new pictures on the Bioscope make a popular concluding item, and dancing follows immediately, during which another concert takes place in the café chantant, where the Palace Troupe again appear.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The Native Choir from Jamaica, who made such a favourable impression last year by their highly successful entertainments, are extended a cordial reception this week, while their programmes give intense delight to most appreciative audiences, who demand recalls of every item. The choir render most tastefully both action and humorous choruses, and some particularly evoke a lively interest. Mr. F. Weaver, who entertains with coon songs, is very popular for his smart dances; and Mr. Noel Sylvester, in humorous recitations well rendered, wins favour. Mr. Carlton Bryan, Mr. Gordon Shelton, Mr. Blake, Miss Blackburn, Miss MacDermot, and Miss Welsh all contribute songs with precision.

THE LEAS BANDSTAND.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—Daily performances are given by the Chierrots Concert Party, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Davies, who provide first-class programmes in admirable manner, and which are well supported. The Rouge-et-Noir Concert Party follow with excellent evening entertainments, and well maintain their reputation.

PIER HILL BANDSTAND.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—Large crowds flock here at each of the three daily performances, where the Pick-Me-Ups, under the direction of Mr. George Robins, are more entertaining than ever, and whose change of programme every few days meet with general approval.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company appear in The Shaughraun. Mr. Thorne as Conn throws plenty of life and merriment into the part, and receives good support from Miss Winifred Barton as Moya. Claire Ffolliot is sweetly depicted by Miss Maud Russel; Corry Kinchela is ably delineated by Mr. James Skea; Mr. Dunlop Stewart makes an impressive Father Dolaw; Robert Ffolliot and Captain Molineux are both well played by Mr. A. J. Haviland and Mr. P. Harper. The piece is well mounted, and the cast is an all-round good one.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—An enthusiastic reception was given to Hetty King, male impersonator; Smiler Lee appears in place of George Formby in a comedy turn; the Two Anartos are funny and clever musicians; some good numbers are introduced by the Lyric Mummers; J. A. Wilson and his dog Towser are favourably received; a novel musical act is contributed by the Barton and Franklin Trio; Cassie Walmer is good; and the Bioscope completes.

COSY CORNER, SEA FRONT.—Mr. Geo. Burton's comedians introduce a speciality of dainty concerted numbers. "Mandy," is an excellent item, in which the whole of the company show their terpsichorean abilities; Bert Albert, light comedian, displays ability in his song; "The Cameron Men," a solo by Miss Pattie Burton and chorus by the company, never fails to get an encore; humorous gags and lively choruses make the show go. Mr. John Skershaw entertains at the piano. Several new sketches have been put on, including A Race for a Hundred Pounds, Modern Matchmaking, and Sidelights in the Law Courts, all being very popular.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader.—Mr Augustine Knight's company in Mysteries of the Thames is performing this week. The character of Richard Brandon is played with power by Mr. Knight, and Miss Francis Waring takes the part of the unfortunate wife, Kate Brandon, in a most feeling manner; Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson plays the villain, Captain James Denbigh, very ably and with unction; and Mr. Tom J Taylor raises a laugh as Peter Waggles; Mr. Edward E. Swinton's Bill Bosco is a good study; Miss Nellie Jackson is to be congratulated upon a capital male impersonation in Berty Fitzgerald, and praise must also be given to little Doris Brereton as Doris; Miss Effie Bartlett invests the part of Flash Nell with realism.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—A programme full of variety is given this week, at the top of which is the McConnell Trio, whose sketch is full of novelty; the Brothers Durant give a comical acrobatic performance; Halma is a smart and clever juggler; Mollie Seymour sings sweetly and plays the violin, and Gladys and Alber are exceedingly versatile; Ted Curtis and Picks earn well-merited applause; Eily Adair sings an Irish song acceptably, and Miss Cole is also successful; Manson and West produce a laughable sketch entitled Telling the Tale.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun. — Mr. Frank J. Pitt's company is here in £1,000 Reward. Mr. J. Wilton acts with power and effect as Gilbert Lisle; Mr. Frank J. Pitt impersonates Vincent Rainforth in admirable style; Mr. Frank Dallas gives a humorous rendering of Inspector Gilbert; Mr. Dick Seddon is amusing as Dick Springthorpe; Mr. Edward De Vere makes a capable Fred Ingleford; and Mr. Geo. Marriott, jun., is an able Fred Ingleford, jun. Miss Kathryne Eckart sustains the character of Mme. Sanson with marked distinction; Miss Violet Ingram is a pleasing Meg; Miss Alice Clarke makes a capital Mrs. McCarthy; and Miss Minnie Goepel is very successful as Kitty Springthorpe.

EMPIRE. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—Remarkably clever feats are performed here by Yamamoto and Miss Koyoshi, Japanese equilibrists; Unthan, armless wonder, is thoroughly entertaining; Mackintosh and Royal are expert clog and big boot dancers; Harry Thurston, burlesque comedian, is highly successful; the Betsons are amusing in the comic cycling sketch, A Tramp's Holiday; and Chas. Rowen, comedian; Ryan and Hall, eccentric comedians; and Dene and Dawson, in Stage Aspirants, complete a capital programme.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—A short dramatic season takes the place of the usual variety show for a few weeks, and Mr. Sidney Dench's company is presenting twice nightly a drama, The Prince of Rogues. The piece proves popular, especially with the pit and gallery. Geoffrey Flint is well presented by Mr. Edward Avinall, who is ably seconded by Miss Violet Lytton as Rita. Mr. Tom Ronald gives a manly representation of Frank Farrell; Miss Dora Dench is a winsome Winnie Harwood; and much amusement is caused by the vagaries of Josh Buggins, ably portrayed by Mr. Bert Dench. Mr. Sidney Dorey is the detective of the drama to the life; and Miss Alice May fills the part of Polly Dibbs in a capable manner.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Grieveson.—Messrs. Wm. A. Armour and Hartwell J. Kirby's The Best of Her Sex company is appearing here. Mr. Hartwell J. Kirby himself impersonates the unscrupulous Leslie Verney in a manner that earns the execrations of the "gods"; Mr. Ed. E. Ashby plays the young hero Phillip Farringdon very capably; Mr. Herbert J. Walton, in the short part of Sir Stanton Farringdon (who is shot in the first act), with considerable effect; Mr. Algernon J. Hicks is commendable as the Rev. Stephen Maxwell; humour is supplied by Mr. J. W. Hooper (Peter Jorkins), Mr Herbert de Ville (Jake Smith), and Mr. Fred Yarnold (Holy Joe), along with Miss Alice Buckland, who as Polly Perkins assists to enliven the proceedings. Miss May Grayce is pleasing as Ruth Raeburn, and the rôle of the adventuress Vera is well presented by Miss Alvina Mining.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—A strong and interesting bill is headed by the remarkably clever trio of conjuring, sleight-of-hand, and general mystifyers, Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco; May Mars, comedienne, makes a welcome reappearance, the first in the town since her recent pantomime successes here, securing an excellent reception; Mlle. Eldee appears in a series of posing pictures with lantern effects that are appreciated; Moon and Morris (natives of the borough, who have recently come prominently to the front) are a couple of comedians out of the common run, their dancing being unique. The bill also includes such well-known artists as Lizzie Daniels, comedienne, who contributes a couple of numbers and a smart dance; George Brooks, an exceedingly quaint character actor and nautical comedian; and Ed. E. Ford, billed as the Australian sundowner.

OLYMPIA.—Lessees, The American Roller Skating Rink Co.—There is no waning in the popularity of this entrancing pastime, the present generation having taken it up with surprising enthusiasm and gusto, far exceeding that of three decades ago. This week a grand masquerade carnival night was given, when the floor presented a brilliant and gorgeous appearance, the novel and humorous costumes being most numerous.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Dean.—Closed for summer season.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—A Fight for Life is thrillingly performed here this week by Ada Franks's company.—Mr. Courtney Robinson was eminently fitted for the rôle of Count Adrian; and as La Cardell, alias the Tigress, Miss Violet Lesborough played a difficult part admirably. Mr. William Mathews as her son, Carlos, played the part in a convincing manner.

THE EMPIRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—The name of Eugene Stratton has not yet lost its drawing powers, and full houses are nightly paying tribute to "the Ideal Coon," who appears in old and new numbers; the Proveanies provide a cycling turn that is really extraordinary; Ted E. Box, with quaint and amusing mannerisms, and great whistling abilities, is much enjoyed; a sketch, Home from the Honeymoon, is capitally played by Arthur Jefferson's company; Rich and Rich have a mania for juggling with words which makes their contribution a noteworthy one; Elsie Roby excels in her act, The Slavey; and Billy French does some wonderful wooden shoe dancing. Will Musgrove dispenses humour ad lib.; the Bioscope pictures maintain a high standard.

TON-Y-PANDY.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—Messrs. Chabot and Ballard's company is here in Only a Woman. As Courtenay Wallace Mr. Percy Ballard is capital; Mr. F. Green's Lieut. Rd. Summerfield is a meritorious performance; as Lieut. Rodney Summerfield, Mr. W. H. Wilson is eminently successful; James Dobson and Bill Bumpkins are well interpreted by Messrs. H. Barker and F. Edwards; Miss Violet Crawfurd wins immediate favour as Marie Lestoc; as Violet Redgrave, Miss Flora Leslie is suitably cast; Miss M. Douglas provides mirth as Eliza Jane.

HIPPODROME. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Stone.—The Cytoza Bros. give a neat acrobatic turn here; Ap Morgans increases in popularity; and Geo. Goldburn is a great comedian. Auto provides plenty of fun in his musical comedy act; Connie Rubee and Denby and Dent contribute in no small measure to the success of the evening. Some excellent films are shown.

TYNEMOUTH. — PALACE-BY-THE-SEA.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—The season is now in full swing, and the large auditorium is usually well filled by quite a fashionable throng. Commencing on Sunday with a grand musical programme, with an augmented orchestra, under the baton of Lieut. Henry Amers, fresh from his American and Continental, and Royal Agricultural show successes, there was an exceptionally good house; and on Monday and the remainder of the week premier honours go to Wilton Heriot and company's Anglo-American alliance in an original sketch that afforded ample opportunity for the lightning-like abilities of quick-changes by the clever protean artist Heriot. John Duncannon, the well-known basso, sings with his usual brilliancy and power; the Solio Trio increase their popularity in song, dance, and cakewalk; Kavados, juggler and equilibrist, proves exceedingly smart; Arthur J. Hill, the mannikin mimic, is amusing; and Marello, Punchinello performer, with the Palace Variety Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. W. A. Crosse, and an interesting display of the most recent and up-to-date pictures, provide unusually good fare. The courteous and urbane manager, Mr. Lindon Travers, continues to see to the comforts of those in front.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Ryder Boy's company is continuing the third week here with The Lady of Lyons, She Stoops to Conquer, and A Fool's Paradise. On Monday night Lord Lytton's play had a capital reception, and in the title-rôle Miss Alice Hughes enacted the part of Pauline in charming fashion, her denunciation of Claude in the third act being very fine; Mr. Henry Worrall as Claude Melnotte won the highest encomiums for a finished interpretation of the gardener's son; Mr. Ryder Boys was well placed as Colonel Damas; and as Beausiant, Mr. Harold Neville infused plenty of dramatic force into the part; Mr. Murray Graham was amusing as Glavis; and Monsieur and Madame Deschappelles were cleverly presented by Mr. Alan Modie and Miss Betty Noel; Miss Florrie Hicks was a motherly widow Melnotte, and Miss Elsie Bron a winsome Janet. The staging and dressing of the play left nothing to be desired.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Kinnard supplies an excellent turn here, and his remarkable illusionary feats are exceptionally well done; Lillie Lu Raine scores well with a series of cornet solos, and Baby Boden is a clever young comedienne. The pictures are rare specimens of the photographer's art.

NEW PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—May Moore Duprez is one of the happiest of Dutch girls; the Kirbys are capital burlesque artists; the Four Maisamos are a smart quartette of eccentric musicians; Edie Reynolds plays some delightful violin solos; and the San Remo Girls are charming comediennes and dancers; the Kremka Brothers are novel and amusing acrobats; the Five Bombays are the possessors of rich voices; and George Lawrence is a capable comedian.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Mr. F. B. Woulfe and company are here with Lady Godiva. Miss Ethel Griffiths, in the title-rôle, displays remarkable ability; an effective rendering of Lady Aldyth is forthcoming from Miss Mildred Eversleigh; Miss Edith Lorraine as Elfrida and Miss Sarah Wheatman as Editha do excellent work; as Leofric, Earl of Mercia, Mr. Claude Aymond is heartily applauded; and in the interesting rôle of Tom of Coventry Mr. F. B. Woulfe scores a decided success. A characteristic portrayal of Algar comes from Mr. Stephen Crossley; Mr. Leslie Manton makes a faithful Unwolf, his retainer; and Edgar finds an excellent exponent in Mr. William Melvyn.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—The evergreen Round the Clock, with Charles Majilton at the head of affairs, is once more paying a visit to the district and providing enjoyment to numerous admirers, old and new. H. O. Wills's eccentricity elicits roars of laughter, and several recalls are awarded him. An exceptional treat is afforded lovers of operatic vocalism by the engagement of J. W. Turnbull, whose splendid voice and enunciation in "Let me like a soldier fall" and "Oh, 'tis a glorious night," from Oberon, charm all. Sibb and Sibb contribute a graceful performance on the double trapeze; equilibrism has a capital exponent in Zenora, whose novel hand-balancing feats are fully appreciated. Attraction is also added to the programme by W. H. Smart, "the eccentric Scotchman," and Kitty Lavigne, comedienne and top-boot dancer.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; manager, Mr. Arthur Miller.—Chassino, in his novel shadowgraphy, in which his feet as well as his hands are employed with marvellous effect, is creating quite a sensation; in addition to the shadowgraphy, his mimicry of birds is considerably above the usual exhibitions in this line. The sinuous gyrations of Miss Helen Roberts in the "Salome" dance and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" dance are charming; all her movements are graceful, and the effect fascinating. The Miniature Marionette Circus, manipulated by the Sisters Petram, is remarkably well done, and meets with considerable applause; the Dancing Gilberts receive quite an ovation for their exceptionally clever display of dancing, which is as novel as it is clever; muscular strength is fully displayed by Les Zelovas in their smart acrobatic equilibristic performance; the Four Figaros, in International song and dance; Colin Mail, light comedian; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are also attractions in the programme.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Vagabonds are proving a great attraction here. Miss Olive Sparke rendered "The Moon has his eyes on you" most artistically; Miss Leslie Lulu's sweet voice was heard to the utmost advantage in "Mandy"; "Under the Weeping Willow Tree" was given by Miss Marie Longmore with rare expression; Mr. Leslie Burgiss's rich baritone voice found plenty of scope in "The Robber King"; Mr. Arthur Thomas's comic gags and playing of divers instruments were exceptionally good; Mr. Harold Montague, an artist to the finger-tips, is a great favourite locally, and quite surpassed himself in his humorous sketch, The Choral Society. Mr. Claude Russell is exceptionally good at the pianoforte; Mr. John Lambert shows some first-class pictures by Pathé Frères on the Bioscope.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is presenting The Mystery of Edwin Drood here this week. Mr. Weldon Atherstone, an actor of ability, gives an excellent representation of John Jasper; Mr. Harry Twyford is successful as Neville Landless, also presenting a clever character-study of Mr. Datchery; Mr. Walter Demoney, in the title-rôle, deserves praise; Mr. Karl H. Edwards invests the part of Durdles with humour; and Mrs. Morton Powell ably impersonates the character of Rosa Bird. Miss J. Risley makes a capital Deputy; Helena Landless is in the capable hands of Miss M. Beatrice; and Mr. Richard Harriss acts well as Mr. Chrisparkle.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Co.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Hunt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Marco.—Some magnificent films have been shown this week, including The Silver King, a realistic representation in animated photography of the great drama as played by the late Mr. Wilson Barrett. College Chums, The Inquisitive Boy, The Bathers' Race, The Arabian Legend, and several other pictures of the highest order afford the greatest pleasure to large and delighted audiences nightly. Mr. Charles Clifford, from the Crystal Palace, &c., &c., the popular humorist and master of the harp, has had most flattering receptions in his entertainment of humorous songs, sayings, and sweet melodies.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. John J. Scott.—This week the Lynches, American song illustrators, have proved a big attraction; Dale and Vale, in their vocal and dancing speciality, go well; Miss Flo Christine is a refined serio and clever dancer; and the Penryns cause roars of laughter in their Welsh knock-about sketch, A Welshman in Bedlam.

YORK. — ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; General-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The Gentleman Jockey, presented by Mr. Ed. Marris' company, is here. Mr. Cecil W. Parke, in the title-rôle, pleased everybody; Mr. Leonard Dalrymple as Archie Fitzherbert took full advantage of the scope afforded him; Mr. Arthur Proctor as P.C. Barrowby kept the audience in merry mood; Mr. Helier le Maistre as David Grayson acquits himself admirably; Frank Snakesworth is ably embodied by Mr. W. B. Nugent; Mr. Victor Rowland is good as Grant; Miss Ethel Ward as Poppy Grayson plays in a dainty style; Miss Lillian Drake as Kitty is a decided success; and Miss Gertie Reid is an ideal Peppin. The Lottie Stone Quartette as the four maids add considerably to the success of the play by their clever dancing and singing.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Brooke.—Lillie Soutter is always a warm favourite here, and her appearance during the present week has been hailed with general delight; the juggling feats with heavy weights of Francis Gerard has caused much wonderment, whilst the comical exploits of his assistant have been heartily enjoyed; the Three Sisters Transfield in their musical entertainment are a distinct success; the playing of Miss Violet King has proved a most enjoyable item; and Vowles and Bryan in their refined scena have been applauded; too much praise cannot be given to the Hersleb Bros. for an entertainment which is at once unique, clever, and funny. There are two excellent films on the Bioscope, and the programme is completed by Maurin's Fountain, one of the most pleasing and artistic productions it is possible to imagine.

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT AND THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS.

BY

CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.

CHAPTER II. (continued).

As has been indicated, the Acting-Manager receives the returns of the cash from the Box-office and the Pit and Gallery, as well as the independent returns from the counters. From these returns he prepares a total return of the House Receipts for the day, which is then recorded in the House Receipts Book.

The accuracy of the Acting-Manager's final return may be tested by:—

(1) An investigation of the tickets in the Box-office, which should show that all tickets which have been torn out have been accounted for in cash, due allowance being made for complimentary and library tickets.

Complimentary tickets should be under the sole control of the Acting-Manager, and a record should be kept of the tickets so given away, and the parties to whom they are given.

Tickets given away and the stub must always be stamped "complimentary" or ear-marked in some way, such as by the signature of the Acting-Manager, so as to enable the counter to distinguish such tickets in his return.

(2) Counting the counterfoils given up to the check-takers.

Unless there is collusion between the check-taker and the money-taker, the counting the counterfoils forms an absolute check on the cash.

From the Library Booking Return the Manager must post up the Libraries Book.

A convenient form of ruling is given below:—

Accounts are usually rendered to the libraries monthly and a discount varying from 5 to 10 per cent. is allowed. The total of each column, less discount, is the amount due by each agent. Detailed accounts as shown below are made up from the counterfoils of the library tickets, and should be agreed with the total shown to be due according to the libraries book before being rendered.

THE "HALL OF MUSIC."

The following interesting article appears in "Chiefly Concerning Music Halls," published by T. Fisher Unwin in the late nineties. It is from the pen of Mr. George Gamble, and is a dream of the possibilities of the modern music hall. Some of these anticipations have been realised; others are within measurable distance.

"Hitherto have I written chiefly of things as they are; now will I write only of things as they could be. Come! Let us dream.

"Lo, we are in a place of perfection! The music hall has departed; in its stead is a hall of music. The palace of varieties is now but a building where can be found differences only of kind and not of degree. And things are so ordained that evening shall be young and night-time blue. And, although Raucous indeed is gone with his red Nose, and Sot's Singultous Songs, where no one knows—'still a Ruby kindles in the Vine and many a Garden by the Water blows.'

"Here (in our dream, be it remembered) is no massing of the gross masquerading as the gay, no death-like dullness put forth as all that there is of most brilliant. Here is no riot of fact, but only a revel of fancy. Here is no rule of the plumes, but only a reign of the roses. And the roses are beautiful, fragrant, inermous; and the plumes, though forced to abdicate in favour of the flowers, are no longer mere black feathers fit only for funerals, but are redyed to whiteness and wedding-value.

"Gone is the hideous and the hateful; gone is the unhappy and the unnecessary. Gone are the horrisonous discords; and in their stead are melodies sweet and harmonious. Gone are the honeyless words of stupidity; and in their stead are sayings sweet and wise. Gone are the rags maculated and pediculous; and in their stead are garments comic but clean, garments occasionally unkempt but invariably undisturbing. And the costumes of the women, though rich and gay and shining, are coloured correctly.

"As for the authors—though they are not precisely duplicates of Burns and Beranger, yet have they in themselves something of W. S. Gilbert and W. E. Henley; though they are not exactly makers of national ballads and immortal songs, yet (as with the two last-named) are they always witty and inspiring, always masters of rhyme and reason, always producers of the original and the well-expressed. For example, no longer do they write concerning wine and woman as if they knew nothing about either; no longer do they permit themselves to believe that age cannot wither nor custom stale the infinite vulgarities of the cab-rank and the racecourse. And so we may desist from exhorting them to be less bad; for they now, though not always quite equal, are always quite good. They are intelligent and satisfying: because they are rightly encouraged. They are reliable and pleasing: because they are rightly paid. And they are not only popular and duly appreciated; they are competent and finely meritorious: because the public has grown discriminative, and become intolerant of the bad, and desirous only of the good.

"Especially has the music improved It is now in the hands of trained men: who are as properly rewarded as should be all artists that are worthy of their pay. These men show that a piece of work can be technical without being tiresome, can be the more craft-like without being the less enchanting; and they contrive, in the manner of Alfred Cellier and Sir Arthur Sullivan, that a melody shall be cultured, sweet, riant, graceful, and yet have the mercantile qualities of being easy and memorable. The tunes of the music hall (in our dream, be it still remembered) possess all the merits of those of the concert-room, with an added fire of spontaneity and an accessional charm of resource. Modelled more upon the French and less upon the German, or quaint and dear and flowing as is ever the best of the English, these tunes are very popular—as popular as was 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay.'

"An lo!—in our dream-built hall of music—we now hear Voices and see Visions.

"'I am the Spirit of Song: I appease; I do not appal.'

"'I am the Spirit of Dance: I enchant; I do not repel.'

"'I am Gaiety: I enliven; I do not depress.'

"'I am Pleasure: I renovate; I do not destroy.'

"'I am Entertainment: no longer can you say with truth that it is better to work than to be amused.'

"Anon the melody changes, and we hear a song of the open road. Again the melody changes, and we hear a song of the open sea. And the steady sturdy tramp-tramp of armed men gives place to the mighty on-coming swash-swash of ironclad ships And, loud and high, the voices are heard of such writers as Algernon Charles Swinburne, with his 'Word for the Navy' and William Ernest Henley with his 'England, my England. And, higher still, and higher (as a 'runner' might tip with fire if a vast illumination surprised a festal night, outlining round and round Paul's dome from pillar to spire) comes—not as his paraphrase will perhaps imply, the accents of Robert Browning and his 'cello strains of Love—but the notes of Rudyard Kipling and his trumpet blasts of Imperialism. Little matters it now, that the music hall is more of a schoolroom than a playground for the British brain; there is something good to learn; and not the pleasantries of 'We don't want to fight, but, by Jingo if we do, we've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money too!' Instead, are to be heard the rhymes and reasons of that consummate literary artist who is the acclaimed and accredited mouthpiece of the nation that, though imperfect, is the best that has ever had being on the face of the known globe—the man who gave that splendid shout, 'The English Flag'—the man who sounded that note of warning, 'Recessional'—the articulate man who sang 'A Song of the English.'

"And in the palace of which we are dreaming may be distinguished many other voices—equally great, equally potent; but all different. Man does not live by patriotism alone.

"In their own time Shakespeare and his fellow craftsmen dominated the thought of all England, uplifted the hearts of the people to issues braver and finer. Whence was the message delivered? From the playhouse! . . . In our time, the play is mentally naught beside the novel and the newspaper. Attack a subject in print, leave it for dead—long after, it shall be found on the stage, not only alive, but pretending to have been born there . . In the future, we may find ideas truly starting into life from the theatre itself. What if others should germinate in the very music hall?

"The future! Ah, that is a convenient place—for dreams."

INDISPENSABLE! Rayne's Pocket Date Book. Price 1s. Contents: Map (19in. by 10in.), showing the distance betwixt the various music halls at a glance. Will tell if one hall is within the barring radius of the other, thus saving fears, worry, and anxiety. HISTORIC BY-WAYS.

In his "Miniatures from London Life," Mr. T. R. Croger devotes several chapters to "Historic By-ways," and in one interesting chapter on Crosby Hall and Great St. Helens, he writes:—In Bishopsgate-street Within stands Crosby Hall. This fine house was built in 1466 by Sir John Crosby. It is said that it was then the highest house in London. It has passed through many vicissitudes since, and as it is now a restaurant well known to all city men, who partake of their modest chop eaten in the fine old banqueting-hall—the said chop having been cooked at the immense old fireplace—and the beer, if any, drawn from a bar placed in a splendid oriel window, it is needless for me to more particularly describe the place. Yet it may be interesting to remember that it was in this house that the hunchback Richard, Duke of Gloucester, was living when, according to Shakespeare, he stopped the funeral train of an enemy that he might make love to Lady Anne, to whom he says (Richard III., Act 1, Scene 2):—

"Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Lady Anne. What is it?
Glou. That it may please thee leave these sad designs
To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby Place."

It was at Crosby Place that Shakespeare arranges for the interview between Gloucester and the two ruffians whom he has engaged to murder his brother Clarence (Act 1, Scene 3):—

"Glou. How now, my hardy, stout-resolved mates!
Are you now going to dispatch this thing?
First Murderer. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.
Glou. Well thought upon; I have it here about me.
When you have done, repair to Crosby Place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well spoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.
First Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers: be assured
We go to use our hands and not our tongues."

Shortly after this conversation had taken place, Clarence was found dead, drowned in a butt of Malmsey, as all the world knows.

At the time that the two boys, Edward V. and his brother, were smothered in the Tower, Gloucester was living here.

Many other men of note have occupied the house from time to time, one of the most celebrated being Sir John Spencer, of whom I will give some particulars later on.

Behind Crosby Hall is Crosby-square; the centre is occupied by the fine old church of St. Helens: it has been very aptly described as "the Westminster Abbey of the City." This church was founded by Constantine the Great, the first Christian Emperor of Rome, in honour of his mother Helen; but the present edifice was erected in various times from 1212, in the time of King John and later. It is all very old and of great interest to the historian. Of the many famous men entombed there, perhaps the most renowned was Sir Thomas Gresham, who was buried in 1564. He was a very great man in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and he probably did more for the success of English commerce than any other man that ever lived, for, being sent as representative of his Queen to Antwerp, which was then "the hub of the universe," he succeeded in persuading shipmasters to bring their vessels with their consignments to the Thames, and so made London the chief port of the world's trade.

There is an old story to the effect that, when an infant, he was found by a boy who followed a grasshopper to capture it, and discovered the child in the grass. This seems to have some countenance in the fact that the vane on top of the Royal Exchange, which Gresham founded, is a metal grasshopper. This is a pretty little anecdote, but, unfortunately, like so many of our cherished beliefs, it is not true. The father and the uncle of Sir Thomas were both of them great merchants in the City of London, and each of them had been Lord Mayor in his time. Moreover, visitors to breezy Cromer may spend a pleasant afternoon by taking a drive or ride to the village of Gresham, where Sir Thomas and his ancestors had lived. Gresham Castle is now a ruin level with the ground, only the lower parts of the walls being visible, surrounded by the remains of the moat. The castle was a square one, with bold round towers at the corners, and must have been approached by a drawbridge.

It is interesting to note that while we in London pronounce the name Gresh-am, the people of Norfolk call it Gres-ham.

One other man of importance I must not pass without mention, although there are many names associated with this place that should be referred to.

Sir John Spencer was a very rich and powerful merchant. He, his wife, and their only child, a daughter, lived in Crosby Place, but they had also a country residence—namely, Canonbury Tower, a place built in 1523 by Prior Bolton, of St. Bartholomew the Great, as a rural retreat for himself and the monks. This tower still stands; it is in the parish of Islington. Sir John Spencer, it is said, aspired to wed his daughter to a man like himself, but she, like so many young ladies, even in the good old days, had notions of her own upon that subject.

Dr. J. E. Cox, the late vicar in charge, who was so delighted always to show visitors over his beautiful old church, and who was a great lover of art generally, and music in particular, has written a most interesting book, called "The Annals of St. Helens." In it he tells in his delightful way the following story, which I shall probably spoil in the retelling, just as much as he made it luminous.

He says that one day the baker called at Canonbury Tower. He carried a large basket to hold the bread. Into this basket the maiden crept, as she was remarkably small, being unlike her parents, if we may judge by their effigies in the church. She was carried away and married to the man of her choice, Lord William Compton.

Sir John and Lady Spencer were heartbroken, and refused to be comforted. Sir John was a great man at the Court of Elizabeth, and by and by the Queen sent for him, saying that she had a charge to lay upon him; that she was interested in an infant to which she intended to stand as godmother, and that she wished Sir John Spencer to join her in her kindly office, and act as godfather to the child. Of course, he readily consented. The baptismal day duly arrived; the ceremony performed, the broken-hearted father took the helpless infant in his arms to bless it and make it his heir, he having cast off his disobedient child. When all was complete, at a signal a door was thrown open, and there, upon their knees, to ask pardon, were the parents of the infant, Sir John's daughter and Lord William Compton!

This delightful story, the result of the ready wit of the Queen, should be read in Dr. Cox's book. The monument to Sir John and his wife, with the little daughter at her devotions, should be seen by visitors to this church. Dr. Cox used to say that he was sure that Shakespeare had some of his plays performed in an old coaching-yard, the Four Swans, that stood opposite Crosby-square.

That Shakespeare did know the neighbourhood well is certain, as he was an inhabitant of the parish, and his name appears upon the rate-book.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

On Friday evening, July 3, the pupils of Mr G. H. Snazelle gave a dramatic performance in the theatre of the Guildhall School of Music, and considering the marked ability shown by the pupils, who were, with one exception, ladies, it was to some extent a pity that a stronger programme than a very short comedietta and a farcical episode were not forthcoming in the dramatic portion. The large audience, however, greatly enjoyed the performances, and the ladies' concert given later on the evening proved additionally attractive owing to the presence of Mr. Snazelle as master of the ceremonies. The first item in the programme was R. C. Carton's comedietta The Ninth Waltz, in which the character of Richard, who comes from abroad just in time for the ninth waltz and the hand of the young widow, was played in a manly and effective spirit by Mr. Stanley Hughes, while Miss Emily Surridge gave a charming account of Florence, the young widow. In a farcical episode, A Mere Man, by Herbert Sears, Mr. Snazelle introduced the daring and not unsuccessful experiment of a concert during the farce. The scene of A Mere Man takes place in the Chatham Street Old Maids' Club, and as the farce is not especially a strong affair, the little concert greatly enlivened matters. Miss Lilian Exton played the president of the club, Miss Margaret Lymbery being Lady Betty, a serious girl, while Miss E. M. Beagley was effective as the lazy girl Dolly; and Miss Violet Knight gave considerable interest to Irene, an American girl with a most pronounced accent. Miss Goadsby, a girl no longer, was played with much humour by Miss E. M. Surridge; and the other characters of Maisie and the Hon. Mrs. Rickerby were intelligently performed by Miss Gertrude Ketchell and Miss J G. Badcock. The ladies' concert given during the farce introduced Miss Doris Cloud's String Quartette, who gave a pleasing selection of music. The Mitchell Vocal Quartette also were heard in a charming rendering of German's lively song, arranged as a quartette, "Love is meant to make us glad," which was encored. The Mitchell Quartette are pupils of Mr. Isidore de Solla. Mr. Snazelle's pupil, Miss Katrine St. Clair, gave a clever recitation, "Why I Laugh," and laughed so naturally that it proved infectious. Miss Florence Paull sang "Tell me, my heart" (Bishop) and Miss Exton was most heartily applauded in her recitation showing how life is like a pack of cards. A pupil of Herr Francesco Berger, Miss Dorothy Holden, gave an excellent piano solo of selection from Rigoletto; and a little pupil of Mr. Snazelle's, Miss Linder, who looked about nine years old, very prettily recited "The Water-mill" with good emphasis and admirably clear enunciation, the audience giving the youthful performer a most hearty recall. Miss Dora Palmer sang "A Rose Garden" (Ahn von Carse) with effect, and Mr. G. H. Snazelle, to the huge delight of the audience, recited his extremely funny story of "The Whistling Man," who tries by this means to cure himself of stuttering. When the laughter caused by this story had subsided, Mr. Snazelle, who was warmly greeted, announced that shortly he would be going to Australia for a year, and hoped on his return to continue his lessons on elocution at the Guildhall School.

The students' orchestral concert on Wednesday evening was given, as usual, in the fine hall of the City of London School, before a large audience. Dr. Cummings, the principal, conducted the orchestra, which was first heard in Gounod's Symphony No. 2 in E flat, originally played at the Crystal Palace in October, 1864, and again in April, 1871. Considering that the symphony is written by the composer of Faust the work proves somewhat uncertain in its lack of strength, although there is pleasing music in the Larghetto, and the finale is lively and effective. The orchestral students showed great intelligence in their playing of the symphony. In Mr. Landon Ronald's prelude, "Life," Miss Violet Oppenshaw used her fine voice most artistically, and was ably accompanied by the orchestra; while Miss Jessie Attwell gave a remarkably neat and finished performance of the solo instrument in the first movement, Allegro Maestoso, from Chopin's Pianoforte Concerto in E minor. Miss Gladys Ancrum sang "Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix" with a fair amount of success, though showing a tendency to force her voice at times. A new Concert Overture MS., by Miss Ethel Scarborough, performed for the first time, proved a pleasing and melodious work. Miss Scarborough has written some very effective passages for the wind instruments in the opening and best theme of the overture, and if the finale was to a certain extent slightly diffuse, greater experience will increase her natural gifts. The young composer, who had a most hearty reception, conducted the overture with considerable ability. Miss Jenny Hyman, the official accompanist of the school, presided at the pianoforte.

MISS MILDRED COTTELL, who has had an offer to star as Lady Marion Beaumont, Miss Constance Collier's part in The Sins of Society, has been engaged for some time by Mr. Wentworth Croke for the part of Helga in The Prodigal Son.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday, at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. R. A. Robinson (chairman) presiding.

THEATRE AND MUSIC HALL LICENCES.

The General Purposes Committee reported as follows:—

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee have had under consideration the question of the procedure at meetings of the Council held for the purpose of hearing applications for licences for music, music and dancing, and stage plays, and have suggested to us that the Council should delegate to them the power to grant and refuse licences, subject to a right of appeal to the Council in certain specified cases, and that the Council, when hearing the appeals from the Committee's decisions, should not debate the cases in public after hearing the evidence for and against the applications, but that any deliberations upon an application should, as in the case of the Committee's proceedings, take place in private.

While not prepared to recommend the delegation of authority in the manner suggested by the Theatres and Music Halls Committee, we are of opinion that the suggestion that the deliberations of the Council, when sitting as the licensing authority in respect of music, music and dancing, and theatre licences, should be conducted in private may well be adopted, and we submit the necessary amendments of standing orders to secure this. These amendments may need revision should the Local Authorities (Admission of the Press) Bill, which has passed all stages in the House of Commons, and has been introduced into the House of Lords, become law.

The Rev. STEWART HEADLAM moved that the recommendation be referred back to the Committee, as he thought that this was an extremely dangerous proposal. His memory carried him back to a time when there was a plot directed against the privileges of the theatres and music halls, and he thought that the electors ought to know how their representatives voted on these questions. What they wanted was a free discussion.

Mr. H. H. GORDON seconded the amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD, the chairman of the Committee, said that the matter had been very carefully considered. A great many of them had felt for some time that the procedure at the annual Licensing Sessions left a great deal to be desired. The suggested alteration in the standing orders would not lead to any alteration in the usual policy of the Council. The division lists would be published in the proceedings of the Council, as in the case of all other divisions, and he hoped that the recommendation would be carried.

SIR JOHN MCDOUGAL supported the recommendation, as he thought that to consider their decisions in private was a very proper course to adopt.

The amendment was defeated on a show of hands.

Mr. GORDON moved a further amendment to the effect that provided a vote or division be taken, such vote or division be taken in public. He held that the ratepayers had a right to know how their representatives voted.

The CHAIRMAN said he thought the amendment was quite unnecessary.

SIR EDWIN CORNWALL said he should vote against the amendment, as he believed it would only lead to a muddle if adopted.

A division was then taken, and the amendment was defeated by fifty-eight votes against forty-four.

A further amendment was moved by Mr. DEW to refer the whole matter back to the Committee. He said that hitherto they had always done the business with open doors, and their constituents had a right to know how they voted.

Mr. GOSLING seconded the amendment, which was lost.

The amendments to the standing orders were then agreed to, and Mr. GREENWOOD undertook to bring up a report as to the methods of taking votes and divisions on the granting of theatre and music hall licences under the new system.

MR. REYNOLDS' QUESTIONS.

Mr. WALTER REYNOLDS called attention to the waste of time which occurred at the last meeting, and asked the chairman of the General Purposes Committee whether he would recommend that the Council should sit two days instead of one; or such alteration in the standing orders as to enable the Council to get through the work in a single day like rational business men.

Mr. GREENWOOD, vice-chairman of the Committee, said his reply must be in the negative.

Mr. REYNOLDS also quoted a paragraph in the report of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee giving statistics as regards Whit-Monday, and stating that the general behaviour of the crowds was very orderly, and only six convictions for drunkenness recorded. He wished to know whether, in the face of these figures, further restrictive legislation was needed. (Laughter.)

Mr. HUNTER (chairman of the Committee)—I am not to be drawn on a temperance question. (Laughter.)

SPECIAL TERMS TO ACTRESSES AND MEMBERS OF THE PROFESSIONS.

This is the treatment to which so many Royal and Titled Ladies owe their MARVELLOUSLY YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE, and of which the London press has spoken so highly.

A guarantee is given in all cases before the treatment is commenced, and no case is undertaken unless success can be assured. A subject demonstrating the efficacy of the treatment can be seen during business hours by appointment.

A FEW EXTRACTS FROM THE PRESS.

"The Queen," Feb. 1, 1908, said:—
. . . . "For this is no ordinary so-called beauty treatment, no mere enhancement of beauty nor covering of defects, but a veritable change of face."

"The Gentlewoman," March 21, 1908, said:—
"It is a veritable magician's cave, that artistic, reposeful suite of salons at 35, Old Bond Street, which bear the name of Auguste, for . . . . . not only wrinkles, no matter of how long standing, are removable, but even the deep seated scars of small pox."

"The Ladies' Field," Aug. 31, 1907, said:—
"Now that I have seen with my own eyes and felt with my own hands the simply marvellous results of this method, I realise that it is only ignorance and not advancing years that allows a woman to become wrinkled and therefore look old."

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL FETE.

Favoured by brilliant weather, the fête at the Botanic Gardens on Tuesday for the benefit of Charing Cross Hospital was entirely successful. The programme of the day commenced at 3 p.m., with a selection by the Elderhorst String Orchestra. At half-past three H.R.H. the Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, the president of the hospital, arrived, and was received by the Right Hon. Lord Wcardale and members of the council. Her Royal Highness proceeded to the site of the open-air theatre, where she was met by little Dolly Dot, a clever child, attired as Cupid, who spoke the following prologue of welcome, written by Miss Meta Fanny Bowman :—

Sweet Princess, gentle dame and squire,
Whom Love and Pity both inspire
To soothe your fellow mortal's pain,
And bring him back to Hope again—
To heal those stricken in the strife,
The fallen on the field of Life,
All ye, Love's self doth now invite
To the feast prepared for your delight,
To sweet beguile the golden hours
Amid these leafy, fragrant bowers—
We'll do our best nor count the cost,
And trust Love's labour mayn't be lost.
Sweetest Rosebud, bring thy flowers,
Haste thee from thy beauteous bowers.

Miss Dot then led a little child to the Princess, bearing a bouquet, and continued :—

Now, by our glorious Shakespeare's aid,
We'll flit to Arden's forest shade;
Find a goodly company
Underneath the greenwood tree.
The chord of love we'll find and strike it,
This is surely As You Like It.
Sound the horn till the welkins ring!
Come, ye players, the play's the thing.

The Princess then declared the fête open, and the forest scenes from As You Like It were given, arranged as a woodland masque, the whole entertainment being under the direction of Miss Italia Conti. A very creditable rendering of the ever-popular play was given, Miss Conti speaking Rosalind's lines in soft and silvery tones, and with refined and delicate expression. Mr. Lewis Casson was a gallant Orlando—manly, earnest, and expressive. Two admirable interpretations especially deserve notice—the Touchstone of Mr. Ben Field, keen, unctuous, and amusing, and Miss Claire Greet's very clever and characteristic performance as Audrey. Miss Alys Rees was dainty and distinct as Celia; and Miss Evelyn Martheze was quietly commendable as Phœbe. Mr. William Luff was a good and sound Oliver, and especially distinguished himself by his bold delivery of the speech descriptive of Orlando's accident. Mr. Farbridge was duly senile and affectionate as Adam; and Mr. Ernest Griffen endowed the Banished Duke with due dignity and geniality; Mr. Arthur Fane enacting Jacques with conscientious care. Mr. Robert Grey well filled the rôle of William; Miss Margaret Bright Morris did a pretty solo dance as Hymen; and there was some good glee-singing by the Westminster Singers, the song, "It was a lover and his lass," with a setting by R. H. Walthew, being well rendered by Messrs. W. H. Brereton and Percival and the Misses Ethel and F. Lewis. A neat epilogue was spoken at the conclusion of the performance by Miss Dolly Dot. The stage-managers for Miss Conti were Mr. Claude Vernon and Mr. Albert Murray.

Amongst the ladies announced to preside over the tea tables near the café chantant were many of the most popular performers in Lady Frederick, Havana, The Dairymaids, and Butterflies, Messrs. Reginald Eyre, D. P. Williams, Albert Murray, Charles Banks, John Alexander, F. J. Williams, George Highland, and E. Hammond being stewards. Amongst the artists who kindly consented to contribute, by permission of their respective managements, to the café chantant entertainment, arranged by Mr. H. Bernhardt, were Mme. Yvette Guilbert, Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. John McCormack, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Phyllis Dare, Mr. Harry Fragson, Miss Stella St. Audrie, Mr. Louis Bradfield, Miss Jean Aylwin, Miss Jessie Lonnen, Mr. George Robey, Miss Mabel Russell, Miss Lucie Caine, the Westminster Singers, Mr. Alfred Lester, Mr. John Bardesley, Mr. W. H. Berry, Mr. Walter Divine, Miss Enid Leonhardt, Miss Elsie Irving, Little Dolly Dot, Miss Annie Mars, Misses Dorothy and Violet Edge, Miss Ethel Lewis, Mr. Percival, and the St. Paul's Glee Singers.

The numerous shows in the grounds were freely patronised. At Lady Frederick's Court of Feminine Fripperies and Masculine Mysteries, Miss Florence Wood presided over an exhibition of model gowns and hats, generously supplied by the Maison Vendôme; selections by the gramophone Caruso, Tetrazzini, were heard with pleasure, and a special record of the famous scene between Lady Frederick and Mme. Claude, in the play, being applauded. In the "Masculine Mystery Corner," Mr. "Joe" Browne gave a performance for gentlemen only which created much curiosity. The honorary manageress, Miss Florence Wood, was assisted by Miss Minnie Terry, Miss Beatrice Terry, Miss Dora Barton, Miss Naomi Barton, Miss K. Sinclair Thomson, Miss W. Howland Roberts, and Miss Therese Nordblom, the stewards being Mr. Edmund Breon, Mr. H. J. Haviland, Mr. Drelincourt Odlum, Mr. Burnaby, and Mr. D. P. Williams. Miss Helen Murphy told people's fortunes by their palms, without any charge whatever except the admission to her tent, the steward for her show being Mr. Lauderdale Maitland.

THE NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 6,
"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS."

This renowned play was received with marked approval by a large audience at the Lyric on Monday last. Mr. Sidney Bland played the two brothers, Fabien and Louis del Franchi, with excellent effect. Mr. J. G. Vane as Chateau Renard did well; Mr. J. O. Stewart gave a finished performance as Baron de Montgiron; Mr. J. Hignett was humorous as Baron Martelli; Mr. J. W. Wilkinson as Orlando caused much laughter; Mr. Hugh Wallace was quite satisfactory as Alfred Meynard; Miss Cissie St. Elmo as Mme. Savilia del Franchi was particularly good; and Miss Amy Clyndes was a sympathetic Emilie de Lesparre. The Corsican Brothers was followed by a new play in one act (of two scenes) entitled The Holy War, based on recent Morocco events, written by Mr. Carlton Wallace. It is hardly a worthy example of Mr. Wallace's well-known ability as a writer of drama. The mounting of both plays left little to be desired, and both were really well dressed.

A CONTRADICTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—At a meeting of the Actors' Union in Manchester on Sunday, May 31 last, a certain member stated that the Actors' Union and the Touring Managers' Association had formed joint committees to draw up a contract, which would take into consideration payment for matinées and rehearsals. My committee desire to state that they have no working sub-committee with the Actors' Union for any purpose whatever, nor are they considering any changes in regard to rehearsals or payment for matinées.—Yours faithfully,

MONTGOMERY MARTIN,
Secretary, Actors' Association.
Savoy-mansions, W.C., July 6, 1908.

Copy of Testimonial to the Chemical Cleaning and Dyeing Co. From 41, Cavendish-place, Eastbourne. Mr. Harris. Sir,—My skirt has arrived and I am delighted with it. I must also thank you for splendid way you cleaned my pleated lace and silk matinée coat.—I am yours (signed), Kitty Carson. [Advt.]

EDWIN DROOD DEVELOPMENTS.

What was to be the final evolution of the story? asks Mr. Edwin Charles in "Keys to the Drood Mystery," published in one volume by Collier and Co. First and foremost Jasper must be punished. But would death by the hangman, which he so richly deserved a thousand times over, be an adequate punishment according to the Dickens ideal? Here is a picture of the man as I conceive Dickens to have meant him to look in the eyes of his readers :—

Of all the villains, wrong-doers, and murderers he presents to us, John Jasper stands out alone, a devil incarnate. Sikes was merely a ruffianly brute, whose one idea of vengeance was to slay. Wicked villain and parricide in intent though Jonas Chuzzlewit was, there is some small grain of retributive justice in his murder of Montague Tigg, swindler and unscrupulous blackmailer. As for Bradley Headstone, he was a very poor bungler, and, personally, I have always felt sorry for him, and have thought that Eugene Wrayburn, who could find no better use for his elegance, his polish, and his education than to goad and taunt an unsophisticated village schoolmaster into madness, deserved some punishment, and was much too well rewarded in winning so splendid a girl as Lizzie Hexam for a wife. But John Jasper!—the uncle, who, conceiving a passion for his nephew's betrothed, determines upon that nephew's death and plans the details of it while greeting him with honeyed words and eating at table with him—the host who can stand over the sleeping form of his guest, a form full of virility and of the joy of life, a boy with all the golden visions of youth stretched out in long vista before him, and hungrily count the days which must elapse ere that form shall be dull and lifeless—the guardian who can put maddening drugs into the wine of two hot-headed boys so that they may quarrel and so that one of them may be suspected of the murder of the other, which he himself intends to commit—the man who can forge a key for the opening of a sepulchre, in which the present healthy living shall be hidden when it has become the murdered dead—the choirmaster who, with murder in his heart, hearing the solemn words "from battle and murder and from sudden death," can intone with reverent voice "Good Lord deliver us"; and who at the recital of the Commandment "Thou shalt do no murder," melodiously sings, "Lord have mercy upon us and incline our hearts to keep this law." What can we say of such a man but that he is the blackest-hearted villain, the most cunning and the most remorseless murderer ever limned by mortal pen?

If Dickens could paint the sufferings of a low brute like Sikes in such language as this :—"Let no man talk of murderers escaping justice and hint that Providence must sleep. There were twenty score of violent deaths in one long minute of that agony of fear." If he could describe the anguish of so miserable a coward, so terror-stricken a wretch as Jonas Chuzzlewit in these burning words.—"The raging thirst, the fire that burnt within him as he lay beneath the clothes, the augmented horror of the room, when they shut it out from his view; the agony of listening, in which he paid enforced regard to every sound, and thought the most unlikely one the prelude to the knocking which should bring the news; the starts with which he left his couch, and looking in the glass imagined that his deed was broadly written in his face, and lying down and burying himself once more beneath the blankets, heard his own heart beating Murder, Murder, Murder, in the bed"—what glowing language would he have used to portray the feelings of a man like Jasper, who had concerted his measures so carefully that he thought himself immune from discovery? As Jasper sat in the condemned cell, the place to which his feet had been hurrying him since first he allowed his passions to get the better of his judgment; since he allowed his judgment to be sapped and undermined by an insidious drug—what raging, maddening thoughts would rush through his head as he reflected that all his caution, all his calculations, had been nullified by so simple a thing as a ring! "Why did Ned conceal it from me?" And the answer to this question would be part of his punishment. Edwin had kept the possession of it a secret, because he so thoroughly believed in Jasper's love for him that he could not bear to worry and vex him by telling him of the broken engagement. Jasper's own hypocritical protestations of a love which did not exist had led to the commission of a dreadful crime. How keen would be his chagrin at such a reflection. Again he would ask, "Why did chance seem to put everything so easily in my way? From the first moment I commenced to think of this murder, every step seemed to be purposely smoothed for me." What a galling thought that Fate had been leading him on through his own evil passions to his ultimate downfall! The very opportunities which had induced him to commit his crime had risen up and mocked him. And the opium—the drug which had enabled him temporarily to forget his daily drudgery—the drug which had given him such golden, glittering visions—the drug under whose influence the commission of his crime had seemed so easy a task—even that had failed him; for at the last it had turned and given him into the hands of his enemies. And yet he had tested it. Had he not carefully listened to the Chinaman, the Lascar, and the hag herself, whilst they were under its influence, and had not all their chatter been "unintelligible"? How could he know that that miserable, ignorant old woman, the keeper of the den, would be shrewd enough to study his temperament, and would thus be able to mix the drug for him in such a way as to make him talk intelligibly? Such thoughts as these would chase each other in maddening medley through his brain day and night, night and day, till the hour of doom arrived.

There are many lessons to be learned from a careful and studious perusal of such a book as "The Mystery of Edwin Drood." Even he who runs may read if he is on the watch for what is there to teach him. If I have read the character of Jasper aright, as I have earnestly striven to do, he is a type of all that is bad. As in "Oliver Twist" Dickens said :—"I wished to show, in little Oliver, the principle of good surviving through every adverse circumstance and triumphing at last," so, I think, the character of Jasper is the other side of the medal, for he is the personified principle of Evil, who, amidst holy surroundings, begins with dissatisfaction at the routine and monotony of his life, and instead of seeking to vary it by healthy exercise and recreation, takes to noxious drugs that poison the mind as well as the body; continues in envy of his nephew's happier lot, and ends in murder and the gallows.

Dickens always preaches the great human lesson that crime and wrong-doing are necessarily and inevitably followed by punishment. Look at the examples to be found in his books! Fagin dies by the hangman; Sikes hangs himself accidentally in attempting to escape human justice; Bumble and his wife are brought to penury and want and become inmates of the very workhouse in which they had before reigned supreme; Bradley Headstone drowns both Rogue Riderhood and himself, and Silas Wegg is properly rewarded for his terrible treachery and ingratitude; Ralph Nickleby hangs himself in remorse, and his tool Squeers suffers long imprisonment; Quilp is drowned in the slime and ooze of the Thames, and Brass and his sister come to the gutter; Steerforth is drowned near the home he so wantonly wrecked; Jonas Chuzzlewit poisons himself, and Pecksniff and his daughter Charity become street beggars.

MR. WALTER GAY.

Mr. Walter Gay started his theatrical career in a small Shakespearean fit-up company, playing everything from utility to Hamlet. He then was engaged as juvenile lead in a society drama called Gabrielle, in Crutch and Toothpick, and other pieces. Joining Mr. F. R. Benson, he had most valuable experience in such parts as Mercutio, Macduff, Joseph Surface, and others. Stock seasons at Ramsgate and Ipswich followed, and at the former place Mr. Gay supported Mr. Charles Warner, who went down to "star." Mr. Warner's kind influence secured him many engagements in after years. Among his favourite parts in these early days was that of Louis Percival in Jim the Penman. Melodrama claimed him when the late Mr. Eliot Galer secured his services as leading man for stock at the Opera House, Leicester, with a tour of With the Colours to follow. He was then engaged by Messrs. Gatti for two tours of Harbour Lights and In the Ranks, and as a consequence a much-valued engagement at the Adelphi followed. With Miss Fortescue he played Jura in Moths, and in Pygmalion and Galatea; and for nearly three years he was with Mrs. Langtry for tours and seasons at the St. James's and Princess's Theatres, playing such parts as Spencer in Clancarty, Cæsar in Antony and Cleopatra, Sir Geo. Ormonde in Peril, Oliver in As You Like It, &c. Modern drama succeeded the legitimate when Sir Augustus Harris selected him to play Julian Belford in The Prodigal Daughter, followed by other tours of Drury Lane dramas under Mr. Henry Dundas's management :—A Life of Pleasure (lead), A Run of Luck (lead), &c. He then supported Mr. Charles Warner at the Princess's in The Life We Live, played Sir John Harding in The Idler with Mr. Charles Cartwright on tour, and was Truthful James in Mr. Mortimer's comedy of that name for two tours. Equally important work came to him when Mr. Cartwright asked him to create the heavy part in the production of Mr. Ben Landeck's Chicot the Jester. This was followed by an engagement as lead in In Sight of St. Paul's, on tour. Engagements at the Pavilion, E., the Crown, Peckham, the Lyric, Hammersmith, as leading man preceded his selection by Mr. Lewis Waller for the part of the King in The Three Musketeers at the Globe and Garrick Theatres. A lighter task was the part of Captain Carew in His Excellency the Governor with Miss

MR. WALTER GAY.

Kate Phillips, on tour. Neither must we forget to mention in this brief record that he was engaged by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones to play Mr. Tree's part in The Dancing Girl, on tour; nor that as Simon Dale in English Nell he supported Miss Florence St. John for two tours. For a few years, owing to family arrangements, Mr. Gay had to leave the stage, and devoted himself to public affairs at his native town of Tenby, being Town Councillor, Poor Law Guardian, and Mayor of the town. He, however, turned to the boards, when he was selected by Mr. Arthur Bourchier in the spring of this year to play Captain Villiers in Mr. Eugène Stafford's Simple Simon company. Mr. Gay has not yet settled his autumn work.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, July 6, the Drama, entitled
"THE LITTLE BREAD-WINNER."

Mr. J. A. Campbell's principal company, aided by some well-executed sets, shows to conspicuous advantage in the above play, and the best possible results accrue from a well-selected cast who, working hard together, maintain the interest of the audience from the beginning to the end, and earn the applause which is lavishly meted out to them. Lord William Dorrington, a Quaker, is ably undertaken by Mr. H. B. Peppin. Mr. Louis Lingard portrays the part of Richard Lawrence with success, and achieves distinction. Mr. Alfred Maurice gives a clever delineation in the character of Joseph Prior, a cunning and plausible villain; delivering his lines with excellent effect, he soon becomes most flatteringly unpopular. Mr. Sidney Lynn causes no little amusement as Charles Prior; Dr. Chadwick is adequately essayed by Mr. Wallace Carey. Little Marjorie Lawrence, a very engaging and talented young lady, sustains the character of Meg, "the little bread-winner," with charm and bright vivacity, and assisted by her singing and dancing ingratiates herself with the audience. Miss Lissa Young is diverting as Bobby Trott, and also scores in song and dance. Miss Millie Ford stands out prominently as Kate Cherry, and gives a good rendering of the part. Ruth Cherry is also capably characterised by Miss Kitty Melville. Miss Emmie Barton and Miss Clara Hunt, in their respective rôles of Margaret Daventry and Bridget O'Flanagan, merit commendation, while Mr. Ed. Alderson, Mr. Thomas Minns, and Mr. Henry Gooch lend sufficient aid in minor parts.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, July 7, the Drama entitled
"AN ABANDONED WOMAN."

Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is here this week in the above drama. Mr. Fraser Brunner as Phillipe Malvoisin takes advantage of the many opportunities afforded in the strong character; Mr. Teddy Myles gives a humorous impersonation of the Irish policeman Paddy Boyle; and Mr. Will Glaze works hard with excellent results as Sammy Sharp. Miss Thorne Hallam supplies an excellent performance of the sorely-tried Eleanor Deane; Miss Queenie Fraser Brunner renders valuable assistance as Sally Sloper; and Miss Ruth Zillwood as Ninion Malvoisin is responsible for a forcible and effective reading of this important character. The drama is well staged, and the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Stephenson, provides some acceptable selections between the acts. The Bioscope pictures are still an additional attraction.

ACTORS' UNION.

Mr. H. Tripp Edgar presided at the usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union held at Hummum's Hotel on Tuesday afternoon. Amongst those present were Messrs. J. W. Braithwaite, J. Hastings Batson, F. Rawson Buckley, Henry Bedford, Orlando Barnett, Edward Chester, Walter Clarke, Charles Calvert, Frank Copeland, Fred Elvin, Frank Gerald, Sidney N. Hallowes, J. B. Innes, Fred Jacques, Geo. P. Lester, Fred F. Loyd, Bruce Lindley, A. J. May, Wm. Macready, Edward Y. Rae, Charles Stafford, Charles R. Stone, A. Maitland Stapley, Alfred Terris, J. Milne Taylor, James Turner, Carl Vallender, and Albert Wainwright; and Mesdames Walter Bentley, J. W. Braithwaite, C. Bromley, May Conrade, M. Clavering, E. Chalmers, Florence Creagh, E. Erskine, A. Gracey, Maud Kirwan, Eva Lumley, L. L'Estrange, Kitty Marion, I. Montcrieff, C. Macallister, Jessie Rutter, Sybil Rutter, Nellie Taylor, and Millie Vere.

The Chairman, after dealing with the objects of the Union in the usual manner, and complaining of what he considered the hypocritical attitude of Mr. Cecil Raleigh towards that body, made a vigorous pronouncement on the subject of the minimum wage. That much-discussed question, he said, was by no means dead, and the object which it raised would continue to hold uppermost place in their thoughts. He did not believe that the establishment of a minimum wage would be prejudicial to the profession as a whole in that, as had been urged by some people, it would reduce all salaries to that level. The history of trade unions showed that there had been no inconsiderable increase in wages where a minimum had been in force. It was a point to which the Union would have to give very careful consideration, and the meeting could be reminded that a minimum wage was the first object of the Union.

Mrs. Walter Bentley expressed the opinion that if a salary of £2 a week were paid to the most insignificant members of a theatrical company, it would induce a large number of poorly-paid clerks and governesses to join the profession.

The Chairman, in reply to this criticism, remarked that this would be scarcely probable, in view of the fact that the actor did not get an engagement all the year round, and that his salary, therefore, would not amount to £2 a week for fifty-two weeks.

Mr. Frank Gerald supported the Chairman, and went on to say that if any member wished to have the subject of a minimum wage struck out of their rules, he was at liberty to call a general meeting to determine the matter. He took that opportunity of informing the members that the committee had inspected premises which could be used as a club, and it was hoped within the next week or so to submit a scheme in this respect to the members.

Other speakers were Mr. Henry Bedford, Mr. Fred Loyd, Mr. Charles R. Stone, and Mr. J. H. Batson.

ADVERTISING CURTAINS.

Some important questions in connection with the interpretation of contracts for notices on advertising curtains in theatres arose at Wandsworth County Court on Monday, when Judge Harington, K.C., heard an action, in which the Expert Advertising Company, of Rectory Chambers, Norfolk-road, Sheffield, were the plaintiffs, and Mr. A. Gasson, an optician, of Battersea Park-road, the defendant. The case for the plaintiffs was that defendant signed a contract for his advertisement to appear on the advertising curtain at the Shakespeare Theatre, Lavender Hill, Battersea, the amount being £3, and the stipulation being that the advertisement should be shown "three times during each performance." Evidence was given by James Solly, the fireman, and J. H. Armsworth, the flyman, as to the exhibition of the curtain, the three times to be once before the performance, once during the interval, and once at the end of the performance. A paper to this effect was signed after each performance.

Defendant's solicitor said the words of the contract were "three times during each performance." If given before the play commenced, would that be "during the performance"?

His Honour : Is not that putting it a bit too high? You would not have the curtain lowered in the middle of a scene.

The solicitor : No, but there are two or three acts in most pieces.

Defendant, giving evidence, said that on signing the contract he was told that the pantomime season was worth all the money, for then there were two shows a day. On two occasions in February and October he went to the theatre, and only saw the curtain once during the performance. It was lowered when the early doors were opened, but it was so dark nobody could read it. At the close they turned out the lights, and the people at the same time, and so it could not be seen. He complained to the plaintiffs in November, and they said they had never had a complaint before.

Mr. Corfield, another advertiser, deposed to visiting the Shakespeare on June 1, and to the curtain not being shown. He did not wait till the end. Two other witnesses gave similar evidence.

Defendant's solicitor said he had several other witnesses.

His Honour : What are they to prove?

The solicitor : That they did not see the curtain?

His Honour : Perhaps they did not look for it.

The solicitor : If your Honour is satisfied—

His Honour : I am satisfied that on certain occasions the curtain was not shown the three times, but does that vitiate the whole contract?

The solicitor : Yes, if they make continual breaches.

After further argument his Honour said this was a very unsatisfactory case. The plaintiffs appeared to carry on their business at Sheffield. They obtained orders from people in London, but had no power over the stage-managers, and appeared to take no steps to see that the contracts were carried out. He was not satisfied that the contract in this case had been carried out, and there would be judgment for the defendant.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, July 6, the Play in Four Acts entitled
"TRILBY."

This adaptation of Du Maurier's famous novel has been selected as the first of the four attractions which Mr. Ernest Abbott will put before the frequenters of this popular playhouse during his season. Mr. Abbott is well known in this district as a sterling actor, and his reception on Monday evening was well deserved, for he presented an excellent study of the difficult rôle of Svengali. Mr. Abbott is supported by an excellent company, including Miss Ada Abbott, whose Trilby was a capital performance from start to finish. Mr. John Lester's Taffy was good indeed; Mr. Edwin Keene was an amusing Sandy; Mr. Frank Stephens as Little Billee won well deserved applause for a capable performance; Mr. Weedon Ross played Gecko effectively; Mr. Douglas C. Phelps, at one time the manager of the Greenwich Theatre for Mr. Arthur Carlton, gave an excellent representation of the Rev Thomas Bagot; Mr. Herbert Morgan was good as Zou-Zou; and the same may be said of Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown as Dodor and Mr. Fred C. Roper as Manager Julian; Miss Louise Gilmore was a capital Mrs. Bagot; and Miss Marjory Tennant an excellent Mme. Vinard; Miss Florence North as Angele and Miss Doris Graham as Mimi were all that could be desired in their respective parts. Mr. Davis-Brown is stage-manager, and Mr. Philip Layton acting-manager for Mr. Abbott, and Mr. Bertram Iles is the popular and courteous resident-acting-manager of the theatre.

SCENE-PAINTERS OF THE PAST.

By GEORGE TWEDDELL.

To the list of distinguished artists who have practised scene-painting should be added the name of Sir E. Landseer and another celebrated animal painter and R.A., the late Sydney Cooper, who was a scene-painter in early life, and received his first instruction from the scene-painter employed at the old Canterbury Theatre, which in after years became his property. The late Wm. Beverly once painted an act-drop for him, in which he inserted the figures and animals. This shows what splendid artists have practised scene-painting, and many more can be added, like Sam Bough, the fine Scotch landscape painter, who worked with Mr. Beverly at the Manchester Theatre Royal; also another great name—the fine Gothic architect, Augustus Welby Pugin, used to assist the celebrated scenic artists, Charles Marshall, W. Telbin, and Greives, at the King's Theatre, in the drawing of architectural subjects. I will close this present article with an extract from the speech of M. Van de Weyer, at the banquet given to Mr. Macready in 1851, as showing how the work of our scene-painters was appreciated fifty-seven years ago :—"No foreigner could visit English theatres without being struck with the extraordinary talent, the real genius, the richness of imagination, the picturesqueness of the colouring, and the beauty of the architecture displayed by the artist in scenic decorations." In this, Sir C. Eastlake, P.R.A., in a speech that followed, quite concurred.

When the greatest of clowns, Grimaldi, appeared in the pantomime of Mother Goose at Covent Garden in 1806 we find the elder Greive painted several of the scenes; in fact, his name appears on old bills at the latter part of the previous century, so the Greives were a connecting link with De Loutherborg. Another very old scene-painter who passed away some thirty years ago was George Danson. He worked for many London theatres, but is most remembered by the gigantic diorama of London by night, which was placed in front of the great panorama of London, commenced by Mr. Horner and executed by Mr. E. T. Parris, at the Colosseum, Regent's Park. Mr. Danson painted extensive outdoor scenes at Vauxhall Gardens, and after at the Belle Vue Gardens at Manchester. At the Colosseum was employed George Chambers, of Whitby, who afterwards became the scene-painter at the old Coborg Theatre, where his work so pleased the King, William IV., that he purchased some of his sketches, and appointed him "Marine-painter to the King." Chambers' pictures are very fine and valuable. Another scene painter, W. L. Leitch, became a fine artist in water-colour, and was, I have heard, instructor to her late Majesty the Queen. His sons were also well known scene-painters.

We must now come to a short notice of two very celebrated scene-painters, Clarkson Stanfield and David Roberts. Both became Royal Academicians, and were employed at Drury Lane and other theatres. Stanfield's greatest work was done for Mr. Macready, and has been often described by abler men, so I can only add a few little things. His fine pictures we all know, but, alas! the ultimate fate of the scene-painter's work—the priming-brush—has no doubt swept away most of his work. I was told by an old scene-painter's labourer a good many years ago he had just primed over a cloth by Stanfield painted for Acis and Galatea, and "how much he regretted having to put out such fine work"; but so it is to "save canvas" in all theatres. The late William Beverly, with whom I have had the pleasure of conversing, and who was acquainted with both David Cox and Stanfield, told me that when they wanted Stanfield to use some modelled round columns in a scene he refused to use them, and said, "Bring them to me flat; it is my business to make them look round." An old scene-painter long passed from us, Mr. Pitt, and who for long was employed by Mr. Beverly at Drury Lane, told me he worked with both Stanfield and Roberts in the old painting-room at "the Lane." I much enjoyed a chat with old Pitt, as he had known many eminent men in his time, as the poet Byron, Charles Dickens, and the celebrated actor Edmund Kean, and that he had once been the Harlequin when Kean was the Clown. The Pitts, in fact, were a very old theatrical family.

David Roberts, like Stanfield, of course has been well written about. Like D. Cox, all these great men have had their lives published. I remember to have seen a cloth by David Roberts at Drury Lane about 1870. The subject was the interior of a room; but it did not strike us as anything very great. Of late years Roberts' pictures have suffered much severe criticism, and are said to want colour. Be that as it may, we all admire his work in black and white, notably his "Holy Land."

I can now come to William Roxby Beverly, a worthy successor to those great men, and as a scene-painter he certainly has had few equals, and undoubtedly few, if any, ever had such a long and vast experience. He was the real beginner of the spectacular splendours of pantomime and the inventor of transformations, which formerly were such an important feature at Drury Lane, and caused many imitations throughout the country, every pantomime winding up with its "trans."

But Mr. Beverly's transformations always possessed a beauty of their own. They were poetic and refined, and also were always in character with the subject of the pantomime. As G. A. Sala remarked, "He came with a pencil peculiarly, matchlessly, and almost magically his own."

But splendid as were Mr. Beverly's pictures of fairyland, unrivalled for colour and poetic fancy, he was equally good in all other kinds of stage scenery. Some of his sets in the Shakespearean productions, the splendid production of Faust in 1865 (with Mr. Phelps as the Spirit of Evil), and many others will live in the memory of those who saw them. Mr. Beverly also was an exhibitor at the Academy, and for some years his large pictures were a feature in the water-colour room, and generally sold for good prices. Mr. Beverly had many pupils, some of them, like William Glover, Charles Brew, James Gates, &c., became well-known scene-painters.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The college concert of Thursday evening, July 2, opened with Schubert's Quartet for Strings, in A minor, played by Miss Goldie Baker, Miss Amy Rydings, Miss Sybil Maturin, and Mr. Cedric Sharpe, the most successful effort of the young performers being in the third movement, Menuetto, allegro. Miss Gladys Moger sang "Lied der Harfenmädchens" (S. von Hausegger) with excellent expression and purity of tone; Miss Moger was also heard in Schubert's "Wohin." Miss Cordelia Montgomery, a Clementi Exhibitioner, gave an interesting piano solo of the old composer's Sonata in C major, Op. 34, No. 1, while Miss Ellen Edwards and Miss E. Muriel Pickup were heard to much advantage in an able performance of Grieg's Sonata for Piano and Violin in G. Schubert's extremely difficult song "Die Allmacht" proved a somewhat too-exacting task for Miss Gwladys Edwards, but the young vocalist won hearty applause and two recalls for her earnest attempt to give the dramatic and devotional spirit required. The other vocalist was Miss Tydfil Brown, who was well received in Marcello's "Quella Fiamma." The last item in the concert was Schumann's Trio for Piano and Strings in D minor, most intelligently performed by Mr. William Conway, Mr. Philip Levine, and Mr. Cedric Sharpe. The accompanists were Miss Ellen Tuckfield and Ioan Powell.

PLAYS AT THE COURT.

The Princess of Wales graciously extended her patronage to the matinée which Miss Granville gave at the Court Theatre on Tuesday, in aid of the funds of the East London Hospital, Shadwell. The institution is one of the most deserving and useful of its kind in London. Situated in a poor and densely-populated part of the East-end, its opportunities for doing good are incalculable. The first trio of the four plays chosen for representation were little tragedies, and it must be confessed that the audience did not have a very cheerful time. The programme opened with the piece in one act, by Rowan Orme, entitled

"THE ANARCHISTS."

Vasilissa .....Miss Esme Beringer
Micholitch Tarhov .....Mr. Godfrey Tearle
The President .....Mr. Charles Vane
Agrafena .....Miss Agnes Hill
Lenotchka .....Miss Dorothy Bell
Markelov .....Mr. Hubert Carter
Ivanoff .....Mr. Charles Gelderd
Teliegin .....Mr. Charles Bruce

In this work we are plunged in the throes of the grim murder revolution in Russia. The scene is a cellar, and in an interview between Vasilissa and her lover, Micholitch Tarhov, we learn that the latter is opposed to reckless assassination. He has his ideals of a new Russia, but he would not wade through blood to reach them. Vasilissa rallies him on his lukewarmness in the cause of the regeneration of the masses, and does not altogether quite believe in the sincerity of his protestations of love. But he swears on the holy cross that he will love her here and hereafter. It is discovered by the brotherhood of the "Red Death," to which both belong, that Micholitch has prevented several "removals," and, when denounced by the president, he owns up. Lots are drawn for the choice of executioner, and the paper with the black cross is drawn by Vasilissa. They are left alone. After a long embrace Tarhov shoots himself, and she follows his example. Miss Vera Beringer touched all hearts by the expression of Vasilissa's distress and despair, and she acted with considerable power. Mr. Godfrey Tearle played with genuine emotion the part of Micholitch Tarhov; Mr. Charles Vane made a stern and dignified President; Miss Agnes Hill was an effective Agrafena; and Mr. Hubert Carter a truculent and revengeful Markelov. The play was carefully produced by Mr. H. de Lange.

The second piece, by Christopher St. John, was a "slice of life" taken from the foreign quarter of New York, the title being

"ON THE EAST SIDE."

Lucia Bandino .....Miss Brineta Browne
John Anthoulis .....Mr. Herbert Grimwood
Henry Green .....Mr. O. P. Heggie
Rosa Anthoulis .....Miss Auriol Lee
George Anthoulis.....Mr. Harcourt Williams
Sandro .....Mr. W. K. Pearce

The family honour is very dear to old John Anthoulis, a Greek refugee, who hates the swiftness and deceit of New York, and longs for the plains of Marathon and the blue skies of his native land. When, therefore, he hears that Henry Green, a raffish young New Yorker, openly boasts of his conquest of the old man's daughter-in-law, Rose Anthoulis, he is filled with indignation, which develops into rage at the seeming indifference of the son, George Anthoulis, to his wife's good name. The old man takes the affair into his own hands, and, confronting Rose with the man who has spoken slightingly of her, takes him by the throat, and demands, with ungovernable fury, that he shall repeat the slander before witnesses. The young wife asserts her innocence, and her statement is confirmed by her traducer. At last the husband is roused, and, seizing the cowering maligner by the throat, he stabs him to death. Mr. Herbert Grimwood gave consistency and strength to a character that might have easily been presented with exaggeration, and his John Anthoulis, the old Greek refugee, was a singularly fine performance. Much the same may be said of the clever delineation by Mr. Harcourt Williams of the difficult rôle of George Anthoulis, the husband; and there was a quiet force in the impersonation of the wife, Rosa Anthoulis, by Miss Auriol Lee, who, like Mr. Harcourt Williams and Mr. O. P. Heggie (who played exceedingly well as Henry Green), were appearing by kind permission of Mr. J. E. Vedrenne. Other parts were effectively handled by Miss Brineta Browne and Mr. W. K. Pearce.

The gloom was even intensified by the representation of a tragedy, in one act, by Rowan Orme, entitled

"THE SENTENCE."

The Judge .....Mr. Hubert Carter
The Woman .....Miss Granville

In the dimly-lit judgment chamber of a secret prison, in the fifteenth century, a woman is being tried by a judge for the assassination of a priest, whom she had stabbed in church in revenge for his betrayal of her husband. The sentence is death by the garrotte, a Spanish instrument of execution. She has one privilege: she is to choose her own time of execution. She prolongs the agony in a second scene, and in the last, realising the futility of life in a dungeon, she takes her place in the chair of death, and the curtain falls. Miss Granville in the much-too-long-drawn-out agony of the woman, physically triumphed over the difficulties of an exhausting part; and Mr. Herbert Carter was a sonorous judge.

The last piece, though lighter, has no dramatic value. It is by Mrs. Tom Godfrey, and bears the title of

"A MODERN DAUGHTER."

Enid Burne .....Miss Dorothy Healy
Dick Burne .....Mr. Hugh B. Tabberer
Claire Chester .....Miss Brineta Browne
Violet Young .....Miss Winifred Clayton
Mrs. Chester .....Miss Frances Wetherall
Jack Longley .....Mr. Geoffrey Douglas

"A modern daughter" is Claire Chester, who, after much earnest persuasion, prevents her mother eloping with a young fool who might be the foolish woman's son. Claire succeeds in convincing the wandering one of the seriousness of her conduct, and the would-be co-respondent is given his congé. Miss Brineta Browne and Miss Frances Wetherall did what was possible with poor material. The programmes were sold by Mrs. Sam Sothern, Miss Kirkham, Miss Madge Kirkham, and Miss Annie Hill.

THE VETERANS' FETE.

The theatrical profession has been very much to the fore during the past week in matters of charity. The most important event in this respect which we are called upon to chronicle in the present issue was the Fête of the Veterans, held in the Old Ranelagh Gardens, Chelsea, and opened on Tuesday afternoon by the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. The grounds could scarcely have looked more beautiful than on this fine July afternoon, as crowds of exquisitely-frocked ladies paraded up and down the avenues formed by the rows of stalls.

The Fête Committee, at the head of which was Mr. Joseph Lyons as director-general, was a particularly influential one, and included Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Sir Edward Moss, Mr. Frederick Harrison, Mr. Alfred Butt, Mr. Neil Forsyth, Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Seymour Hicks, Mr. Harry Hitchins, Mr. Alfred Moul, Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. Hugh Astley, and Mr. John Gatti. Mr. George Alexander served on the County Sale Committee, the honorary organiser of which was Mr. J. S. Wood and the chairman Lord Arthur Hill.

One of the chief items in the programme of entertainments was furnished by Mr. Cyril Maude and his company from the Playhouse in the entertaining one-act comedy French As He Is Spoke, which was presented in the Veterans' Theatre. Why the tent in which the piece was played was so named can be merely conjectured from the fact that Mr. Alfred Turner, who managed the show, cried out, in order, we suppose, to induce custom, that no actors under ninety years of age would appear. In the principal character of Peter Mr. Cyril Maude was exceedingly amusing, his facial expressions being particularly mirth-provoking. Mr. Daniel McCarthy gave a capital portraiture of the irritated French father, Monsieur Villiers, and Mr. Ernest Mainwaring was lively and interesting in the part of Charlie Lingard; while that of the latter's sweetheart (Rosine) was charmingly acted by Miss Madge Titheradge. Mr. John Harwood as an inspector of police, Mr. H. G. Onslow as a waiter, Miss Emma Chambers as the hotel manageress, and Mr. C. B. Keston as a policeman rendered able support in their individual capacities.

In Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore's one-act comedy, The Fatal Stockings, also played in the Veterans' Theatre, Miss Elaine Inescort appeared to advantage as Mrs. Desmond Crowford, and Mr. Holmes-Gore submitted an excellent interpretation of the part of the pierrot. Miss Inescort also recited in thrilling fashion a poem, by the Poet Laureate, appropriate to the occasion, a couple of verses of which are as follow:—

Behold where in the gutter he doth stand,
A box of matches in his feeble hand.
Yet that same hand once clutched a sabre keen,
Brandished aloft where its cold, speckless sheen
Caught the pale light from foemen's deadly fire,
And many a rider rolled into the mire
At Balaclava.

Then, proud Britannia, thou whose regal sway,
Imperial Rome had envied in her day,
Take these thine aged warriors to thy breast;
Thou gav'st them laurels once, now give them rest.
Recall from streets, and from the workhouse, too,
And tend them whilst thou may'st—it is their due
For Balaclava.

Others whose names appeared in connection with the Veterans' Theatre were Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. W. Louis Bradfield, Mr. Nelson Jackson, Mr. Alfred Lester, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Lauri de Frece, Mr. Lennox Pawle, Mr. Frederick Ross, Mr. Leonard Mackay, Miss Ada Reeve, Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Fanny Ward, Miss Nancy Price, Miss Evie Green, Miss Alice Crawford, Miss Jean Aylwin, Miss Gladys Marsden, Miss Marie Illington, Miss Florence Smithson, Miss Doris Dean, and Miss Florence Rooke. The following ladies kindly consented to assist in the sale of tickets and programmes: Miss Irene Desmond, Miss Gladys Desmond, Miss Mabel Munro, Miss Marian Munro, Miss Lily Mills, Miss Hazel Tharsing, Miss Lucie Caine, Miss Dorothy Monkman, Miss Phyllis Monkman, Miss Olive Cherry, Miss Una Hamilton, Miss Hamilton, and Mrs. Alfred Turner.

Just opposite to the Veterans' Theatre was the space of ground set apart for Miss Maud Allan's dances, that clever lady appearing by kind permission of Mr. Alfred Butt and the directors of the Palace Theatre, and accompanied by the orchestra of that establishment under the direction of Mr. Hermann Finck. It was quite a pretty spectacle—this graceful Terpsichorean act in a sylvan glade in the open air—and Miss Allan, who performed with bare feet, seemed to enjoy the freshness of the green sward as she lightly tripped upon it. It is scarcely necessary to add that her exhibition of classic and artistic dancing proved a source of delight to the spectators.

The El Dorado Palace, which was under the able direction of Mr. Fred Trussell, the manager of the London Hippodrome, was also well patronised. Here Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Hal Forde, Mr. John Le Hay, Mr. F. J. Arlton, Mr. Alfred Lester, and Mr. Ben Nathan acted as Richardson's Showmen and Assistant Managers; while Mr. William Trussell, manager of the Palace Theatre, Southampton, presided at the piano. An attractive programme was furnished by Mr. George Robey, Harry Fragson, Master Max Darewski, Mr. Morris Harvey, Miss Madge Temple, Miss Evie Greene, Mrs. Lewis Waller, Mendel, George Mozart, Marie Loftus, Helen Trix, Dr. Byrd Page, Sadie Jerome, Douglas Beaufort, Miss Italia Conti, Frederick Ross, Leonard Mackay, Miss Dora Deveen, Miss Doris Faithfull, John Macauley, Osmond Hope, Edwin Barwick, Miss Marie Dainton, Messrs. Guyer and Crispi, Alec Hurley, T. E. Dunville, Tambo and Tambo, the Imperial Russian Dancers, Nancy Price, and Paulo and Troupe in "The Frattelini's Harlequinade." Tickets, &c., were sold by the Misses Vinnie Kingston, Patton, Glendolin Hay, Stella St. Austin, Mabel Dark, Dorothy Ward, Poppy Cannon, Gladys Carrington, Lily Raymond, Marie Desmond, Vere Sinclair, Rose Gee, and Mrs. Fred Trussell. The scenery and exterior had been specially painted by Mr. Bruce Smith.

Charming performances of the pastoral play The Pied Piper of Hamelin were given from time to time by members of the Junior Stage Society, Miss Elizabeth Jones directing the production and appearing as the Piper.

Pretty and daintily-attired ladies, many of them members of the theatrical profession, were to be seen fulfilling various useful offices. For instance, one refreshment tent was presided over by Miss Marie Tempest and Miss Marie Lohr, assisted by the Misses Jean Aylwin, Gertie Millar, Coralie Blythe, Muriel Beaumont, and Evie Greene; another one under the direction of Miss Adrienne Augarde, assisted by the Misses Dorothy Thomas, Alice Hatton, Hilda Antony, Pamela Gaythorne, Alice Crawford, and Fely Dereyne.

The Gaiety chocolate stall was in charge of Miss Olive May (of the Gaiety Theatre), assisted by the Misses Gertie May, Marie Mitchell, Kitty Mason, Phyllis Barker, Gertrude Wykes, Adelina Balfe, Mabel Love, Berenice Maxwell, Lena Leibrandt, Ruth Argent, Mabel Russell, Iris Hoey, Gertrude Thornton, Gloria Warren, and Olive Wade; while another chocolate stall was looked after by Miss Phyllis Dare, assisted by the Misses Zena Dare, Blanche Stocker, Doris Stocker, Doris Keyser, Elizabeth Firth, Nellie Hobson, and May Hobson.

A champagne and sandwich tent was in the hands of Miss Eva Moore, assisted by the Misses Decima Moore, Bertha Moore, Jessie Moore, Evelyn Millard, Phyllis Broughton, Fortescue, Julie Opp, Kitty Worth, Nancy Malone, Abbie Scholtz, Helen Ferrers, Dorothy Minto, C. Granville, Sheldon, Maxine Elliott, Elaine Inescort, Marjorie Huth, Marion Terry, Amy Brandon Thomas, Palfrey, May Whitty, and Mabel Hackney. Another champagne and sandwich tent was attended to by Miss Ethel Matthews, assisted by the Misses Lilian Burns, Thelma Raye, Rosalie Toller, Nell Toller, Sybil Arundale, Grace Arundale, Madge Titheradge, and Vera Coburn, and Mrs. R. Hill.

The fête was continued on Wednesday, when it was opened by Lord Roberts, and on Thursday, when Sir George White performed the opening ceremony. On the latter day Mr. Brandon Thomas gave a performance of his play, in one act, The Colour-Sergeant, which he wrote for the late Mr. Wilson Barrett. Mr. Thomas gave an admirable portrayal of the part of William Honour, late a colour-sergeant and in the piece a barber, and he received excellent support from Mr. Hastings Lynn in the rôle of the younger Honour, Mr. Basil Lynton as the photographer, Mr. R. Byford as the bargee, Miss Evelyn Grey as "Tucker's boy," and Miss Grace Russell as Nelly, the orphan adopted by the kind-hearted colour-sergeant. The production of the little piece was highly appreciated by the audience.

The labours of Mr. Willie Clarkson in connection with the fête should not be overlooked, for the worthy perruquier of Wardour-street had put forth a special effort in the matter of many of the costumes and dresses, and some of the old soldiers who strolled about the gardens—most of them leaning heavily on sticks, if not on crutches—had been dressed by Mr. Clarkson in the uniforms of their old regiments as they appeared half a century ago. The face of every man of them seared by age or marked by the toils of war, they presented a spectacle which was impressive, if not pathetic.

MR. ALBERT WARD.

THE PRODIGAL SON AND STAGE-MANAGER, MR. GEORGE D. DAY'S CO.

Mr. Albert Ward is a finished actor, with a fine presence and elocutionary powers, such as one nowadays rarely meets with on the stage.—The People, Feb. 1, 1903.

The diction of Mr. Albert Ward is admirable. His voice sounds like a bell. His every word is of perfect coinage. Even the long breath speeches of melodrama become poetic on his lips. Mr. Benson might have trained him. He will make his mark in Shakespeare.—J. T. Grein, Esq., the famous critic, Sept. 15, 1903.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, July 1.—A musical version of Mrs. Pacheco's farce, Incog., entitled The Three Twins, has made a decided hit at the Herald-square Theatre, and will remain there throughout the summer. The piece deals with the familiar theme of confused identities. The lyrics are by O. A. Hauerbach, and the music by Carl Hoschna. Miss Bessie McCoy, a clever dancer, and Mr. Clifton Crawford, whose monologue provokes much merriment, are at the head of the company.

"Ski-Hi," a musical comedy, by Charles Alphin, is the summer attraction at the Madison-square Roof Garden. The scenes are laid on a mythical planet, reached by balloons, and much of the fun is created by the exchange of "undesirable citizens" between the earth and other planets.

A tabloid version of Hamlet is being performed at Keith and Proctor's 125th-street Theatre, by Paul McAllister and his company. Among the other entertainers at this house are Laddie Cliff, Fred Niblo, and the Military Octet. Mr. Cliff, who hails from "the old country," has firmly established himself in popularity at the American vaudeville houses.

Miss Gertrude Hoffman, who imitates prominent stage favourites in an exceedingly clever and diverting manner, is the "head liner" at Hammerstein's Roof Garden. Other attractions are "Colonel Fred," a trained horse; Gus Edwards's School Boys and Girls, in songs and dances; Rice and Prevost, comedy acrobats; Julian Eltinge, female impersonator; Bedini and Arthur, comedy jugglers; Horace Goldin, the conjurer; Collins and Hart, comedy acrobats; and the Five Musical Avolos.

Over one hundred delegates of the Comité Republicaine du Commerce et de l'Industrie de France visited the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court, on Wednesday. They were received at the Warwick-road entrance by Mr. P. Cremieu-Javal, chairman, and the directors of the London Exhibitions, Ltd. After inspecting the educational, agricultural, commercial, industrial, and art sections of the exhibition the party were the guests of the City of London International Commercial Association, of which Lord Strathcona is President, at a banquet in the Quadrant Restaurant in the Western Gardens. Lord Maitland was in the chair, and among the many distinguished personages present were Senator and Mlle. Mascuraud, Senator and Mme. Chouillier, Sir Albert Rollit, Sir T. Barclay, Sir R. and Lady Parkington, Sir T. Brooke-Hitching, Kt., Sir H. Kimber, Bart., M.P., Deputy Casparin, Viscount de la Chapelle, Dr. Salva, and Consul Spierway. In the brief speeches at the dinner a triangular entente cordiale was mutually expressed between the three nations of France, Hungary, and England.

PLAYS IN THE GLADE.

When in their full summer-tide glory, the Botanic Gardens form an ideal rendezvous for the plays of the glade, and a pretty knoll surrounded by trees was chosen by Mr. Patrick Kirwan for his opening on Monday evening of a series of productions of Shakespeare that lend themselves to what may be called pastoral treatment. Previous to the performance of The Tempest on the evening in question, there was an interesting revival of Samuel Daniel's masque of The Vision of the Twelve Virgin Goddesses, which was presented at Hampton Court, Jan. 8, 1604, Queen Anne of Denmark and the ladies of her Court playing in it for the delectation of King James I. Daniel possessed in no eminent degree dramatic gifts, as Professor A. W. Ward points out in his "English Dramatic Literature," but apart from the prominent position which he occupied as a masque writer, and the jealousy which he provoked in consequence, his two attempts in tragedy, Cleopatra and Philotas, have secured for him a place of his own in our dramatic literature. As a mark of Royal favour he was appointed licenser of the plays performed by the children of the Queen's Revels at Bristol, in the neighbourhood of which city he was residing; and he was subsequently named Gentleman of the Queen's Privy Chamber. Daniel left a more enduring mark upon the growth of a secondary branch of our dramatic literature in his two pastoral tragi-comedies, The Queene's Arcadia and Hymen's Triumph, the latter being performed in 1614. This has been extolled as adorned by Daniel's most distinctive graces of diction, viz., a purity and manliness to be found in hardly any other Elizabethan writer, and an exquisite simplicity of style.

The scenario of Daniel's masque is briefly set forth in the following synopsis:—Night descends, and, awakening Sleep, orders a vision. Sleep, having received the message, disappears, and Iris comes as the messenger of the Goddesses and gives a scroll to the Sybil, from which she reads a description of the Goddesses as they enter. While the Goddesses give their offerings to the Sybil, the three Graces sing. Then there is a dance of Goddesses and Lords after a short speech from the Sybil, and, after a final dance, the masque ends. The characters of the Goddesses were gracefully presented by members of the Shakespeare Reading Society, of which Miss Mary Darton was the founder, and of which the president is Mr. Beerbohm Tree. The dresses in the masque were made according to the original descriptions, as given by Samuel Daniel. The valley echoed with the ring of sweet voices in the music, and the nymphs that dwelt temporarily in the grove "left their arbours, and footed it like fairies on the grass."

Then followed the performance of The Tempest, preceded by a blast on trumpets by two quaintly-dressed musicians. The following is the cast:—

Alonzo .....Mr. Rathmell Wilson
Sebastian .....Mr. J. M. Napper
Prospero .....Mr. Reginald Maurice
Antonio .....Mr. Poole Kirkwood
Ferdinand .....Mr. Gerald Venning
Gonzalo .....Mr. John Troughton
Adrian .....Mr. Louis Palgrave
Caliban .....Mr. Patrick Kirwan
Trinculo .....Mr. Field-Fisher
Stephano .....Mr. Harold Chapin
Miranda .....Miss Lydia Hayward
Ariel .....Miss Barbara Guthrie
Iris .....Miss Eveleen Mills
Ceres .....Miss Violet Bazalgette
Juno .....Miss Ethel Perceval

Mr. Patrick Kirwan's Caliban showed throughout that he had carefully studied the text, and the extremely difficult task of suggesting the mere animalism and brutish nature of the character was successfully surmounted. The make-up was according to the best traditions, and the scene wherein Caliban grovels to the powerful and gifted Prospero may be selected as one of the best-played in the whole representation. Mr. Reginald Maurice showed intelligence as Prospero; and to the scene of the conspiracy between Sebastian and Antonio full significance was given by Mr. J. M. Napper in the former part and by Mr. Poole Kirkwood in the latter. Miss Lydia Hayward made a sweet and maidenly Miranda; and Mr. Gerald Venning, an uncommonly tall Ferdinand, realised the dignified devotion of the lover in the first interview with the maiden untutored in the ways of coquetry. The humours of Trinculo and Stephano preserved their Shakespearean character in the keeping of Mr. Field-Fisher and Mr. Harold Chapin. Miss Barbara Guthrie as Ariel had an airy grace; and the representatives of Iris, Ceres, and Juno (Miss Eveleen Mills, Miss Violet Bazalgette, and Miss Ethel Perceval) gave considerable charm to those characters. Mr. Rathmell Wilson, a capable Alonzo, Mr. John Troughton, a competent Gonzalo, and Mr. Louis Palgrave an adequate Adrian, completed the cast.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

At the New Brighton Winter Gardens this week Mr. John Ridding and company have produced Maritana, Faust, The Bohemian Girl, Daughter of the Regiment, Il Trovatore, and The Lily of Killarney. There are no less than eleven artists, comprising Miss Sarah Williams, Miss Marion Stanley, Miss Vera Vizard, Miss Grace Parrish, Mr. John Ridding, Mr. Edward Arthur, Mr. E. Ditchfield, Mr. Frank Clarke, Mr. G. Humphrey, Mr. Ernest Carter and Mr. G. H. Ridding. Each opera has been most enthusiastically received.

"'The Follies of 1908,' recently produced by Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld, jun., at the Jardin de Paris, otherwise known as the roof garden of the New York Theatre," says our correspondent, "is a very attractive entertainment, being a musical revue in two acts and twelve scenes, by Harry B. Smith and Maurice Levi. There is no 'plot,' the performance consisting of what are known as 'specialities,' scenic and electric effects, humour at the expense of prominent personages, and the evolutions of a number of handsomely-gowned 'show girls.' Among the scenes may be observed such places of general interest as the Garden of Eden, the Pennsylvania Railway Tunnel, the upper deck of the steamship 'Lusitania,' the Capitol at Washington, and the New York Yacht Club. The persons and events satirised in the entertainment comprise nearly everybody of local importance, and almost everything of national interest that has appeared in the newspapers during the last twelve months."

Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant inform us that St. George's Hall will be closed after to-night, and will be re-opened on Bank Holiday, Aug. 3, with a programme of new and startling mysteries.

Always Refreshing.—Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman's "INCOMPARABLE SMELLING SALTS." A delightful adjunct to the toilet, invaluable for the Theatre, Ball, Concert, or any heated Assembly. Of great use in the Sick Room. Insist upon having Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman's, which is the original. Sold by chemists and stores, 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., or post free for stamps from Osborne, Bauer, and Cheeseman, 19, Golden-square, Regent-street, London, W.—[Advt.]

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, Thursday, July 9.—I have several times had occasion to refer in these columns to the cinematograph shows and to their unfair competition in regard to other entertainments. It seemed indeed strange that these shows sprang out of the ground all over the country, reproducing in cinematographs operas and plays without the payment of any percentage of the receipts to the authors or their representatives. At last, however, the worms have turned, and as these worms formed a compact body, including the heirs of the late Charles Gounod, MM. Courteline, Pierre Wolff, Victor de Cottens, Xanrof, Paul Gavault, and many other prominent men, they brought their grievances before one of our tribunals. They certainly had a good case, and the poor cinematograph had rather a mauvais quart d'heure. For all that, the latter made a plucky fight, and tried to prove to the gentlemen on the Bench that no royalty could be claimed on words spoken or songs sung by invisible artists. Moreover, the hot weather favoured the defendants. The temperature in the Justice Hall was very high. The judges looked drowsy, and if they had fallen asleep there is no telling what judgment they would have given on waking from their slumber. No wonder defendants' counsel watched them intently and always addressed them in tones that sounded like a lullaby. But if the worthy gentlemen on the Bench kept their eyes shut they were terribly awake all the time, as the defendants soon found out to their cost. They decided that unauthorised productions of operas, dramas, comedies, and pantomimes by means of the cinematograph constitute direct infringements of the authors' rights. The tribunal, therefore, declared such cinematographic reproductions to constitute illegal performances, and ordered all such films, wherever found, to be impounded and destroyed. This judgment renders cinematograph films or bands reproducing scenes from well-known operas or plays equivalent to printed copies of the music or words of duly copyrighted operas or plays.

Another lawsuit, but of less importance, was brought by M. Aristide Bruant, the well known Montmartre chansonnier, against Alexandre Leclerc for "disloyal competition." The word "disloyal" was not a whit too strong. M. Aristide Bruant is by no means a Montmartre genius. Unlike Fursy and other witty artists, he is not able to write songs that become famous. But he invented an extraordinary costume, and never showed himself in public otherwise than in a flaming red shirt, velvet jacket, large cowboy hat, corduroy trousers of enormous width, and what may be described as short sea-boots. A red woollen scarf twisted round the neck, and worn summer and winter, completes this costume, which made him famous. His artistic cabaret was always well patronised, and he, therefore, was most indignant when this M. Leclerc opened a rival establishment, called himself "Le Bruyant Alexandre," and even copied M. Aristide Bruant's costume. When the case came on for hearing the defendant failed to put in an appearance, because, according to him the Commercial Tribunal had no power to try the action. The Court, however, took a different view, and awarded M. Bruant £80 damages, also forbidding the defendant to copy the plaintiff in the matter of dress or describe himself as "Bruyant," under a penalty of £2 for each time he did so.

One of our confrères a few days ago informed us gravely that Mme. Calvé's name was Roquer, and that Delna was but the pseudonym for Mlle. Ledant. He might, if he had liked, have given his readers a good deal more information, considering that few artists on the regular and music hall stage are known by their family name. The list of pseudonyms is indeed a long one, and here are a few of the principal ones:—Mlle. Brandès is called Brunschwig; M. Alvarez, Gourron; M. Baron, Bouchène; Mlle. Bartet, Jeanne-Julia Regnault; Mlle. Cassive, Louise-Armandine Duval; Mlle. Cheirel, Lericho; M. Chelles, Lechien; M. Colombey, Tardiveau; Mlle. Marguerite Deval, Brulfer de Valcourt; M. Dorival, Lemarchand; Mlle. Dudlay, Dulait; Mlle. Dulac, Latrilhe; Mme. Jane Hading, Jeannette Hadingue; Mlle. Hatto, Frère; M. Lamy, Castarède; Mme. Landouzy, Besville; Mlle. Leconte, Lacombe; Mlle. Lender, Bastion; M. Lugné-Poë, Lugné; Mme. Marlé de l'Isle, Beugnon; Mlle. Méaly, Josserand; Mlle. Mégard, Chamonal; Mme. Réjane, Gabrielle-Charlotte Réju; Mme. Rose Caron, Meuniez. On the music hall stage we have:—M. Polin, Marsalès; M. Sulbac, Sultzbach; M. Claudius, Jouel de Lancidals; M. Dranem, Ménard, &c., &c.

The Comédie-Française promises us many novelties for the coming season. After La Furie we will have Le Foyer—the cause of so much trouble—which will be put into rehearsal the moment M. de Féraudy is back in Paris. This will be followed by M. Hervieu's Connais-toi, and immediately afterwards by Le Goût du Vice, by M. Lavedan, and Le Pourpre, by M. Henry Bernstein. M. Maurice Donnay is finishing a comedy called Armande; and M. Pierre Wolff's new venture will bear the title L'Homme qui passe. Towards the end of the season the Comédie-Française will also launch a four-act play, called Primerose, by MM. Robert de Flers and de Caillavet.

Contrary to what was announced some time ago, the Gymnase will not inaugurate its season with a revival of Le Détour, with Mme. Simone in the rôle she created. Mme. Simone says she has other engagements that prevent her from appearing in Bernstein's play, and author and manager have been compelled to accept this excuse.

A small playhouse, noted for the blood-curdling pieces performed there, has received a work wherein we are promised an execution so true to life that the audience will see the head of the condemned man fall into the basket of the guillotine. It is not probable that the work will ever see the footlights, for the manager of the before-mentioned house has received a letter threatening him with an unpleasant demonstration if he goes too far in his attempts to please the degenerate and hysterical portion of the Paris public.

"THE DRAMA."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The lament upon the decadence of the modern theatre proceeds apace, but has it ever occurred to the pessimist that, until he makes up his official mind as to the fare he actually requires, the theatre will continue to bore him. Perhaps it should be for the manager himself to prescribe on former remedies—as in the case of The Flag Lieutenant—for it certainly does seem a fact that, as sure as a stage provider goes back ten or twenty years and gives a sound but entirely fresh resurrection, the bait is taken immediately, by the very person who has set himself to grumble at the want of fresh ideas and impossible allegories. Good wholesome drama, well played, was always a sure success, and certainly the backbone of the theatre revenue until ten years ago, when the advent of chatter set to cynicism became the fashion, and the golden bridge cut away by a trend of modern thought which listened to a flattering tale of improvement. One could continue for a whole year upon this discussion, but to my poor reasoning the best policy that the modern manager can follow is to go back twenty years in the choice of his plays and the same number forward in the appointment and comfort of his theatre, keeping a watchful eye upon the pockets of an over-taxed public, and a wise discrimination in the prices of admission.—Your faithful servant,

HERBERT SHELLEY.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham will shortly bring the run of The Mollusc at the Criterion to an end, and will appear at the New Theatre in September in a new play with a strong part for himself. In this piece, unfortunately, there is no rôle worthy of Miss Mary Moore, who will remain at the Criterion, where she will produce a new modern comedy by Mr. Hubert Henry Davies, with a longer cast than that of the play which has been so successful at the Criterion.

"The Mollusc" has had a remarkable career. With only four parts, and not relying on scenery for support, it has been a striking success. This may be attributed to the fact that the public can always enjoy a comedy of quiet life that comes home to them if it be really humorous. The difficulty is that this kind of play requires perfect acting, and artists like Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Moore are becoming rarer every day. All playgoers will regret that yet another piece with parts for them both could not be secured.

Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, Sir Charles and Lady Wyndham, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, Miss Maud Allan, Miss Maxine Elliott, Miss Mary Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude and Miss Maude, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Terry were present at Lord and Lady Michelham's garden party at Strawberry Hill on Saturday last, to meet Mr. Balfour and other vice-presidents of the London Municipal Society.

Mr. George Alexander, who filled the difficult position of examiner of the competitors for Mr. J. M. Barrie's prize of £5 at the Academy of Dramatic Art on Thursday, awarded the prize to Miss Athene Seyler, whose performance as Fay Giuliani is an extract from The Princess and the Butterfly we praised so highly after the recent matinée at the Playhouse. Mr. Alexander is an excellent judge, and Miss Seyler has probably a fine future before her.

Mr. Seymour Hicks has the sympathy of everyone in his most annoying and painful position. His yachting cruise has had perforce to be abandoned, and the tedium of recovery to a man of his active temperament must be intolerable. If anything could facilitate it, it would be a sojourn at the country house at Kingsbridge which he has taken for the summer. Kingsbridge is a charming old-fashioned village in South Devon, near Bolt Head, Slapton Lea, and other interesting places.

Miss Isadora Duncan, whose dancing has made such a sensation at the Duke of York's Theatre, first attracted attention eight years ago. Her performances were given more or less in private on several occasions at the New Gallery. The tickets cost a guinea, the entertainment began at ten o'clock, distinguished persons preluding Miss Duncan's performances with addresses on the subject of dancing. On one occasion, when she gave a "Botticelli evening," Sir William Richmond spoke, on another, when she embodied music, Sir Hubert Parry orated. In consequence of the success of Miss Duncan's dances Mr. Charles Frohman has made arrangements whereby she will continue her season under his management in London. An entire change of programme will be given each evening.

Sir W. S. Gilbert, who is always ready to fulfil his duties as the Squire of Grim's Dyke, and who acted as judge for the Limerick competition at the fête in aid of the Teddington Cottage Hospital, in the grounds of "The Grove," Teddington, the other day, will publish his version of H.M.S. Pinafore in narrative form early in October. Sir William, who will be sixty-two in November, is the very picture of a hale and hearty country gentleman.

Mr. Lewis Waller and Mr. Tom B. Davis will produce at the Lyric Theatre in the autumn a new version by Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy of the famous old drama, The Duke's Motto. Mr. Waller will also appear as Hotspur in Henry IV. for a short run, and will give an original version of Prince Hal in Henry V. Mr. John Brougham's adaptation of Le Bossu, which was first presented at the Porte St. Martin, Paris, in the September of 1862, was produced at the Lyceum on Jan. 10, 1863, with Fechter, Miss Carlotta Leclercq, George Vining, H. Widdicombe, and the adapter in the cast. The success of the Brougham version led to the preparation of another entitled Blanche de Nevers, which was done at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on the Easter Monday of the same year, with Mr. Henry Irving as the villainous Gonzagues. The part of Lagardère ought to suit Mr. Waller exactly.

Mr. Waller has forwarded to the Secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, a further batch of postal orders to the amount of £9 5s. 9d., Sir John Hare sends £1, and Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, and Miss Mary Moore forward to the fund the postal orders as they receive them in exchange for their autographs.

The Queen has taken a box for the special matinée at the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday in aid of King's College Hospital Removal Fund, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will bring a party of six. Sir W. S. Gilbert will appear on the stage in Rosencranz and Guildenstern, Captain Marshall will play Hamlet, and in the cast will also be Miss Marion Terry, Mr. Nigel Playfair, Mr. James Hearn, Mr. A. E. Benedict, Mr. G. Skillbeck, Mrs. Nigel Playfair, and Miss Rosalie Toller. Miss Maud Allan will dance and Mr. Huntley Wright, Mr. Martin Harvey, Miss de Silva, Miss Mary Rorké, Mr. Cyril Maude and company, Miss Marie Tempest, Mr. Graham Browne, Mr. Henry Ainley, Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, Miss Ethel Beavans, Mr. Franklyn Clive, Mr. William Devereux, Miss Winifred Emery, Mr. and Mrs. Matheson Lang, Miss Ada Reeve, Mr. Yorke Stephens, and Miss Lottie Venne will contribute to the programme, an item of which will be a new play called A Matter-of-Fact Husband.

Mr. Ernest Carpenter, after the arduous work connected with six productions at the Lyceum, has been seeking rest and change at Chamounix. Writing home on Wednesday last, he said, "I am here at the foot of Mont Blanc, having motored right through the centre of France from Boulogne, across the mountain passes, 5,000ft. high, into Geneva, and on here. We hope to reach London next Sunday. It has been a glorious tour through the most wonderful scenery."

The Academy of Dramatic Art has arranged two invitation matinées at the Rehearsal Theatre for Monday and Friday. Selections from The Manœuvres of Jane and The Liars will be given, and Penelope's Lovers, a new one-act play, by Mr. George P. Bancroft will be performed. On the latter occasion, with Mr. Pinero's permission, the fourth act of The Princess and the Butterfly will be presented, with Miss Athene Seyler as Fay Zuliani, a performance which recently gained her the gold medal and free tuition of the Academy. Other features will be Mr. Frederick Fenn's charming play Op-o'-me-Thumb, performed without tuition so as to test the students' creative capacity, and a demonstration of the Delsarte system of the art of expression, as taught in the school, showing how "stage falls" can be done without violence. The academic term ends on Monday week with Shakespearean selections on the school stage in Gower-street.

Mr. George Alexander, in an interesting chat with a Daily Express man, says:—"I am no believer," he said, "in theatrical 'booms' and 'slumps.' The past season has been vilified as something unusually demoralising. The public, we are told, is staying away from the theatres. This is not my experience. The pieces the public wished to see have all done exceedingly well. If authors and managers do not provide such pieces the public is not to blame. There is no habit to go to the play in one year and to avoid it in another. It all depends on the plays.

"Each theatre is individual to itself. A manager is like the director of an orchestra. He gives sometimes one tune and sometimes another. But the manager is not always ignorant when he does not play the tune to which the bank balance dances. He may be doing his best work even then. I know that when the St. James's Theatre is not crowded it is because there is something in the piece which does not attract the larger public. But, while the public is the best judge of what is attractive, that play may still be a fine piece of artistic work, and I may be very proud to have produced it and to be playing in it.

"The serious playgoers are represented by about one-eighth of the general playgoers and the other seven-eighths want only frivolous entertainments. I wish I could afford always to cater for the saints."

The theatrical entente cordiale between London and Paris, of which there are so many and such pleasant signs to-day, existed in 1845, when Macready paid a visit to Paris. In his diary for Jan. 19 of that year he says:—"Called on M. Leduc. . . . He gave me a very cordial reception; told me of the unanimity of the literary men in Paris on my acting; gave me George Sands' address. Quite the entente cordiale."

Mr. Charles Frohman will, early in the autumn, present Mr. G. P. Huntley and his own company in a new musical play at the Hicks Theatre after the end of the run of A Waltz Dream.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Irving's present to Mr. Frederick Barrington Ward and Miss Molly Smith (daughter of Mr. A. C. Smith, of Balliol College, Oxford), who were married at the Church of St. Cross, Holywell, Oxford, was a handsome dinner service. Little Miss Elizabeth Irving was one of the train-bearers. Mr. Irving is a New College man, a B.A. and an M.A., and took a second class in the Honour School of Modern History. He was called to the Bar in 1894.

Miss Amy Rogerson, who died at Brixton on Monday, was born in 1867. She expired after a short illness, leaving a husband and three children, a mother, and a brother. The funeral took place at Norwood Cemetery on Wednesday. She was the granddaughter of the late James Rogerson, a member in 1863 of the Drury-lane stock company, and was daughter of the late Whit Rogerson and Jessie St. Clair, a sister of Mr. Harry Rogerson, and wife of J. H. Booth, now appearing in Australia. Miss Rogerson made her first appearance in one of the late Charles Sullivan's productions, and also fulfilled engagements with the Milton Rays, Mr. Fred Warden, Mr. Arthur Jefferson, Mr. J. Pitt Hardacre, Hardie and Von Leer, Mr. W. D. Forsdike, Mr. Fred Karno, the Leopolds, and others. Amongst the parts sustained by her were those of Julia Latimer in The Old Love and the New, Haidee in Darry the Dauntless, Dot Linwood in Daybreak, Peggy in Black Diamonds, Daisy in Royal, the Scout, Maria in The Bootblack, Minnie Zerio in Jacko, Polly Phillpotts in Rich and Poor of London, Jane Adelaide in A Path of Thorns, Pattie in A Beautiful Fiend. She also played in Queen of Hearts, His Majesty's Guests, The Dandy Thieves, and Saturday to Monday.

The Hon. Mrs. Cecil Edwardes, who is sister-in-law to Lord Kensington, will next week make her first appearance at Covent Garden as Marguerite under the nom de théâtre of Mme. Edwina. Mrs. Edwardes is the daughter of Mr. F. Martin, of Vancouver, British Columbia, and was married to the Hon. Cecil Edwardes, the elder of Lord Kensington's two brothers, in 1901. She has studied singing and acting under the direction of M. Jean de Reszke.

Mr. Lyn Harding, in conjunction with Mr. Sidney Cooper, will, by arrangement with Mr. Cyril Maude, send The Flag Lieutenant on tour in the autumn, with the exception of those towns which Mr. Maude proposes visiting with his own company. Mr. Harding will not be able to appear in the piece on tour, as he is engaged for a part in a West-end production in September.

Mr. Charles M. Bestic's company, in the new musical comedy, The Flower Girl, is everywhere prosperous. So great was its success at Edinburgh that Messrs. Howard and Wyndham have offered dates for the coming autumn, and Mr. J. F. Graham, after seeing the piece, booked it for the Prince of Wales Theatre, Birmingham.

On July 8, 1908, at the Grammar School Hall, Dedham, Essex, was presented for copyright purposes a new and original play in four acts, by Herbert Chorley, entitled The Undercurrent.

Mr. C. St. John Denton, who has just returned from Australia, has arranged on behalf of Messrs. Denton Bode and McKenzie, Ltd., to produce a Cinderella pantomime in conjunction with Messrs. Meynell and Gunn on a magnificent scale at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne. In addition to the company they already have out there, a principal boy and other artists will be imported from England. Mr. Denton speaks very highly of Australia, and says the Cornstalks are the keenest judges and form the best audiences he has ever met.

The modern Greek play, to be entitled The Duchess of Athens, to which we referred a few months ago as the joint work of Dr. Constantine Pouptis and Mr. Alexander Clark, M.A., is rapidly approaching completion, and the authors look forward to its production in a West End theatre in the near future. The subject matter of the piece will be quite different from anything that has been seen in London for a great many years.

Miss Doris Gilham, who to-night concludes a year's engagement under the management of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow, has been engaged by Mr. Wentworth Croke for the part of Glory Quayle in the new version of the The Christian.

Mr. George Alexander has accepted a one-act play by Mr. Walter Frith called The Miniature, and will play the leading part in it on tour in front of The Thief. Mr. Frith, who is the son of the famous R.A. and painter of "The Derby Day," is the author of at least a dozen plays, amongst which The Man of Forty, produced at the St. James's in 1900, and Her Advocate, done at the Duke of York's in 1895, are, perhaps, the most remembered.

Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., who honoured Mrs. Brereton Douglas by calling at her new quarters in Bond-street on the occasion of her recent "At Home," has presented her with a copy of his book, lately finished, entitled "Queen Victoria, as I Knew Her," to which Sir Theodore has added his autograph, the date, and the name of the recipient.

At the weekly committee meeting of the Actors' Union the following were present:—Messrs. Child (chairman), Lindley, J. W. Braithwaite, Royce Milton, George P. Lester, A. Maitland Stapley, Doré Lewin Mannering, Henry Bedford, J. Hastings Batson, and Harry C. Momber.

Mr. Milton proposed, and Mr. Bruce Lindley seconded, that a letter from a committeeman in the provinces should count as an attendance at the committee meeting for the week in which it is received. The motion was carried unanimously. The secretary was instructed to convey to the relatives of the late Dr. J. K. Fell an expression of sympathy from the committee on their sad bereavement. Mr. H. Hesslegrave was appointed the agent for the stock company at the Grand Theatre, Stockton, in the place of Mr. Frank Strickland, Mr. Hesslegrave to take up his duties in three weeks' time. Mr. Fred Constable was appointed the provisional chairman for the Sunday evening meetings at Liverpool.

Mr. Frank C. Bangs, a veteran of the American stage, died in Atlantic City, U.S.A., on the 12th ult. He had been an actor for forty-six years. In 1858 he appeared before a New York audience for the first time at Laura Keene's Theatre. In later years he played with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Charles Fechter, and Adelaide Neilson. Two years ago he was badly hurt in a street accident, and a farewell benefit performance was given in his behalf at the New York Casino.

Miss Violet Agnew, who has just concluded a tour as Joanna Jones in Mr. W. Holles' The Stepmother Co., is now a patient in the cancer and tumour hospital (Lopes Ward), Fulham-road, S.W., and will be glad to hear from and see old friends. The visiting days are Sundays and Thursdays from two till four.

A matinée of Il Barbiere di Siviglia, with Mme. Tetrazzini in the cast, will be given at Covent Garden on Wednesday, July 22.

Madame Melba has generously sent to the London Hospital a cheque for £2000, the proceeds of the matinée at Covent Garden which she organised on behalf of that institution.

The Theatre Royal, Goole, has been purchased by Mr. Fred Greaves, of the Royal Hotel, Goole, from Mr. James Bentley, auctioneer, of Knottingley, and the West Riding General Purposes Committee have transferred the licence to Mr. Greaves from Mr. John E. Tomlinson. Mr. Greaves will have the place thoroughly renovated, and will make important structural alterations. The building will be re-opened at the end of August.

Mr. R. A. Roberts, the Protean actor, will shortly tour with the drama, Straight from the Shoulder, in the provinces. Mr. Charles Boult will be the general manager of the company, and Mr. Matthew Boulton, Miss Beatrice Burdett, Mr. Leonard Clarke, Miss Edie Casson, Mr. George H. Child, Miss Frances Bruce, Mr. George Fisher, Miss Beatrice Moore, Messrs. Cuthbert Dennison, Franklin McAvoy, and Fred. Beck will be members of the cast. The music has been composed by Mr. Denham-Harrison, and all scenery, properties, furniture, and accessories will be carried. The preparation and production of the drama will be under Mr. Roberts's personal care, and Mr. George H. Child will be the stage-manager.

Mr. Martin Comstock was immediately engaged for the autumn by Miss Maud Hildyard on her return from Australia, this making his third engagement with that lady.

Mr. Thomas Francis has resigned his position of acting-manager at the Metropole Theatre, Gateshead, to take up an appointment with Mr. Sidney Bacon.

The annual elocution competition of the British Empire Shakespeare Society will take place this year at 3 p.m., on Friday, at the Playhouse, which has been kindly lent by Mr. Cyril Maude. The number of professional entries is larger even than last year. Mr. Henry Arthur Jones will be the judge, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell will be one of the prize donors.

Mr. Lyn Harding has secured the provincial rights of The Flag Lieutenant, which is being presented by Mr. Cyril Maude to crowded houses at the Playhouse. The tour, which commences in October, will be under the direction of Mr. Lyn Harding and Mr. Sidney Cooper.

Messrs. E. D. and J. Maundy Gregory have arranged with a well-known author to give a lecture tour in the autumn dealing in a novel manner with certain questions of the moment.

Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer has under consideration an offer from her son, Mr. Maurice E. Bandmann, to fulfil an engagement at his new Empire Theatre, Calcutta, in a series of grand Shakespearean revivals, with a tour of China and Japan to follow. Meantime she will resume her tour in August for the autumn.

Mr. Cecil A. Collins will commence his tour of Hands Across the Sea, by the late Henry Pettitt, on Aug. 24. In addition to Mr. Collins, the cast will include Messrs. G. Clifton Boyne, Clive Currie, Frank Woodville, Patrick Fitzgerald, A. L. Burke, Lawrence Grove, Guy Smethurst, Misses Lilla Nordon, Marjorie Davenporte, Kirsteen Graeme, and Beatrice Whitney. Mr. Charles Beresford will be the business-manager.

Mr. John R. Huddlestone, the manager of the Opera House and Winter Gardens, Blackpool, will be married on the 27th of this month at St. Anne's-on-Sea to Mme. Rocca, of Nice. Mr. Huddlestone's many friends have wished him joy very heartily.

Amongst those who sent presents to Dr. F. H. Cowen and Miss Frederica Richardson at their recent marriage were Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. George Grossmith, and Mr. A. W. Pinero.

Mr. Leonard Rayne has secured from Mr. Oswald Brand the sole South African rights of his entirely new version of Monte Cristo.

The National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers of the United States have been officially notified that the Canadian Government has removed all duties heretofore imposed on scenery used by theatrical companies in tours of the Dominion. In future, American theatrical managers wishing to tour Canada will merely have to put their scenery under bond to be taken out of the country within a specified time, the money then to be refunded. This is the same way in which scenery is bonded when brought from a foreign country into the United States. The new order will take effect on July 1. The question of Canadian duties has been particularly aggravating to the American theatrical companies, as they frequently find it necessary to cross the boundary two or three times in a single tour, and have hitherto had to pay duty each time. Moreover, there has been no fixed rate. The National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers recently voted that after May 1, 1909, no companies should be sent into Canada, unless certain modifications in the copyright law and the consequent protection against piracy were put into effect, specific mention being made of the injustice of the customs exactions. The new rule was obtained through the intervention of the Canadian Theatre Managers' Association.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison has arranged with Miss Decima Moore to appear in that great success Mrs. Dot, which is now crowding the Comedy Theatre. Miss Moore has already had a brilliant success in two of Miss Marie Tempest's parts, viz., those in All-of-a-Sudden Peggy and The Truth. The rehearsals of all the Hutchison companies are in full swing under Mr. Percy Hutchison's able direction.

Mr. Hayden Coffin, who is at present playing in Butterflies at the Apollo, has, since The Cingalee case in March, 1905, been smarting under the imputation that he, prior to the introduction of Major Fraser to Mr. George Edwardes, imposed terms for such introduction. This impression was removed on Saturday by Mr. Justice Darling in the King's Bench, who stated, "Everybody seems satisfied that in introducing Major Fraser, Mr. Hayden Coffin did it as a matter of friendship, and not for reward. Anybody who thinks differently has no ground for his opinion." His Lordship caused some amusement when counsel was unable to say whether Mr. Coffin was an actor or a singer by remarking, "I was under the impression he was both."

Mr. Coffin's last appearance in the Courts was in a case in which an Inland Revenue official prosecuted him for employing a male servant without a licence. Mr. Coffin pleaded that it was the first time in twenty years he had so transgressed the law, and the magistrate imposed a nominal penalty of half a sovereign.

Mr. Wm. Yates Gregory has secured a lease of the Gaiety and Music-hall, Blyth, which he intends running on thorough up-to-date lines, and will open on Monday, August 3rd. Mr. Thomas Baugh has been engaged to take up the management.

We learn that a powerful syndicate has been formed, with Mr. Wm. Yates Gregory as managing director, to erect an up-to-date theatre in the township of Wrexham. A most central position has been secured in the main street leading from the railway station.

Mr. Gregory comes from one of the oldest stocks of theatrical managers in the country, being a near relative of the late Mr. Mercer H. Simpson, having assisted that gentleman for a number of years as acting-manager of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham. Mr. Gregory takes the name of Yates from his grandfather, Mr. Mark Yates, who served under the management of Messrs. Munro and Simpson and two generations of the Simpson family. Mr. Wm. Yates Gregory is the only son of Mr. James Gregory who, for over twenty years, managed Day's Concert Hall, Birmingham.

Mr. Langdon Mitchell, author of Becky Sharp and The New York Idea, has written a romantic American play, dealing with the early history of New York, during the Revolutionary period, the plot admitting of elaborate scenic effects. The play is to be produced in New York by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger.

Mr. E. W. Silverthorne, having recently concluded a long spring tour as manager of The New Clown company, has been engaged by Mr. Percy Hutchison for the autumn.

The new German Theatre, at the corner of Fifty-ninth-street and Madison-avenue, is to be fitted with a fire curtain of chilled steel in one solid sheet, and covered on both sides with asbestos. The curtain will be operated by electricity, and when it is lowered the stage will be as completely separated from the auditorium as if a metal wall intervened.

"Lady Frederick's" recent reception at the New Theatre was a great success, and was especially appreciated by French and American visitors to London, who attended in large numbers.

Miss Fannie Ward's tenancy at Terry's Theatre having expired, the run of The Three of Us terminated on Friday, when she took a well-earned rest, after a most artistic and interesting season. Miss Ward will resume the run of The Three of Us at a London Theatre in the autumn, and arrangements have been made for several other plays to follow.

Mr. Patrick Kirwan's Idyllic Players appeared at the Botanical Gardens, Edgbaston, on Tuesday and Wednesday in A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Merry Wives of Windsor respectively. The surroundings gave exceptional realism to the plays, and the players, led by Mr. Patrick Kirwan, were exceptionally good, and found much appreciation for their efforts.

Mr. Lester Collingwood has returned from his sojourn among the Americans, who were so pleased with their vivacious visitor that they wanted to make him an American citizen; but nevertheless, and "in spite of all temptations, he remains an Englishman." Mr. Collingwood during his stay in New York visited Coney Island and the Bowery, and in honour of his presence the National Anthem was played in four of the leading theatres. He is impressed with the Americans, whom he describes as a great people, and is lavish in his praise of their hospitality. He was the guest of millionaires, Senators, and the leading impressarios, and gave a dinner in return for their hospitality.

The case of Arthur Stannard, described as of West Kensington-mansions, came before the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday upon an application for discharge. The debtor, a civil engineer by profession, attributed his failure to the loss of £4,000 in connection with Winter's Weekly, the publication of which ceased some years ago, to ill-health, and also to stoppage of income through the prolonged illness of his wife, "John Strange Winter," authoress of "Bootles' Baby." Debtor added that his wife, whose affairs he managed, at one time earned £1,200 a year. It was reported that the liabilities amounted to £857 and that the assets would realise 30s. The only offence reported was the absence of assets equal to 10s. in the £, and his honour granted the order of discharge, subject to a suspension of two years.

At Westminster Police Court on Thursday Mr. Harry Arthur Hands, a flautist, sued Mr. Robert Courtneidge for damages for breach of contract. Mr. Courtneidge was producing the musical comedy called The Dairymaids, and the plaintiff applied for a position in the orchestra. He received a postcard from Mr. Chapman on behalf of Mr. Wood, the conductor of The Dairymaids orchestra, telling him that he would be required, and giving the times of the rehearsals at the Queen's Theatre. He attended several, and on the day before the performance played till nearly 12.30. The conductor said he must stop later, but the plaintiff left to catch his last train.

Mr. Wood said on the night in question he told Mr. Hands about twelve o'clock that he could not go home, and plaintiff went back to his seat and played a number. Just before 12.30 a.m. plaintiff came up to him again, and witness told him he was not to go. Plaintiff, however, did leave, and the next morning witness told him his services were no longer required. Mr. Ignatius Orrelana, a conductor, and Mr. Harold Vickers, conductor of Daly's Theatre, stated that when a man was kept late it was customary to pay his cab fare home. The case was adjourned.

Mr. George Grossmith has been relating to a Pall Mall representative the story of the production of H.M.S. Pinafore at the Opera Comique. "Mr. D'Oyly Carte," said Mr. Grossmith, "had arranged to follow The Sorcerer with an opera by Sir F. Burnand and the late Mr. Alfred Cellier, a most delightful and charming composer. From some cause or other, never explained to this very day, poor Alfred Cellier lost not only Burnand's manuscript, but also his own music. So Mr. D'Oyly Carte fell back on Sir William Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan, who wrote the opera under high pressure. It was completed, in fact, in an incredibly short period, and, so far as Sir Arthur Sullivan was concerned, at a time of severe suffering, for when he composed this bright and delightful music he was lying on his back enduring great agony. Sir William Gilbert, as in The Sorcerer, founded the story of the opera on one of his former works, on this occasion from a combination of 'The Bab Ballads,' especially 'Captain Reece' (of 'The Mantelpiece') and 'The Bumboat Woman's Story.'

"In spite of very modest mounting, the opera ran for nearly two years. It was not, however, at first a very glaring success financially. Curiously enough, the boom started in America. Those were the days when there was no understanding with regard to copyright. American managers produced the opera without any arrangement with its author, or its composer, or Mr. D'Oyly Carte, and it was played at five or six theatres in New York as well as in other cities of the United States. Its originality, its delightful music, its clever dialogue all appealed to American audiences, and at last English people, anticipating the present Prince of Wales's advice on another subject, began to 'wake up.' 'If Americans,' they said, 'can see so much in the opera, what is the matter with us?' and then they began to rush to it. Sir William Gilbert was not so well understood then as he is now, and people at first took the opera too seriously.

"Mr. D'Oyly Carte had a great belief in the opera; the Syndicate had not, and when the receipts went down notices to quit went up. We all had a fortnight's notice. But at this moment Mr. D'Oyly Carte claimed the opera against the Syndicate and he kept us on. This resulted in the production of the piece by the Syndicate at the Imperial Theatre, so that there was the unique state of affairs of the same opera running at two theatres in London at the same time. This was only part of the trouble, for the Syndicate came to the theatre and tried to seize the guns and the scenery. There was such noise and fury behind the scenes that the audience thought there was a fire, and I had to make a speech during the performance whilst playing the part of Sir Joseph Porter, telling them it was only a little dispute and there was no cause to be alarmed.

"This was followed after the fall of the curtain by another speech from Mr. Rutland Barrington (the Captain Corcoran), who stated what had really happened. In the meantime there had been a rush outside the theatre, in which the late Mr. Richard Barker, the stage manager, was pushed down a flight of steps. Out of revenge he called on the Marines who appeared in the opera to use their bayonets and charge the enemy up again, which in those stirring days they were only too pleased to do.

"Of course there was an action afterwards, and counsel who cross-examined me asked, with reference to a period when the theatre was closed for the alleged purpose of repairing the drains, 'when was the first complaint of the drains smelling?' To which I replied, 'When the receipts went down.' Sir William Gilbert, who was in court, was heard audibly to mutter, 'Pecunia non olet' (money does not smell)."

"The Servant in the House," by Charles Rann Kennedy, closed its first New York engagement on the 27th ult., at the Savoy Theatre, New York, where it opened on March 23. The same production will return to the Savoy in the autumn, following the presentation there of Diana of Dobson's, in which Miss Carlotta Nillson is to appear, under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman. The Savoy has been open continuously since September, 1906, when Miss Rose Stahl appeared there in The Chorus Lady, which had a very long run. The Man of the Hour kept the house open all last summer.

Dr. Mathieu, of the Theatre Doctors' Friendly Society, stated in Paris on Thursday that most of the cases doctors are called upon to attend in Paris theatres—and every theatre and music hall must have a doctor on duty at every performance—consist of nothing more serious than loosening a woman's corsets. "Women," he said, "go to places of entertainment immediately after a more or less hastily-eaten dinner. They faint, or suffer from a feeling of suffocation or cramp, and all that is necessary is to loosen the tight lacing."

Dr. Lenglois said that Paris theatres are notoriously ill-ventilated. "Very often the emotion of the play has unpleasant effects on women, or perhaps it is a theatre ice eaten too hastily. Certain it is that the vast majority of sudden cases doctors are called upon to attend in theatres and music halls are not serious, and not worth the services of the 120 doctors who nightly give their services to places of entertainment.

Mr. Edward Paulton, part-author of the famous Erminie, has written a comic opera in tabloid form called The Naked Truth, which has "caught on" at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, New York. Mr. Harry Davenport and Miss Phyllis Rankin fill the leading rôles. The scene is laid in Normandy, and the story deals with the love of a young sailor and his sweetheart, Estelle. During his absence she has become infatuated with the charms and alleged title of Johnnie MacIntosh, a sergeant in the Scotch Highballs, who is in Normandy pushing a new brand of Scotch whisky. Estelle (Miss Rankin) believes in him implicitly, but her father is convinced that MacIntosh (Mr. Davenport) is an economiser of the truth. He and the young sailor hit upon a scheme to prove MacIntosh's falseness to Estelle, and, in consequence, she returns to her old love. Among the musical numbers are "Honeymooning," sung by Miss Rankin, and a Scotch song, "Hey, Hey, Hey, Sergeant MacIntosh," sung by Mr. Davenport and the chorus.

"An association has just been formed in Paris," writes our correspondent, "styling itself 'Le Théâtre Indépendant,' patronised by many well-known persons in the world of art and letters. The object of this association is to produce plays by talented young dramatists who fail to have their works accepted by the Paris managers. The theatrical season of the Théâtre Indépendant will last from Sept. 1 to May 31, and during these nine months nine performances will be given. Each play will be brought out at Fémina or Marigny, after which it will be taken either to the provinces, or be transferred to a house in one of the outlying Paris districts. If the new association adheres to its rules and shows no favouritism, it may do some excellent work; but they have already had in Paris many similar institutions, which all came sooner or later to grief, because they could not resist the temptation offered them in the form of a big cheque by 'society dramatists' willing to pay a handsome sum for the pleasure of seeing their productions brought out."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Mr. Tree on Autobiographies.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE, who will soon take a well-earned rest at Marienbad, wishes it to be known that he is not writing his reminiscences. "There is nothing," he says, "that I detest more than autobiographical attitudes, but if I am tempted to indulge in them I shall certainly delay that proceeding for the splendid leisure of twenty years hence. Autobiography, as I said the other day in reference to the gramophone, adds a new terror to life, and makes death a long-felt want."

Sir John Hare's Memories.

SIR JOHN HARE has given us another instalment of his agreeable reminiscences in the Strand Magazine. The article includes the following letter from the late William Terriss:—"Royal Adelphi Theatre, Sept. 23, 1887.—My Dear Hare,—Your very kind letter has given me the greatest pleasure. It is scarcely necessary for me to remind you that it was to your able guidance that I am indebted for my first ideas in the art of acting, and, although still conscious of my faults, I cannot help feeling proud to read such kind and flattering words as you have thought fit to pen me. I hope to keep your letter as a mark of your esteem, which I assure you I value more than that of any living actor. Commend me to Mrs. Hare, and believe me always sincerely yours,—WILL TERRISS."

The Kendals.

"OLIVIA," says Sir John, "marked my last notable production at the old Court Theatre, and my tenancy soon after came to an end in July, 1879. I now found myself face to face with a great problem. I had no wish to abandon theatrical management, which profoundly interested me, but I was fully conscious of the fact that an enterprise which lacked the aid of a strong leading actress was as unstable as a house built on sand. As I desired a permanent rather than a fleeting association, I made a proposition to Mr. W. H. Kendal that he should join me in the management of the St. James's Theatre, on the understanding that his wife should support our association throughout. Arrangements were completed, and then commenced a management which lasted from October, 1879, till July, 1888. It was a period which passed without a cloud or misunderstanding between us. Our arrangement was that Mr. Kendal should undertake the business side of the partnership, and that the conduct and management of the stage should be left under my entire control. And so controlling, I remained an autocrat, Mrs. Kendal herself setting the lead by the most implicit loyalty. I was always inclined to be critical, and remember her once saying to me at rehearsal, 'For Heaven's sake, Hare, what's the matter with me? You've never said anything!'

A Happy Inspiration.

"I AM, and always have been, a sceptic in what is called the inspiration of the moment in acting, although I know there are many who differ from me on this subject. Still, there are exceptions to every rule, and unrehearsed effects have often proved extremely successful, as I have reason to remember on the production of Pinero's play, in which I appeared as the bibulous ne'er-do-well, Baron Croodle. The piece had been rehearsed carefully from every point of view; but, on the first night, when I was left alone on the stage as that disreputable but amusing old scoundrel, the following unrehearsed incident occurred. The family were supposed to have retired to lunch, and I was sitting disconsolately meditating over my evil, if imaginary, past. There came the sound of a champagne cork drawn in the next room, at which I pricked up my ears, and, quite unintentionally till that moment, my face lit up with the delightful recollections which that well-known sound inspired. The house roared with laughter, and it is perhaps unnecessary to say that this unrehearsed effect was invariably repeated, while it never failed to elicit an additional burst of merriment throughout the run of Pinero's witty play.

Hare and Tennyson.

"IT was during our management of the St. James's that I first had the honour of meeting the late Lord Tennyson, and my brief association with the great poet left an everlasting impression upon my memory. Accompanied by Mr. Kendal, I went—on the Poet Laureate's invitation—to his house at Haslemere to hear a little one-act play he had written, called The Falcon, founded on a story by Boccaccio. It may be imagined with what veneration we entered the residence of that great man. After lunch, which was almost unbroken by conversation, we went into his study, and I still seem to see and hear him, puffing away at his pipe, which he replenished every now and then from the jar of tobacco placed conveniently at his side

"His manner was rugged—'frosty, but kindly.' I wished to say what I thought about the piece, which he read with great deliberation, but dared not. The play was much too long for so slight and delicate a subject, but at the close I felt it my duty to tell him that, in its present form, its success was doubtful. I was impelled to do this, for, though delighted with the prospective honour of producing his play, in doing so I did not wish to produce anything which might be considered unworthy of his genius. When I had summoned up courage to tell him as respectfully as possible what I ventured to think, he became exceedingly indignant, and the matter was evidently at an end. We were not pressed to stay, and shortly afterwards left to catch our train. In walking down the garden we heard footsteps behind us, and, turning round, found it was Tennyson, who said somewhat abruptly as he put the roll of manuscript into my hand, 'Cut what you like, but, for God's sake, never let me see it!'"

Edmund Payne as a Scene-painter.

"ONE day when I was painting scenery at the Theatre Royal, Jersey, I had a very nasty accident. I had hoisted one of the frames about halfway up the scenery so that I might embellish the top, and while climbing over to fix up the rope on the opposite side, the opposition rope gave way, and I slipped down to earth at top speed. The friction of the rope, as I gracefully made for the bare boards of the stage, was so keen that it completely burnt the palms of my hands, and for some days I was 'handless.'

A Difficult Duet.

"I HAD a fairly-good tenor voice, and one evening, when I was in Jersey on the occasion of a benefit for some local charity, I changed my female attire to evening dress, and joined Mme. Dorval, our principal girl, in the 'Excelsior' duet. I stood by her side in the approved style of a concert singer—my attitude would have put Sir Charles Santley, at his best, quite in the shade—holding a piece of music of which I couldn't read a single semi-quaver—or any other quaver for that matter—before me, and joining lustily in this extremely difficult vocal duet. I confess that I fully expected the audience to pass me out baskets of ripe fruit in the shape of Jersey cabbages, young tomatoes, and blasé sea-kale; but, strange to say, they appreciated the duet intensely—they were evidently fine judges of music—and it was 'kept in' for the rest of the run of the pantomime."

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

MISS VERA BERINGER'S MATINEE.

On Thursday, July 9, for the first time in London, the New and Original Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Henry Seton, entitled

"THE BOYS."

Brian O'Donaghue	MR. CHAS. GOODHART
Mortimer Wilberley	MR. FRED LEWIS
Micky Halloran	MR. WILFRED SHINE
Major Robert Rayner	MR. E. STATHAM STAPLES
Captain Hugh Wilson	MR. GEORGE SILVER
Peter Tubbs	MR. MAX LEEDS
Ananda	MR. JOHN BRABOURNE
O'Driscoll	MR. JOHN FAIRWAY
Colonel Harkner	MR. CHAS. TOWSON
Bat	MR. ELLIS CARLYLE
Waiter	MR. EDEN POTTS
Bobbie Davies	MR. REGINALD CRAVEN
Lane-Marriot	MR. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Miss Petunia Parsons	MISS CARLOTTA ZERBINI
Patricia O'Donaghue	MISS FLORENCE LLOYD
Katherine O'Donaghue	MISS VERA BERINGER
Mary O'Donaghue	MISS MAY BLAYNEY
Miss Maynard	MISS M. HOLFORD

Bearing a title closely resembling a world-famous comedy, Mr. Henry Seton's farcical play was first produced in London at the Court Theatre on Thursday, at a matinée given by Miss Vera Beringer. The Boys was originally staged at the Grand Theatre, Croydon, on May 11 last, when it met with a friendly reception. Since then a new third act has been provided.

When three charming young ladies proceed to disguise themselves as young men in conventional evening dress, and thus attired make their appearance in the smoke-room of a country hotel, it is not difficult to imagine the kind of fun likely to arise from such a risky experiment. The girls, be it said, had a sufficient reason for their eccentric behaviour—it was not a mere freak without a purpose. The Misses O'Donaghue were only anxious to do their father a good turn. Their uncle, Mortimer Wilberley, had gone abroad and made a fortune; but, being a woman-hater, had given O'Donaghue to understand that if the latter had any sons all his money would be left to them. But it so happened that Mrs. O'Donaghue presented her husband with daughters, and their father, thinking it a pity that the fortune should go elsewhere, had given out that in each case boys had been born to him. The three girls during their father's temporary absence from home are placed under the charge of their strict and staight-laced maiden aunt, Miss Petunia Parsons, who arrives just in time to witness an impromptu dance, the girls' partners in the merry frolic being their respective sweethearts, Major Robert Rayner, Captain Hugh Wilson, and Mr. Peter Tubbs. The gentlemen make a hurried departure, being considerably awed by the frigid attitude of the obviously suspicious maiden aunt. A telegram from Wilberley announcing his arrival in Ireland and asking O'Donaghue to meet him at Ballymurran Hotel with the three "nephews" naturally causes considerable consternation, and, as the result of a hurried consultation, the trio decide to assume male attire, and so deceive their uncle as to their real sex.

The scene of the second act is the smoke-room in Ballymurran Hotel, where Uncle Wilberley duly meets his supposed nephews and invites them to partake of whiskies and sodas, and offers them cigarettes. A military ball is in progress at the hotel, and Rayner, Wilson, and Tubbs are awaiting the arrival of the three girls, whom they have invited. They fail to recognise their sweethearts in the young men in evening dress who are introduced to them by Wilberley. The whisky, followed by champagne, proves too potent for the youngest girl, Mary, and an amusing quarrelling scene ensues. In the midst of it Miss Petunia, who has ascertained the whereabouts of her charges, arrives on the scene; but the electric light having been switched off, the girls escape, and O'Donaghue, to whom his daughters had sent a wire, is considerably astonished to discover Miss Petunia in the dark with the gay young officers.

In the last act the girls return home, but are met by their lovers, who, having learned from O'Donaghue's Irish servant, Micky, the trick that had been played upon them, determine to have their revenge, and continue the quarrel begun at the hotel, to the terror and dismay of the three maidens. To carry the joke still further, they don feminine garments, and when the girls reappear in their usual garb their father himself joins in the conspiracy to perplex and exasperate them. However, Uncle Wilberley is induced to overlook the deception that has been practised upon him, and his pretty nieces will in due course receive the money intended for "the boys."

Mr. Charles Goodhart as Brian O'Donaghue gave an appropriately brisk and breezy rendering of the part; Mr. Fred Lewis repeated his comically stolid embodiment of Mortimer Wilberley, who has an amusing trick of speaking his thoughts aloud, though entirely unconscious of the habit; Mr. Wilfred Shine can always be depended upon to give a richly humorous and delightfully natural sketch of Irish character, and his impersonation of the faithful Irish servant, Micky Halloran, again proved one of the chief acting successes of the piece; highly amusing and effective was Mr. E. Statham Staples' portrayal of the diminutive officer, Major Rayner, his love-making scene with Patricia O'Donaghue being particularly good; Mr. George Silver did exceedingly well in the rôle of Captain Hugh Wilson; and Mr. Max Leeds scored as Peter Tubbs. Mr. John Brabourne had a silent part as Ananda, Mr. Wilberley's' Cingalese servant (mistaken for a woman by Aunt Petunia), but he played it very cleverly; Miss Vera Beringer displayed charming vivacity and high spirits as Katherine O'Donaghue, and did all that was possible with the part; Miss Florence Lloyd was a merry and mischievous Patricia, and entered heartily into the spirit of the fun; while Miss May Blayney was daintily pretty and pleasing as Mary, who is reluctantly persuaded to put on masculine dress. Her acting in the scene in the smoke-room after the hitherto timid Mary has been compelled to partake of whiskey and wine was especially worthy of praise. Miss Carlotta Zerbina gave a capital sketch of the prim Miss Petunia Parsons, whose horror at the discovery that she has made a mistake in the sex of the Cingalese servant is most amusingly depicted; Miss M. Holford was well placed as Miss Maynard, one of the lady guests at the officers' ball; and able service was rendered by Mr. John Fairway as O'Driscoll, Mr. Chas. Towson as Colonel Harkner; other minor parts being safely entrusted to Messrs. Ellis Carlyle, Eden Potts, Reginald Craven, and Douglas Imbert. The comedy was excellently produced by Mr. Hubert Druce.

THE Exchange Telegraph Company, Ltd., desires to state in regard to a paragraph published by it on the 23rd ult., relating to an incident at the Holborn Empire on the 22nd ult., during the performance of Mr. George Gray's sketch, The Fighting Parson, that the information was received from a reliable correspondent and the company had no reason to doubt its correctness. The facts of the incident, however, appear to have been exaggerated, as no damage whatever was done to the premises, nor was there any difficulty in restoring order. A section of the audience resented Mr. Gray leaving the stage during the performance of the second house. As the report might possibly do damage to the proprietors of the hall, the company desires to make the above announcement, and expresses its regret for the annoyance which has been caused by the circulation of the original paragraph.

MISS DUNCAN AT THE DUKE OF YORK'S.

One of the most beautiful examples of the "poetry of motion" ever seen in London was submitted by Miss Izadora Duncan at the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday evening. Miss Duncan, who is slightly known to Londoners by some classical dances which she did at the New Gallery about eight years ago, has since then made a great reputation as a dancer at Berlin and elsewhere. She is very finely proportioned, with a long neck and arms, strong and shapely legs, well-formed feet, and features beaming with openness and expression. Her dancing is exquisitely graceful, and held the audience enthralled by its rare beauty. The announcement that Glück's music in Iphigenie in Aulide would be used may have led to the supposition that something of a dramatic nature in pantomime was to be provided; but Miss Duncan's dances had little reference to the old Greek story. Indeed, it would often have been agreeable to have had a hint now and then from the programme as to what was the meaning of some of the dances, which evidently were intended to depict something. On one occasion Miss Duncan appeared to be throwing a dart; on another she seemed to be playing at some game with cards or counters. Most memorable of all her evolutions was the one expressive of the most perfect delight. To see Miss Duncan tripping round the stage, which was enclosed in brown curtains, was to witness an entrancing exhibition of human happiness. The very spirit of joysome gladness was in the dance. Another expression of gaiety was a kind of country dance to a lively strain. It was exuberantly animated and active, and brought down the house. Energetic and inspired was the Bacchic dance done by Miss Duncan later on in the course of the evening. The mystic "elevation" of the Bacchanal was admirably shown, and the collapse and final fall at the end of the dance were very effective. There were also some dances of a soberer and more melancholy nature, done in longer robes than the delicately draped Greek tunic which was Miss Duncan's usual costume. Every step and movement was governed by the most classical grace and beauty, and the entertainment, though in the ordinary run of things it would have been too much in one key, made a very favourable impression on the well-pleased audience, who recognised soon after Miss Duncan's entrance that they were in the presence of a saltatory genius. The charm of the entertainment, its classical quality, and the sweetness and shapeliness of the dancer had their effect on those who beheld this marvel of facile and harmonious movement. They applauded Miss Duncan unstintedly, and at the close of her performance, in answer to an enthusiastic encore, she favoured the house with an additional item of a gay and festive nature. In the intervals Miss Duncan's young pupils supplied several pretty little ballets. Miss Isadora Duncan's entertainment is astonishingly artistic and marvellously graceful and classical, and Mr. Charles Frohman may be congratulated on the success of his latest presentation.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

Although given late in the season, Bizet's masterly opera Carmen attracted a large audience to Covent Garden on Thursday night, July 2. Generally, the performance was excellent. Madame Maria Gay again repeated her striking impersonation of the wayward gipsy heroine, while she did not spare herself in the exacting music of the part. The picturesque and appropriate costumes of Madame Gay also lent additional interest to her fine performance. Mr. Marak, who essayed the character of Don José for the first time at Covent Garden, sang the charming flower-song with great expression, but his acting in the dramatic portions of the opera was somewhat deficient in power. An American singer, Madame Rider-Kelsey, who, as Micaela, made her first appearance, created a most favourable impression by her beautiful voice and finished singing. Escamilla was played by M. Scandinani, and Mr. Gilibert gave, as usual, a masterly performance of Il Dancario. The music of Frasquita and Mercedes was charmingly sung by Mesdames Severina and Lejeune; and a capital rendering of the delightful quintet in the second act was given. Mr. Panizza conducted the opera most skilfully.

Giordano's opera Fedora was performed at Covent Garden on Tuesday evening, and aroused considerable interest. Miss Cavalieri, who appeared as Fedora, was far more successful in this character than in her previous performance of Manon. Miss Cavalieri sang with greatly increased power, while her attractive personality and graceful, if not very dramatic or convincing, acting made Fedora interesting. A new-comer, Mr. Garbin, played the rôle of Loris with much intelligence. Although Mr. Garbin seemed somewhat nervous at first, he greatly improved later in the opera, and his fine voice and manly bearing in the part will, when greater confidence is inspired, prove Mr. Garbin a welcome addition to the list of artists at Covent Garden. Mr. Scotti was an excellent De Siriex; and Madame Lejeune made a most lively and spirited Olga. Mr. Zucchi, who was in the original cast, again played Desiré; and the parts of Cirillo and Gretch were admirably performed by Messrs. Marcoux and Gianoli. Special mention should also be made of Mr. Lierchar's Boleslao. The opera was beautifully mounted, and Mr. Panizza secured excellent results from the orchestra.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday evening, July 6, the Play entitled "EAST LYNNE."

Mrs. Henry Wood's famous novel "East Lynne" lends itself readily to dramatisation, and the adaptation as presented at the Pavilion on Monday evening evidently was to the taste of the audience, although we think the introduction of the "Votes for Women" business was an innovation which should have been omitted from the play. The Archibald Carlyle of Mr. Ashley Page was a performance of sterling merit, this favourite actor meeting with enthusiastic applause whenever he appeared on the stage. The erring Lady Isabel was played with intensity and power by Miss Marion Denvil, who was exceptionally good in the last act. The villainous Captain Francis Levison was vigorously rendered by Mr. Walter Thornton, whose general incisiveness and excellent acting are to be commended. The fugitive, Richard Hare, was well portrayed by Mr. Raymond Wood; while the eccentricities of Justice Hare were made the most of by Mr. Herbert Lloyd. Mr. Harry Brandon was duly humorous as Lawyer Dill; and Mr. Charles L. Foster was a dignified Lord Mount Severn. The Barbara Hare of Miss Mabel Lowe was an effective study; Miss Nell Gilmore extracted much fun from the part of Cornelia Carlyle; a pathetic picture of Little Willie was presented by Miss Bertha Hanbury; and Miss Agnes Rothsay was a pert Suzanne. The scenery and appointments were in the best possible taste.

IRISH PLAYS AT THE COURT.

The Irish Stage Society and the London branch of the Celtic Association took possession of the Royal Court Theatre, Sloane-square, for the final three days of last week, and presented a series of Irish and Welsh plays. Mr. Patrick E. Doherty is deserving of more than a passing word of thanks for affording the opportunity of several pretty pieces being presented to the public. The chief interest on the opening night centred in the curtain-raiser, Leap Year in the West, a bright play from the clever pen of Miss Johanna Redmond, the youngest of Mr. John Redmond's daughters. This little piece was originally produced early in the present year before the Irish Literary Society, and created a most favourable impression, which was deepened by the effective manner of its presentation at the Court. The two characters were sustained by Miss Esther Redmond and Mr. Barry O'Brien. Miss Redmond, whose wedding to Dr. Power, of New York, is fixed for next week, made love in a delightful fashion, and proved herself to be an amateur actress of much grace and talent. Mr. O'Brien ably supported his rôle.

On the second night Mr. W. P. Graves's Irish operetta The Postbag formed the first portion of the programme, and it went as well as when it made its first appearance in the full tide of the Gaelic revival six years ago—to further which object, by the way, is the author's theme. The piece was ably interpreted by Miss Hilda de Angelis (Kitty O'Hea, Mr. D. Byndon-Ayres (Phelim, the postboy), and Mr. Jerome Murphy (Seaghan, the smith). The catchy and tuneful music of Mr. Michele Esposito was spiritedly sung by all three artists. Miss de Angelis made a distinct hit as Kitty and Mr. Jerome Murphy was very fine as Seaghan. The operetta was followed by a masque, by Ernest Rhys, with music by Vincent Thomas, entitled

"THE QUEST OF THE GRAIL."

King Arthur	MR. WINGFIELD HEALE
Sir Galahad	MISS GWENDOLLEN LALLY
Sir Percival	MR. LAUNCELOT CRANE
Sir Gawain	MR. C. COURT TREATT
Sir Launcelot	MR. C. F. BARRETT
Sir Kay	MR. ALLAN GOMME
Sailor	MR. W. H. NICHOLSON
Court Minstrel	MR. DIXON
Timor Mortis, Arch Druid, Hermit	MR. JOSEPH PAYNE
Arch Druidess	MISS D'AUVERGNE UPCHER
Queen Quenever	MISS DOUIE
Nimuë (Vivian), Tradition	MISS EDITH RHYS
Tradition's Child	MISS ESTHER TILLEY

The story which the masque presents is that told in the old Welsh and French romances dealing with the quest of Sir Percival, Sir Galahad, and other Knights of the Round Table. The scenes range from a dramatic prologue in which the old rites of the Druids are shown as dimly foreshadowing the high mystery of the Sancgreal. The masque itself opens with the journey of Percival (the Parsifal of Wagner's' drama) to be knighted at the Court of the Haut King Arthur. A tableau of the chivalry at the high feast of Camelot, with Quenever and Launcelot, Percival and Galahad, is broken by the advent of the Hermit, who calls the knights to the quest. The Round Table is disbanded, and Galahad and his fellows set forth. In an interlude is shown the dance of Vivian and her maidens, which tempts the knights to forego the quest; and the masque closes with the going of Quenever with her nuns to Amesbury, and, last, the finding of the mount and castle of the Grail by Sir Galahad.

The masque was beautifully mounted, the scene being laid in a forest glade which was quite a stage picture, and the dresses were historically accurate. The production was under the direction of Miss Edith Rhys, who made a success of the rôle of Tradition and who was rewarded by quite a shower of bouquets from admirers in the stalls. There was a graceful dance by water nymphs arranged by Miss Maud Douie, who was an excellent Queen Quenever. The feature of the cast, however, was the Sir Galahad of Miss Gwendollen Lally, who looked the character to the life and interpreted it in an ideally chivalrous fashion. Mr. Launcelot Crane made a manly and muscular Sir Percival, and Mr. Joseph Payne was admirable in each of the triple rôles he enacted. Mr. W. Heale was a knightly King Arthur, and Miss Esther Tilley was very good as the child.

The closing performances of the series were an Irish play, An Vadbacht, written in the vernacular, by P. Conroy, and The Absentee, by Messrs. Graves and Keene.

MR. ALEXANDER'S INTENTIONS.

Mr. George Alexander brought his season at the St. James's Theatre to an end on the evening of the 3rd inst. amidst a scene of great enthusiasm. Responding to undeniable demands for a speech, he said:—

"It is my privilege to express my grateful thanks for your generous support during my eighteenth season at the St. James's Theatre. I am proud to have had the honour of producing Mr. Pinero's play, The Thunderbolt, and I wish to thank my colleagues behind the curtain for their admirable work in this interesting drama. You will be glad to hear that Mr. Pinero is now writing another play for production at this theatre. During the autumn I am paying a short visit to my provincial friends with The Thief, a play which was withdrawn in the height of its success, and which I hope to revive later on. During my absence in the provinces my theatre will be occupied by one of our finest English actors, Mr. Forbes Robertson, who, with his talented wife, will appear at the end of next month in a new play by Mr. Jerome K. Jerome. On my return to town I produce a new play by Mr. Alfred Sutro, and I am pleased to say that Miss Irene Vanbrugh will once more be associated with me as leading lady. At the conclusion of the run of that play I intend to revive two old favourites, The Prisoner of Zenda and Old Heidelberg. My future plans include new plays by Mr. Hubert Henry Davies and Mr. Haddon Chambers. I look forward to that future with confidence and hope, because I feel sure that you will extend to me that kindness and consideration which in the past have made me your grateful and obliged servant."

CHARITY ENTERTAINMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am writing to protest against the very bad taste—to use no stronger term—exhibited by the promoters of certain entertainments given in aid of charity. When money is required for any good cause, members of the theatrical and musical professions are the first to whom an appeal is made, and their willingness to assist is proverbial. I have before me a recent advertisement announcing one of these charitable entertainments. Although almost every artist of note in London had "generously given" his or her services, only one name is mentioned. Supposing this to be the work of an energetic Press agent, it says little for the tact of the promoters that it should have been issued apparently with the seal of official approval.

At entertainments of the above description those who give their services are working for a common cause—Charity—and they meet on common ground. On such an occasion all names should be published and arranged in alphabetical order.—Yours faithfully, ALBERT CHEVALIER.

Green Room Club, July 8.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

At the council meeting, held at 409, Strand, on Monday, Mr. Fred Grove presiding, Messrs. Chris Walker, Cecil Brooking, C. F. Collings, F. J. Arlton, Edmund Gurney, Fewlass Llewellyn, Richard A. Greene, Clarence Derwent, Misses Agnes Imlay, Marion Lind, Lucy Sibley, and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary) were present.

The chairman read letters from Miss Rose Mathews, enclosing report and balance-sheet of the matinée at the Scala on the 25th ult., and enclosing a cheque. The chairman also read a letter from Mr. Kirkwood, enclosing a letter from the Touring Managers' Association, and a telegram from Mr. Cecil Raleigh.

The secretary read the minutes of the council meeting held on June 29, and the meeting confirmed, and the chairman signed, same.

The secretary read letters from Mr. Thomas Fell, and received instructions to send a vote of condolence to him on the death of his father, and also read a letter from Mr. C. Stevenson.

The hon. solicitor reported that he had had seven interviews with members, and advised them; that he had received £50 from a manager in settlement of another member's claim against him for damages for breach of agreement, that he had written him acknowledging the receipt, and had sent on the cheque. He enclosed his half-yearly account up to June 30.

The council had to reject an experienced amateur, on the ground that his election was against the rules of the Association.

Two new members, Miss Winifred Hart-Dyke and Mr. Dudley Stuart, were elected.

Mr. Brooking proposed and Mr. Walker seconded that the account of the report of the "Socials" Committee be rescinded. This was discussed and carried.

The hon librarian reported the receipt of the following books from George Allen, publisher:—"An Artist's Love Story," "The Letters of Sarah Siddons and Her Daughters to Sir Thomas Lawrence," and six other volumes. The secretary was instructed to send a vote of thanks to Mr. Allen.

The secretary of the Finance Committee read the report, which the Council accepted.

A.A. MATINEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In forwarding to you a copy of the balance-sheet for the matinée given by me at the Scala Theatre on June 25, in aid of the Debenture Debt on the Actors' Association, may I offer through your columns my very sincere thanks for the particularly generous help and assistance of The Era, The Stage, Mr. Cecil Raleigh, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Adnam Sprange, Miss Georgina Hamilton, Miss Hilda Hatton, Miss Inez Bensusan, Mr. Cecil Collins, Mr. Montague Wigan, Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn, Mr. Arthur Fagge, and all those members of the Association who assisted in the dramatic performance on the 25th ult., and in ticket-selling and in programme-selling at and before the matinée. Thanks are also due to Messrs. May, Brinsmead, and Clarkson for their generous help.

It is matter for deep regret that, with so much willing help and able support from some fifty members of the Actors' Association, that the results of the matinée, as the enclosed balance-sheet shows, are not more than £10 18s. 2d. towards the Debenture Debt of the Association. A matinée given by working actors for an object little understood outside the profession could not be expected to appeal to the general public. But the Association numbers nearly one thousand members, and had each of these, even those on tour, sold a single seat—even a gallery seat—their Association would have benefited to a large extent.—Yours faithfully,

ROSE MATHEWS.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"DIE DIEBIN."

Sensational Drama, in Four Acts, by C. McLellan, produced at the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches, July 1, 1890.

Sylvane ..... Herr Dysing
Berton ..... Herr Hartwig
Mme. Berton ..... Fraulein Hoppe
Raoul ..... Herr Sarnow
Claire ..... Fraulein Seidel
Kleschna ..... Herr Cornelius
Leah ..... Fraulein Wasa
Schramm ..... Herr Scheibach

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, Thursday, July 9.—This play is something out of the ordinary line of drama, and has caught on immensely. Not only the main theme is interesting, but incidental episodes and dialogue are well constructed, while the acting is good all round. It may be premised that it is a summer season, under the management of Herr Pilz, the company proper of the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches being holiday making. The word "sensational," is scarcely the right designation for the play, whose plot is briefly the following:—M. Sylvane, a member of the Senate, has a theory that there is good in everybody, and he makes a point of endeavouring to find out the good parts of all. His theory is put to the test before our eyes. A girl named Leah has been trained by her eminently respectable papa to the profession of burglary, in which she has become proficient. One night she breaks into M. Sylvane's house, but is caught in the act by our philanthropist. How he works upon the thief appears quite wonderful, but his theory bears good fruit; the law of love prevails. After a long an interesting talk, Leah leaves the house unharmed, and, we feel convinced, she will steal no more. Her gratitude she proves later on by taking upon herself the theft of jewellery, of which a member of a family closely allied to Sylvane is guilty. Sylvane, however, knows who the thief is, and will not accept her sacrifice. Leah has now become a happy and useful member of society, thanks to M. Sylvane's "theory." The interesting piece was admirably interpreted, Fräulein Wasa, Herren Dysing, Cornelius, Sarnow, and Raventos being especially commendable. The house was crowded, and the play is filling the bill nightly.

At the New Royal Opera a highly successful performance of Don Giovanni was given last week. Two famous stars, who have many times been partners in this opera's principal rôles, formed the chief attraction. Frau Lilli Lehmann as Donna Anna and Signor D'Andrade as Don Juan are names to conjure with, although both artists are past their prime. From the famous queen of song all aspiring artists may learn much, whether upon the stage or in the concert room; while Francesco D'Andrade's Don Juan is without doubt his best rôle. The stars were admirably seconded, and the large audience was enthusiastic.

A musical burlesque, by Johann Nestroy, was produced at the Neues on Saturday, creating a more than favourable impression. The piece is a very old one, but it is amusing throughout, and the audience overlooked the slightly old-fashioned characters, and only enjoyed the broad jokes they uttered. The management devoted all possible pains to the selection of an adequate cast and to effective mounting.

"Der Mann mit dem Monokel," Gummier's sensational farce, is doing capitally at the Thalia, attracting good houses every night. The rights of the piece have been acquired for a number of provincial stages.

The laughable Blue Mouse—MM. Engel and Horst's latest farcical production—has passed its fiftieth consecutive performance at the Lustspielhaus, and is filling the bill to the exclusion of all else. From all appearances it will probably run through the holidays, and well on into the coming season. Prince Eitel Friedrich, the Emperor's second son, put in an appearance recently with his wife, and their Royal Highnesses obviously enjoyed themselves as much as the others in the large audience.

"Carmen" was given at the New Royal Opera on Sunday, and Mignon on Saturday, with Fräulein Burchard in the title-rôle, was a distinct success.

It is stated that Director Gregor, of the Komische Oper, is about to wed Miss Rogers, an American operatic singer.

"THE MERRY WIDOWER."

Mr. Henry Herne and Miss Ida Millais, who have been associated with the water playlet, Blackmail, and other successful sensational sketches, have turned their attention to lighter fare in their latest production, and on Monday last presented for the first time at the Palace, Hammersmith, a humorous absurdity, The Merry Widower, a miniature farce that is full of droll situations and funny lines, and which kept the audience on the laugh from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The names of the characters are not given on the programme, and it is somewhat difficult to give a detailed account of the plot, but the following may give some idea of the amusing quiproquos and droll incidents it contains. The Merry Widower (Francis) is anxious to again enter the bonds of matrimony, and has capitulated to the charms of an equally merry widow (Amy Darlington). The only hindrance to their happiness is that each has been left with a step-child—Ida with a big, burly fellow who might easily be mistaken for her father, and Francis with a grown-up step-daughter, blessed with much wealth but very little personal attraction. Neither Ida nor Francis have disclosed the ages of these encumbrances, and both are anxious to get them married and settled, and thus clear the way for their own wedding. The step-daughter of Francis, a frolicsome female named Daisy Blobbs, is not at all averse to getting married, and the unfortunate male allotted to her is a mysterious Captain Compass, whom none of the parties concerned has ever seen. A disreputable interloper who has been in hiding under the table, overhears the conversation, and determines to impersonate Compass. But he already has a wife, a hard-working laundress, and when she discovers her scheming husband embracing Daisy on the couch, she makes things pretty warm for the couple, even depriving Daisy of some of her back hair. She also declares that if Daisy has her "old man" she shall also have the kiddies, and presently returns with three sturdy young ruffians—a droll incident that evoked hearty laughter. There are many other funny situations and misunderstandings ere the identity of the two step-children is revealed, and they decide to relieve their guardians of their presence by getting married to one another, and things are adjusted satisfactorily for everyone at the finish. Mr. Herne and Miss Millais and the company supporting them all act their parts admirably, and great care has evidently been taken in allotting the characters to suitable representatives, the result being an excellent all-round performance. The Merry Widower will undoubtedly be heard of again.

There is a good programme for the Hippodrome season at the Opera House, Tunbridge Wells. Clark and Hamilton do a couple of good acts; Gala and Norris, in song and dance, have a very cordial reception; Baby Vi Davis, infant vocalist, sings with expression; clever comedians are Julian Ross and Hardy Palm; Olive Aston makes a graceful principal boy; the Hippodrome Pictures are as popular as ever.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The annual outing of the Elephant and Castle Theatre staff took place on Sunday last. Fortunately the stormy weather of Saturday did not continue, and the journey to Box Hill in brakes from the theatre was therefore one of the principal sources of pleasure during the day. Lunch was served in the Hand-in-Hand Hotel, Betchworth, after which the party engaged in a cricket match and some sports which had been arranged.

At lunch the health of "The King" was proposed by Mr. Sydney Barnard (manager) and that of "Success to the Elephant and Castle Theatre" by Mr. Walker (Worthington's, Ltd.). The cricket match, Male Staff v. Female Staff, was won by the Male Staff in spite of the fact that the men had to use sticks and the ladies were allowed bats. A tug-of-war, Front v. Back, resulted in a win for the Back. Among those present were Messrs. George, Dan, and Sydney Barnard, and Mr. Clifford D'Este (acting-manager). The arrangements were in the hands of the stewards, Messrs. J. Waters, G. H. Osborn, and W. Stephenson, who are to be congratulated on a most successful day.

The Lyceum staff were favoured with a fine day for their second annual outing on Sunday last. The party, numbering nearly one hundred, went to Brighton, and had dinner at the Unicorn Hotel. In the absence of Mr. Henry Smith and Mr. Ernest Carpenter, the directors of the theatre, Mr. William Smith presided at the dinner, and was supported by Mr. F. C. Crowe, Mr. Eric Mayne, Mr. A. Smith, and Mr. Armstrong.

After dinner the Chairman proposed the toast of "The King," which was heartily received. On being pressed for a speech, the Chairman said, that in his opinion the Lyceum staff was absolutely the finest in London—(applause)—and as long as the management and the staff worked together as they did at the Lyceum there could only be one result—success. Other managers, he said, were getting jealous of their success. A company was also being formed to open the Princess's Theatre as a popular playnouse; but whatever happened, there was only one Lyceum.

Mr. Crowe, the able general-manager, was also called on for a speech, and upon rising to respond to the invitation, was received with an ovation which testified to the popularity of this gentleman with all present. Mr. Crowe said he had to apologise for the absence of the directors, but in their name, and also for himself, he had to express their and his own entire satisfaction with the work of the staff in all departments. They had all helped greatly to achieve the success which had been secured, and while they worked as they had done nothing could go wrong. In concluding, Mr. Crowe called for a vote of thanks for Mr. Alf. George and Mr. Raphael, and all those who had assisted to make the outing a success.

Mr. Eric Mayne had also to make a speech, and in doing so said it was quite a treat for the actors at the Lyceum Theatre to be on the stage and meet the staff, who were all jolly good fellows. He had, he said, never found either a management or a staff to match those of the Lyceum.

Mr. Armstrong, the assistant stage-manager, made a terse little speech, and concluded by suggesting that it would be well to get out in the open air if they were all as hot as he felt. (Laughter.) The party then adjourned to have a photograph taken outside the hotel.

The outing was enjoyed by everybody, and merrily separated on arriving home at 10.30 p.m. Those responsible for the arrangements were Messrs. P. Raphael and A. Tong, hon. secretaries; Mr. A. George, master carpenter, hon. treasurer; Messrs. H. Oxley, F. B. Fidge, W. Mountain, W. Gibson, and W. T. Rowe, committee; and Messrs. J. Pilgrim, F. Hodsel, and W. Thompson, stewards.

The St. James's Theatre permanent staff went for their outing on Sunday to Bourne End by train and from there to Henley, where dinner was provided at the White Hart Hotel. Mr. W. Barbour, the electrical engineer for the theatre, presided, supported by Mr. C. T. H. Helmsley, general manager, Mr. Whittaker, treasurer, Mr. E. V. Reynolds, stage-manager, Mr. A. P. Horne, secretary, Mr. E. Arnold, box office, and Mr. James Cullen, master carpenter. After dinner the party went by launch to Shiplake, tea being supplied on the launch, returning home by train after a very pleasant outing.

The Alhambra staff, numbering over fifty, went last Sunday to Clacton for their outing. Dinner was provided at the Brunswick Hotel, Mr. Williams, the master carpenter, presiding.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the N.A.T.E. on Tuesday, Mr. G. Dyball, vice-president, presiding, the hon. secretary to the Sports Committee presented the audited statement of the Sports accounts, which, allowing for additions received since the previous meeting, showed a total of £20 2s. 1d.

Additional ticket money:—H. Bolton, electrician, His Majesty's, 2s.; Mr. G. Bailey, master carpenter, Fred Terry's company, 11s. 6d.; H. J. Kemp, 7s.; C. T. Cory, donation, 10s.

The balance from the Sports will be placed to the credit of the Open Benevolent Fund, and with the portion allocated from the Coliseum concert makes a total for this fund this year of £37 17s. The gross total raised for benevolent purposes this year by the committee is £105 19s. 6d. The report was accepted.

The secretary reported on his attendance at the annual Conference of the General Federation of Trade Unions, held at Oxford last week. The report was accepted. It was decided that the secretary should attend the annual Trade Union Congress to be held in Nottingham in September.

The committee also gave instructions that particulars should be ascertained for insuring the secretary and clerk under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The Prince of Wales's Theatre staff, back and front of the house, went for their annual outing on Sunday to Clacton-on-Sea. Special saloon carriages were provided for the party by the Great Eastern Railway Company. Dinner was provided at the Brunswick Hotel. The usual loyal toasts and the health of friends and guests were received in a princely style, Mr. Robert Andrews, master carpenter, distinguishing himself, as usual, with his eloquence, and being energetically supported by Mr. J. A. Fraser, property master. The party spent a most enjoyable day in driving, boating, and other innocent pleasures, returning to Liverpool-street Station in excellent humour. Messrs. R. Chandler, J. Andrews, and J. Parker acted as stewards, and made admirable arrangements for the creature comforts of those attending the outing.

The Bros. Huxter take a well-earned holiday next week at their Worcester residence after a ten months' tour of England and the Continent. They restart the Moss-Stoll tour on July 27 at South Shields.

"A SHAKESPEAREAN LUNATIC."

Comedy Sketch, produced at the Palace, Camberwell, on Monday, July 6.

Sir Henry Witchititipit ..... Mr. Geo. E. Lewis
Tim ..... Mr. Edmund Russon
The Lunatic ..... Miss Rose Edouin

Quotations from the Bard are utilised with very droll effect in this new comedy episode, A Shakespearean Lunatic, which was played for the first time in London at the Camberwell Palace on Monday last, when it met with much approval. The action takes place in a provincial hotel, where Sir Henry Witchititipit, a rich baronet, is staying. He is meditating an early departure to London when the curtain rises, but is interrupted by the appearance of his valet, Tim, who is considerably perturbed by the attentions of an actress who has escaped from a lunatic asylum. She has a mania for spouting Shakespeare, and on her appearance immediately breaks out into the demented Ophelia's speech. "Where is the beauteous Majesty of Denmark?" also giving Portia's "Quality of mercy" lines, &c. The frightened valet endeavours to humour her, suiting his behaviour to her moods, and there is much hilarity when the lunatic, as Lady Macbeth in the sleep-walking scene, weirdly mutters, "To bed! To bed!" and Tim partially unrobes. The climax comes when the actress, a lady of imposing presence, wildly flourishing the poker, breaks out into Henry V.'s speech before Harfleur, "Once more unto the breach,' and the curtain falls on the complete discomfiture of the baronet and his valet.

The success of the sketch was mainly due to the impressive acting of Miss Rose Edouin as the lunatic. The accomplished actress delivered the many selections with fine elocutionary effect, their varying nature being admirably differentiated, and she was loudly acclaimed at her exit. Mr. Edmund Russon as the valet comically indicated the terror of Tim at the unwelcome attentions of the lady; and Mr. George E. Lewis was quite satisfactory as the baronet.

STRATFORD EMPIRE.

The strong bill which Mr. T. S. Mayne is submitting at the Stratford Empire during this, his last week as manager is attracting crowded audiences at both performances nightly. Mr. George Robey is irresistibly funny in "Bang went the chance of a lifetime," which is followed by a diverting burlesque on the Bard of Avon, his third item, a dame song, "Mrs. B.," completing a very diversified turn, and the tumultuous laughter and applause which this clever comedian provokes would seem to indicate that there is no reaching the top note of his popularity.

Another favourite who has a very hearty reception is Mr. George Lashwood. Immaculately dressed, and a regular fashion plate for any budding Beau Brummel in the stalls, his first number is "Hang out the front door key," followed by "Dear Mr. Admiral." In his last song, "Twilight," he smartly introduces local allusions, which add to its success, and this number should long remain in his répertoire. Edward Lauri and May Beatty achieve much success in the sketch In Her Boudoir, a merry trifle which adequately serves to exploit the fine vocal ability of Miss Beatty and the mirth-making propensities of Mr. Lauri. Mention must be made of their charming assistant, who can both sing and dance well. Miss Ethel Haydon is very warmly received in a couple of ballads, which are rendered with much expression. De Wynne Brothers contribute a balancing and mounting act which denotes rare skill and strength, and a clever touch of comedy is introduced into their turn by the air of unconcern and nonchalance they adopt after the conclusion of each difficult feat.

Miss Helen Trix is a prepossessing young lady, who is very entertaining in some catchy songs and whistling solos, in which she accompanies herself at the piano, and the loud applause at the conclusion of her act is thoroughly deserved. Spry and Austin provide some merry moments during their occupancy of the stage, which is all too brief for the audience, judging by the cordiality with which this smart and diverting duo are received. Mr. Bob Hamilton makes a decided hit with his contribution to the programme, and Ralph and Nellie Howard display much talent in a musical sketch, A Military Maid. The Bioscope is this week showing a series of pictures depicting wild birds at home, which is both interesting and instructive, and a splendid example of photographic art. The capital selection by the orchestra under the baton of Mr. Albert Whipp, Mus.Bac., is thoroughly enjoyed by early comers.

THE WAGE OF SHAKESPEARE.

Mr. Sidney Lee, in his interesting "Life of Shakespeare," speaks with certainty of the remunerative nature of the calling of an actor in the days of the first great actor-playwright. He says:—"It was as an actor that at an early date Shakespeare acquired a genuinely substantial and secure income. There is abundance of contemporary evidence to show that the stage was for an efficient actor an assured avenue to comparative wealth. In 1590 Robert Greene describes in his tract entitled 'Never too Late' a meeting with a player whom he took by his 'outward habit' to be 'a gentleman of great living' and a 'substantial man.' The player informed Greene that he had at the beginning of his career travelled on foot, bearing his theatrical properties on his back, but he prospered so rapidly that, at the time of speaking 'his very share in playing apparel would not be sold for £200.' Among his neighbours 'where he dwelt' he was reputed able 'at his proper cost to build a windmill.'

"The travelling actors, from whom the highwayman Gamaliel Ratsey extorted a free performance in 1604, were represented as men with the certainty of a rich competency in prospect. An efficient actor received in 1635 as large a regular salary as £180. The lowest known valuation set an actor's wages at 3s. a day, or about £45 a year. Shakespeare's emoluments as an actor before 1599 are not likely to have fallen below £100; while the remuneration due to performances at Court or in noblemen's houses, if the accounts of 1594 be accepted as the basis of reckoning, added some £15.

"Thus over £130 (equal to £1,040 of to-day) would be Shakespeare's average annual revenue before 1599. Such a sum would be regarded as a very large income in a country town. According to the author of 'Ratsels Ghost,' the actor, who may well have been meant for Shakespeare, practised in London a strict frugality, and there seems no reason why Shakespeare should not have been able in 1597 to draw from his savings £60 wherewith to buy New Place. His resources might well justify his fellow-townsmen's opinion of his wealth in 1598, and suffice between 1597 and 1599 to meet his expenses, in rebuilding the house, stocking the barns with grain, and conducting various legal proceedings. But, according to tradition, he had in the Earl of Southampton a wealthy and generous friend, who on one occasion gave him a large gift of money to enable 'him to go through with' a purchase to which he had a mind. A munificent gift, added to professional gains, leaves nothing unaccounted for in Shakespeare's financial position before 1599.

"After 1599 his sources of income from the theatre greatly increased. In 1635 the heirs of the actor, Richard Burbage, were engaged in litigation respecting their proprietary rights in the two playhouses, the Globe and the Blackfriars theatres. The documents relating to this litigation supply authentic, although not very detailed, information of Shakespeare's interest in theatrical property. Richard Burbage, with his brother Cuthbert, erected at their sole cost the Globe Theatre in the winter of 1598-9, and the Blackfriars Theatre, which their father was building at the time of his death in 1597, was also their property. After completing the Globe, they leased out, for twenty-one years, shares in the receipts of the theatre, to 'those deserving men, Shakespeare, Hemings, Condell, Philips, and others.' All the shareholders named were, like Burbage, active members of Shakespeare's company of players. The shares, which numbered sixteen in all, carried with them the obligation of providing for the expenses of the playhouse, and were doubtless in the first instance freely bestowed. Hamlet claims, in the play scene (3, ii. 293), that the success of his improvised tragedy deserved to 'get him a fellowship in the cry of players'—a proof that a successful dramatist might reasonably expect such a reward for a conspicuous effort. In Hamlet, moreover, both a share and a half-share of 'a fellowship in a cry of players' are described as assets of enviable value (3, ii. 294-6). How many shares originally fell to Shakespeare there is no means of determining. Records of later subdivisions suggest that they did not exceed two. The Globe was an exceptionally large and popular playhouse. It would accommodate some two thousand spectators, whose places cost them sums varying between 2d. and 2s. 6d. The receipts were therefore considerable, hardly less than £25 daily, or some £8,000 a year. According to the documents of 1635, an actor-sharer at the Globe received about £200 a year on each share, besides his actor's salary of £180. Thus Shakespeare drew from the Globe Theatre, at the lowest estimate, more than £500 a year in all.

"His interest in the Blackfriars Theatre was comparatively unimportant, and is less easy to estimate. The often-quoted documents on which Collier depended to prove him a substantial shareholder in that playhouse have long been proved to be forgeries. The pleas in the lawsuit of 1635 show that the Burbages, the owners, leased the Blackfriars Theatre after its establishment in 1597 for a long term of years to the master of the Children of the Chapel, but bought out the lessee at the end of 1609, and then 'placed' in it 'menplayers which were Hemings, Condell, Shakespeare, &c. To these and other actors they allotted shares in the receipts, the shares numbering eight in all. The profits were far smaller than at the Globe, and if Shakespeare held one share (certainty on the point is impossible), it added not more than £100 a year to his income, and that not until 1610.

"His remuneration as dramatist between 1599 and 1611 was also by no means contemptible. Prices paid to dramatists for plays rose rapidly in the early years of the seventeenth century, while the value of the author's 'benefits' grew with the growing vogue of the theatre. The exceptional popularity of Shakespeare's plays after 1599 gave him the full advantage of higher rates of pecuniary reward in all directions, and the seventeen plays which were produced by him between that year and the close of his professional career in 1611 probably brought him an average return of £20 each, or £340 in all—nearly £30 a year. At the same time the increase in the number of Court performances under James I., and the additional favour bestowed on Shakespeare's company, may well have given that source of income the enhanced value of £20 a year.

"Thus Shakespeare in the later period of his life was earning above £600 a year in money of the period. With so large a professional income he could easily, with good management, have completed those purchases of houses and land at Stratford on which he laid out, between 1599 and 1613, a total sum of £970, or an annual average of £70. These properties, it must be remembered, represented investments, and he drew rent from most of them. He traded, too, in agricultural produce. There is nothing inherently improbable in the statement of John Ward, the seventeenth-century vicar of Stratford, that in his last years 'he spent at the rate of a thousand a year, as I have heard,' although we may reasonably make allowance for exaggeration in the round figures.

"Shakespeare realised his theatrical shares several years before his death in 1616, when he left, according to his will, £350 in money, in addition to an extensive real estate and numerous personal belongings. There was nothing exceptional in this comparative affluence. His friends and fellow-actors, Heming and Condell, amassed equally large, if not larger, fortunes. Burbage died in 1619 worth £300 in land, besides personal property; while a contemporary actor and theatrical proprietor, Edward Alleyn, purchased the manor of Dulwich for £10,000 (in money of his own day), and devoted it, with much other property, to public uses."

MR. BURT SHEPARD'S DEPARTURE.

Once again the loyalty of the Water Rats to their fellow rodents was demonstrated on Friday, when Mr. Burt Shepard was at St. Pancras given a royal send-off to Australia, where he is, under contract to Harry Rickards, to delight the Antipodean public during the next six months. There was an uncommonly strong muster of Rats, who, despite adverse weather conditions and a late night overnight at the Vaudeville Club, assembled in force to bid God-speed to the travelling member. Among those on the platform were Prince Rat Fred Ginnett, Bank Rat Will Oliver, Past King Rat Wal Pink, Peter Bijou, Dave O'Toole, Joe Pennyson, Joe O'Gorman, Percy York, Charles Warren, Frank Halker, V. L. Granville, Bill Manning, Walter Kelly, E. Edelstein, M. J. Regan, Hamilton Hill, M. P. Bentley, Tom Case, Dave Pigott, Harry Webber, Teddy Marks, Hy. Wemburn, H. C. Hibberd, Jacob Hyams, Dan Ricardo, Will Hanvarr, Herbert Austin, and Douglas Miller. As the train steamed out of the station the anthem of the Water Rats was sung with great fervour, Mr. Burt Shepard leading off. Mr. Shepard sails per R.M.S. Ormuz, and opens at the Tivoli, Sydney, on his arrival.

BATTERSEA PALACE.

A most attractive bill is being submitted during the current week at this palatial place of amusement. After a very lively overture by the orchestra, under the capable bâton of Mr. H. Lucas, Roy Beavis gives some very good samples of magic, and wins applause for his efforts; Miss Bertie Lewis as a follower of Vesta Tilley, dressed in an immaculate grey suit, which fits her admirably, sings "Don't you think so?" and "Father often did the same," to the satisfaction of the audience. A smart lady juggler is seen in Mme. Renée, who introduces some excellent tricks. Messrs. Kenway and Emery give a very amusing dialogue, entitled She Would Have a Soldier, the male partner being very smart in his cross-talk. A turn that is a little away from that usually seen is presented by Mr. Charles Tuppen, of Camberwell, who lately won the championship at the Horse Show for coach-horn tootling by playing a fine selection from The Mikado and some old-time ballads with success. The most popular and original act is that presented by Ruhart, who adopts a very eccentric make-up, and with a most elaborate fit-up gives a very good burlesque of a conjurer, causing the audience to burst into laughter. He certainly deserves all the applause he receives, for his performance is decidedly novel. Another amusing item is Jack Collinson's combination, including Frank Marney as the inimitable Jimmy Green in the evergreen sketch Topsy-Turvy School. In spite of the time that it has been before the public, it still has the power to cause hearty laughter. Julia Gilbert, a versatile artist, is to be commended for her rendering of "Nightingale" and "I never knew how much I loved you." The Sisters Edwards are good exponents on the drums, as well as charming vocalists and nimble dancers. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux bring one of the most successful programmes seen at this hall to a close with pictures, entitled The Stormy Winds, The Busy Slavey, and Too Old to Work. Mr. James McCarthy, the popular resident-manager, assiduously studies the comfort of his numerous patrons.

At the fête organised for the Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans at Chelsea Hospital, T.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught attended an al-fresco entertainment in the Eldorado Theatre. Among the chief entertainers were Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. Harry Tate, and Mr. Harry Fragson. T.R.H. expressed the greatest satisfaction at the manner in which the arrangements had been carried out by Messrs. Fred Trussell and John Le Hay.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1½; Canterbury, ½; Empire, (15s. paid), 1½, ditto (10s. paid), 1; London Pavilion ordinary 3 5-16, ditto pref. 4½; Metropolitan, 10s.; Moss' Empire, 5, ditto 5 per cent. pref., 3⅜; Oxford, 6½; Palace, 1; Tivoli, 5½; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 7-16.

At the garden party at Buckingham Palace on Monday last a great crowd gathered round the Punch and Judy show of Prof. Smith, and for nearly forty minutes the guests stood before the show watching the working out of the evergreen tragedy of Punch and Judy.

At the Palace Theatre, Dundee, last Friday night (3rd inst.), whilst Miss Beattie Bloom was singing her latest successful song, entitled "Always keep a bit of silver in your inside pocket," a gentleman in the stalls stood up in the audience, and, placing his hand in his inside pocket, threw Miss Bloom a handful of silver.

The Awards.—The three interim Awards and the final Award, corrected and revised by George Ranken Askwith, K.C., the official arbitrator appointed to the music hall dispute, may be had in pamphlet form at The Era Offices. Copy, including postage, three-halfpence. Address, The Publisher, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

MORTON AS AL FRESCO CATERER.

Mr. Charles Morton arranged to open the North Woolwich Gardens on the Whit Monday (1868) that followed the Oxford fire. There was a time, it will be remembered, writes Mr. Chance Newton in his admirable sketch of the career of the "Father of the Halls," that whatever fête was put on there it was sure to rain tremendously during the whole time of the entertainment. So much so, that this resort became known as the regular abiding place of Jupiter Pluvius. For some time during Mr. Morton's tenure, however, the Gentleman with the Watering Pot graciously stayed his hand, and for a time all went as merry as the marriage bell mentioned by the too-much-married bard Byron.

Undismayed by the heavy blow which he had suffered by the destruction of the Oxford, Charles Morton set to work at North Woolwich with right good-will and characteristic courage. He had all the lovely flowers and trees of these gardens put in proper arboricultural order, and the pathways strewn with fine sea-shells, which glittered like jewels in the sun's rays—whenever there was any sun to send those rays forth. All the different buildings in the Gardens were thoroughly overhauled, a new stage was put in the Concert Hall, and two magnificent dancing platforms were added to the other attractions. To the usual concerts, given daily and nightly, there were tacked on what was then rare, namely, a Sunday Concert, of a very refined order.

For the usual week-day warblings, of course, many popular comic singers of the day were chartered, and in addition to the excellent musical programmes of this kind, there were to be found, both indoors and outdoors, quite a number of other entertainments. These included wondrous feats by the best acrobats, farces and ballets in the theatre, dancing on the two large platforms, and performances by sundry gymnasts who "flew through the air with the greatest of ease," as George Leybourne used to say in his then popular "Flying Trapeze" song.

An exceedingly picturesque feature at these Gardens was a painting representing the Heights of Magdala, and on one gala occasion there was invited a number of Volunteers, who presented a fine mimic representation of the famous storming of those heights. What with the cannonading, the mortar-firing, the martial music, and the inevitable "grand display of fireworks," the whole scene was both interesting and animated. The hoisting of the Union Jack was the signal for a striking feu de joie. The National Anthem was given by the massed military bands, which included six Volunteer contingents, besides the two extensive bands belonging to the Gardens.

Speaking of the Volunteers' visit to North Woolwich Gardens, it will to many be interesting to note that both Manager Charles Morton and his brother, William (who, of course, assisted him in this al fresco enterprise) had a good deal to do with the development of the Volunteer system, now displaced by the new Territorial Army, then comparatively in that state in which Charles Dickens's holiday-maker described Steam—to be—namely, "only in its infancy." It is a great credit to both Mortons, that at a time when the Volunteer idea was much decried and sniffed at, they gave frequent valuable assistance to the officers engaged in the promotion of that system. In point of fact, William Morton, after being in the ranks of the First Surrey Artillery Volunteers, soon became a senior sergeant, then second-lieutenant, and anon first lieutenant thereof.

Harking back awhile to North Woolwich Gardens, it should be added that during the last three months of Mr. Morton's season thereat continual success resulted. Unlike the time when poor William Holland held the sway there, good old Sol thought fit to shine for an extensive period every day, and the said Holland's relentless foe, Jupiter Pluvius, appeared to be enjoying what professionals call "a well-earned rest." As the autumn shades drew nigh, Morton prepared two mammoth fêtes to last two days and two nights. For these grand events the Gardens were decorated with all sorts of flags, national and otherwise, many of which were borrowed from the other Woolwich's Arsenal and Dockyard.

But lo! at the very hour of starting the first of these gigantic entertainments, Manager Morton's North Woolwich luck suddenly changed! The rain began to pour down in such torrents as though it had made up its mind to make up for the three months during which it had been "resting." The tents were soaked through and through, and the once proud flags clung in soaked fashion to the flagstaffs. Although there was no shadow of a suggestion that the deluge would abate, the Manager, being always of a most punctual turn of mind, had the Gardens opened at the moment of the time originally announced. For a long while, not a visitor hove in sight, but in due course some few arrived. As yet, however, there was no indication of the coming of the artists, or of the members of the orchestra. Nothing daunted, the Manager took ferry over to South Woolwich, and there contrived to secure from his military and other friends a sufficient number of skilful instrumentalists to form a full-sized band.

Of course the outdoor shows, and especially a grand balloon ascent, which had been arranged, had to suffer according to the line spoken by poor King Lear on a similar wet and stormy occasion, and "bide the pelting of the pitiless storm." Some few hours later the rain and the wind began to simmer down, and the gallant aeronaut at once proceeded to carry out his contract. Amid the cheers of what, under less moist circumstances, would have been the multitude, the balloon went up, and later it was discovered that it had descended many miles away. In due course, however, the bold balloonist returned to the Gardens and proceeded to make arrangements for the second Mammoth Fête.

To the general joy of all concerned, at the starting of this fête the sun again shone out, and the gigantic programme was carried out to the letter, and in the presence of a huge gathering. This programme, it may be mentioned, included a performance of John Gay's famous play, The Beggar's Opera, the enormous success of which at the time of its production by Manager Rich, in the reign of good Queen Anne (since deceased), gave rise to the celebrated quip that it "Made Rich gay and Gay rich."

This was the last fête given by Mr. Morton at these once historic Gardens. For awhile he thought of trying his fortune there again, but when the balance-sheet came out, and when he also found that so much more would have to be expended before any greatly beneficial result could be hoped for, he resolved to quit, rather than to risk all his resources on so inevitably precarious a venture, and one so utterly at the mercy of the elements.

THE Queen and suite were present at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Monday evening, at the performance of Otello.

THE Three Röhrs—who are booked for an extended tour (about two years) in America—are fulfilling a short engagement at the White City, Manchester, where they give, four times daily, a daring cycle exhibition inside a large steel globe. They ride ordinary bicycles at a great speed and pick up small objects from the bottom of the cage while they are in a horizontal position. A most sensational feat is that of "looping the loop" by Mr. John Röhr, who provides the motive power by pedalling his bicycle while the cage is turned up on end.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1908.

THE CULT OF THE DANCER.

HOMER called dancing "the sweetest and most perfect of human enjoyments"; and he doubtless meant to include both the performers and the spectators in those who obtained delight from the practice. A phenomenon of the present season has been the remarkable vogue which has been attained by the efforts of Miss MAUD ALLAN and Miss ISADORA DUNCAN, the one at the Palace and the other at the Duke of York's Theatre. Dancing as an "entertainment of the stage" has had its ups and downs. We do not refer to the evolutions of the corps de ballet, which, with their semi-spectacular attraction, are always acceptable; but to the efforts of the individual "star" artist. There have been various phases in the history of this agreeable art; and we seem to be witnessing one of those periodical "booms" of dancing which occur in England from time to time.

Dancing has one great advantage; it is impossible for the amateur to excel in it. To become a first-rate danseuse it is necessary to go through a very severe physical training, and to keep it up by strenuous practice. It is true that, like acting, the amateur element has every now and then attempted to intrude itself. LOUIS XIII. and LOUIS XIV. both took part publicly in ballets; but the latter monarch "paid his footing" by founding an Academy of Dancing with the famous LULLY as its chief composer. The introduction of female dancers did not take place until 1681; hitherto, the males had had it all their own way. With the advent of LOUIS XIV.'s corpulence, and consequent indifference, ballet became unfashionable; but, in the early part of the eighteenth century, it was galvanised into favour by the feats of Mlle. SALLE and the CAMARGO, the latter, we are told, being "able to do eight entre-chats before touching the ground"—a remarkable performance, truly. These ladies had undoubtedly a great vogue, and they are favourably mentioned by such a sharp critic as VOLTAIRE. It was in the first half of the nineteenth century that the individual danseuse shone forth with glory in Great Britain. It is not easy, from the data which have drifted down to us, to understand the enthusiasm created by TAGLIONI, FANNY ELSSLER, and CERITO. TAGLIONI was especially adored. "Songs," says Mr. REGINALD ST. JOHNSTON, in his excellent "History of Dancing," "were composed about her, books and music were dedicated to her, and Taglioni hats, dresses, and overcoats were seen in all the shop-windows. The theatres at which she appeared were crowded to the doors." FANNY ELSSLER, her rival, was only a little less fondly worshipped. And it should be noted that this admiration was not that of an aristocratic clique, or of a body of influential friends. TAGLIONI and ELSSLER reigned in the hearts of the people, who saw in their performance an exquisiteness and a beauty of movement which cannot be conveyed to us in print.

There was much in the old style of ballet dancing that savoured of the merely mechanical, such as the "regulation" walk on "the points," and other customary exhibitions of physical strength and skill; and it is easy to understand how the style degenerated. It was not until many years later that a new form of the art, called "skirt dancing," was presented to the public at the Gaiety Theatre by Miss KATE VAUGHAN. As Mr. ST. JOHNSTON says: "The grace and charm of the new style could not be denied; and the superiority, if only from an artistic point of view, of this form of dancing—built on the old Greek model—over the stiff and conventional movements of the Italian school was evident." Miss VAUGHAN was one of those born artists whose charm and talent are self-evident at the outset, and for years she was the idol of the admirers of stage-dancing. The new school had many votaries, and the popularity of Miss ALICE LETHBRIDGE, Miss SYLVIA GREY, Miss FLORENCE LEVEY, Miss LETTY LIND, Miss TOPSY SINDEN, and Miss MABEL LOVE was very great. How intense was the admiration that was lavished upon Miss VAUGHAN may be estimated by the following extract from Lady BURNE-JONES's biography of her husband: "Another and different vision also flits across my mind in the form of the wonderful dancer KATE VAUGHAN, 'MIRIAM ARIADNE SALOMÉ VAUGHAN,' as EDWARD called her. Never shall I forget seeing him and RUSKIN fall into each other's arms in rapture upon accidentally discovering that they both adored her." In the South African grave of KATE VAUGHAN lie buried many of the pleasantest memories of one's youth.

The tendency of modern dancing is to develop in the direction of intrinsic beauty, and to depart from the more or less acrobatic achievements of former years. The exhibition of these latter is on the same par as disclosing the machinery which works a show. The hard and, at first, painful exercises of the trained danseuse are valuable, not in themselves, but as conferring the wonderful grace and ease which result from complete command of every limb and muscle. They are not in themselves pleasing to view, suggesting, as they do, difficulty and suffering; and they are unusual and unnatural. CAMARGO was doubtless a more accomplished dancer for being able to do eight entre-chats in the air; but a spectator of taste would have echoed the remark of Dr. JOHNSON, who, when told that an elaborate piece of pianoforte-playing by a lady was difficult, said that he heartily wished it had been impossible. The beauty of the dancing of Miss MAUD ALLAN and Miss ISADORA DUNCAN lies in the art with which art is concealed, in the illusive spontaneousness of its expression, in the way in which natural movements are chosen and harmonised to produce an entrancing result. The beauty of the human figure in repose is many times doubled when the picture is a "moving" one; when each beautiful pose is followed by another equally exquisite; and when, by artistic selection, the ugly and the awkward are eliminated, and only the pose "of purest ray" is presented to the beholder.

"THE SHADOW ON THE BLIND."

Ned Mortimer .....MR. STAFFORD SMITH
Charles Mortimer .....MR. E. BEAUMONT
Inspector Webb .....MR. J. JOHNSON
Goggles .....MR. E. L. VICTOR
Mary Mortimer ....MISS MARY STAFFORD SMITH

A sensational playlet usually finds a place in Mr. T. S. Dickie's programme at the popular variety house hard by Victoria Station, and that in the current week's bill, written and produced by Mr. Stafford Smith, and played for the first time on Monday, met with the approval of the large audience, and is an interesting and exciting playlet. The principal character is Ned Mortimer, a tramp, who returns to the village which he left some years previously rather suddenly, having robbed his own brother Charles. Charles is now a Scotland-yard detective, and is expected home at his farmhouse in the country by his wife, Mary, who, on her return from a walk, finds the tramp in the kitchen, where he has been helping himself to the food that has been prepared for Charles. Mary soon recognises her precious brother-in-law, and is eventually persuaded by Ned not to mention to her husband that she has seen him, and the tramp departs. When Charles arrives we learn that he has been sent to the village to try and find the murderer of a farmer who has been robbed and killed, and suspicion falls on a tramp who was seen in the neighbourhood at the time. After the detective has gone to consult with the local police inspector, Ned again makes his entry, and as he is likely to be captured if he leaves the house, Mary tells him to hide in an adjoining room, following him in. Charles returning, and not finding his wife, and learning from a stupid countryman, Goggles, of her visitor, turns out the gas, and sees the shadow on the blind of his wife and a stranger. When Mary comes out he accuses her of concealing a lover, but Ned reveals himself, and after angry words between the brothers, in which the tramp swears he did not commit the murder, but will not peach on the real culprit, his pal, he goes to an adjoining room and shoots himself, just as he is about to be arrested. Mr. Stafford Smith, an actor of much experience and ability, was responsible for an effective impersonation of the ne'er-do-well Ned; Mr. E. Beaumont made a forcible and earnest Charles; the comic relief was supplied by Mr. E. L. Victor, very funny as the clumsy chawbacon Goggles; and Miss Mary Stafford Smith was natural and easy as the sorely-tried Mary Mortimer.

A very popular comedian in the programme at the Standard is Mr. Sam Mayo, the immobile one, his two songs "Little by little, and bit by bit" and "A terrible tale" being so mirth-provoking that a third was asked for and given. Another funny man who was successful in creating merriment was Mr. Geo. Collins, who has a droll ditty in "Bread and dripping for dinner," the lament of a henpecked husband whose wife keeps him on very frugal fare. The Crown Trio, who appear as two gallant sons of Mars, and a demure waiting-maid, harmonise tunefully, and sing some popular numbers agreeably, their turn being greatly enjoyed; and the Delomes are particularly expert step and clog-dancers, their smartly-worked turn being loudly applauded. Burns, Emerson, and Smith, American darkey entertainers, submit a pleasing interlude of song and dance, the comedian of the trio doing some clever somersaulting; Hughes and Carney, cross-talk comedians, have a funny football gag and an absurdly laughable boxing act; and Miss Daisy Hicks, an attractive comedienne, contributes a couple of entertaining ditties in "If you don't want lots of gold" and "I've got no right to love you." Mostol's musical act is varied, novel, and appreciated at its true worth; and Memora, "the living book of dates," answers questions put him from all parts of the house swiftly and accurately, and certainly has a marvellous memory. A delightful series of pictures on the Edisonograph are Water Babies; or, The Little Chimney Sweep, an adaptation of Charles Kingsley's story; and other films shown are The Theatrical Garden Party, The Sausage Stealer, Miss Pimpernel's Gown, and Too Much Champagne. Mr. Sid Owen, Scotch character comedian, and Miss Alice Hughes and company in The Star of the Bazaar are also on the programme. Mr. Maurice Volny is the courteous and astute assistant-manager here, and the capable little band is under the careful control of Mr. Frederick Allwood.

OWING to her continued success in Africa, Miss Crissie Cross was induced to prolong her engagement, and did not arrive last week, as stated in these columns, but is due to arrive to-day (Saturday).

MR. RANDOLPH KING opens at the Oxford for three weeks next Monday, and is now booked well into 1911, Mr. Harry Day having taken over his bookings entirely.

SHAKESPEARE AND FREEMASONRY

Mr. Lewis M. Miller has been writing in the Freemason, calling attention to the remarkable coincidence and correspondence between Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man and the seven stages of Masonic existence. He remarks:—

You remember that Shakespeare says:—

All the world's a stage
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages.

Having thus laid down his general proposition, he enters into particulars:—

I.

At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.

That's the E.A. He has just entered upon Masonic life. As yet he is but a callow fledgling in Masonry. He knows little of its principles, and has but slight appreciation of the wisdom crystallised in its lectures. Like the infant, he cannot walk or even stand alone. He takes his Masonic nourishment in liquid form, from the nursing bottle and spoon, for solid food is too strenuous for his digestion. But we are willing to coddle him for a while, for the good we expect of him in the future.

II.

Then the whining schoolboy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school.

That's the F.C.. He has now reached the formative and educational period of Masonic life, the period of physical growth and mental development. Like all youth, he entertains extravagant ideas of his own endowments and capabilities, and dreams day dreams and night dreams of his own future achievements. But, like the larva in the chrysalis, he is still in a transition state, and far from perfect, giving no hint as yet, except to the eye of faith, of his future beauty and splendour.

III.

And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress's eyebrow.

That's the M.M. He has now attained the full stature and perfection of Masonic manhood, and stands before the world a just and upright Mason, challenging its respect for the sterling qualities that go to make up his character. He is full of life and vigour, his hot blood courses through his veins, and he is anxious to accomplish something in the arena of life. Creation and procreation are his essential characteristics.

IV.

Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth.

That's the Junior Warden. The ordinary affairs of life no longer satisfy him. He is fired with ambition to win Masonic honours, and, as the soldier seeks the bubble reputation even in the cannon's mouth, so the Junior Warden is ready to fight his way onward and upward, and tread round after round of the ladder that leads to fame and honour within our mystic circle. And he will not be satisfied until the royal purple of our fraternity rests upon his honoured shoulders.

V.

And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part.

That's the Senior Warden. As the justice deems himself but little lower than the supreme court, so the Senior Warden deems himself but little lower than the Master. The goal is just in sight, and the wire edge is worn off his ambition. He has grown more sedate, for he can afford to wait for the honour that will surely come. His dignity is something oppressive, for is he not the pillar of strength, the main guy of the Lodge, the stay and support of the whole institution? He has filled his head full to bursting of the wisdom and traditions of the elders. The fledglings of the flock gaze upon him in awe, and still the wonder grows,

That one small head should carry all he knows.

And this accumulated wisdom he accommodatingly doles out to his less informed Brethren upon the slightest provocation.

VI.

The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slippered pantaloon!
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again towards childish treble, pipes
And whistles in its sound.

That's the Master. He has reached the summit. He has grown old in Masonry; he is the ripe and mellow, rich and fragrant fruit upon the tree. He no longer represents the energy, and activity, and ambitions of Masonry, but represents the pillar of wisdom. He lives in the happy reflection consequent upon a well-spent life, and will die in the hope of a glorious immortality.

VII.

Last scene of all,
That ends this strange, eventful history,
In second childishness and mere oblivion:
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

That's the Past Master.

THE ALEXANDRA, PONTEFRACT.

Monday night witnessed the opening of Pontefract's first permanent theatre, and in the Alexandra Theatre of Varieties the townspeople have undoubtedly one of the handsomest and best-fitted-up houses in the country. The interior is exceedingly pretty, and the stage is large enough to put on the biggest turn travelling. The decorating and furnishing work has been done by the well-known firm of Messrs. A. R. Dean and Sons, of Birmingham, and to the smallest detail everything has been carried out on the most up-to-date principle. The management have been very fortunate in their choice of general manager, and in Mr. Tom Diacoff they have engaged one who knows the theatrical ropes well, and under whose supervision the venture already shows every likelihood of being a great success.

An excellent bill was put on on Monday, every one of the nine turns being good. The Lizette Troupe of lady acrobats had a fine reception, their exceedingly clever performance being well appreciated. The Yorkshire Mill Lasses sing their sentimental songs as well as ever, and their capital voices took the crowded audience by storm. In a programme of excellent variety one of the best turns is that of Arthur Alexander and Co., whose powerful presentation of the well-written sketch, For the Honour of the Family, won for them loud applause. Patty Yole's impersonation of the little girl was alike most amusing and clever, and is one of the best things this comedienne has done; and Sam Ropely gives a side-splitting character sketch, in which the Man in Blue is parodied, to the great amusement of the house. Other attractive turns are presented by Edwards and Dacre, in a duologue "What a life!"; the Izons, Arthur and Ada, in song, patter, and dancing; Molly O'Guarde, sentimental vocalist; and Harry Keeble, an up-to-date ventriloquist. Altogether the venture had an excellent send-off, and Mr. Diacoff and his directors are to be heartily congratulated on their enterprise.

MR. ADNEY PAYNE'S WILL.

A painful story of the relations of Mrs. Clara Agnes Adney Payne with the children of her late husband, Mr. George Adney Payne, music-hall proprietor, was told during the hearing in the Probate Court on Friday, the 3rd inst., of the suit brought by his eldest son, Mr. Walter Payne, and his son-in-law, Mr. Walter Gibbons, who, as executors, propounded a will dated May 19, 1904, as the last will of Mr. Adney Payne. Mrs. Payne replied that that will was revoked by a subsequent will which had never been revoked, but which could not be found, and by which the testator left his property equally between her and his children by his former marriage. The executors by their reply denied Mrs. Payne's allegations, and said that the will she wished to put forward was not duly executed.

Mr. McCall, K.C., in opening for the widow, regretted that he would have to tell a story which was in some respects extremely painful and unpleasant.

The President asked if that were so whether it was a case that must be fought.

Sir Edward Carson, K.C., for the executors, thought the matter could be fought out without unnecessary pain, as it was purely a question as to whether a will was made and executed, but it must be fought.

Mr. McCall went on to say that in the year 1898 the testator was a gentleman who was busily engaged in the management of a considerable number of music halls in and around London. He had a large sum invested in them, and he possessed other securities, from which he derived a very considerable income, and which enabled him to live in considerable luxury, maintaining one house in London and another in the country. In February of that year he had made a will, under which he had appointed his son and his solicitor executors, and had divided his estate into four shares, one to each of his children, the eldest being the son Walter, and the others girls. Mrs. Payne had been a well-known performer at various London theatres and halls under the stage name of Ethel Earle. In that year the late Mr. Payne had many opportunities of seeing her, and he became very much attached to her. They were engaged, and on Nov. 15 they were married. At that time Mr. Walter Payne, the testator's eldest son, was reading for the bar. He had done his best to prevent the marriage, but had failed. Mrs. Payne had been earning something like £50 a week, but she gave up her profession at her husband's request, he saying that she had enough to do to look after two houses.

In 1899 he told her he felt it his duty to provide for her, and he gave her a copy of the will he was about to make. It showed that the estate was to be provided into five shares, of which she was to have one absolutely. Between the time of the copy being made and the execution of the will it was apparently altered, and she was to have only the income of a fifth during her life. At the end of 1899 Mr. Walter Payne was treating his stepmother in a way which, if her statement was accepted, was scandalously bad. Having failed in preventing the marriage, he spread reports about her among their friends, and did what he could to turn his father against the wife. Some of these reports came to the knowledge of Mr. and Mrs. Payne, and attempts were made to stop them. At the end of that year Mr. Payne was induced to make a codicil, striking out of the will the benefit that he had given to his wife. At that time the relations between husband and wife were very much strained, but it was not necessary to go into the details or to apportion the blame, especially in view of the happier circumstances that followed. Mrs. Payne felt bound to insist that the children who had stirred up the strife should be removed from the house, and should reside elsewhere, but being unable to persuade her husband to adopt that course, she filed a petition for judicial separation on Dec. 17, 1902. That was pending when, in January, 1903, she went to stay with a Mr. and Mrs. Wood, who were old friends of the family. While with them she and her husband accidentally met, and in spite of the interference of Mr. Walter Payne, who tried to prevent the reconciliation, they became once more on very happy terms.

Mr. Payne made a settlement of a considerable amount of furniture on his wife, and, with one small exception, they afterwards led the happiest and most affectionate of lives till his sudden death in May, 1907. About May, 1904, a will, which was prepared by Mr. Walter Payne, who had become a barrister, was executed, and under it Mrs. Payne took no interest whatever. Between May and September, 1904, a will was executed, which Mrs. Payne now propounded. Her husband told her his views of a husband's duty to provide for his wife, and especially under such circumstances as existed in his case, and he went on to state in the most distinct terms the provision he had made for her. That will gave her one-fifth of his property absolutely, and it was kept in the safe at their house at Herne Bay, where in the autumn of 1906 she saw it. She saw it was signed by her husband and attested, and that it gave her what he told her he had given her by the will of 1899. The will and its contents were referred to on several occasions by the testator. It was necessary for Mr. Payne to go abroad to engage artists and see how the halls abroad were conducted, and during his absence he wrote her many letters of the most affectionate character, containing the warmest expressions towards her. In October, 1906, he bought a motor car for her. She learned to drive, and became a very skilled driver. Husband and wife derived great pleasure in motoring together. On May 5, 1907, they were driving near Herne Bay, when a cyclist who was approaching lost his head, and rode across in front of the car. In trying to avoid him Mrs. Payne ran into the hedge, the car was overturned, Mr. Payne was seriously injured, and on May 15 he died from a clot of blood on the brain. During the ten days when he knew that his recovery was doubtful he told both doctors and nurse, as well as other people, about the provision he had made for his wife. After his death Mr. Walter Payne took possession of the house and its contents, refused to allow Mrs. Payne access to anything, and the will which had been in the safe had not been discovered since. The case the executors were setting up was that the will which the lady saw was a bogus document, drawn up by the testator to deceive his wife, but that was a story of cruel and mean fraud that ought not to be taken as proved against a dead man except on overwhelming evidence.

The President suggested that as the question was the proof of the execution of the will, a jury was not really required.

Counsel agreed, and the jury was discharged.

Mrs. Adney Payne, who, while the counsel had been telling the story of her married life, had been sitting at the solicitors' table quietly crying, gave evidence, but had to pause from time to time to recover her composure, particularly when telling how her husband died. She was asked with regard to her relations to her step-children, and then as to the disappearance of the will she said she had seen.

The President: There is no suggestion in the pleadings that Mr. Walter Payne made away with the will. It is a very serious matter. Under the statute it amounts to a felony. If that is to be the suggestion, the pleadings will have to be amended. Let us have it out plain. Are you (to Mr. McCall) going to suggest that this gentleman has made away with the will?

Mr. McCall: I cannot suggest that.

The President: Then there is no good going into the question of his relations with the defendant. How is it admissible?

Mr. McCall: I cannot go to the length of saying that any particular person concealed or destroyed the will.

Mrs. Payne went on to say that her late husband asked her to leave the stage on her marriage, and she was very glad to fall in with his wishes. From the time of the reconciliation to the time of her husband's accident she had no communication with her step-children. At the date of the will of 1904 she and her husband were living perfectly friendly together. He begged her to make friends with the children, and she promised to do so. When he was on the Continent he wrote to her three times a day. One day in the autumn of 1906 when they were staying at the house at Herne Bay, the vicar and his wife were coming to dinner, and witness went to the safe to get the silver for dinner. In the safe there were papers and jewellery belonging to the first Mrs. Payne, and the will She saw that it left her a fifth of the estate absolutely. She could not remember the names of the witnesses. She did not read it through; she trusted her husband, who had never told her an untruth. After his death she came up to London and stayed for a few days. She was so broken-hearted and wretched that she hardly remembered what took place when she saw Mr. Walter Payne. She telephoned to Mr. Gibbons that she was returning to Herne Bay, and he replied that the servants had strict orders not to admit her. There was still linen and furniture of hers at the house, and she could not get it. She saw the will also in November, 1906, when they had a large Primrose League meeting.

Cross-examined: She did not know the handwriting of the will; it was not that of her husband.

After the luncheon interval Mr. McCall intimated that the Court would not be further troubled with the matter. Counsel had agreed that the case for Mrs. Payne should not be pressed further, and the plaintiffs agreed that her costs as between solicitor and client should come out of the estate. On behalf of the defendant, probably on behalf of the plaintiff as well, he wished to say that any imputations that had been made were withdrawn.

The President: I am glad; it is quite a proper thing.

Sir Edward Carson: I have made no imputation against the lady, and I should be sorry to think there was any.

The will of May 19, 1904, propounded by the executors, was then formally proved in solemn form and pronounced for.

THE OXFORD.

The audiences at the Oxford are no strangers to the protean actor, for have they not witnessed the clever performances of R. A. Roberts, whose work is so much more interesting than that of the Continental actor, with wild gesticulation and a language not "understanded" of the people. But complete plays presented by one performer are nevertheless somewhat rare on the variety stage, and even rarer still is their presentation by a woman. It is true that in The Comstock Mystery, produced at the Oxford last week, Miss Charlotte Parry, the American protean actress, does not take the whole of the characters. She accounts for seven of them, however, and gives evidence of being a clever impersonator of character, with keen observation. The "mystery," which is unravelled by a Pinkerton detective, to whom Sherlock Holmes, if he existed, should take off his hat, concerns the murder of Mr. Comstock, who has been done to death in his own flat. The detective suspects that someone is concealed in a cupboard, and threatens loudly to use his shooting iron. A voluble Frenchwoman emerges, and endeavours to evade arrest by drawing a dagger. The "links" are speedily clapped upon her, and she is removed, to make way for an Irish washerwoman, who has been imbibing too much "potheen." Later comes a young girl of twelve, who on her visit to Mr. Comstock just previous to the murder finds there a poor woman, Mary Hether, who carries a baby, and Mary's crippled brother, Pete. Mary eventually confesses that she committed the crime, and is taken off to the lock-up. Miss Parry's work is skilfully differentiated. It is difficult to imagine that the deformed Pete and the smart Frenchwoman could be one and the same person. Mr. Reginald Parry's Detective has all the necessary coolness and alertness, and Mr. Arthur Jones is responsible for an impressive performance of the silent Sergeant. The play is a distinct acquisition to the variety theatres on this side.

A turn of special excellence is that submitted by Mr. John Le Hay, one of the few comedians who have become eminent on both the legitimate and variety stages. We remember Mr. Le Hay as a ventriloquist, as an excellent tenor singer, and as a chief comedian in the representation of Véronique. These are just a very few of his credentials. He has established another by his admirable impersonation of the blind mendicant in Poor Beggar, a sketch that gives him all the necessary opportunities of exploiting his drollery. He is an optimist, and knows the world. In rapid succession he exhibits placards bearing the "legends" "Blind from Birth," "Run over by a Motor," &c., and burlesques the idea of a morning "tub" by pouring a quartern of gin into a bird bath. The hoary old humbug, however, who had once been a member of an operatic chorus, bursts into song; and by his cheery philosophy is instrumental in restoring to each other's arms a young couple who have quarrelled. Mr. Le Hay is simply delightful, and Poor Beggar should be earmarked as a London attraction of a most laughable character.

Mr. R. H. Douglass, another actor who learnt his business in the theatres, goes extremely well with a capital monologue; Miss Madge Temple sings prettily of a "Kiss"; and the other turns have been recently noticed.

CRICKET.

Favoured with a fine afternoon, Sam Mayo's eleven and the Empire, Camberwell, team had a very pleasant afternoon at cricket. The Empire won the toss, and decided to bat first. The scores for the two innings were:—

EMPIRE.—T. Arnold, 4; W. Franks, 1; C. Shedden, 1; T. Pearson, 35; H. Thacker, 13; P. Ford, 0; F. Hurst, 0; F. Barker, 1; F. Alexander, 1; B. Woodger, 2; H. Heer, 13; extras, 10; total, 81.

MAYO'S ELEVEN.—Hamilton Hill, 0; F. Oray, 0; L. Gardener, 4; E. Budden, 5; C. Ryland, jun., 19; F. J. Wright, 30; S. Mayo, 7; D. Cohen, 1; Lott, 0; D. Barnard, 32 (not out); T. Cowen, 13; extras, 6; total, 117.

EMPIRE (second innings).—Total for six wickets, 83 (innings declared).

MAYO'S ELEVEN (second innings).—Total for four wickets, 32.

THE sketch Old Virginia has been played at the Pier Pavilion, New Brighton, this week by a really good company. Mr. H. Buckland, Mr. W. Pringle, Mr. L. Russell, Mr. Bert Erroll, Mr. Kit Keen, Miss Nellie Sheffield, Miss Joey Ellis, Miss Lillian Page, and Miss O. Spark are one and all first-class, and the result of their combined efforts is extremely satisfactory. Mr. W. H. Everleigh is an efficient accompanist.

AN attractive bill is presented this week at the Wakefield Hippodrome. Mlle. Sahara executes some clever dances; the Two Cycos, trick cyclists, give a smart turn; Miss Emmie Ames, in a neat song sceña, has a hearty reception; Harry Bancroft, comedian, sings in good style; the Sisters Brand comediennes, dance well; Souplessi, boneless wonder, is clever; and the Brothers Brookes, comedians, are highly successful.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Alfred Butt has been very busy this week replying to the numerous congratulations that he has received on the birth of a son and heir. The happy event occurred on Tuesday, and mother and boy are doing exceedingly well.

It need scarcely be pointed out that the reputation of the Grand Guignol in the discovery of thrilling and dramatic little plays is world-wide, and in the one-act piece Après l'Opéra, which the Empire has secured from Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who purchased the English rights of the piece, a very notable acquisition has been made by the management.

The English adaptation, After the Opera, is by Miss Nora Keith, and it will be produced by Mr. Hitchins before the month is out. The little play is packed full of sensational incidents, which take place within the space of half an hour in the neighbourhood of Park-lane, where we meet the leading characters returning from witnessing an opera at Covent Garden. The cast will include Mr. Robert Pateman, Mr. Charles Bryant, and Miss Evelyn D'Alroy.

Mr. H. B. Marinelli was recently interviewed in Paris with reference to the Olympia, which he has just taken over in conjunction with Mr. de Cottens. Mr. Marinelli stated that all was settled with respect to this theatre, and he will re-open it as an up-to-date vaudeville house in August. Drastic alterations will be made in the auditorium, and the theatre will be turned into a bona-fide music hall.

"It will be the best show in Paris," remarked the future director confidently to our correspondent, "and will run the finest turns that it is possible to procure the world over." After seeing many vicissitudes, it is to be hoped that this finely-situated theatre will have a fresh lease of life, and that the many improvements and innovations contemplated by Mr. Marinelli will ensure success.

Mr. Harry Tate's company arrived from New York on the liner Carmania last Sunday after a most successful American tour. They return for another extended tour, booked by the Keith Circuit, in September.

Mr. George Lashwood, who returns to the Hackney Empire next week, in the days of the great Vance would have been called a swell comique. But Mr. Lashwood avoids the loudness characteristic of the variety stage of the seventies, and shows perfect taste and exceptional smartness in his dress.

Mr. Horace Wheatley, the genial Irishman, provided an enjoyable turn at the Fête of the Veterans on Thursday last. He revived for this occasion his well-known song, "I'll be a soldier, too," and was accompanied on the pianoforte by his daughter, who is a very clever musician, although still in her early teens.

Mr. Albert Chevalier received a most cordial welcome back on Monday to the Coliseum, where he appeared during the first week of its reopening. He was listened to with almost breathless attention while he put before the audience his pathetic creation of an inmate of "The House." It was in a similar character that the famous comedian triumphed at the Court Theatre, but the old man at the London Coliseum touches all hearts by the eloquence of his appeal. "Mrs. 'Enery Hawkins" is still a wonderfully popular number. It has been before the public for at least fifteen years, and has a delightful humour.

Mr. Alfred Moul announces that he has induced La Belle Leonora to renew her engagement at the Alhambra. This will enable him to present a second edition of "Sal, Oh My!" in which the graceful danseuse will be seen to still greater advantage.

Mr. Alfred Butt has been obliged, owing to the great success of Miss Maud Allan, to postpone the visit of Mlle. Olga Lambart until next year. As has already been outlined in these columns, Miss Allan will present a new suite of dances on Monday next, when she will submit an interpretation of Tschaikowsky's melodious "Casse-Noisettes." In addition to the dances of the Sugar Plum Fairy, Arabian dance, and Reed Pipe dance, Miss Allan will shortly include one or two numbers from Robert Schumann's wholly delightful "Papillon" music, which should lend itself to her interpretations.

The success of the week, so far as the Palace is concerned, is a most unique picture that has been secured for the bioscope, depicting the recent motor races at Dieppe. In the race for the voiturette cars no less than five spills are most vividly shown. The race for the Motor Grand Prix was exhibited on Thursday evening. These pictures are accompanied by a special number, composed by Mr. Herman Finck, and which he has called "The Motor March."

Miss Alice Lloyd sails from New York for England on Wednesday next. She has been scoring "all along the line" with Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's songs, "Lovelight" and "I want to be among the boys."

The next meeting of the London branch of the Amalgamated Musicians' Union will take place in the club room on Thursday next at 1.15 p.m. Mr. J. B. Williams will address the meeting. Notice of all future meetings will appear in The Era.

There will be some slight changes in the Alhambra programme on Monday, when the Pantzer Brothers, return with a new entertainment, and J. W. Winton, the Australian ventriloquist, commences a re-engagement. Robert Steidl, the new humorist, who has made an instantaneous success, enters on his second week, and the Franco-British divertissement The Two Flags, with Mlle. Pomponette, is as attractive as ever, while L'Incognita, after many weeks, has not yet exhausted her répertoire.

Last Sunday the staff of the South London Music Hall enjoyed their annual outing, the venue this year being "Magical Margate." Leaving the Metropolis at early morning, the merry holiday-makers to the number of seventy reached Kent's chief seaport before noon, and at once repaired to their headquarters for the day, the King's Head Hotel, Marine front, a palatial building which commands the finest view in the borough. After a refresher outwardly—and, be it whispered, inwardly as well—the party sat down to a princely repast, served in perfect style by mine host Mr. Walter J. Abbott, whom many of our readers will recall was the "right man in the right place" at the Freemasons' Hall, London.

Mr. William Payne, the South London's ever-courteous and popular manager, presided, and beside him at the chief table were, amongst others, the evergreen Mr. Charley Coborn, of "Two lovely black eyes" fame, Mr. C. Howells, chef d'orchestre, Mr. W. Wells, Mr. H. Lynch, Mr. C Seaman, and others in responsible positions in front as well as behind the footlights. After the Royal toasts, Mr. Payne proposed "Success to the South London Palace and the Directors," and, need it be said, the bumpers had to be replenished ere the proposer had completed his peroration. Other toasts included "The Chairman" and "The Hotel Manager," after which the party broke up and went their respective ways, to join together again four hours later at "high tea."

Mr. Walter A. Salmond, lately of the Gibbons circuit, has been appointed manager of the Belfast Palace, in succession to Mr. George Harris, who goes to the Hippodrome, Portsmouth.

The magistrates have approved the plans of the new Palace Theatre of Varieties, Cheltenham, and the building operations will commence at once. The general-manager, who is the experienced and able Mr. Edward B. Shenton, intends that the new building shall be quite worthy of the town, and the architect, Mr. Winstanley, of St. Anne's-on-Sea, will utilise to the best advantage the excellent site that has been secured in the High-street.

Mr. Baskerville should feel highly gratified in view of his recent serious loss by fire, by the expressions of sympathy and much more substantial assistance offered him by a number of the most prominent and influential citizens of Maidstone. It is more than likely that he will be connected with a powerful syndicate, who have in view an excellent site for the erection of an up-to-date music hall in that town.

The New Gaiety Theatre, Clydebank, which has been closed for some weeks, has been purchased by Mr. A. E. Pickard, of the Panopticon, Glasgow. This theatre, which was only built a few years back at a cost of £5,000, has seating accommodation for upwards of 1,500, and is likely to enter on a new lease of popularity under the direction of Mr. "Ahead-of-the-Times" Pickard, as he bills himself.

Many are the congratulations that are being extended to Mr. J. R. Huddlestone, the popular manager of the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, on his approaching marriage with Mme. Rocca, of Nice, South of France, which is announced to take place in the latter part of this month at the parish church, St. Anne's-on-Sea. The event will not be celebrated in any special way on the exact day owing to the exigencies of the season, but Mr. Huddlestone proposes to invite the staff and tenants to a special evening's entertainment later in the season, when no doubt the event will be celebrated in a befitting manner.

Mr. George C. Doughty, who is touring with his sketch Captain Cupid, will on Monday, July 20, produce for Mr. Oswald Stoll at the Hippodrome, Manchester, an entirely new and original comedy-sketch, entitled A Woman's Way, written by a well-known authoress. The incidental music has been specially composed and arranged by Mr. Joseph D. Rogers, the well-known conductor.

The first annual staff outing in connection with the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, took place at Bewdley last Sunday, when weather and everything else combined to make a perfect day's enjoyment. The party, which numbered just ninety friends and employees, reached the chosen spot about ten, and the morning was given up to boating on the Severn and to strolling, for which the country around is so beautifully adapted.

After dinner, which was prepared by that excellent cook and hostess, Mrs. Woodward, at the George Hotel, Mr. Edward Foster, the resident-manager, proposed the health of the King; Mr. Lester Collingwood proposed "Moss's Empires" in his usual cordial style, the toast being received with loyal acclamation.

Mr. A. W. Matcham very cordially proposed the health of the chairman, which brought the staff to their feet cheering instanter, so much is Mr. Foster looked up to by the employees, who also exacted speeches from Mr. Harry Lucas (Mr. Foster's understudy) and Mr. J. H. Whittaker, musical-director.

"Our Guests" having been "toasted," the party proceeded per boat to Arley, tea being provided in the beautiful rose-gardens of the Harbour Inn, after which Bewdley, and finally Birmingham were reached in good time and condition. Mrs. Foster's welcome presence added to the happiness of the party, and numerous other well-known ladies were present, Messrs. Harry Lyons, A. H. Williams, Percy Thompson, Willis Crisford, and Chas. Matcham being conspicuous among the gentlemen.

In connection with the retirement of Mr. J. Lacy Lyne from the local management of the Palace, Attercliffe, a very pleasant farewell social was held on Monday evening at the Queen's Head Hotel, Attercliffe, under the presidency of Councillor J. C. Whiteley, who referred to Mr. Lyne's popularity and the success which the Palace had enjoyed mainly through his administration. Mr. Bert Lester, assistant-manager, spoke of the kindly help and benefit he had received at all times from Mr. Lyne. In his reply Mr. Lyne feelingly referred to his pleasant associations with the management and the patrons of the Palace.

Mr. Frederick Fry, the musical-director of the Palace, Bristol, has composed a march, "Your Majesties," in honour of the Royal visit to open the Avonmouth Docks on Thursday. The march was much applauded on Monday evening, full justice being done to it by the excellent Palace orchestra.

Mr. Charles Collette will pay his third visit to the Britannia Pier Pavilion, Great Yarmouth, where during next week he will give a round of his sketches, supported by Miss Joan Derry, the clever young variety actress.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of Portsmouth Hippodrome was held recently at the registered offices of the company in London, Mr. Frederick Mouillot, chairman of directors, presiding. Although the Hippodrome had only been working forty-seven complete weeks, yet after paying interest on debenture stock, directors, managing directors, and trustees for debenture holders' fees, and all the necessary working expenses, there remained a profit of £9,183 15s., out of which the directors had to discharge the loss upon the first year's working of the Hippodrome, viz., to April, 1907, amounting to £1,092 0s. 9d.

The directors had also set aside the sum of £562 5s. 8d. as a reserve for the upkeep of the building and for depreciation; the balance remaining was therefore the sum of £7,529 9s. 8d. After allowing for the interim dividend which was paid in October last year there remained a balance of £4,529 9s. 8d., out of which the directors proposed to pay a further dividend of 10 per cent. actual, making a total dividend of 20 per cent. over the year.

At the Prince's Theatre, Accrington, on Wednesday, the popular proprietor and manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod, most generously gave a complimentary matinée, to the members of the orchestra of the Hippodrome, many of whom have unfortunately suffered the loss of their instruments in the recent fire. An attractive programme was arranged, and a crowded house was the result.

Amongst the artists who kindly gave their services were Mr. Allan Carruthers, comedian; Gilbert Middleton, tenor; Tom Franks, ventriloquist; Misses Porter and Brown, duettists; Peter Campbell, silleur; Harry Finn, comedian; Master Rober Hamer, vocalist; Thomas Hamer, clog dancer; Wallace Poudrille, society entertainer; the Three Eastwoods, pedestal dancers; Mrs. Bellingham, vocalist; Mrs. Sherrocks, vocalist; and the Prince's stock company, who appeared in Act IV. of Camille and the last act of Sorrows of Satan.

The Six Brothers Luck have again scored a great hit in their new production, Lift 'Hms, Limited, which has delightful irresponsibility, and is impregnated with fun. It was produced by Mr. F. Durell at the Ardwick Empire on Monday with a success that must be very gratifying both to the author, Mr. Chris Davis, and to its clever exponents.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman, Mr. W. H. Clemart, and Mr. Wal Pink are to be the guests at a complimentary dinner given in their honour to-morrow (Sunday) at the Boulogne Restaurant, 27, Gerrard-street, Soho. During the evening a presentation is to be made, and the chair will be taken by Mr. Joe Elvin at 7.30 sharp.

Chevalier Cliquot, a performer for many years himself, speaks five different languages, and has a ripe practical knowledge gained in that very best of schools—experience. He informs us that his theatrical variety agency is growing rapidly, and that he has become a partner in Pasquier's Agency of Paris.

He has been exceedingly busy during the last fourteen days piloting around Mr. Rozenberg, director of the Apollo, Paris, and Mr. Pasquier, of the Etoile, Paris. They have visited London, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, Blackpool, and have booked some big attractions for the opening of the Paris season. Mr. Cliquot is also running his own combinations extensively through this country.

Mlle. Yvette Guilbert, who was engaged at the London Coliseum for this week, has been forbidden by her medical advisers from appearing in public for some weeks to come. Mlle. Celia Galley has deputised for her at the St. Martin's-lane house.

Miss Adele Levey and Mr. Charles Leverton produced at the Standard, Pimlico, on Saturday night a lively duologue entitled Find the Lady First. The lady in this instance is the fair Adèle herself, who plays the part of an ambitious amateur anxious to go on the stage. The entrepreneur to whom she comes discovers that she knows how to fence when she doffs her skirt, and handles the foils like an expert, and the act winds up with a burlesque of the cave scene in The Colleen Bawn, which was drolly played by the pair to a most appreciative house.

Mr. Fred Sinclair, of the famous comedy duo, Messrs. Sinclair and Whiteford, now starring on the Moss and Stoll tour, has just purchased the entire rights of the quick-change farcical duologue, Joining the Company, by Neville Lynn, originally produced with much success as a one-act play, and will place it at an early date on the halls, where the sparkling little piece should have a long and successful career.

Mr. Allen Thomas and Miss Margaret Parker, after a record tour in Australia, have returned by the Peninsular and Oriental liner Victoria. Their popularity on the ship in giving entertainments for seamen's funds, &c., was so great that the passengers presented each of them with a purse of gold. "The shops in the Bay of Biscay being closed," they were unable to buy a present for themselves.

Vasco, the mad musician, is naturally very delighted at receiving from the Earl of Lonsdale a letter, of which the following is a copy:—"14, Carlton House-terrace, Pall Mall, London, S.W., July 4, 1908.—My dear Mr. Vasco,—Many thanks for your note this morning. I can fully understand, after the violent exertions of your performance last night, that you might have missed what I wished to convey. Both His Majesty and Her Majesty were delighted with the performance, and they both thought it exceedingly clever, and the pieces into which you put feeling exceedingly pretty. Both Lady Lonsdale and myself were delighted with the performance, and think it was quite wonderful, and we are both very much indebted to you for your kindness in having come down and given such a remarkably clever and original performance. I shall be very glad to see you if you are passing by any time.—Believe me, yours truly, (Signed) Lonsdale."

Mlle. de Dio, who will be seen next week at the Hackney Empire in her mystic dances, has had the honour of performing before the Archduke Ferdinand, the Prince of Coburg, and practically the whole of the Austrian Court. A very pretty compliment was paid to her during her Vienna season.

With her husband, Mr. P. H. Boggis, and a party of friends she paid a visit to Maxim's, which is a well-known night café in Vienna. Soon after she had been seated scores of bouquets were thrown to her from all parts of the café, and in a short space of time her table was covered with beautiful flowers—so many, indeed, that she had to engage another carriage to take them to her hotel.

The news of the death of Mr. Wilfred Ashby (of the Musical Ashbys) comes to us from India through his widow, known in the profession as Lallah Ashby. The deceased gentleman, whose real name was Wilfred Clarence Byrt, suffered from abscess of the liver. An operation was tried at the General Hospital, Madras, but without success, and, much to the sorrow of his friends, he succumbed at the early age of thirty-two.

He and his talented wife first went to India in September, 1904, and were most successful in the scattered amusement houses of that vast empire, and also made hits in Burmah, Java, and the Straits Settlements. At the time of his death they had made all preparations for their return to England. Mrs. Ashby has now resumed her position with Mr. Kisto Bysack's Grand Hippodrome company, and under her professional name of Lallah Ashby is working a pretty musical act, introducing organ chimes, revolving bells, Siamese gongs, and solos on the banjo and mandoline. From Mr. Bysack she has received much consideration in her sad bereavement. Besides the widow the deceased gentleman left two boys to mourn his loss.

Mr. Ernie Myers and Miss Lily Lonsdale had been booked to appear on Monday next at the Hippodrome, Accrington, which was unfortunately burned down last week. Mr. De Frece, hearing that they were at liberty, immediately secured them for the Palace, Manchester.

Mr. B. J. Macdermott, son of the late Mr. G. H. Macdermott, who since he left the Richmond Theatre has occupied the position of assistant acting-manager at the New Cross Empire for the past eight months, is leaving to-night to commence his duties on Monday as manager at the Stratford Empire in place of Mr. T. S. Mayne, who goes to the new Tottenham Palace under Mr. Henri Gros.

With him will be Mr. Harold Nuttall, who for the past year has filled the position of assistant acting-manager at the Holloway Empire, and has been kindly released by Moss' Empires to take up his new position.

"Corkscrew," a new coster episode by William Felton, will be produced at the Paragon on July 20 by Mr. Neville Graham, who for the last two years has been touring the halls in Louis Parker's The Man in the Street, a character that had such a clever realisation at the hands of Jimmy Welch in the old Strand Theatre days. Miss Margaret Watson, recently on tour in the States with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, has been engaged to support Mr. Graham.

My Fancy, the graceful and fascinating dancer, will produce her big scena Winter, Spring, and Summer at the Oxford on Monday next.

Miss Bessie Travis wishes to thank Mr. Willmot for arranging with Mr. Mould, of Accrington, to present her next week at the Town Hall in lieu of her engagement at the Hippodrome, which was recently destroyed by fire.

Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant announce that St. George's Hall will be closed after to-day, to be reopened on Bank Holiday, Aug. 3, with a programme of new and startling mysteries and surprises.

The Spray Sisters, a couple of pretty girls, have just returned from the States after a two years' tour in the principal cities, where their beauty and ability have been heartily recognised. They are now enjoying a few weeks' rest, and have a new act in preparation.

Redford and Winchester, burlesque jugglers, who are meeting with big success at the Palace, had the honour on July 3 of appearing before their Majesties the King and Queen at the Earl of Lonsdale's, Carlton House-terrace. In spite of flattering offers, they must return to the States to play the Orpheum Circuit at the finish of the Palace engagement.

Mr. John Roach, jun., the managing-director of Ruffell's Bioscope Co., on Monday evening celebrated the happy occasion of the coming of age of his accomplished daughter, Miss Ada Gertrude Roach, by giving a dinner to about twenty friends of both sexes, chiefly connected with "Ruffell's," at Frascati's. The restaurant-manager is to be congratulated upon the quality of the dinner and Mr. Roach upon the geniality of the proceedings over which he ably presided.

After dinner the party repaired in a motor-'bus to the Royal, Holborn, where the entertainment was much appreciated. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Roach, sen., Mrs. J. Roach, jun., Mr. C. Lovesey, Mr. A. W. Walker, Mr. Joe Rosenthal, Mr. W. J. Holmes, Mr. A. C. Lovesey, Mr. and Mrs. Beecham, and others.

The special matinée given by Miss Maud Allan at the Palace Theatre on Friday on behalf of the fund for the entertainment of the foreign athletes taking part in the Olympic Games was most successful. Miss Allan has now given 141 consecutive performances at the Palace Theatre, and as on every occasion the house was sold out Mr. Butt, the managing-director, believes that her engagement has created a music-hall record for London.

Mlle. Arlette Dorgere concludes a brilliant six weeks' engagement at the Alhambra to-day. So great has been her success that there is very little doubt she will in the near future pay a return visit to the Metropolis.

Mr. Charles Carlin, of Carlin and Price, well-known sketch artists, passed away on Monday at the London County Asylum, Hanwell, of which institution he had been an inmate for some time. Mr. Leoni Clarke, "the cat king," has made himself responsible for the expenses of the funeral, which will be carried out by Mr. Theophilus Dunkley to-day, when the interment takes place at the Islington Cemetery, Finchley, at 12 o'clock.

Among the curious and most interesting attractions of the Children's Garden Party given by the Queen in honour of the birthday of Princess Victoria was the Moto-Girl, who was brought on in charge of Mr. Fred Melville in the identical miniature stage-coach which was used in the Cinderella pantomime at Drury Lane. A George III. coachman occupied the box, two living footmen stood on the rumble behind the carriage, and the team was composed of six beautiful grey ponies of diminutive size. The "doll" was produced from a box on the roof, and the manner of her treatment and behaviour occasioned uproarious merriment.

Another favourite with Queen Alexandra's little guests was Bostock's baby elephant, Little Hip, who was taken to Buckingham Palace grounds in a furniture-van. He evoked the delight of the Royal kiddies by his accomplishment of a number of tricks, in which a sense of humour was shown, and the docile creature was much admired. He is a real dwarf among elephants, and is said to be the only "performing" African elephant in Europe. Mr. Harold Hilliard escorted him from the Hungarian Exhibition, and Professor Andree put him through his paces.

Mr. Cliff Berzac's educated and docile ponies, pretty little creatures, performed on a small and swiftly revolving table, and the antics of the unrideable donkey Kruger were very funny, causing much merriment.

The anniversary of the opening of the Empire Theatre, Sunderland, was celebrated on the night of the 1st inst. At each house Mr. Harry Esden thanked the audience for their presence and for their generous support during the past twelve months. Notwithstanding the distress in the town and surrounding districts, the result had been most satisfactory.

Mr. Richard Thornton's great aim was to make the Empire a place of amusement where a man could take his wife, his sister, his daughter, or his sweetheart and enjoy a good, healthy evening's entertainment. Whether he had succeeded or not lay with them to say, but there was one thing he might mention, and that was, he was very proud to think that during the twelve months the theatre had been open not one single complaint had been received. Mr. Esden thanked the patrons and the many friends he had made during his stay in Sunderland, and acknowledged the loyalty of the staff. His speech was much applauded.

The anniversary was made a souvenir night, the admirably printed programme containing a frontispiece portrait of Dick Thornton, managing-director, and a full-page picture of Miss Vesta Tilley, who laid the foundation-stone of the house on Sept. 29, 1906, and opened it on July 1, 1907. Other illustrations include pictures of the exterior and interior, and a portrait of Mr. Harry Esden, the resident-manager.

The annual outing of the Eastbourne Hippodrome staff took place on Sunday. The party, numbering fifty-five, journeyed to Rushlake Green in char-a-bancs. Dinner was served at the Horse and Groom, where Mr. S. W. Winter, the proprietor and manager, presided. Among those present were Mr. W. Holloway (acting manager), Mr. W. H. Ash, Miss Showler, Mr. W. A. Kingett, and others. Complimentary toasts were honoured. The weather was delightfully fine, and the outing was thoroughly enjoyed.

The permanent staff of the Hamilton Hippodrome held their first annual picnic on Sunday last, under distinctly favourable weather condition. Their destination for the day was Tinto, whither they were conveyed in a char-a-banc and brake provided by Mr. M'Kay, of the County Hotel Stables. The company, to the number of forty, left at 10 a.m., and reached Tinto's slopes about 1.30. An al fresco luncheon was then partaken of, the catering arrangements being most admirably carried out by Mrs. George Clark, Townhead Street. For the success of the outing all praise is due to Mr. Thomas Verne, the go-ahead and energetic stage-manager.

Miss Lelia Rose and her husband, Mr. E. Downes-Martin, J.P., at their beautiful home, Shrigley Hall, Killyleagh, Co. Down, gave a fête for over a thousand children on Saturday last in honour of their little daughter's third birthday. The gigantic children's party was a delightful function, the weather being glorious.

Among the entertainments provided for the youngsters were conjuring, ventriloquism, &c. By kind permission of Colonel Wallace and officers, the band of the Royal Irish Rifles assisted at intervals with some excellent selections. Much fun was caused during the afternoon by the liberating of a number of huge balloons in different droll forms—fat men, pigs, elephants, policemen, &c. Very popular were the "lucky dips" in tubs of bran, from which each child received two or three toys (of which 3,000 were provided), and the delighted kiddies also received in addition a bag of sweets, bananas, oranges, cakes, and lemonade.

Sports of various kinds were thoroughly enjoyed, money and other prizes being distributed by the fair hostess. Though the fête was given for the school children, it was fully appreciated by three or four hundred adult guests who also attended. The spacious grounds were dotted at intervals with tents and marquees, which, with the temporary stage (erected for entertainments), were all gay with bunting, while the fine old trees gave ample shade from the heat of the sun to those less energetically inclined.

A happy incident in a day of unalloyed enjoyment was a surprise presentation to Mrs. Downes-Martin of a magnificent shower bouquet, composed of pale pink carnations and lilies of the valley, tied with pink streamers, a card attached being inscribed: "Presented to Mrs. E. Downes-Martin by the teachers of Killyleagh in recognition of her kindness to the school children."

The hostess responded in a neat speech of a few words, expressing her delight and thanks for the gift. The masters of the different schools also spoke to express thanks on behalf of the children, and to wish the host and hostess and their little daughter much happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Downes-Martin said: "On behalf of my wife and self, I thank you all for the evidence of the friendly feeling the people of Killyleagh have shown to us. I also wish to thank the teachers for their great assistance and the beautiful bouquet they have so kindly presented to my wife. This fête was organised to celebrate our little daughter's birthday, but was arranged for this date to also celebrate the wedding of our neighbour Colonel Rowan Hamilton's son, which took place to-day, and I ask you to join us in wishing the bride and bridegroom every happiness and give them three cheers"—an invitation that was heartily responded to. Mr. and Mrs. Downes-Martin were then cheered, and smilingly bowed their acknowledgments amidst the greatest enthusiasm.

The Alexandra Theatre of Varieties, Pontefract, opened on Monday, is one of the best places of amusement in the country. No expense has been spared in the construction of the building, and its seating accommodation and general furnishings have been carried out on a most elaborate scale. The proprietors are determined to conduct it, under the management of Mr. Tom Diacoff, in a thoroughly respectable way, so that all classes of the people may find in it a place of healthy recreation and amusement.

Princess Trixie, the educated mare belonging to Mr. W. Harrison Barnes, appeared before the King and Queen and about 400 guests at Buckingham Palace on Monday, the 6th inst., at a children's garden party, the occasion being the anniversary of the birthday of Princess Victoria (and also of the wedding of the Prince and Princess of Wales). This is the second time Princess Trixie has been commanded to appear before their Majesties, the previous occasion being in January last year at Windsor Castle, and it speaks well for the interest taken by the Royal Family in this wonderful animal that she should be requisitioned a second time.

Princess Trixie gave intelligent evidence of her owner's tutoring which greatly interested their Majesties and their guests. One of the feats accomplished was the matching from coloured ribbons the Queen's dress, and another was spelling the uncommon name of Robin. The animal returned to the White City, Old Trafford, on Tuesday, where she is delighting large numbers of people.

The stage hands of the Alhambra had their annual outing on Sunday, their destination being Clacton-on-Sea, where Host Swann, of the Brunswick Hotel, did the party right well. After dinner the toasts of "The Directors, Managing-Director, and Manager" was proposed by the stage-manager, Mr. A. G. Forde, and responded to by Mr. A. Williams, the master-carpenter. Later the party proceeded on a trip by boat to Walton-on-the-Naze, and on the jetty the visitors held a concert for the benefit of the National Lifeboat Institution, realising quite a considerable sum. Altogether a very pleasant day for all concerned.

The outing of the Empire, Camberwell, staff will take place on Sunday. The party, numbering about sixty, will leave Waterloo at 9.46 for Windsor, then by brakes to George Hard's Monkey Island Hotel, Bray, Berks, where they will have lunch. During the afternoon there will be sports and amusements, the party returning after tea to Windsor. The managing-directors of the Empire have been assisting to make this a most enjoyable day for their employees.

A new development is announced in connection with the Brighton Palace scheme, which is being fathered by Mr. Joe Lyons and an influential syndicate. The proposal for medical and electrical baths, which are to be a feature of the undertaking, has met with such enthusiastic support from the medical profession, as shown by numerous letters to the promoters, that it has been decided to make this department still more extensive. This branch will now include brine baths, for which Droitwich is famous, and other kinds.

It had been proposed to establish some fifty different baths, but this number will be doubled. To provide the necessary space it is intended to abandon the ice-skating rink originally contemplated. The patients who will avail themselves of the hydropathic advantages will stay at hotels and boarding-houses, so that the Palace scheme promises to prove more acceptable to the proprietors of such establishments than it was in the first instance.

In days of old when friends crossed the ocean the farewell at the docks was the last each heard of the other until the mail bag brought news of safe arrival on the other side. Now the good-byes may be said at the ship's side and again when she is in mid-ocean, through the wonderful Marconi apparatus. When the s.s. Cedric recently left New York Tom Macnaughten, Mike Norris, Sam Soda, and Billie Reeves, were at the ship's side wishing "bon voyage" to James Donegan and the Dunedin Family. By the aid of the Marconi wireless telegraphy greetings were again heard when the ship was well out to sea. Mr. Donegan remarks that it was very weird to get a message from across the water, "Wish you every success and a safe journey," the message coming apparently from nowhere.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

THE latest additions to Messrs. Francis and Day's series of "sixpenny pops" are, "Come and have a drink with me" and "Fifty long years ago."

MISS ANNA HELD, who is so well remembered at the Palace Theatre, while in London recently, paid a visit to the Tivoli, and was so charmed with Miss Marie Lloyd's "Directoire Girl," by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell, that by special permission of our queen of comedy, the American "star" will introduce this number into the new Ziegfeld production now being specially written round her. It has been Americanised for Miss Held by the author, and will be issued in the States by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, by arrangement with the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.

MISS ELLA RETFORD, who has just returned from a successful provincial tour, made her reappearance at the Tivoli on Monday, when she sang that delightful and catchy song "Take me on the Flip-Flap," from the pens of those well-known writers Charles Wilmott and Hermann E. Darewski, jun. The refrain was taken up immediately in every part of the house.

OWING to her great success last week at the Oxford, Miss Madge Temple has been given "star" time this week, and is delighting all listeners with her charming rendering of her two latest successes, "Esau" and "Kiss." On Monday she had to come before the curtain several times before she was allowed to retire.

MISS GRACIE GRAHAME made an instantaneous success last Monday at the Empire, Belfast, with a new song, entitled "Those eyes," written and composed by Miss Edith Findon (of the Findons).

MISS QUENNIE LEIGHTON will produce next week two songs, the joint work of A. Ellerton and A. Ellerton, jun., viz., "The passing of the petticoat" and "Baby's toys." This clever artist is still scoring heavily with another song by the same authors, entitled "A little bit of parsley."

MR. T. E. DUNVILLE will shortly produce a "territorial" song skit by Alf. Ellerton, entitled "The Battersea Terriers." There are excellent chances in this number for the favourite comedian to exploit funny burlesque business.

MISS ADELE ROSE, from the ranks of musical comedy, is about to venture on the variety stage, and has specially commissioned Messrs. John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell to supply her entire répertoire. She already has two numbers from them, viz., "Girls! Beware of the shady lanes!" and "They always ask for more" in active rehearsal.

LATEST advices from America, just to hand, record the phenomenal hit made in New York by Laddie Cliff with a Scotch comedy song by Harrington and Powell, "How did ye coom to lose your troosers, John?" which this clever young artist will specially "feature" in a New York "production" in September next.

MISS DAISY JAMES, who is still making such a success with John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell's story of three Cockney girls' adventures in the gay city, entitled "As we walked on the gay Boulevards," has this week accepted from the same writers a French number, entitled "Do it if you dare!" which she will produce next week at the Palace, Camberwell.

MISS BARBARA BABINGTON has been achieving a most pronounced success at the Hippodrome, Birmingham, this week, with two of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s songs, viz., "How'd you like to float me?" by John P. Harrington and Orlando Powell, and "Mr. Smith, of Aberystwyth," by Harry Castling and Fred Godfrey.

MISS GLADYS HUXLEY has just added to her répertoire a new chorus song written and composed by J. P. Long, entitled "On the Peaks of Derbyshire." This tuneful ditty promises to be one of the most popular items Miss Huxley has yet essayed.

MISS RITA RHYLL, who has been appearing during the week at the East Ham Palace, has been fitted by J. P. Long with a very catchy number, entitled "Come and canoodle in my canoe."

HORACE WHEATLEY IN DUBLIN.

THE TIVOLI.

The large audiences at both performances last evening at the Tivoli were delighted with the reappearance of that popular favourite, Horace Wheatley. He can sing a good song and tell a good story with as great success as ever. Last evening among the songs he gave "Bantry Bay," which was loudly applauded, as were his interesting reminiscences of "M'Intyre."—The Freeman's Journal, June 16, 1908.

Not a seat was vacant at the Tivoli last night, when Horace Wheatley paid a welcome return visit to the city which has witnessed so many of his successes. His appearance on the stage was the signal for an outburst of applause, which was renewed at the conclusion of each song, and reached its full height when he had rendered the favourite "Bantry Bay." His stories of M'Intyre are fresh and witty, and his dancing is as sprightly as of yore.—The Mail.

HORACE WHEATLEY IN BELFAST.

Horace Wheatley remains in good voice, and affords evidence that he can still lay claim to be one of the most famous dancers on the boards. His songs and jest are wholesome, and long ago made him little less than a local idol.—The Saturday, June 27.

THE twentieth anniversary of the Wolverhampton floral fête took place in the beautiful West Park on July 7, 8, and 9, and was attended by a vast concourse of sightseers. The programme, as heretofore, was a most liberal one. There were balloon ascents by Messrs. Spencer Bros., horse-leaping competitions, in which £124 in prizes were offered, a motor-car parade, a novelty in a balloon capture race, open to automobilists, and cycle polo matches. The Coldstream Guards, the Northumberland Hussars, and the Prize Willenhall Bands played in the park, and the beautiful and artistic firework displays by Messrs. W. and J. Wilder, of Birmingham, were much admired.

AN exceptionally good variety programme was given by the following artistes:—The Ben Mohamed Troupe of Arab acrobats in their sensational and daring display, the Banzai Troupe of hand balancers, who introduced some novel tricks; Percy Victor, whose wonderful dogs were highly popular; the Attila Brothers in gladiatorial poses and exciting feats of strength; the Four Herberts in an amusing knockabout show; Ella Zuila and Lulu in a finished performance on the high wire; the George French Troupe of trick cyclists; the Two Reays, silver chain acrobats; the Snow family, skatorial experts; the Sandows, a pair of fine athletes; and the Bros. Bailey's Punch and Judy show, which is a popular institution here.

FEDERATIONS AND FUNDS.

As Director Glueck, of the Apollo, Düsseldorf, has declared in writing his intention of not engaging members of the International Artists' League, that body has appealed to the members of the Variety Artists' Federation and of the White Rats of America, as well as other performers, not to accept any engagements at the house named. The V.A.F. has endorsed the action of the I.A.L. by passing the following resolution: "That members (of the Variety Artists' Federation) shall under no circumstances accept any engagement at the Apollo Theatre, Düsseldorf, or at any other place of entertainment at war with the I.A.L."

THE 568th meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Railway Association was held on Wednesday, when Mr. G. H. Smythson occupied the chair. There were also present Messrs. Fred Millis, W. H. Atlas, G. B. Sinclair, James E. Donegan, Harry Blake, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). Mr. Donegan (head of the Dunedin Troupe of cyclists) made his first appearance after an absence of two and a half years in America.

THE result of the ballot for the eighteen vacancies on the committee was announced, the following gentlemen being elected: Hal Forde, Horace White, J. Atroy, Sid Bandon, T. C. Callaghan, Bert Williams, W. E. Gillin, Ben Obo, J. O'Malley, W. Brown, B. C. Jimson, Jack O'Connor, J. Rich, J. J. McNally, J. Tray, Marriott Edgar, H. Cee Mee, J. Crawley, and A. Gallimore. Mr. A. Fletcher, of the Monad Hotel, Rotherham, was appointed agent. The weekly statement showed an increase of fifteen new members and receipts of £36 11s. 6d.

THE Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild invite all their friends and members of the profession to attend their reception on Wednesday next, 3 to 5 o'clock, at their new rooms, Albion House, 59, New Oxford-street. Please come.

THE annual general meeting of the members of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held on Wednesday at the York Hotel, York-road. Mr. Fred Karno (president) occupied the chair, and there were also present Messrs. W. J. Wainratta (vice-president), Douglas White (trustee), Frank Heath (hon. treasurer), Pat Carey, Tom Carney, H. E. High, W. Brisco, and W. West. Mr. Jesse Sparrow (trustee) was unable to attend in consequence of a domestic bereavement.

THE principal business was the appointment of officers and committee of management for the ensuing year. Mr. Pat Carey had much pleasure in proposing the election of Mr. Fred Karno as president of the Society. He did not think they could have selected a better man or one more likely to benefit the fund, which, financially, was in a very flourishing condition, the balance at the bank amounting to over £1,400. He sincerely hoped that the membership would now greatly increase. In resigning the position of president he had to thank the members for their kindness and support during his four years of office. He should, however, remain a member of this excellent Society as long as he lived.

MR. HIGH, in seconding the nomination, also testified to the excellent work done by Mr. Carey during his term of office. The resolution having been unanimously carried, Mr. Fred Karno said he was very pleased to accept the position of president, and could promise that he should do his utmost to further the interests of the Society. He hoped to be able to increase the membership.

MR. W. J. WAINRATTA was then re-elected vice-president, and Mr. Frank Heath, hon. treasurer. Other re-appointments were Mr. R. T. Baines, secretary; Mr. A. Oldrid-Clarke, hon. solicitor; Messrs. H. Jennings, Douglas White, and Jesse Sparrow, trustees; J. H. Griffin and G. F. McCarthy, hon. medical officers; and Messrs. W. Brisco and H. E. High, hon. auditors. The Committee of Management, consisting of twenty members, were also elected, and some other business having been transacted, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

THE TIVOLI.

The wordless play still comes from Paris, and the production by Mr. Joseph Wilson on Monday of the mimodrame La Double Epouvante (The Double Terror) adds a most interesting item to the already strong Tivoli bill. The novelty is by M. Paul Franck, who assists Mlle. Colette Origny in the representation, the story being set to music by M. Edouard Mathé. The curtain rises on the bedroom of a beautiful Parisian actress, and shows a Raffles rifling drawers and dressing-table. Disturbed by the return of the actress, he hides himself under the bed. Tired out, the actress begins to disrobe, and places her jewels in the dressing-table drawers. Then, flinging herself upon the bed, she plunges into the pages of a "yellow back." Dozing, the book falls from her hands, and, in stooping to pick it up, she catches sight of her concealed visitor. She, however, suppresses her terror, and creeps stealthily to the bell-pull, only to find that the ruffian has taken the precaution to remove it. Feigning sleep, she lies upon a couch, and, in spite of the burglar's threatening knife, with which he touches her throat, she keeps her eyes resolutely closed. Convinced of the genuineness of her slumber, he turns his attention to the dressing-table and pockets the jewellery. But while he is absorbed in ransacking the drawers the actress tip-toes across the room, and making a dash for the toilet-stand, seizes a loaded revolver, with which she holds up the intruder, who in his turn becomes terror-stricken. Before the shining muzzle of the firearm he disgorges everything, and slinks out into the night, while the overstrung woman falls fainting to the floor. M. Paul Franck as the discomfited burglar is intensely dramatic; and the beauty of Mlle. Origny is as unquestionable as her talent. The present composition of the Tivoli bill is largely Yankee. Early in the evening Mr. Leonard Fletcher, an American actor, is heard in a monologue, At the Telephone, which is a faint adumbration of similar business powerfully done by our Mr. Charles Warner at the Coliseum. There is considerable humour in the doings of Mooney and Holbein; and the reckless behaviour of Mr. Louis A. Simon in The New Coachman, produced last year at the London Pavilion, evokes shouts of laughter. The way in which Mr. Simon gets himself generally mixed up with ladders and articles of furniture is as ingenious as it is droll. Miss Grace Gardner, a pretty actress, gives him excellent support.

Miss Ella Retford has the successful song of the moment in "Take me on the flip-flap," a breezy number by Chas. Willmot and Herman Darewski, which touches lightly and cleverly on the newest sensation at the Franco-British Exhibition at Shepherd's Bush. Miss Retford also adds to her popularity by the rendering of a Chinese love song. Mr. Harry Fragson is as popular as ever in his up-to-date and well-written song on the Licensing Bill; Mr. George Robey still lectures quaintly on the domestic difficulties of Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway; Mr. Tom Dunville brings the tide of laughter to the flood by his amusing rendering of the coon milkman; Miss Gertie Gitana exhibits hereditary ability in her successful song and dance scena; Mr. Frank Leon is a wonderful dancer; much favour is rightly extended to King and Benson, refined comedians; and other turns include Queenie Essex, Nancy Thornton, and Addie Dorina.

MR. MAURICE FAIVA, the youngest hustler in the variety profession, informs us that his director, Mr. B. Willis, is next week sending him on tour through France, to find big novelties.

AN INTERESTING WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Lottie Wright (known professionally as Miss Peggy Fame), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright (Miss Nellie Gannon), to Mr. Ben Whiteley (of the Five Whiteleys), at Christ Church, Brixton-road, S.W., on Sunday last, evoked considerable interest, not only among the relatives of the young couple, but among the profession generally, which holds in high respect and esteem the families of the contracting parties. The father and mother of the bride for the last thirty years have been on the boards, either as single performers or in comic sketches; and Mr. Ben Whiteley, the bridegroom, was, figuratively speaking, born in the business, being closely related by marriage and lineage to two of the oldest acrobatic and gymnastic families of the present and past centuries — the Gregorys and the Delevantis. The bride made her first appearance on the variety stage in an operatic toe solo, with Mr. John Leopold's pantomime company, appearing later in conjunction with her sister Gertrude as the Sisters Pacey, afterwards as the Two Stars. At the dissolution of partnership, Lottie became Miss Peggie Fame, under which name she has appeared at all the principal halls in Great Britain.

The ceremony at the church was fixed for 1.15, and precisely at that time the bride was escorted up the aisle by her father, Mr. Harry Wright. The bride wore a cream-coloured silk dress, with over-robe and long train of real old Irish lace. A bridal veil of rich Maltese was crowned with orange blossoms, fastened by a diamond star (the present of her father and mother), and she carried a large bouquet of arum lilies, camelias, lilies of the valley, and pink de Gloire roses. She was attended by four bridesmaids, viz., Miss Sidonia Whiteley, Miss Gertrude Victoria Wright (her sister), Miss Ida Katrina, and Miss Lily Cleveland. They wore Empire dresses of white chiffon, trimmed with white lace and pink roses and embellished with large pink sashes. White lace Victoria hats showered with pink and white roses gave the finishing touches to pretty costumes. Each carried a shower bouquet and wore a jewelled tortoise-shell comb, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. Harry Whiteley acted as best man, and superintended most ably the marshalling of the carriages for the conveyance to and from the church of the friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

Among those who accepted invitations to the wedding breakfast (at 89, Vassall-road), which was most daintily prepared by the bridegroom's mother, were Mrs. Whiteley, Mrs. Ellen Whiteley, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whiteley, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Whiteley (brothers and sisters of the bridegroom), Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Wright (brother of the bride), Mr. Fred Phillipi, Mr. W. Voldani, Mr. Chris Voldani, Mr. William Matthews, Mr. Eric Whiteley, the four bridesmaids, Mrs. Madeline Delbosq, Mrs. A. Delbosq, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, Mr. Harry Lester (representing the Terriers' Association, to which fraternity both the bride's father and the bridegroom belong), Mr. W. Delevanti, Mr. Willie Cleveland, and Misses Ellen and Henrietta Delbosq, with Masters Harry, Benny, and Harold Whiteley, Harry Wright, and Alfred Delbosq (nephews and nieces of the bride).

The above-named were all at the church, where we also noticed Mr. Harry de Frece (father of Mr. Walter de Frece), Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neiman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wyman and daughter, Mrs. I. Doyle and family, Miss Carrie Joy, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Budden, Atlas and Vulcana, Mr. W. T. Harvey (Press Association), Mr. Johnny Alexander, Mrs. G. Smythson and daughter. After the breakfast, Mr. Harry Wright read thirty-six telegrams of congratulation from all parts of the country, the first telegram opened being from Mr. Harvey (Press Association), and the last from Mr. and Mrs. Joe Elvin.

Presents were received from the following, among others too numerous to mention:—Bridegroom to bride, massive diamond earrings; bride to bridegroom, ring; Mrs. Whiteley (mother) to bridegroom, a very antique gold chain; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whiteley, silver spoons and serviette rings; Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Whiteley, diamond locket and travelling hat case; Mr. T. W Wright and wife (to bride) silver brushes and comb in case, (to bridegroom) silver mounted morocco cigar case; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright (to bridegroom) silver-mounted dressing-case, (to bride) silver card-case, diamond inlaid; the Terriers, silver hand mirror, &c.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Wright (Films, Limited), silver card case; Miss Ida Katrina, silver photo frames; Aunty Edgersley, case of gloves; Mrs. Whiteley to bride, a unique travelling clock; Mrs. Delbosq, handsome embroidered cloths (Oriental); Mrs. Madeline Delbosq, silver serviette rings; and Miss Lily Cleveland, case of handkerchiefs, &c.

Amid the heartiest of congratulations and showered with confetti, the young couple started for the Continent on Sunday night to spend their honeymoon.

IN the Empire revue, Oh! Indeed, now nearing the end of its run, Mr. Farren Soutar appears in a scene in which a number of ladies, wearing huge bird-crowned hats, take their places in an imaginary theatre and obstruct the view of those sitting behind. Mr. Soutar gets a gun and frightens the birds, which rise and fly away.

ONE evening last week a gentleman in the audience who had been sitting behind such a hat, and who had vainly tried to get it removed, suddenly rose in his place and called out, "Will Mr. Soutar kindly turn his gun this way?" The hat, it is said, was promptly taken off.

OPENING OF GORLESTON PALACE.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A notable addition to the various places of entertainment on the East Coast is the opening of the Palace at Gorleston, and in this connection Mr. Geo. Gilbert, proprietor of the Lowestoft and Yarmouth Hippodromes, has displayed commendable enterprise. Thanks to Mr. Gilbert's energies, coupled with excellent catering in accordance with the popular local taste, the "variety business" has "caught on" during the past few years both at Lowestoft and Yarmouth, and the opening of the Lowestoft Hippodrome—the largest place of entertainment in the town—has now been followed by Gorleston's new Palace of Varieties, for which a successful season is confidently predicted. The full seating accommodation of the new building is about one thousand, and the comfort of the audience has been carefully studied in every particular. New and elaborate scenery and effects have been specially furnished by Bull, of London, and the stage appointments leave nothing to be desired.

To meet with present-day requirements, a sliding roof has been constructed, so as to render the whole building delightfully cool. From the terraces patrons are enabled to witness a grand maritime view, and during the summer evenings, when these are thrown open as smoking lounges and promenades, they will undoubtedly provide a popular resort for visitors and others. The sloping floor will also be much appreciated by Mr. Gilbert's clientèle, thus giving a clear and uninterrupted view of the stage. The front portion of the house is provided with handsome fauteuils, upholstered in peacock blue velvet, surrounded by gold frames; the second seats are of padded plush; while the pit is furnished with the comfortable chairs.

The gallery patrons have also been provided for with every consideration. The colouring scheme is pleasing and effective, the light green of the walls contrasting well with the stage fittings and general upholstering. The electric installation comprises ten three-light fittings of 150 candle power each, two electric stage projectors, two flare arc lights, an electric flooding arc of 1,500 candle power, and twenty-four metallic filament Tantalum lamps for stage purposes. Emergency gas fittings have also been judiciously arranged, so that altogether the auditorium will be brilliantly lighted. A fire-proof cinematograph box has been erected in the gallery for presenting all the latest and best pictorial subjects of the day, and no pains have been spared to guard against accidents of any kind. The entertainment to be presented by Mr. Gilbert will consist of the best variety turns that can be judiciously blended with an up-to-date exhibition of animated subjects. Upon his latest enterprise Mr. Gilbert is to be warmly commended, and for the Gorleston Palace a long and successful future is practically assured.

The opening took place on Monday, when there was a large and delighted audience to welcome the initial programme, which was one of all-round excellence. Parke's Eton Boys and Girton Girls gave a capital musical entertainment, and Ruby Dahl gave a clever exposition of her "merry mannikins." Marlow and Manton appeared to advantage in a clever sketch, and Miss Helen Russel (soprano) rendered several pleasing vocal numbers. The display of animated subjects was a popular feature of the programme.

THE ALHAMBRA.

It is somewhat strange, perhaps, that at the Alhambra we seldom see an English comic singer; French, American, and German have been seen on the stage of this international variety house, but the English comique is a rarity. It is some years since Arthur Roberts sang there "I'm a highly respectable singer," with burlesque imitations of the stars of the day; and we remember Mr. James Fawn. The latest comedian is German—Mr. Robert Steidl, who is also a cosmopolitan—and he has been designated the Arthur Roberts of the German stage, though he disclaims any such title. He writes all his own songs, and he can sing them in English. He has also made a study of our audiences, and after hearing him one can say with perfect truth that he completely understands them. He commenced his turn on Monday with a droll German song, and then went on to burlesque a French military band. He recounts, too, in quaint English the troubles of Poor Old Schmidt. He is clever in his imitations of an English family off to Richmond in a motor-boat, and his funny selection on the 'cello excites loud laughter. He ventures quite successfully on a popular Continental number, "Just along the wall," and a bit of humour that immensely tickled the audience on Monday was when he twisted a serviette into a rough but exceedingly vivid image of a dancing-girl and made it kick in the fashion invented years since by Miss Lottie Collins, when she made such a hit in "Tara-ra-boom-de-ay." He held the stage for a long time on Monday, but not a moment too long. Of the other features of Mr. George Scott's delightful programme we have already written. The pretty divertissement The Two Flags pursues its successful course, being applauded to the echo nightly by audiences that are nothing if not cosmopolitan in their tastes. Pretty Arlette Dorgère is in her last week; but La Belle Leonora is prolonging her engagement in the successful skit Sal-oh-My! The singing of L'Incognita is creating a sensation nightly, and here Mr. George Byng's orchestra may be praised for their excellent accompaniment. The heartiest enjoyment is also to be derived from the excellent pictures projected on the screen by the Charles Urban Company, and other turns include the Permane Bros., Francis Marty, and Les Niards.

"THE BELLE OF ANDALUSIA."

Spectacular Ballet Extravaganza, in Three Scenes; libretto lyrics by G. R. Sims and Charles Fletcher; music by Herman Finck. The whole invented and arranged by J. R. Huddlestone and John Tiller. Produced at the Winter Gardens Pavilion, Blackpool, on Monday, July 6.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The production of the Winter Gardens ballet is an annual event of considerable importance, and the question is always raised, "Will it be equal to last year—which was by far the best of the long series?" However, there is only one answer to that question now, and it is in the affirmative. The ballet of 1908 surpasses all previous productions in grandeur and humour, and is, without doubt, destined for a long run.

The scene is laid in the City of Granada, near the Sierra Nevada, in the ancient Spanish province of Andalusia. It is evening, and the people are amusing themselves after their day's work is done. The King and Queen of the gipsies are present, along with their numerous followers, and there is also a procession of Estudiantinas. As the story unfolds itself we find that Bomboso, Captain of the Contrabandistas, has made himself such a nuisance that the Government have put a price on his head, and have sent Capt. Don Pepito to capture him. Driven from his mountain fastness, Bomboso flies into the town of Granada. He enters the town at night, and meets a lover who is serenading his latest flame, the gipsy Carmen. The troops following close on the heels of Bomboso seize Rodrigo by mistake, and carry him off to prison, where he spends the night. Carmen lodges in the house of one Gardito, a baker, who is completely under the thumb of his wife, Tina. Gardito is disturbed, and comes into the street. He is immediately seized by Bomboso, who demands to be safely hidden till the hue and cry is over. Gardito being a timid man, is terrified, and consents to conceal Bomboso. News is sent to Don Pepito that Bomboso is captured, and he enters the town in the morning with the rest of the troops. The news has also reached Lola, Bomboso's daughter, who seeks Don Pepito and begs for her father's life. Don Pepito says that duty must be done, and orders the prisoner to be brought before him. Rodrigo is produced, and immediately recognised by Don Pepito. Rodrigo is naturally furious, blames Don Pepito, and says that unless the brigand is captured within forty-eight hours he shall be degraded from his rank and dismissed the army. Lola, who has made a great impression on Don Pepito's susceptible heart, tries to persuade him to give up the search; but he is obdurate, and they part, as enemies, though wishing ardently to be friends. In the meantime Bomboso has been making himself comfortable at Gardito's expense. He sends Gardito out of the town disguised in Rodrigo's cloak, with a message to the bandits. Gardito is arrested trying to leave the town, and brought before Don Pepito. Things look bad for him, but Carmen declares he is Morena, the celebrated matador, who is expected to appear at the next bullfight. All the townspeople hail the great matador.

Scene 2 is the patio of a posada on the outskirts of Granada. This posada, or inn, is the meeting-place of the Contrabandisti, and Bomboso comes to consult with members of his band. We see them taking their ease, entertained by dancing girls and musicians. Gardito, posing as Morena, the matador, becomes the idol of all the girls, who make a great fuss of him. Tina is furiously jealous, and Bomboso and his friends make things lively for Gardito. Don Rodrigo, having his doubts about the supposed Morena, arranges to make him prove his identity by showing his skill in an impromptu bullfight.

Scene 3 brings us to the Gardens of the Governor's Palace, where Gardito is made to fight the bull. After being chased and teased, he becomes desperate and attacks the bull with fury. The bull turns tail, and Gardito attacks his enemy Bomboso, overcomes him, and hands him over to the soldiers. He then settles with his wife, and compels her to obey him. Bomboso, being taken, expects to be shot, and Lola finally refuses Pepito's addresses; but a singular fact comes to light which enables Lola and Pepito to marry, and causes Rodrigo to make Bomboso his chief of police. The scene closes with a grand ballet of Toreadors, an Acacia Ballet, and a gorgeous illumination of the Gardens, altogether too magnificent for word-painting.

Everyone concerned in the production is to be congratulated. The costumes are really gorgeous, and are by Alias, of London, and Pascaud, of Paris, made from designs by Comelli and Minon. The wonderful floral effects are created expressly for this ballet by Javey et Cié, of Paris.

The artists, without exception, are all good. Miss Crispin as Lola, Mr. Wilson as Bomboso, Mr. Wheatman as the Governor, Miss Campbell as Carmen, Miss Jessie Templeton as Captain of the Guards, Mr. Tom Conway as Tina, and Mr. Chris Baker as Gardito deserving special mention; whilst the dancing contributed by Signorina Papucci and Mlle. Adelina Delina is something to marvel at.

"A BABY'S SHOE."

A Dramatic Episode, produced at the Bedford on Monday, July 6.

Jim Harrison	GEORGE LANGDON
Dick Desmond	FRANK CORTLAND
Nina	ADA ROSCOE

This short sketch, which was staged on Monday evening last at the Bedford, is a well-written and dramatic little play. It takes its title from the fact that the whole story revolves round a little baby's shoe. The scene is laid in a house in St. John's Wood, where Nina Harrison, who has left her husband some years before, is living a dissolute life under the alias of Madame Raymond. Jim Harrison, a thief by profession, incidentally comes to rob the house, where valuable jewels are known to be. Jim finds it is his own wife he is robbing; but that does not matter to him, for he is desperate. He breaks open the jewel case, there to discover a baby's shoe, and brings out its fellow from his own pocket. Nina is overjoyed at knowing that he had not forgotten their child, which had died. At this moment the police enter to arrest Jim for burglary; but Nina relents towards him, and tells them Jim is there at her invitation. After a short scene, which is most pathetic, Jim goes out and leaves Nina for ever. It is undoubtedly an interesting story and strikingly presented. Miss Ada Roscoe gives a fine delineation of Nina, while Mr. George Langdon plays the part of Jim with considerable force, and they receive good support from Mr. Frank Copeland.

"FIND THE LADY FIRST," successfully produced at the Standard, Pimlico, last Saturday, will be given to-day (Saturday), about 4 o'clock, at the London Music Hall, Shoreditch, E., by Adèle Levey and Charles Leverton.

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

APPLICATIONS.

12,926.—Harry Reynolds, of Upper Sackville Street, Dublin. Circling the circle.

12,972.—Friedrich Gustav Wilhelm, Heinrich Dulfer, and Theodor Drubel, of London. Improvements in toboggans.

13,027.—Arcade Mallet, of London. Improvements in obturators for cinematographic apparatus.

13,030.—Robert Haylock Owen, of Westminster, London. Device to facilitate the throwing or accelerate the flight of boomerangs and the like.

13,240.—Robert Haylock Owen, of Westminster, London. Improvements in or connected with boomerangs and in apparatus for throwing the same.

13,470.—Herbert John Haddan, of London. Improvements in moving picture machines (Edengraph Manufacturing Company, United States).

13,603.—Edwin Alfred Showell, of Birmingham. Improvements in, or connected with, panic or emergency door push bars and latches.

SPECIFICATION OPEN TO INSPECTION.

13,027.—Mallet. Obturators for cinematographic apparatus.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

3119.—Kinematographs. Rector, E. J., of New York, U.S.A. Related to a rotary feed-device for kinematograph films in which the engaging finger is moved at right-angles to the path of the film to disengage the finger from the same. The film is guided along a frame (12), mounted on a base (1), provided with an opening (6) for projection purposes. The film passes beneath a plate formed with spring ends (22), engaging with lugs (15) on the plate (7). A lower opening is cut out to allow the proper operation of the rotary feed-device, and above this opening is secured a deflector (14), to facilitate the engagement of the finger with the perforations (24) of the film (18). The rotary feed is carried by a pair of discs (27) mounted on a shaft (26), journaled in the frame (12), and comprises a wire (28), bent into two U-shaped members, the planes of which are approximately at right-angles. The wire is normally pressed against a bar (33) by a spring (34), tied to the member (31) and the shaft (26). In operating the device, the shaft (26) is driven by suitable gearing from a hand-crank, and the finger (29) engages with a hole in the film (18), to feed the same forward until one end (32) is arrested by a fixed stop on the plate (7). The finger (29) is thus withdrawn horizontally from the slot in the film, and when the end (32) slips off the stop, the spring (34) returns the finger (29) to its normal position. The apparatus may be used without a shutter.

3347.—Acrobatic apparatus. Jones, J. W., of Berlin, Germany. An exercising or acrobatic apparatus, comprises a suspended frame (a), carrying a bicycle (i), and a frame (s), supporting trapezes, &c. (u, t). The rider of the cycle turns the pedals (w), and drives a wheel (g), meshing with a fixed gear (f), thus causing the cycle to rotate about a vertical axis. The frame carrying the trapezes, &c., is caused to rotate in the opposite direction to the cycle by the spindle (k) and spur-wheel (l), through pinions (m), and an internally-toothed box (o).

MORTIMER v. O'GORMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

DEAR SIR,—As you gave such a full report of the proceedings at Bow-street, I rely on your fairness to allow me the following comments. I have been advised by many friends to appeal against the monstrous decision given by Mr. Curtis Bennett in my recent action against Mr. O'Gorman for assault.

After due consideration, I have decided to let "Black Justice" stand—accept the judgment as another temporary reverse, and go on with the game. I am bound over to keep that which I have never broken—the "peace." As I am not likely to break it, it really does not matter very much, but naturally I resent the stigma it has placed against my name.

I have been afforded considerable amusement and no little gratification on reading the important announcement in the organ of the Federation—under Mortimer v. O'Gorman—that the V.A.F. has scored "another victory." Two thousand five hundred members of the Federation, the Vaudeville Club, the Water Rats, and Mr. Curtis Bennett—I had almost forgotten Mr. Doughty—have scored "another victory" over the one man who has dared to face them alone The battle of Waterloo shall no longer be mentioned in our history—the battle of Bow-street is supreme!

I thank you all for the unconscious compliment you pay to my might. Perhaps it will not be out of place to recall a victory or two scored by me in the past.

When I sacrificed Mr. O'Gorman's friendly pat on the back, the patronising handshake of Mr. Clemart, and the welcome grip of one in whom I held much faith, Wal Pink, and dared to lead the independent candidates, Mr. O'Gorman volunteered the delightful intelligence I should be completely smashed! I was elected.

They told me I was not. I pressed the point—then they told me that I was.

By the way, a few of those "independent candidates" who shouted "Hooray!" so loudly outside Bow-street still owe me their election expenses. Possibly they are too independent now to pay them? Again, when I attended the A.M.U., and defended the good name of the Federation in general and the chairman in particular against the powerful attack prepared by Mr. Williams, Mr. O'Gorman denounced me as a traitor for my pains. After fighting for over half an hour to be heard at the Empire, Camberwell, meeting, he withdrew this charge against me.

After my election the V.A.F. chairman passionately remarked, "If Leonard Mortimer is allowed to enter this committee-room, gentlemen, by so-and-so I walk out." He didn't. He welcomed me in! Regarding my adjourned action naturally I make no comment. Mr. Doughty sneeringly informed me I had been beaten again; but as I understand Judge Woodfall has to decide this matter, I feel sure the former gentleman will allow me to wait the learned Judge's decision. If the day should go against me I shall take my beating like a man, and I hasten to assure all my well-wishers and otherwise I shall shed no tears in court.

I suppose a few of the members of the Federation can remember Mr. O'Gorman's opinion of me during the late dispute. If not, may I remind them:—"Leonard Mortimer is our worker par excellence." I won't answer for the French, but I will stand by the statement. You were in trouble then, my gentle bleating lambs, and you wanted men of courage to come out in the open, sacrificing their positions in the music-hall world—even against their own convictions—but in peace? Mr. Coborn, sing that little song again, "Oh! what an alteration!" Of course you know your chairman's opinion of me now—"Blackleg"!

In conclusion, let me assure you—with a clean mind, clean hands, and a tongue as clean and truthful as on the day I gave my evidence at Bow-street—I shall stand before my lonely wicket and play "cricket" to the end.—Yours faithfully,

LEONARD MORTIMER.

"A FRIEND IN NEED."

A Comedy Sketch, by Richard Purdon, produced at Sadler's Wells Theatre on Monday, July 6.

We all know that, according to Mr. George Bernard Shaw, such an entity as "the typical Irishman" does not exist; but those of us—and our number is legion—who have so far failed to reach the heights of Shavian sublimation are quite content to accept Mr. Richard Purdon's humorous portrayal of the eccentricities which are supposed to be inherent in the sons of Erin. The little sketch, A Friend in Need, does not aim at the inculcation of any high or philanthropic principles, but merely provides a brief interlude of harmless mirth, eminently suited to the thermometrical readings which it has been the lot of the Meteorological Office to record of late. Mr. Patrick Hogan, on a visit to London, has along with him the usual retainer to be found in the suite of a Milesian wanderer. Resident in a boarding-house, Mr. Hogan, although certainly old enough to know better, falls a victim to the wiles of the charming proprietress, who is, of course, a widow. After indulging in the festive scenes of the metropolis, including the Chamber of Horrors, Mr. Hogan and his friend return to their boarding-house. Here there is a little humorous love-making, and an arrangement to settle the matter for weal or for woe and then retire for the night. A bottle of whisky proves, however, a source of insomnia to the friend (Mr. Murphy), and it is only after various manœuvres that Mr. Hogan can get his friend to testify to his somnolence in a fashion likely to be audible to the neighbourhood. Then Mr. Hogan proves the friend in need. Like Brother Pelican, he watches over the weakling's tendency towards the bottle, but when he is assured that Nature's sweet restorer reigns supreme, he consoles himself with a modest quencher. To make odd numbers even, and to drink his friend's health, are but steps in the rapid consumption of the contents of the bottle, and the inevitable result is that Mr. Hogan retires to his couch with his feet in the position in which most people place their heads. The awakening of Mr. Murphy seems at first likely to lead to disturbances, but the timely appearance of the fascinating widow reconciles the disputants, and an adjournment is made to a belated supper. There is, of course, not much in this which could be called plot, but it affords Mr. Purdon an ample opportunity of displaying his thorough command of what the audience seemed prepared to accept as the proper conduct of a witty, amorous Irishman. Mr. Purdon is well supported by the lady who plays the part of the fascinating widow, and the gentleman who represents his countryman from the other side of the Channel.

DR. WALFORD BODIE, the famous bloodless surgeon, is drawing record houses this week at the Theatre Royal, West Stanley, with his cures and variety company. A fine programme includes Bella Skene, soubrette; the Bongor Trio, international dancers; Signor Bandoni, the one-man band; T. Goron, comedian and dancer; Dolly Robson, the child wonder, vocalist and dancer; Bros. Baxter, Scottish comedians; Francisco, society juggler; and Dr. Bodie, with his great electrical scene, introducing his new sensation, Bodie force.

COPY OF TESTIMONIAL.—To the Chemical Cleaning and Dyeing Co. Prince of Wales' Theatre, June 17, 1908.—Dear Mr. Harris,—A line to thank you very much for the excellent way you have dyed my frock. I think it is wonderful, because unless I had known I should never have believed the material had been dyed, as it has retained its substance and lustre so well.—With compliments, Yours truly, ISABEL JAY.—[ADVT.]

THE DUNEDIN TROUPE.

CHAT WITH MR. JAMES E. DONEGAN.

The famous Dunedin Troupe of bicyclists have just returned from a two and a half years' American tour, and are now engaged on the Stoll tour. Mr. James E. Donegan, the manager and trainer of the troupe for the past twenty-five years, and who is a well-known Australian sportsman, has a little to say concerning the travels of his small party.

"We played," he says, "in one hundred and seventy-one towns with the Ringling Brothers' Circus in the space of thirty weeks in the year 1906, and after that went on to New York, where we appeared at all the leading establishments, including the Hippodrome."

Apparently the reception given to the clever band of trick cyclists was of a most enthusiastic nature. Press notices were abundant, one of them in a New York paper being as follows:—"A review of the Dunedin Troupe of bicyclists could begin and end by the statement that it is the best bicycle act in the show business. That it is. The team riding commences where all others leave off, and the troupe contains a boy who stands far above all other riders for straight fancy work. This young man does two complete whirls around the handle-bars while in motion before alighting upon the seat. It has been done by others, but with one whirl only. He also rides a 'quad' upon one wheel, and there is not the least bit of riding throughout done on the two wheels, either by the boys or the girls. There are two of each. The young women are riders, dancers, singers, and are doing something all the time to keep the stage alive. Both are excellent acrobats in addition. Besides the bicycle riding on the stage, there is balancing on a tight wire by one boy and one girl seated on machines. Even the music is good.

After leaving the American capital, there were appearances in Chicago, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Cincinnati, Boston, Philadelphia, and many other towns. "We then proceeded," continues Mr. Donegan, "to Canada, performing in, among other places, Ottawa, Montreal, and Toronto, and we eventually returned to England by the s.s. Cedric, which left New York on June 18.

"I must tell you that I was treated very well in the States, and our tour was most successful. Fortunately, there were no accidents, but, of course, several very narrow squeaks. The Americans are first-rate judges of good acts, and they like anything that is really clever. Their enthusiasm is most encouraging. I have travelled all over the world, and I find that America is one of the best countries I was ever in. You see, there are so many opportunities for everybody with ability, especially young men."

Mr. Donegan proudly boasts that he now takes round with him a couple of his grandchildren, who are keen bicyclists. And this in spite of the fact that their grandsire is only fifty-four years of age!

"THE GEM," GREAT YARMOUTH.

At eleven o'clock last Saturday the new place of amusement on the Marine Parade, Great Yarmouth, concerning which there has been so much speculation during the past few months, was opened to the public. The lessees are the Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd., and their intention is to run living pictures, which are to be continuously on view from the time the building is open until it closes at about eleven o'clock at night. "The Gem" (the style of the new building) is situated on the west side of the Marine Parade, just beyond St. Peter's-road. It has a very ornate elevation in the Renaissance style of architecture. There are two towers on either side of the main entrance, each surmounted by a cupola, and the entrance is decidedly handsome, with its marble mosaic pavement and enriched plaster ceilings. The hall in which the entertainments will be given is 140ft. long by a width of 42ft. There are no stage fittings, the sheet required for the entertainment being shaped to fill the end of the hall. Mr. A. S. Hewitt, A.R.I.B.A., is the architect, and he has certainly designed a building that will be an ornament to this part of the Drive. Mr. W. Harman is the building contractor, and there are several sub-contractors for various work. The electric lighting, both inside and out, has been done at a very large cost, and has been entrusted to Mr. Arnold D. Pank, M.I.H.V.E.

The front of the building is brilliantly illuminated with 1,500 small electric lamps, outlining the whole building. On the domes the illumination is so arranged as to be seen from a great distance, 300 lamps being used on the domes alone. The large lamps at the top are arranged with reflectors, and each lamp is of 144-candle power. The main hall is lighted with twenty-eight 100-candle-power lamps, with aluminium reflecting shades. The main switch is a fine piece of electrical engineering work, and is well worth seeing by anyone interested in electric lighting. All lamps and material are of English manufacture, and the entire installation does credit to Mr. Pank and his staff. There will be seating accommodation in the centre of the hall for 1,200 persons, Dean's tip-up chairs upholstered in red plush being available to patrons. On either side and at the back will be spacious promenades, with a floor covering of red felt. A novelty will be the introduction of the aerophone, which is said to give off the tones of the natural voice from the records used. Amongst the specialities in this respect will be solos by Caruso, Melba, Tetrazzini, and selections by the best military bands. Mr. C. B. Cochran, one of the directors, is in charge of the Yarmouth Amusement Centre's enterprise, and promises first-class entertainments to the public.

Some excellent pictures were shown on the opening day, among the best being "Epsom on Derby Day," depicting the incidents of the road, the course, and race. Large audiences were the rule throughout the first day.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

POND LIFE.—This is a series of intense general interest, and of great scientific and educational importance. By means of the Urban Micro-kinematograph system, the creatures of this fascinating series are seen alive, in their different stages and transformations from larvæ to full-grown insects, moving, swimming, crawling, and jumping amid their natural surroundings. Tremendously magnified, the extraordinary organisms are presented with absolute scientific accuracy in a full series of great general interest and educational worth. The life-story of the frog from the tadpole stage may be read in animated pictures, with valuable examples of the circulation of blood in its webbed feet. The newt, also, from baby to great triton stage is depicted. Terrific combats between water-fleas are shown, and so excited do the combatants become that the beating of their little hearts may be observed. Beautiful and wonderful pond hydra are to be seen in constant motion, as are water beetles in the pugnacious larval stage, and in their subsequent land and water existence. Caddis larvæ, water spiders, the cypris, the dragon-fly, worms of sorts, and crayfish all help to form a sum of marvel, beauty, and scientific worth in this carefully-prepared and produced series such as never before has been attempted.

OUR FARMYARD FRIENDS.—The pictures here described are unique, in that each subject illustrates not only a class, but the very best specimen or specimens of that class, rare or common. While the pictures represent the work of years of collection in various countries, interest chiefly centres in those of the competitors and prize-winners secured at the leading shows of Great Britain and other countries. Almost every domestic animal finds place in one or other of the series, and some of the pictures supply a fund of quaintness and humour which render them instructive by reason of these very qualities. Unusual and excited episodes, too, are furnished in a degree impossible to describe by any other means, as in the views of vast herds of South American cattle, the Chillingham wild cattle, shepherding on stilts in the Llandes, wild goats in their mountain fastnesses, &c. Selected with great discrimination from miles of film, each series forms a model lesson in the natural history of domestic animals and pets such as never before has been published in pictorial or any other form, and the scenes presented will live in the memory of the most inattentive scholar long after the written word has been forgotten by the more studious.

THE RAG-PICKER'S WEDDING.—Few pictures of life amongst the "submerged tenth" can compare with this series in versimilitude, originality, of conception, realistic setting, and perfect enactment. The love affairs of a couple of rag-pickers are faithfully presented, and underlying the scenes of humour are episodes of requited love, happiness amid squalor, and rejoicing under conditions never experienced by the respectable citizen, which lend glamour and romance even to scenes of lawlessnss.

Pathé Frères.

THE BLUE BIRD gives us a pleasing fairy story, which may be thus told:—A wicked queen has two daughters—one ugly and one pretty. The ugly one is the daughter of her first husband, and on her she spends all her love and affection, whilst illtreating the younger and beautiful daughter, the child of her second husband, the reigning king. One day Prince Charming comes along with his suite and presents the game which he has shot that day to the king. The king introduces his two daughters. The prince instantly falls in love with the pretty one. The wicked queen is mad when she hears the prince has proposed for the hand of the younger daughter, and locks her up. The prince makes up his mind to carry her off from her persecutrix. The queen discovers the plot, and when he comes, puts into his arms the ugly daughter, who is hidden in a long veil. A fairy flame carries them off to the fairies' palace, but at the moment of signing the wedding contract the prince discovers the trick, and sends princess off in company with the fairies. The magicians gather round him and turn him into a beautiful bird. Disguised like this the young man enters the window of his beloved; but the queen sends out her archers, and the poor bird falls under their arrows. The Wizard Merlin, however, who has been guarding the prince all this time, appears on the scene, changes him into his own form again, and he marries the young princess with great pomp and splendour.

AN INVOLUNTARY FARMAN.—The young cyclist of a well-known firm is entrusted with the delivery of several cases of goods to rich customers. He piles the boxes on his back and starts at full speed. A wicked wind blows into the cardboard cases, which, acting as an aeroplane, lift the boy up in the air. To the amazement of onlookers he goes over the city, the panorama of which passes before his bewildered eyes, until, the wind ceasing, his apparatus pulls down chimneys and roofs, and drops down in the street where the crowd greet the young explorer enthusiastically.

THE POOR BLIND WOMAN tells a dramatic tale. The blind woman goes about, led by her dog. At home she is ill-treated by her son. Her pale face attracts the attention of an artist who wants to paint her portrait. Every evening she comes home with a five-shilling piece, the price paid to her for each sitting, and her son snatches it from her and spends it in the company of debased friends. The poor blind woman goes to the mountain in search of her son, but she makes a slip and falls into the ravine. Her dog, after sniffing the air, goes straight to the painter's house, and makes him understand that he must come with him and rescue the poor woman. Meantime, her son, who is drunk, picks a quarrel with one of his friends, and receives a piece of glass in the temple, which kills him on the spot. The old woman is taken care of by her generous benefactor.

THE SQUIRE'S RIGHTS.—It is the feudal period. The lady of the castle is distributing bread and kind words to her poor; she is so good that they all worship her, but do not look up to their squire with the same feelings of gratitude, for her husband is a very harsh man, who whips them away from his presence. One day, his peasants finding that their distress is too much for them, arm themselves with forks and scythes and invade the castle; after binding the oppressor with ropes, they drag him to the calvary, where they intend to stone him to death. But his lady, having been warned by one of her poor, comes to them, and entreats them to give up their revenge. Moved by her touching pleadings, the peasants set their victim free. The lord, whose heart melts at their act of magnanimity, kneels down at the foot of the calvary, and promises to be more upright and just in future.

Gaumont Company.

NAPOLEON AND THE ENGLISH SAILOR.—This subject deals with an incident in the life of Napoleon at the period when he was contemplating an invasion of England. An English sailor is captured by the French, and after awhile is allowed to roam unguarded on the beach. One day the sailor espies an empty hogshead near the shore. He captures it, and hides it in a cave. He works for days upon it, and finally makes a tiny boat in which he hopes to escape to England. But he is captured. Napoleon, who has witnessed the scene from the top of a cliff, descends to the shore, and, addressing the prisoner, asks him what made him attempt such a foolhardy freak, and suggests that he must be in love with a British lass. The sailor replies that he has no sweetheart, but that he was anxious to again see his mother. Napoleon is struck with the lad's earnestness, and commands his officer to give him safe conduct, under a flag of truce, to a British vessel. He gives the lad a piece of gold, and wishes him God-speed. The French sailors and soldiers raise three hearty cheers as the British tar sails off. The last scenes show his arrival home and his mother's joy at the return of her son, whom she never expected to see again.

THE MECHANICAL LEGS.—A pair of mechanical legs are purchased for a legless man by his relatives. With his new means of pedestrianism the cripple goes for a trial spin with a companion, but the legs are not easily controlled, and have a strong tendency to break into a run, which leads their owner into sundry troubles. Policemen are knocked over, and a chase is set up which culminates in the cripple taking a header through a window. A constable, who endeavours to pull him back, comes away with the unfortunate legs in his possession

THE SHIRT OF A HAPPY MAN.—This gives us the story of the king who is told by his physicians that he will recover from his maladies if he will for one night sleep in the shirt of a happy man. Search is at once made throughout the kingdom for such a person, but the various persons approached are discovered on being questioned to have some anxiety or other, these being revealed in a series of visions. Thus the soldier is thinking of his probable death on the battlefield, the rich man believes that everybody is robbing him, the lovers are forbidden to marry by their parents, and so on. At last, however, a shepherd is found who has not a care, and is at once taken before the king, who offers him unbounded wealth for his shirt. The shepherd unbuttons his jacket, and it is found that he is not wearing a shirt!

HARRY LAUDER IN A HURRY.—This is a most laughable film, and, according to it, Harry Lauder's idea of haste is apparently the same as the average person's idea of extreme leisure. We see him slowly dismounting at the stage-door of a music hall from his motor-car. The scene then changes to the dressing-room, where the famous comedian disrobes slowly and dons his stage rig of kilt, &c., this operation being enlivened by a series of humorous incidents, in which call-boys, commissionaires, and at last the stage-manager, come in to tell the artist that he is due on the stage. Fine pictures of the famous comedian are shown, in which we see him smiling in his irresistible way.

Nordisk Films Company.

THE GERMAN DERBY AT HAMBURG-HORNE treats the spectator to a number of attractive scenes of this great German sporting event, and it also introduces views of the Kaiser's visit to the racecourse. A TURKISH BATH is the title of another capital Nordisk novelty. It describes in amusing fashion how the bather falls foul of the attendant for his singing while attending to his duties, and how the latter puts the bather through a course of rough treatment, eventually pitching him into a bath and taking out his skin only.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.—This theatre has now been taken for the remainder of the summer season by the New Bioscope Company, which is under the direction of Mr. F. R. Griffiths. A first-class series of films and some excellent variety turns are presented, and the entertainment, for which specially reduced prices are charged, is one exactly suited for the summer evenings. Some of the films, notably THE MAGNETIC REMOVAL, THE NIHILIST, and NERO AND THE BURNING OF ROME, are really splendid, and afford great delight to vast audiences. The Idento Brothers prove themselves clever Jugglers. A young actress, Miss Mona Garrick, gives with capital dramatic effect the scene in the first act of The Bondman between Jason and Greeba, and the death of Doctor Faustus from Marlowe's play of that name. The Three Brights also provide a pleasing instrumental and vocal turn. Mr. Albert Matham is the courteous acting-manager for Mr. Griffiths.

MR. GERALD LINDLEY, a rising "society" entertainer, gave a very agreeable matinée musicale at the Waldorf Hotel on Saturday. Mr. Lindley is happy in his selections of pieces, and has a light touch and a pleasant manner. His songs and sketches had a very cordial reception.

AT the Princess Pier Concert Hall, Torquay, there is a capital programme. Mr. Harry Leslie's Comedy Cadets are a really clever combination; Miss Rene Steadman is a very vivacious comedienne; Miss Annie Coxon is a contralto of talent; Mr. Vernon Noble is a light comedy artist of ability, and achieves a conspicuous success; Mr. Jim Pullin, a versatile character comedian, evokes laughter; Mr. George Curzon has a powerful baritone; and Mr. Fred Shepherd does well at the piano. Mr. Harry Leslie is a popular humorist and ventriloquist.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

THE Fair at Greenock (for reasons which we have referred to in a separate account in another column) was very quiet as regards business.

THERE were the usual big crowd of entertainers, with over one hundred concerns, great and small. Big shows, little shows, great riding machines, small machines, avenues of throwing games, side-shows, shooting concerns, variety frames, automatic novelty boxes, striking machines, and the other multiform amusements for the show-loving public.

Cinematograph Theatres.

MCINDOE'S superb Scottish coliseum and variety theatre, with its magnificent front, illuminated with thousands of electric lamps, formed a prominent feature of the fair. J. Wingate's new enterprise, the theatre of animated pictures and varieties, was much admired; the electrically-lighted front was a delight of artistic beauty and completeness. We congratulate Mr. Wingate on his latest and greatest enterprise. Wm. Clark, jun.'s high-class exhibition, with a revival of the ghost illusion and a fine range of animated pictures, and Mr. A. Mander's cinematograph theatre made capital displays, and gave great satisfaction.

Other Shows and Novelty Booths.

CHAPMAN'S trained animals and birds, H. Mander's miniature menagerie, Colona's novelty booth, Newton's stereorama, S. Biddall's circus, Buckley's menagerie, Boswell's palmistry tents, and a number of side-shows completed a thoroughly representative array of exhibitions.

Motor Tracks, Riding Machines, Steam Yachts, &c.

WILMOT'S three big machines—the Gordon Bennett motors, the four-abreast steeplechasers, and the tunnel railway—were immensely attractive, with electric lights and grand colour effects.

HOWARD'S steam yachts and Walter Wilmot's helter-skelter tower and three-abreast galloping horses, John Wilmot, jun.'s miniature horses and park swings, Smith's overboats, and W. Wilmot's gem swings were the mechanical attractions at the fair.

Shooting Ranges and Varieties.

THESE standard amusements of the people were supplied by Messrs. John Wilmot, jun., Rostron, Sheeron, Wright, Freeman, Hughes, W. Strand, H. Strand, Wm. Strand, jun., Stevenson, Blockley, Horne, W. Smith, C. Smith, Salvona, Kennedy, Macintosh, McIndoe, Moore, Palmer, Anderson, Knight, Cook, Freeman, Matchett, Towers, Dawson, Faulkner, C. Walter, C. Nelson, W. Slater, T. Dawson, W. Newey, W. Harris, Hunter, Johnson, Hughes, Knowles, and others.

Tideswell Feast.

EXCEPT a few throwing games, there were no amusements at this Derbyshire fair. The Clerk to the Parish Council writes to us as follows:—"One of the best wakes ever held, favoured by grand weather all the week. Every day filled up with something going on. Regret was felt that no steam horses, &c., were present."

Orpington Fair.

THE amusements in the shape of shows, roundabouts, swings, throwing games, and other novelties were supplied by Pettigrove, of London.

LITTLE HIP, the smallest performing baby elephant in the world, was commanded by the Queen to leave—for a few hours only—the great Bostock Jungle and Arena at the Hungarian Exhibition, Earl's Court, and present himself at Buckingham Palace on Monday afternoon as a Royal guest at the children's party of Her Majesty. The toothless tusker is of the African umbrella eared species, and about three years old. Regarded as the mascot of the New York Hippodrome, Little Hip was always a welcome guest at the White House, where President Roosevelt's children made much of him. Mr. Frank C Bostock brought him specially from America to present him to the Queen, and the baby elephant's first performance was most appropriately given at Buckingham Palace before Her Majesty, with whom was the Princess Victoria, the Princes Albert and Henry, Princess Mary, and over a hundred tiny child guests. On arriving on the green lawn, Little Hip placidly trifled with the turf until his "turn" was announced. After exhibiting his first trick, Little Hip coolly approached the Queen, who had come close to the ropes of the impromptu arena, bowed gracefully, and held out his trunk. As this was entirely unrehearsed, Mr. André, the trainer, followed fast, when Her Majesty said, "I have not fed an elephant before, let him have this," at the same time handing him a biscuit. Hip swallowed the Royal offering, and resumed his pedestal and performance. After his second item he again approached his Royal hostess and received a second reward. Modestly contented, he then completed his "turn" by "going to bed," and the Queen joined with the children in hearty laughter and appreciative applause. His Majesty the King witnessed the close of Little Hip's display.

MR. PAT COLLINS' Fun City paid its annual visit to the Hanley Park Fêtes last Wednesday and Thursday, and was a source of merriment to the 60,000 people who visited the show. Our Hanley representative was delighted with the marvellous collection of fun-providers. He was kindly taken by Mr. Collins round the show. The new cake-walk machine was a favourite; the Gordon-Bennett motor track and circular poultry farm were well used; the great twin yachts were very busy; the magnificent organ, costing £2,000, was a treat for the sightseers. Other shows were the cinematograph entertainment showing fine films, the Westwood Family, Prince Perran, the Haunted House, Egyptian Hall, &c. Sallies, cocoanut shies, shooting galleries, &c., were provided by Rowley, Marsden, Wright, Dixon, &c.

FROM Hanley the Fun City was taken to Longton, whose summer fair is being held. Mr. Pat Collins, with his usual generosity, allowed the workhouse and reformatory children to visit the shows, also all the crippled children, Mrs. Collins in addition giving each child 2d. to spend besides.

TREMENDOUS crowds gathered in the spacious park on Wednesday and Thursday on the occasion of the twelfth annual fêtes. The Mayoress (Mrs. G. F. Adcock) opened the show The flower show was a great success. Tremendous attractions to the fêtes were the band of H.M. Coldstream Guards, conducted by Dr. J. M. Rogan, and the band of H.M. Scots Guards, conducted by Mr. F. W. Wood. These bands combined in the evening. A grand balloon race between three balloons, under the direction of Mr. Auguste Gaudron, of Alexandra Palace, was a treat. Horse leaping and a spectacular military tourney were gone through. On the immense platform the following artists appeared: the Four Herberts, in a clever and original act; the Wambas, comedy musicians; Jovial John Douglas, comedian; La Belle Lily and Albert, splendid aerial gymnasts; the Banzai Troupe of Japanese jugglers and hand balancers; Jackson's circus of wonderful performing ponies, dogs, and monkeys; and the Mohamed Troupe of Arab acrobats. Ella, Zuila, and Lulu gave a brilliant performance on the high rope. There was a grand display of fireworks by W. and J. Wilder, of Birmingham, who also illuminated the grounds in the evening. Mr. Arthur Rand, manager of the Grand, Hanley, managed the immense stage performances cleverly

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD IN SCOTLAND.

The July holidays in Scotland are now beginning, and some of the principal pleasure fairs of the workers take place in the holiday month.

Prominent amongst these holiday fairs is the one held at Greenock, the heart and centre of the Clyde shipbuilding trade and its allied industries. Unfortunately for the showpeople, the calamitous lock-out in the staple industry on the Clyde has so impoverished the workers that, although they have come to the fair in as big numbers as ever, they had but very little spending money, and the consequence was extremely moderate business for the entertainers at the fair. It was a pathetic sight to see the multitude at the fair with but little means in their pockets to enjoy its many pleasures.

Hard Work and Little Profit.

At ten o'clock on the Saturday night of the fair we watched the outside parade of a big show at the fair; three capital dancers took the centre of the stage, each in turn danced for all they were worth, the band played, cymbals clanged, drums were beaten, and bells rung, and when the dance was finished eloquent doorsmen extolled the charm of the inside performance. The rally to create a rush of patrons was perfectly worked, and the result was just seven people entered the show after all that work. Such is the toil of the showman when bad trade desolates a district. The showman is (by the very nature of his calling and business in life) a bit of a philosopher. He has learnt full well the uncertain and precarious nature of the spending fund of the people. He knows that either strike or lock-out means bad business for him. He feels at once the pinch of bad trade, yet with optimistic fortitude he learns to take things as they come—to balance the bad times with the good, and to do his best to entertain his patrons on the outside of his show, even when he knows that they have not the ready penny to come inside.

The Guild Meeting at the Fair.

The response to the call of the Guild executive was in every way extremely satisfactory, being in point of numbers present and interest and enthusiasm the best gathering of the many good ones of the present year It took place in Mr. Wingate's new Electric Coliseum (kindly lent by the proprietor). General John Wilmot, V.P., was in the chair, and supporting him on the platform were the Rev. T. Horne and Messrs. Walter Wilmot and Arthur Henderson, members of the Scotch committee of the Guild. Amongst the prominent showpeople present were Messrs. J. Wingate, J. Caddick, H. Stroud, Wm. Clark, jun., J. McIndoe, H. Chapman, John Wilmot, jun., A. Testo, James Wright, J. Buckley, W. Slater, G. Blockley, E. Stevenson, D. Irvine, Charles Wilmot, E. Sheeran, H. Palmer, W. Newey, C. Walter, S. Monte, jun., W. Smith, jun., Wm. Stroud, jun., H. Knowles, J. Hughes, H. Dawson, George Wilmot, C. Nelson, C. Smith, C. Johnson, jun, Nelson Pickles, D. Moore, Hugh Wilmot, J. Howard, W. Stroud, Mesdames Wilmot, Rostron, Cook, W. Stroud, Hunter, John Wilmot, W. Wilmot, Smith, Wingate, Miss Wilmot, and Miss L. Wilmot. Messrs. J. Caddick, jun., A. Henderson, H. Wilmot, and Walter Wilmot acted as secretaries for the enrolment of members and the receipt of subscriptions for the Defence Fund.

The Chairman's Address.

The Rev. T. Horne, in asking their senior vice-president for Scotland, Mr. John Wilmot, to take the chair, expressed the gratification the meeting felt in having the veteran showman amongst them. Although Mr. Wilmot was only just recovering from a severe spell of illness, he had accepted the call of duty, and would preside over that important gathering (Applause.) For twenty years past, in fact ever since the formation of their trade defence society, Mr. Wilmot had been one of its most loyal supporters, ardent workers, and generous subscribers. Every year at the King's Lynn meeting, either in person or by letter, Mr. Wilmot's subscription had come to the society's funds. It was such constant friends and supporters as Mr. Wilmot had been that enabled the Guild to persevere in its good work for the whole show community. (Cheers.) Not only was Mr. Wilmot constant in his support and work, but in addition to that he had readily responded to every special appeal to carry out the necessary work of protecting the fair-ground industry. He (the speaker) therefore rejoiced that General John Wilmot would preside over their deliberations, and it gave him especial pleasure to ask Mr. Wilmot as senior vice-president to take the chair. (Great applause).

Mr. Wilmot expressed his willingness to do all in his power to forward the grand work of the Guild. It had been a great joy to him to welcome their dear friend Mr. Horne to Greenock Fair last year, and now again (unfit though he felt himself to be), yet he gladly responded to the desire of his fellow-travellers at Greenock, and took the chair at their request. He was certain that as it was last year so again it would be this. They would all profit by what the organising chaplain might have to tell them about the work of their old society. They all knew how much Mr. Horne had the showman's interests at heart (Applause.)—He, for his part, would be glad to do his share, and he was confident that all those present, and indeed the whole body of Scotch showpeople, would respond to the appeal for funds to carry on the work of trade defence. He asked Mr. Horne to address the meeting.

The Chaplain on Trade Defence.

On rising to address the meeting, the organising chaplain was most cordially received. During his address (lasting nearly an hour) he held the close attention of the audience. He commenced by reminding his hearers of the satisfactory results of his two visits to Scotland last year. At Greenock and at Ayr the Scotch showpeople had made records that were both creditable to themselves and a bright example to other parts of showland. (Applause.) Proceeding to deal with the work of the guild, he pointed out that in the annual report for last year they had the satisfaction of informing their subscribers and friends that the arduous and expensive branch of their necessary work—opposition to private Bill legislation—would not burden them in 1908. That was perfectly true as regards private Bills promoted by corporations. He was sorry, however, to say that at the very moment when they thought to see the end of Parliamentary defence, a new danger threatened them—not a private Bill of a public body, but one brought into Parliament by Lord Clifford of Chudleigh with the object of reviving all the worst features of the Old Movable Dwellings Act of twenty years ago.

The Serious Nature of the New Danger.

He begged their careful consideration of the new Movable Dwellings Bill now before Parliament, and then proceeded to analyse its drastic proposals, clause by clause, as already set out week by week in our columns. The provisions for compulsory registration, licensing, lettering, marking, and numbering of all vans used for domestic purposes. The powers of inspection and regulation of movable dwellings as proposed in the Bill were carefully and clearly set out by the chaplain, and his hearers were warned of the liberty-destroying and inquisitorial nature of the principles embodied in the measure. He asked the support of Scotch showpeople of all grades to defeat it, or to obtain such material amendments as would make it as little harmful as possible.

What the Guild Has Already Done.

As soon as the Bill was introduced, the guild executive committee set to work to oppose it. Our friends in the House of Lords were informed of our peril, and their influence sought to throw the Bill out. With this end in view, we sent out circulars to members of the House of Lords to enlist their sympathy on our side We organised meetings (like the one he was now addressing) on the principal fair-grounds of the United Kingdom. Resolutions condemning the Bill and petitions against it were sent from these meetings, all of them expressing in proper order and form the objections of showmen and fair-ground traders to the measure. Our Parliamentary agent and the executive officials of the society had used all possible means to express the feeling of the whole body of fair-ground amusement caterers against such one-sided and pernicious legislation. (Applause.)

Efforts at Settlement with the Promoters.

Instructed by the committee, he had opened up negotiations with the promoters of the Bill, and those negotiations had proceeded on satisfactory lines. Concessions of an extremely important character had been obtained, and the present position of affairs was vastly more hopeful.

They might take it from him that the Bill, as originally introduced, was self-condemned and would not pass into law. There were already important amendments which they had discussed with the promoters of the Bill, amendments that would go a good way to secure showpeople from undue interference, and that largely protected the show business from arbitrary interference and the unjust stigma that special legislation implied.

The Extreme Value of the Guild Work.

He begged them to notice the great difference between the attitude of Parliament to-day with regard to the show business and the attitude shown twenty years ago. Twenty years ago it was considered either as a joke or as an act of ignorant presumption for showmen to start a society for mutual help and protection. Public men and corporation officials (with a few rare exceptions) treated the travelling showman with scant courtesy, or at best with kindly tolerance; great Departments of State refused to recognise the vandwellers' society as competent to speak in the name of the men and women of the fair-ground. Twenty years of persistent hard work had changed all that. The old society (now known as the Showmen's Guild) was officially recognised and its officers received into conference by Ministers of State; corporations were now glad to welcome the officials of the society and to invoke their aid and advice in matters concerning the show business. It was not too much to say that for every dispute they had fought out with public bodies a dozen or more had been settled by friendly conference and negotiation. (Applause.)

It was in order that their trade defence organisation might not only grow, but also be made more efficient for its useful work, that he was giving the whole of his time to it and addressing meetings at the great centres of show life. Their machinery was ready; the best brains in the business were devoted to their interests. It was for the showpeople to supply the necessary funds to maintain the society, and to face their enemies fully equipped for the fight. (Applause.)

The Aims and Objects of the Guild.

When they started their trade defence society they set out with two important aims: (1) To vindicate the life and character of travelling showmen, and (2) to protect the trade and business of fair-ground entertainers They had consistently and persistently pursued these aims, and the better esteem in which showpeople were regarded was the measure of their success. Both in Parliament and in treating with public bodies showpeople were better understood and better appreciated. They had shown their solidarity and had also manifested their strength. All this was destined to uplift the show business in the public mind. It was to this work he and those who laboured with him had devoted the best years of their life; the growing influence of the guild was its own testimony of success. (Great applause.) As at all other meetings since Easter, so there at Greenock a resolution condemning the Bill in its original form would be submitted, and petition forms would be taken from caravan to caravan for signatures against it.

In conclusion, he exhorted them to rally to the cause of the Vandwellers' Society, to renew their subscription, and to subscribe liberally to the fund now being raised to fight the New Movable Dwellings. (Great applause.)

Other Speakers.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, of McIndoe's Electric Coliseum, proposed: "That this meeting of showmen and fair-ground traders engaged at Greenock Fair protests against the Movable Dwellings Bill. We claim as lawful traders to be under and obedient to ordinary laws of the realm. We deny that special inquisitorial and liberty-destroying legislation is needed for our trade and mode of life. If the promoters of the measure want to deal with and to penalise gipsy life, let them make their object clear in their Bill by exempting showmen and fair-ground traders from its proposed penalties and restrictions." In submitting the resolution, he especially desired to impress upon his fellow-showmen the injustice that this Bill sought to inflict upon them and their mode of life. Not a word in the resolution was too strong to meet the need of the case. Showmen would oppose all such legislation. (Applause.) He, for his part, would spare no possible effort to throw it out. It was an insult to them and an invasion of the liberties of their homes to propose such drastic interference with their mode of life.

Mr. Walter Wilmot, in seconding the resolution, expressed his confidcnt hope that Scotch showpeople would combine, and all work together to defeat such ill-considered legislation.

Mr. Caddick supported the resolution, and in doing so referred to the great and good work of the guild. He was afraid that showpeople were less generous in the support of good causes of their own than in assisting outside charities. He instanced how benefits were frequently given to hospitals by showmen, and he ventured to think that benefits for the funds of their own society should be more frequently organised than they were at present. He pointed out the good results attending benefit performances organised by the Brothers Collins and by Mr. George Green. All could assist in that way. It was with an earnest desire to further the good work of the guild that he referred to the matter of raising the funds. With regard to the Movable Dwellings Bill and the resolution condemning it, he thought that after the able speech of Mr. Horne they needed no further words from him. He heartily supported the resolution.

General John Wilmot then put the motion to the meeting, and declared it carried unanimously.

Votes of thanks were passed with enthusiasm to the Rev. T. Horne and the other speakers, to the chairman, and to Mr. J. Wingate (proprietor) for the use of the show for the meeting.

In the evening the guild chaplain was the invited speaker at the annual temperance meeting, organised by a committee of Greenock ladies, who for many years have taken a deep interest in the showpeople at the fair.

A HINT TO PIERROTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Instead of all the members of a Pierrot troupe appearing in the same kind of dress, and assuming the same kind of rôle in the business, why not go in for diversity of costume and rôles of business? Suppose No. 1 appeared as a Court jester, No. 2 as a witty Irishman, No. 3 as a droll Scotchman, No. 4 as a nigger, No. 5 as a country bumpkin, and so on, including our old friends such as Punch and Judy, Ally Sloper, Paul Pry, Jack Horner, and others? I hope some of the Pierrot troupe managers will adopt the idea.—Yours faithfully,

HOW'S THAT.

THE HISTORY OF THE ALHAMBRA.

The Alhambra has, wrote John Hollingshead, a curious history amongst places of public amusement. It was built by a blameless, Pandemonium-Paving Company, Limited, to further the cause of scientific recreation, and as a glorified Polytechnic it was opened with prayer and an organ. It was a monument of insolvent respectability. Before it had time to reform the unsavoury character of the neighbourhood it had to go into liquidation, and its lease and fittings were offered to any bidders at a Pall Mall auction room. Amongst these bidders was a speculative genius named E. T. Smith, who would have bought Westminster Abbey or the Channel Fleet if they had been under the hammer, and would have thought how he was going to pay for his purchases afterwards. E. T. Smith, amongst other things, had been a policeman, and during his remarkable career he had held more public-houses, wine-vaults, theatres, opera-houses, and music and dancing gardens than half a dozen English Barnums. The building and its contents—known as the Panopticon in the early fifties—which cost, in prospectus figures, £100,000, was knocked down to "Smith" for about £8000. "Smith" accepted the bargain; sold the great organ to St. Paul's Cathedral for one round sum, the great engines and boilers to some other establishment for another round sum, and a lot of little things for various amounts, until he had almost realised the purchase-money. The space where the organ and other furniture stood was converted into a stage, and under the sanction of the great Moll Flanders' Act (the 25th Geo. II. cap 36) he opened it as what we now call a music hall, under the happy title of the Alhambra. To do Smith justice, he gave good music, if his drinks had the usual faults of a "tied house"; as he was at that time the lessee of Her Majesty's Theatre, in the Haymarket, playing, amongst other things, Macfarren's opera of Robin Hood, with Mr. Sims Reeves and a large and effective company, to receipts that sometimes fell as low as £12 a night. He sent over some of his singers to the Alhambra, to sing "operatic selections," then very popular, copying Mr. Charles Morton's policy at the Surrey-side Canterbury. These "operatic selections" had an educational influence on the middle and lower middle class. When Gounod's Faust was first produced in Paris it did not achieve an instantaneous success, as Gounod was not a rich financier like Meyerbeer, able and ready to buy up the seats of a theatre for two months, until he could grow a fine crop of favourable public opinion. Mr. Gye, the director of the Italian opera at Covent Garden, went over to Paris to see Faust, and came back saying that it was not bad, but had only one good thing in it—a soldiers' chorus! In the meantime, Gounod and his friends, by not observing the ridiculous rules and regulations of the International Copyright Treaty of that time, had lost the English rights of his opera on a technical point, and his great and enduring work had consequently fallen into the "public domain." Gounod was no wiser than his brethren in trouble. A Frenchman writes a work, and then lies on his back, expecting International Copyright to fall into his mouth, like over-ripe plums.

Faust, being free game, was seized by Herr Jonghmanns, Mr. Charles Morton's able conductor, and with the aid of Miss Emily Soldene, Miss Russell, and many most capable singers and chorus, it was played so long, and with such profitable results at the Canterbury Music Hall, that every butcher's boy could whistle the principal airs while waiting for orders. When Colonel Mapleson came into possession of Her Majesty's Theatre, and produced Faust because it was a novelty, and Mr. Gye, at Covent Garden, followed Mapleson's lead, the novelty was confined to the "upper ten," and their friends and followers.

E. T. Smith followed Morton's example for a time, until, as usual, he disposed of his interest in the Alhambra. He never kept anything very long. It became an American circus for a year or more, and then fell into the hands of Mr. Wilde, of Norwich, the son of a well-known electioneering agent, in the days when votes had an unblushing market value. It was during Mr. Wilde's lesseeship that the most graceful and original acrobat of modern times made his first appearance in England. This was Leotard, the inventor of the "flying trapèze." Leotard's father kept a gymnastic school at Toulouse, and when his son was perfect in his unique performance they went to Paris en famille, according to the French custom. Before Leotard was allowed to perform at Franconi's he had to give a demonstration—a trial performance for the licensing authorities. He had to fall from the trapeze from various heights, and go through the form of various possible accidents. When it was found that whatever happened he came upon his feet his licence was granted, and by the advice of Mr. Augustus Harris he was soon induced to come to England. His performance caused a real "sensation." His movements were more like those of a bird than of a man. The ease, the grace, the unerring certainty with which he executed his feats had never been equalled. His three swinging bars, suspended by long ropes, carried him from one high perch to another, right across the auditorium and stage of the vast building. His father stood on the narrow platform placed across the pit and stalls, and carefully swung each pendulum. His mother stood at the wing with prepared chalk and a towel for his hands, and always acted as his dresser. It was a simple family party. Leotard was modest and retiring, and showed whole generations of acrobats how to dress decently. His black leather boots, his lavender leggings and black velvet trunks had nothing of the booth about them. I believe his first engagement at the Alhambra brought him £100 a week, and I know when I engaged him some two or three years afterwards at the same theatre for a return visit I gave him £30 a night. He still had the same modesty and the same family surroundings. He was spared the pain of growing old, and died of lung disease at Toulouse soon after he had attained the age of thirty.

The offending ballet at the Alhambra which invited and obtained prosecution was one which was bodily "lifted" from Drury Lane Theatre. Auber's Oriental opera L'Enfant Prodigue was turned into an English spectacular drama called Azaël, and produced by James Anderson, the popular actor, and Macready's favourite "young man," at Drury Lane in 1851—the year of the great exhibition. Mr. Anderson's attempt at management in the temple of his old master was not very successful, and, in spite of real camels, Auber's attractive music—the portion of it that was used—and Mr. and Miss Vandenhoff's and the lessee's impressive acting, nothing of Azaël remained in the memory except a great dagger-dance with its characteristic melody. This dance, more strikingly produced at the Alhambra by Mr. Harry Boleno, the pantomimist, who had been in the Drury Lane company, served to open the newly-decorated and carpeted Theatre of Varieties in Leicester-square, and to provoke the theatrical monopolists. No theatrical super at a shilling a night, no call-boy, no ballet-girl, and no bill-sticker could have mistaken this dramatic dance for anything but part of a stage-play, though it was left for a whole army of judges and counsel to puzzle their brains over it for months, to split hairs, and formulate nice distinctions. One eminent judge thought that Mr. Henry Russell, singing "The ship on fire" on a platform, accompanying himself on a piano, was performing a "stage-play," with or without a licence. Another eminent judge sought comfort and found it in the blessed word "divertissement"—an imported French term, which was supposed to describe a dance without form and void, that told nothing, and suggested nothing but graceful muscular exercise.

NOTICE.—No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of, or damage to, any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

THE RAGE OF AMERICA! READ THIS!!

Extract from a Two-Column Notice, NEW YORK HERALD, June 11, '08.

I hope Miss Lily Lena is not making her "farewell" to America. I hope she stays till I know her and her songs by heart, that some day I may tell of her and teach them to somebody's children's children.

HAVE YOU GOT ANOTHER GIRL AT HOME LIKE MARY?

that was the inquisitive title of her song. It will wander all over the land like the "Are-there-any-more-at-home-like-you" sextette. Its melody goes through you—positively! In at the ear and out by the mouth. Nobody asks you to join in the chorus (Miss Lena is far too clever for any device so trite), but nevertheless you do join in, and barely below your breath.

NOTE.—A limited number of permits will be granted for this GREAT CHORUS SONG.

ARE YOU PREPARED?

Have you heard the popular Irish Tenor, Mr. DAVE CARTER, sing

"WHERE THE RIVER SHANNON FLOWS?"

Pronounced by Mr. Carter his most successful Song.

"IN THE SHADOW OF THE PYRAMID,"

Sung by Miss MAY MARS.

NOTE.—Artists and Managers will kindly take notice that Miss May Mars has the exclusive singing rights for our song, "In the Shadow of the Pyramid," for the Music Halls. Immediate action will be taken against anyone infringing her rights.

Two absolutely new songs by ERNEST R. BALL, the composer of "LOVE ME AND THE WORLD IS MINE? Note the titles:

"ALL FOR LOVE OF YOU" AND "SOME DAY YOU'LL COME BACK TO ME."

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Financial Times, Jan. 28:—
"The Era" Annual, 1908. This well-known almanac and annual is replete, as usual, with information of all sorts regarding the dramatic and theatrical world, and will be found not only useful to those directly connected with the stage, whether in a histrionic or literary capacity, but also interesting to the average member of the playgoing public, who is regaled with some forty pages of "Stories Told by Well-known People"—mostly actors and actresses. Dramatic authors will appreciate the importance of the very full list that is given of new plays and important revivals at the London and provincial, as well as Paris and Berlin theatres during the past year. The publication is well illustrated with portraits of theatrical and music-hall celebrities.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Daily Express:—
An interesting illustration of the proverb, "Brevity is the soul of wit," is given in some correspondence between Mr. Robert Arthur, the theatrical manager, and Mr. Lennox Pawle, published by the latter in "The Era" Annual for 1908.

DIEPPE CIRCUIT, 1908.

A full description of this most interesting event is given in this film, and the photographic quality of same is equal to the repute of our firm.

AN INVOLUNTARY FARMAN.

Code Word, "ENFIN."

The young cyclist of a well-known firm is entrusted with the delivery of several cases of goods to rich customers. He piles the boxes on his back, and starts at full speed. A wicked wind blows into the cardboard cases, which, acting as an aeroplane, lift the boy up in the air. To the surprise of on-lookers, he goes over the city, the panorama of which passes before his bewildered eyes until, the wind ceasing, his apparatus pulls down chimney and roofs, and drops down in the street, where the crowd greet the young explorer enthusiastically.

248ft. The Subject, £4 2s. 8d.

THE BLUE BIRD.

Code Word "EMIGRE."

This is a lovely fairy tale, which is sure to delight children. It runs thus:—An old queen has two daughters, one pretty and the other ugly. The Prince Charming, meeting them at Court, falls in love with the pretty one; but the queen has her locked up, and she tries her best to make the Prince marry Trouty, the ugly one. Having heard that the Prince was going to carry off his lady-love, she puts into his arms the ugly Trouty, who is hidden in a long veil and quite unrecognisable. At the fairies' palace the prince discovers the trick, and sends Trouty off in company with the fairies. The magicians gather round him and change him into a beautiful blue bird. Disguised like this, the young man enters the window of his beloved, but the queen sends out her archers, and the bird falls under their arrows. The wizard Merlin, however, who has been guarding the Prince all the time, changes him into his own form again, and he marries the young princess with great pomp and splendour.

990ft. The Subject, £16 10s. 0d. Colouring and Toning, £10 15s. 0d

FOR A BIRD.

Code Word, "EFFRAYANT."

In trying to catch a pigeon which has got loose in the flat, Jane and Vincent knock over and break everything. After a long search they discover the bird in a water jug; then, and then only, they think of looking about them, and find every piece of furniture is broken. Their masters on their return make them feel that they do not appreciate their efforts at re-capturing the pigeon.

280ft. The Subject, £4 13s. 4d.

A BAILIFF'S ADVENTURES.

Code Word, "EMBALLAGE."

John Pill and Guy do not like the bailiff, and to show him their feelings, they lock him up in a wardrobe, which they deftly remove from their lodgings. At the corner of the street, the two, having been knocked down by a cab, run away, leaving the wardrobe in the hands of the policemen. At the police-station Mr. Bailiff is set free, but his limbs are so stiff that they require four horses pulling in different directions to put him straight again.

528ft. The Subject, £8 16s. 0d.

THE POOR BLIND WOMAN.

Code Word "DYSPEPSIE."

This poor, blind woman is constantly ill-treated by her son, a young scapegrace, who spends the greater part of his time with scoundrels. One day her pathetic-looking face attracts the attention of an artist, who wants to paint her portrait, and the five-shilling piece she receives for each sitting is snatched away from her by her son, who goes and spends it at the inn. One day he picks a quarrel with one of his friends, and he receives a piece of glass in the temple, which kills him on the spot. After waiting quite a long time for him, the poor mother goes out with her dog in search of her boy; but she makes a slip and falls into the ravine. The dog runs straight to the painter's house, and makes him understand that he must come and rescue the poor woman. Seeing that she is utterly destitute, the painter and his wife take care of her, and she is sure now to have a roof over her head for the remainder of her life and to be well looked after.

692ft. The Subject, £11 10s. 8d.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A SICILIAN HERMIT.

Code Word, "ENGAGER."

Titles of the pictures:—The Convent—Meditating Before the Dead Brethren—Under the Arches of the Old Cloister—Going to the Village—He Begs for His Daily Bread—The Child Learns with Him His First Prayer—He Shares with the Poor His Frugal Meal. The magnificent scenery and very high photographic quality of this film are sure to ensure same a great success.

445ft. The Subject, £7 8s. 4d. Toning, £1 10s. 0d.

THE SQUIRE'S RIGHTS.

Code Word "DISGRACE."

This story takes up back to the time of feudality, when the lord was all powerful, and could exact from his peasants heavy taxes. Sir Thomas is very cruel with his peasants, not stopping at whipping them to exhaustion, but caring nought for the protection he should have extended to them. One day his men revolt against his tyranny, and, arming themselves with forks and scythes, they invade his castle, meaning to drag him up to the Calvary, and there to stone him to death. But Lady Joan, who is as kind-hearted as her husband is harsh, has been warned by one of her poor, and she comes and entreats them to give up their revenge. Moved by the touching pleadings of their suzerain, the serfs set their lord free. His heart melts at their act of generosity, and kneeling down at the foot of the Calvary, he promises to be more upright and just in future.

643ft. The Subject, £10 14s. 4d. Toning, £1 10s. 0d.

A POETICAL SERENADE.

Code Word, "EVANGILE."

Two street musicians are playing in front of a large house. The tune is so sweet and soft that everybody in the different flats has to listen, and thoroughly enjoy the music. Thus is settled many a family quarrel which was threatening to become serious, and peace and good-humour prevail all over the house when the two leave the place.

Pathé's Films

UNEQUALLED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

LAST WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and Baby.

This very amusing film shows plainly that baby is sometimes very much of a tyrant, and the comical situations of her parent when he tries to gratify her wishes are pleasant to witness. Is not the going up in the air extremely funny? And the way the small daughter opens her arms when her daddy comes back to earth again is really very charming.

A Game of Hide and Seek.

This is another story about the little tartars which are called children, and their ideas about fun and "ripping times." Nothing is sacred to them as long as they can do as they please, and it is often at the cost of some expensive piece of furniture that they have the most lovely games. But father and mother are not always of the same opinion, more is the pity.

Unusual Cooking.

A good trick film, weird, and impossible of realisation in our hum-drum daily life, but which would suit many people for whom the cares of house-keeping are a continual subject for complaint. At any rate, it is a cleverly got-up film, which sets the mind wondering how it can be executed.

Pilgrimages and Fairs in Brittany.

Is remarkable for its photographic quality, and very interesting too, for it depicts another custom of the already well-known province of France so often visited by English speaking tourists. Every showman anxious to give an up-to-date instructive entertainment should add it to his selection.

PATHÉ'S FILMS ARE EXCLUSIVELY EXHIBITED AT THE LONDON HIPPODROME, and at THE PATHÉ BUILDING, FRANCO-BRITISH EXHIBITION.

"URBAN," "ECLIPSE," AND "RADIOS" FILMS.

POPULAR NATURAL HISTORY AND MICROSCOPIC SCIENCE.

Scenes of genuine humour are cleverly and judiciously interwoven in such a manner that the pictures enliven, edify, and educate, at one and the same time.

FARMYARD FRIENDS.

Unique; each picture representing not only a Class, but the very best specimen of that Class, rare or common.

A Fund of Quaintness, Originality, Humour, and Instruction. Full of unusual and exciting episodes.

Vast Herds of Cattle in South America; Chillingham Wild Cattle; Shepherding on Stilts; Champion Animals, Pets, etc., etc. The work of years, selected with great discrimination from miles of film.

Nos. 2125-6. Code, "Rival." Length 655ft. Price £10 18s. 4d.

POND LIFE.

A wonderful series of intense general interest and great educational importance. Tremendously magnified, the insects, etc., are seen alive in their different stages and transformations.

Life Story of the Frog, from the Tadpole stage; Circulation of Blood in the foot of a frog, and the tail of a goldfish; Life of the Newt, Water Flea, Pond Hydra, Water Beetle, Dragon Fly, Leech, Crayfish, Water Spider, etc., etc.

No. 2121 Code "Larva." Length 750ft. Price £12 10s.

BOYS' AQUATIC SPORTS.

Wonderfully Expert Display of difficult feats by numerous performers: Leap Frog; Swimming under water, with hands and feet tied, feet first; In imitation of Porpoises; Imitation Cock Fight; Crab Swimming; Nightshirt and Candle Race; Diving for plates; Melée, etc., etc.

No. 2028. Code, "Amphibious." Length 400ft. Price £6 13s. 4d.

Just received, Kineto Film, GRAND PRIX MOTOR RACES AT DIEPPE. Excellent Quality. Approximate Length 350ft.

THE RAG-PICKERS' WEDDING.

Few pictures of life amongst the "submerged tenth" can compare with this series in versimilitude, originality of conception, realistic setting, and perfect enactment.

The love affairs of a couple of Rag Pickers are faithfully presented, and underlying the scenes of humour are episodes of requited love, happiness amid squalor, and rejoicing under conditions never experienced by the respectable citizen, which lend glamour and romance even to scenes of lawlessness.

No. 4050. Code "Amour." Length 450ft. Price £7 10s.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN. — PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—La Milo is the principal attraction this week. Her graceful exhibition of statuesque poses is followed with admiring interest, and at the close she is enthusiastically recalled; Mr. Peter Bermingham is most amusing as a Scotch comedian; Cambo, the musical man monkey, is clever and entertaining as usual; Mr. Will English amuses with his coon patter and dancing; Hampton and Bauman's sketch, Down in Kentucky, is highly appreciated; Professor Milne's ventriloquial turn elicits hearty laughter and applause; and Miss Dot Stephens sings and impersonates with all her customary charm.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. David Thomson.—The programme is clever, original, and entertaining as usual. Mr. G. W. Walker, a baritone of great compass, is a newcomer; Mr. Sidney Locklynne's imitations continue to be appreciated; and all the other artists, who have been here since the opening of the season, are warm favourites with the audiences.

ALHAMBRA MUSIC HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. John Sinclair; Manager, Mr. George B. Lee.—The principal artists this week are Miss Nancy Harcourt, a vivacious comedienne; Miss Kate Thomson and Miss Lizzie Stephen, graceful comediennes and dancers; and Mr. Will Aitken, a highly humorous comedian. Mr. Dove Paterson's films are followed with the keenest interest from start to finish.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—The stock company here this week presented for the first three nights the Bullock version of East Lynne. Miss Mabel Mannering in the rôle of Lady Isabel submitted an artistic portrayal; Mr. Robert Faulkner was completely successful as Archibald Carlyle; Mr. Stanley Bedwell gave an excellent representation of Sir Francis Levison; Mr. J. G. Maine acquitted himself creditably as Lord Mountsevern; Mr. Sydney Cranston was a capital Dick Hare; and Mr. Allan Carruthers a popular P.C. Bullock. Mr. Louis Edmonde as Lawyer Dill and Mr. W. H. Melrose as Justice Hare proved satisfactory; Miss Maude Townsend was seen to advantage as Barbara Hare; and Miss Violet Temple was an effective Cornelia Carlyle, Miss Nellie Lewis being all that could be desired as Willie Carlyle. For the remaining three nights the stage was occupied by a new and original domestic drama entitled A Scheme that Failed.

TOWN HALL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—Mr. Walter Mould, the late resident-manager of the Hippodrome, which was totally destroyed by fire a fortnight ago, has taken over all the available dates of this hall, making it a temporary abode for variety until arrangements are definitely completed regarding a new stone edifice. A capital programme, chiefly composed of a series of animated pictures, was arranged for the opening week, amongst which The Sleeping Beauty and a dramatic film entitled Beatrice Cenci was the pick. The MacConnell Trio, in their musical comedy sketch, contributed considerably to the evening's entertainment; Bessie Travis proved herself a smart ventriloquist; Eily Adair is a dainty comedienne; and Manson and West delighted the audience with their comedy act.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—The success attending the efforts of Fred Karno's companies is well assured here, and the reception of another this week was even greater than on the two previous weeks. The Casuals and The Mumming Birds are two farcical extravaganzas which are simply side-splitting, and take up a good part of the evening. The Three Delaries go through a marvellous performance on the trapeze and rings; the Sisters Edwards as dancers, singers, and drummers are as popular as ever; and Aggie Flanagan appears as a male impersonator. On Tuesday as an extra turn a clever professional whistler gave several bird imitations.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Revill.—Mr. Fred Somerfield's company is touring with a stirring melodrama entitled Geoffrey Langdon's Wife, and its first appearance here this week is creating a good impression on local playgoers. The incidents are of a specially exciting character, and the plot reveals the temptation of a good woman and her ultimate triumph. Miss Cissie Bellamy enacts the part of Mary, Geoffrey Langdon's wife, with refinement, skill, and power; Mr. Paul Beckett as Felix Beverley must also be credited with power, and the same commendation may be applied with equal truth to the impersonation of Jack Stirling by Mr. Edward E. Louis; and the impersonations of Geoffrey Lagndon by Mr. Wilson Summers, and Col. Miles, by Mr. W. E. Passmore, are striking instances of skilful and artistic study of character; Miss Elsie Capell as the Hon. Mrs. Sands plays the society lady in the approved style; Miss Katie Lever is particularly charming as Sweet Nancy. The drama is splendidly dressed and mounted.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son.—The list of artists here includes the Imperials, ju-jitsu wrestlers, who give a thorough demonstration and explanation of all the locks and holds in ju-jitsu. Fritz Kornau is an expert whistler; Spangles and Sawdust give a smart stage aerial act; Dunningarto is neat and expert as a sleight-of-hand performer; Ted Waite is a good singing comedienne; the Kyasas give amongst other wonderful feats their dental and hirsute novelty; Beattie Foster is a good serio-comic, and Wallace Whitney a popular character comedian. The Gaieties of Divorce is illustrated by the Bioscope.

BARNSLEY.—NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Barnsley Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson. — The Royal Tokio Troupe of Japanese performers head the bill; Le Diablo, in a cycle act, "looping the devil's wheel," submits a thrilling performance; Miss Lizzie Hands, vocalist-comedienne, is heard to advantage; Spencer and Marks, in an original act, entitled The Stage-struck Waifs, are well received. The programme also includes the Athlones, society athletes, in perfect posing of muscular development; Hersleb Bros., Danish comedy artists, evoke laughter in their motor-car act; Theresa and May, in a smart protean act; and Hughes and Elliott, in song and dance. The Palascope completes.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Charles March's company in The Gamester of Metz is here. Mr. March, in his numerous disguises, acts as cleverly as ever, and Mr. William Brash is a capital Captain Henri Badaire; Mr. Arthur Merryless is an excellent General de Montparasse; and Miss Lizzie Prescott as Gwendoline Pearson, Miss Nellie Brash as Countess Baldot, and Miss Una Lane as Lucia Baldot act with judgment and taste. A scene from a new play, The Centurion, is also billed.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—An exceedingly good all-round programme is presented here this week. The top turn, the Elite Harmony Boys, in a vocal act, Messmates Ashore, delight their listeners; Otto and Olga, in a speciality act, are great favourites; Josh Dixon, a comedian, sustains his reputation; an excellent contortionist act is given by Gibbon and Bell; Miss Estrella is an expert barefoot dancer; Miss Mabel Roberts a pleasing vocalist; and Vernon's Bioscope is attractive.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—Some very interesting pictures are drawing capital houses here this week. Miss Lilla Dalma contributes pleasing songs and dances.

BARRY DOCK. — THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden. — Messrs. Chabot and Ballard present Only a Woman here this week. Mr. Percy Ballard gives an excellent representation of Courtenay Wallace; Miss Violet Crawford as Marie Lestoc is herself well suited to the part; Messrs. H. Barker and F. Edwards do well; Mr. F. Green as Lieut. Summerfield scores well; as do Mr. W. H. Willson as Rodney Summerfield. The fun is provided by Miss M. Douglas as Eliza Jane.

NEW GARDENS, BARRY ISLAND.—Lessee, Mr. Arthur Prince; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. MacAllister.—The chief attraction here is Mr. Arthur Prince. Mr. A. MacAllister evokes much applause; and other turns are given by a good all-round company.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Miss Dolly Elsworthy is here in her capital sketch The Orange Girl; and the Menzies, comedy duologue artists; Alma Moller, Australian vocalist; Ruby Parsonage, comedienne; Matt Merrymount, "the Pantomime Dame"; Jim E. James, bone soloist; Jack and May Mackenzie, in Married for Money, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux are the other attractions.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Clarke and Hamilton have been very successful with their smart comedy act; Mr. James Fawn is paying a return visit, and his comic songs have delighted all; the gymnastic feats of the Fitzroys have created quite a sensation; and Les Sousloffs, whirlwind dancers, gain a fine reception, thoroughly deserved. The acrobatic act of the Haydas Troupe is one of the best ever submitted here; and also appearing are Mr. Francis O'Flynn, a banjoist of note; Miss Minnie Mace, comedienne; and the Palace pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmot and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—De Gracias Royal Assam Elephants top the bill, and their remarkable feats have aroused much enthusiasm; Charles Daly and Kitty O'Brien are a smart comedy duo; and Mr. L. W. Harris is a comedian of exceptional merit, with good chorus songs. The Two Countees, humorists and harmonists, take well; and Miss Maud Vera is a charming comedienne and fine dancer. The acrobatic act of the Ted Moxon Trio is one of the best ever submitted here; and Ingram and Irving, the Turkish Tom Thumb, Miss Minnie D'Aubyn, a good vocalist, and the Hipposcope complete.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery return here with their successful skit entitled The Would-be Actors, which had a good reception; the King's College Boys must be commended for their vocal items, which have been well rendered; and the talented comedienne, Miss Maude Mortimer, easily gains immense favour for her charming rendering of several catchy songs; Miss Barbara Babbington is aptly described as a clever vaudeville artist; and Hans and Lux, "The College Chums," in songs and patter, receive an excellent reception. Also appearing are Miss Lily Esplin, comedienne; Stuart and Evans, comedians; and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—The animated pictures here are still proving a great draw, and even on the hottest summer evening this theatre is packed to the doors. This week the following views have been exhibited, The Bully and the Recruit, Tramp's Daughter, Disappointed Heirs, Dr. Cornelius, The Lady Barrister, The Perjurer, &c. In addition, Mr. Karl Edwards, vocalist, appears with much success; also the Two Sports, comedy artists, who have made a big hit.

BILSTON.—AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Battersby.—Mr. Alf. Brookes and Mr. Harry Plant give a good selection of comic songs; Miss Flo Holroyd sings "Madam'selle New York" with taste and expression; Mr. Fred Field (baritone), Mr. Carl St. Clare (female impersonator), and Mr. Bert Simner (pianist), all contribute to a successful programme.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Frank Lindo's company in the domestic drama Home, Sweet Home commands extensive patronage. An excellent representation is much enhanced by a careful and powerful rendering of Stephen Armitage, a part to which Mr. Lindo does the fullest justice; he is ably supported by Miss Marion Wakeford, who wins all hearts by a fine and natural performance of the rather exacting rôle of Joan. Mr. Helsby Wright as the conventional villain Lucas Lyle receives the compliment of being heartily hissed for the fidelity of his conception, and Mr. Archer Brown is well suited as the Duke of Ancaster. Miss Maude Elliott as Sybil Fay is worthy of special commendation; Dick Redmayne is well played by Mr. G. Rogers, and Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle is an efficient David Armitage; Miss Minnie, a promising juvenile, plays Dora with remarkable intelligence and effect, and the remainder of the company are quite adequate to their respective tasks. The scenic effects are on a very complete scale.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Paul Barnes, of New York, is a comedian and raconteur of the first water, and in this, his first engagement in this town, has achieved a pronounced success; Miss Selina Braatz displays extraordinary ability as a lady juggler, and the merit of her clever show is heartily recognised; the Foy Brothers and their able company work hard and with success in their amusing sketch Pat in China; and the New Macs are thoroughly entertaining comedians and patterers; the Sisters Dorrell are charming duettists and dancers, and Miss Agnes Asher, comedienne; Mr. Bert Brantford, a character comedian of ability; Mr. Nat Wilkins, a versatile comedian; Miss Jenny Hartley, comedienne, and Brown's Royal Bioscope complete a capital programme.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Edwin Adeler.—A musical comedy described as being without a plot, entitled The Gay River, is supported by a clever combination, including Mr. Bert Byrne, Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss Constance Clive, Miss Dora Langham, Mr. Frank Dunlop, Mr. Norman Greene, Mr. William Crawford, Mr. Francis Rayne, and Mr. Dudley Gibson. These entertainments are enjoying a very successful season.

BIRMINGHAM. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—Greed of Gold is drawing fine houses here, with Mr. T. Morton Powell's company. That clever and unprincipled rogue, Harry Hood, is represented adequately by Mr. Murray Yorke; Mr. Alf. Stretton's ingratiating manner as Arthur Errol is very successful; Miss Elma C. Turner leaves nothing wanting in the part of the wife, Dora; Miss Annie Barclay supplies a clever portrayal of Mrs. Maxwell; Mr. Victor C. Rolfe does well as the friend, Mr. Brightsome; Miss May Clarke finds favour as the boy Cecil; and Mr. James Jarret gives a faithful study of the dumb man, Tom Welstead. The lighter rôles are played with much ability by Mr. Sydney Bryant as Cully Snig, Mr. Denis Campbell as Conn Creamer, and Miss S. Bryant as Patty Marfield.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Great Vaudeville and Universal Animated Picture Co. is making a big show here, this week's being a marked success;

George Collins, comedian, scores among the company, and Will Verne, another comedian of a very versatile stamp, and Olive and Wilfred, American comedy sketch artists and dancers, appear successfully. The pictures comprise The Mountaineer's Son, Mandril's Seals, The Secret of the Iron Mask, A Game of Hide-and-seek, Doll-making, An Intricate Duel, Trixie, the Clever Princess, and The Police Women.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake.—For Love and the King shows Mr. C. Watson Mill and company here in fine array. Mr. Watson Mill is supported in his cleverly-conceived creation of Jarval by Miss Rosalind Tate, whose charming looks and inspired acting as the Princess Athene kindle the utmost admiration; Mr. John Burton gives a powerful and engrossing study of the miser, Michael Obrenovic; Mr. Henry Earlesmere succeeds well as the son, Vladimir; Mr. T. W. Dunscombe acts with energy as the Prince; Mr. Geoffrey Chate is capable as the Duke; Miss Joan Ellis wins the sympathies of the audience as the beggar-maid, Natila; Miss Marie Ault is successful as Grazia; Mr. Frank Lyndon bears himself well as the King; and, among others, Messrs. Jim K. Woods and Arthur Trail shine as Carl Oppenheim and Kosta Marko respectively.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Uncle Tom's Cabin, with Mr. Chas. Harrington's popular combination, holds the position here, and proves a great attraction. Mr. J. Carr's investment of the titular rôle, with its attitude of grave benevolence, makes a goodly impression; Mr. T. Bowdron invests the character of Legree with due force and brutality; Mr. Chas. Harrington is a popular personage as the goodly Quaker; and the other parts are in excellent keeping, to mention Topsy (Miss Annie Watson), Cassie (Miss Hettie Johnson), Eva (Miss Kitty Bell), George Harris (Mr. Cecil Austin Olgar), Eliza (Miss Hero Hathaway), and Aunt Ophelia (Miss Jennie Malcolm). Some smart specialities proceed from Rich and Moore, Ben Rowe, Walter Langford, Amy Height, Rowe and Holden, Shorty May, and others.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—Happy Fanny Fields scored a big success here on Monday, but unfortunately, having caught a chill, was unable to appear at the second house, Nellie Wallace deputising for her. George Gilbey has made a mark with his "Policeman" song; and Frank Lynn comes in for a large share of applause. The Picchianis do a clever acrobatic turn; the cycling act of the Three Merrills is decidedly neat; the Lyric Quartette render their selections with effect; and Ian Colquhoun's rich baritone voice is heard to advantage. Tom White's Arabs and the Three Prestons in a sketch, The Liftman's Rise, are amusing.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—Moses and Son is the attraction here; a fine juggling turn is done by the Great Weiland, assisted by Mlle. Carlotta; Nellie Wallace's songs are repeatedly encored; an excellent turn is done by Ross Loader, "the slavey at the piano," who entertains her audience and wins loud applause; the Musical Schaffers, J. W. Rowley, Hawthorne and Burt, Harold Thornley, and Harry Weldon add to the mirth of the evening.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Julian Rose, Hebrew comedian, is appearing here in his monologue Levinsky at the Wedding, which is very funny; Mlle. Edwin is an expert contortionist; Mike Cray is an amusing comedian; the Westwoods do a remarkable cycling act; John E. Coyle is loudly encored for his songs. Other popular turns are supplied by the Mayos, Satsuma, Gena Manon, and the Three Cunards.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles Owen.—Harry Freeman is the big turn here, and has made a hit with his songs; Sinclair and Whiteford have a good sketch, Getting Even; Sid Bandon is applauded for his songs; Adey Spencer, Susie and Protti, Auto, Chas. Best, Risbey, and Josie Delaine complete the programme; and Over the Sticks is depicted on the Bioscope.

BLACKBURN.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Mr. Junius Booth and company are playing Monte Cristo with great success to crowded houses.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—The artists appearing here are Cullen and Carthy, amusing comedians; Maud Rochez, with her Royal Monkey Music Hall; Robins and Collier, in their laughable sketch The Lady and the Porter; Harry Nelson, comedian; Les Zelovas, acrobatic equilibrists; Charles Resti, sleight-of-hand artist; the Bartholomew Girls; and Madge Field, vocalist.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Thos. Sidney and company present The Marriage of Kitty here this week in a manner deserving of much praise. Mr. Sidney's assumption of John Travers is naturalness itself, and Mr. Edgar Kent gives a good account of Sir Reginald Belsize. A very charming Kitty is found in Miss Mary Thorne, whilst Mme. de Semiano is well represented by Miss Winifred Pearson. Twenty Years After is the title of an interesting curtain-raiser.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—The Dandy Doctor, played by Mr Edward Marris's company, is again proving attractive fare here. Miss Florence Smithers repeats her really admirable performance of Jane, and carries all before her; Mr. Chas. A. Stephenson as Melchisadek Brown, and Mr. A. Leslie Martin as Bertie Bolingbroke also play their parts exceedingly well, and provide the major portion of the fun; Miss Mollie Wynne is charming and winsome as Ivy Pendred; Miss Lottie Stone's Eight Empire Girls and the Little Dutch Girls contribute some admirable dances.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Little Tich tops a bill which also contains several other eminent artists, including Phil Ray, the well-known comedian; May Moore Duprez, a clever singer and dancer; and Marguerite Broadfoote, a singer of bright songs. Other good turns are supplied by Edie King, comedienne; Bella Ophini, gymnast; La Belle Flora, in an artistic mélange; Dorma Morgan, vocalist; and Yamamoto and Koyoshi, Japanese equilibrists. Vernon's Imperial Bioscope continues to show all the latest pictures.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mrs. Fioni.—The living pictures form the special feature here, and evoke rounds of applause nightly. The variety turns are supplied by Drum and Major, comedy specialists; Odey North, comedian; and the Sisters Stewart, acrobats and singers.

NORTH PIER.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. James Walker.—The Gems are supplying a capital entertainment here this week. The company, which is under the direction of Mr. Wallace Kennedy, includes Miss Bessie Walker, Miss Olive Mortimer, Mr. Ernest Attwell, Mr. David W. North, and Mr. Kenna Lawson.

CENTRAL PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Daly.—Mr. W. H. "Pip" Powell heads a company of excellent artists engaged here this week.

VICTORIA PIER.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Geo. Roberts.—Mr. Sydney Gandy, ventriloquial entertainer, and Miss Inglefield supply a pleasing entertainment here. Herr Blome's orchestra provides the music.

THE WINTER GARDENS AND THE TOWER are also attracting huge crowds daily, without any change in their respective programmes.

BOOTLE.—MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Wilmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The stock company is this week presenting a sensational drama entitled A Career of Crime, the principal characters being well represented by Mr. Albert Sember, Mr. Alfred D. Adams, Mr. Stanley S. Gordon, Mr. Tom H. Solly, Miss Nina Vaughton, Miss Kathleen Magee, and Miss Effie Macintosh.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Ball.—The excellent bill provided here is headed by Messrs. Garland and Douglas, who, with their company of eighteen coloured artists, present a unique and original musical mélange. Ethel Newman gives a neatly arranged monologue, entitled "Her Wedding Day," for which she is heartily applauded; Irve Hayman and Little Marie Montague, in Christmas Eve, are successful; José Collins renders some capital up-to-date songs, her refined voice being much appreciated; Percival, in his one-man musical comedy, All through the Christening, is humorous; Frazer and Haley are responsible for harmonious duets; and the Hippo. pictures exhibit an interesting set of films.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—On Monday night Mr. Montague Beaudyn, for the first time here, presented the romantic drama Send Him Victorious, which had a very cordial reception at the hands of a large audience. All the elements of an interesting and stirring play are introduced in Mr. Herbert Skardon's work, and the interpretation is excellent. In the part of the political adventuress, the Countess Kara von Mecklinberg, Miss Marie Robson acts with dramatic skill and power; the Ambassador's daughter, Ethel Hardinge, Miss Irene Munroe represents with grace and repose; Mr. G. M. Montanini has a part in the reckless, conspiring Colonel Kaufmann which suits him finely; Captain Frank Allison, a military attaché, is a manly effort on the part of Mr. Beaudyn. The humorous element is capitally sustained by Mr. Harry Oates as an easy-going soldier, Geordie Walker, and by Miss Cecilia Crawford as Gretchen Haltz, a sprightly Dutch maid. The play is very finely staged.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—John Warren, the Court magician, presents a distinct novelty here this week in the shape of a mysterious military episode, The Magic Carpet; it is a very clever illusion, and, in addition, Mr. Warren performs some smart sleight-of-hand tricks; Miss Mollie Wynter as the Whistling Nurse, and a good company support Mr. Warren well. Lil Hawthorne, comedienne, is on a return visit, bright and charming as ever; Leonie Dixon, a pretty soubrette, executes a clever dance; Leo Stormont's baritone song is prettily illustrated; Irene Lee and Candy Boys score a distinct success in their clever American song and dance act; Dusty Rhodes, the comedy merchant, sings well, and his patter is funny; Charles Norton, on a return visit with his mimetic monologue Pro's at the Races earns applause; Frank Seeley's comedy efforts meet with approval; the songs submitted by Amy Marsden are of a good broad comedy type; and some diverting pictures are shown by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—There is a capital bill here this week. Emmerson and Baldwin provide a fund of amusement as comic jugglers, and their Indian club performance is very clever; as a sleight-of-hand expert Professor Norton is particularly smart and entertaining; Bains and Reed provide amusement with their speciality act Humsti Bumsti; Natalia and Diana give a fine performance on the aerial trapeze. Those wonderful people, the Violas, the "White Mahatmas," are again astonishing the audience with their skill in thought transmission, or second sight; Takio, the Japanese, is a clever mimic of sounds; Norah Stockelle is a very pretty comedienne and dancer; as equilibrists and acrobats the Pasquali Brothers are exceedingly clever, and applause greets their performance; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are very interesting.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL PRINCES' PARADE.—Manager for the Corporation, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Promenade Concerts in the handsome Floral Pavilion drew crowded audiences, and Mr. Norfolk Megone's fine orchestra is daily adding to its reputation. Miss Hope Jackson, the vocalist for the week, possesses a contralto voice of great power and beauty. In the Grand Pavilion this week a special item is a capital turn entitled A Country Comedy, arranged by Mr. Flockton-Foster. Mr Ernest Hastings, a popular society entertainer, is delighting large audiences which gather here. The Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures are always a source of great attraction. Thursday was a special gala night, when the grounds were beautifully illuminated, and Messrs. C. T. Brock and Co. gave a fine display of "daylight fireworks."

NEW SPA AND GARDENS.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The Promenade Concerts by Herr Simon Würm and his Viennese Band are highly appreciated, and Miss Maude Foreshew, the vocalist for the week, possesses a contralto voice of great beauty and compass, her songs being always most pleasingly rendered. Mr. Surrie Lindon and his company of vaudeville entertainers, give some excellent performances in the Grand Opera House. Miss Bertha Frey sings some taking songs with good effect; Miss Olga Gray delights with her humorous songs; Mr. Percy Stanhope and Mr. Milton Hayes are most amusing in their several turns; and Mr. Surrie Lindon's coon songs are effective, as are also the laughable trios contributed by the three gentlemen named. Mr. Trewin Wynne's songs at the piano are very effective, and he is a most able accompanist. Wednesday night was a special programme night, when Mr. Wilson Foster and his finely-trained choir from York made their first appearance before a large audience.

THE PALACE.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Delmar.—The Parisian Animated Pictures are delighting the patrons of Mr. Delmar's redecorated place of amusement. The large ball-room is also a source of great attraction, the band, under the conductorship of Mr. A. J. G. Fox, rendering some excellent programmes of dance music. The variety turns in the great hall are varied each week, and the manager keeps his programmes well up to date.

SUMMER GARDENS. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—The special attraction at this capital place of amusement this week is an amusing sketch Hamilton's Diorama, or a tour round the world. Some capital variety turns are given by Messrs. Geo. Hyam, H. B. Coda, J. Beanland, C. Danton, and J. Bath. Miss Vera Dudley and Miss Rena Rae are comediennes and dancers whose turns are always rewarded with double encores.

BRIGHTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—In aid of the Arthur Blackman Memorial Fund the Brighton and Hove Operatic Society gave a very successful performance of Merrie England here on Monday evening. Miss Florence Donovan (Bessie Throckmorton), Miss Lizzie Over (Jill All Alone), Mr. Reginald Hobson (Earl of Essex), Mr. W. A. Lauder (Walter Wilkins), Mr. W. J. Mitchell (Sir Walter Raleigh), Mr. Harry Taylor (Silas Simkins), and Miss Ella Leggatt (Queen Elizabeth) did admirably. Mr. Norman Richards conducted, and Mr. H. Drury was stage-manager. On the termination of the opera thanks were accorded to Mr. H. Cecil Beryl for the use of the theatre, Mr. H. O. Ward (hon. secretary), and Mr. Norman Richards (conductor).

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. Ernest Carpenter's stock company is performing Ticket of Leave Man here this week. Mr. Ronald Adair gives a fine impersonation of Bob Brierly; Miss Kathleen Russell acts charmingly as May Edwards; Mr. Ellis J. Preston submits an excellent representation of Jem Dalton; Mr. Charles A. Preece's Melter Moss, Mr. Edward McLean's Hawkshaw, and Miss Lucy Murray's Mrs. Willoughby are capital enactments; and able support is rendered by Miss Amy Venimore (Emily St. Evremond), Mr. A. H. Hallatt (Mr. Gibson), Mr. Daniel Greene (Green Jones), and Miss May Day (Sam Willoughby).

ALHAMBRA.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—An excellent programme is sustained here this week. George Mozart, the poular comedian, is enthusiastically received; Cyril Clensy is a very clever mimic; Rose Elliott sings in capital style; the Arthur Bedini Trio submit an excellent pantomime act; Eldra's cleverly-trained dogs provide a pleasing turn; Harry Cook, comedian, is very successful; Marion Armitage, comedienne, is highly entertaining; Rose Gower is a dainty vocalist; and the Alhambrascope pictures are interesting.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—There is a capital company here this week. Chung-Ling-Soo, Chinese magician, performs marvellous and bewildering feats; Will Vay's Juveniles achieve great success in Life in the Slums; Hamid Alexander's musical sketch Impressions of a Slum Boy in the Country, is cordially received; the Smart Brothers, acrobatic eccentrics, are clever and amusing; Ross and Lewis are very droll patterers; Fred Keeton is a mirthful comedian; C. Cleland presents a neat satire on juggling; Marie Reeve is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Brill and Hemsley's sketch Fun in a Music Shop is good; and the Barrascope pictures are entertaining.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris's company is here this week with The Woman of Kronstadt. Miss Edith Coleman gives an admirable portrayal of Marian Best; Mr. Edgar Stevenson is a dashing Captain Paul Lassoulie; Mr. Fred Castleman as the Deputy Governor and Mr. Ernest E. Norris as Colonel Bonzo are highly effective; Miss Katherine Harrington's Princess Mary is well played; and Mr. George Fisher and Mr. Harold Wagner as British naval officers merit praise.

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mr. Gilbert Payne and company are here this week with The Honeymoon. Mr. Gilbert Payne makes a quaint Nathaniel Noodle; Mr. Chris Ainslie is well suited as Colonel Brown, whose nephew, Jack Armstrong, had a capital exponent in Mr. Leslie Erle; Miss Rose Kearns' Emeretta Noodle and Miss Celestine Brandon's Madge Armstrong are charming representations; and the Godfrey Girls merit commendation for their speciality dances.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. M. Barrasford; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Fred Bauer.—There are some capital animated pictures exhibited here this week. Very realistic and dramatic are The Moneylender, The Spy in Camp, Othello, and Rescued from an Eagle's Nest. Much amusement is afforded by Dancing Legs, Buying a House, The Showman's Wife, and The Timid Lover. Mr. Leslie Kimberley contributes admirable songs; and during the whole entertainment Mr. Arthur W. Briggs presides at the pianoforte with great skill.

CONCERT HALL, WEST-STREET.—The Royal Italian Circus is giving excellent entertainments here this week and doing good business.

BRISTOL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—This historic theatre has been closed for a week for cleaning up, &c. On Monday last it re-opened with Fred Karno's company in the musical pantomimical farce His Majesty's Guests. There was a large attendance in all parts of the house, and the entertainment provided provoked much laughter. All the company worked very hard and successfully, and special mention may be made of the clever performances of Mr. George Hestor as Sergeant Lightning, Mr. Roy Jackson as Lord Easem, Miss Blanche Lynd as Lady Maud Easem, Mr. Sid Kearns as Mings, Miss Kitty Brunton as Miss Manley, and Mr. Tom Manardo as Selina, the servant girl.

PALACE — Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Charles Baldwin's company is heading the bill with the amusing sketch The Bank Clerks. The Four Juggling Geraldos are exceptionally expert with clubs, hoops, &c.; Mabel La Blanche is a pleasing comedienne; Kerr and Koe amuse with dancing and cross-talk; the Brothers St. Clair are smart comedy cyclists; Adah Payne has a fine voice, her songs are well selected, and she evidently has had skilful training as a vocalist; Bert Terrell, "the Deitcher boy," presents a very acceptable turn; Burns and Danvers (Florence and James) do a good turn, the lady being an exceptionally fine vocalist; and Dion Wade, comedian and mimic, obtains appreciation. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Hallen and Hayes, eccentric and wooden shoe dancers, are exceptionally clever in their line, and they provide a really amusing act; Charles Austin, comedian, obtains much appreciation; Susie Dole comedienne, is successful; Johnson and Pelham amuse with song and dance and ball-punching; Fred Hallam, comedian, is popular; the Sisters Wingrove are taking song and dance artists; and George M. Marriott and company score with their dramatic sketch, For Better! For Worse! The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BURNLEY. — EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The bill at this house this week is crowded with good things. The Five Mowatts score in their lightning juggling and club manipulation; the Three Orros are a dashing trio of acrobats; Waltare gives a sensational whirling aerial performance on a revolving wheel; the Three Comedy Chanters score in their vocal comedy act; Edmund Kershaw, boy soprano, pleases with his singing; Miss Ethel Veronica, of charming appearance, sings well; the Brothers Obo are a quaint and amusing pair of comedy duologue artists; Les Bollingers introduce a novelty in lightning pictures; and the Empire Theatroscope maintains a high standard.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Good houses are here to enjoy the varied programme submitted. One continual laugh is provided by the Six Brothers Luck and company in Liftems, Ltd., Universal Providers, a distinctly funny burlesque, extremely well performed. Victor Niblo and his wonderful talking birds Coo-Coo and Laura receive unstinted applause; Kremka Brothers are a pair of able acrobats whose quick and neat work earns a most favourable reception; and the Forsyths, in a comedy speciality, The Tramp in the Nursery, are well received. The Five Bombays are recalled for their singing and dancing; and Edie Reynolds gives beautiful solos on the violin. The San Remo Girls are good comediennes and dancers; and the Sisters Thurban capable vocalists and instrumentalists. The Unseizable Pickpocket is the title of the picture shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Capital pictures of the Channel Fleet at Dover and a programme of other pleasing reproductions, delightfully varied in their selection, are being shown here this week on the Chronomegaphone, and are the cause of much enjoyment to the audiences assembled.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Buxton Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—Mr. H. F. Maltby's company occupied the above theatre for the first three nights of this week, playing The Youngest of Three, Fraud, and Sir George of Almack's. In The Youngest of Three Mr. H. F. Maltby repeated his admirable study of George Wendover, and Mr. Arthur Claremont made an ideal Gerald Wendover; Mr. Wyn Weaver played with conspicuous success as Philip Radford, and Mr. Norman H. Tracey was well placed as Samuel Johns. A most commendable character study came from Mr. Brember Wills as Joshua Pynne. The three sisters, Annie, Florence, and Lucy Dulley, were delightfully depicted by Misses Lizzie Maddocks, Florence Wynn, and Mara Maltby.

CARDIFF. — EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Lea.—The following is the fine programme at the Cardiff Empire this week:—Harry Lauder, Scotch comedian; Mendel, the famous blind pianist; Jennie Johns, comedienne; Mitchell and Cain, comedians, "The Frenchman and the other fellow"; Stewart and Morgan, in a high-class vocal speciality; Arabella Allen, the "Dickens" girl; Stratton Mills and Bobbie Nairn, in their successful absurdity, Fooled; Billy French, the great wooden shoe dancer; Howe and Ardie, comedy acrobats; and the American Bioscope, with Royal Visit to Bristol.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Once again the sporting element is to the fore here in the person of Peter Gotz, light-weight wrestler, who issues the usual challenges; Chassino excels both as a shadowgraphist and a whistler; an old favourite is Jack Lane, Yorkshire comedian, whose funniosities make him more popular than ever; the Brothers Bradshaw, in acrobatic eccentricities, are successful; the Vyponds are high-class society entertainers; the Belmoir Sisters create a sensation with their dancing; and Norah Noble is a pleasing comedienne.

CARLISLE.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—The top of the bill here is occupied by Tom Costello, excellent actor and clever vocalist; Barnard's Marionettes are much above the ordinary entertainment of this class. The figures are quite original and cleverly worked. Sira, the one-legged acrobat, is a wonder; the skill and dexterity displayed in his clever tricks bringing down the house. The Two Kays contribute a refined and popular vocal turn, entitled The Nightingale. Not the least entertaining turn is provided by Walda and Wynne, capital jugglers and sand-dancers of unusual ability; Millie Howell sings nicely and acts well in character sketches; and May Brilliant is also a success as vocalist and dancer. Some fine pictures by the Pepiscope complete.

NEW PUBLIC HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. F. W. Bolam and Sydney Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sydney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Uden.—Edison's animated pictures still remain in popular favour, as evidenced by the large and enthusiastic audiences nightly. Some excellent films are provided, up to date and novel. This week the two deserving of special mention are True Till Death and The New Maid. There are some good varieties.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Charles Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—The Loyal Dominion Co.'s animated pictures are still "running strong" here. The pictures continue to be good. Perhaps the most popular one is of The King's Recent Visit to Leeds, by the Bradford New Century Co. During the evening Mr. Chas. Watkins, entertainer and sifflleur, does his best to amuse.

CHATHAM — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard.—This week's attraction comprises Miss Ethel Van Praagh and J. Edward Whitty's company in the drama An Unwedded Wife. Miss Van Praagh undertakes with a considerable amount of success the trying rôle of Marion; Little Doris gives a representation of Reggie which is the hit of the production; Mr. George Daiper is very natural as Frank Hawthorne; plenty of fun is introduced by Mr. J. Edward Whitty (P.C. O'Runyin), Mr. Will Casey (Napoleon B. Boomer), and Miss Jessie Gillette (Caraway Crumpet); Mr. R. Wilton Bedford gives a good study of Kit, and the drama is well staged.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Graham's Premier Juveniles, who top the bill here, include several smart young artists, who score in A Concert on the Lawn; Clapham and Riskit perform some novel feats on the parallel bars; Woodhouse and Wells are as popular as ever; Harry Webber's Hebrew yarns cause unbounded laughter. Also appearing are George White, comedian; the Brothers Lawrence, who shine more as dancers than vocalists; and Julia Gilbert, comedienne; while the concluding item, Lacey's Erascope, has a screaming film in Oh, that Umbrella!

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. E. G. Woodhouse.—Edgar Budden, roller-skate dancer, is back again; Jack and Evelyn make another hit with Come into the Office. As the Substitute, in a sketch of that name, Mr. Sid Cotterell meets with a flattering reception; Woolmer Young excels in "Don't you think it's time?" The Edisonograph has a capital film entitled The Bargee's Daughter; while the programme also includes Nora Emerald, singer and dancer, and Lottie Govell, comedienne.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harold Montague; Business-Manager, Mr. G. Ivor Sparke.—Mr. Harold Montague and his Vagabonds have returned here this week, and good houses are the order; Mr. Leslie Burgess sings in fine style "The Robber King"; that charming comedienne, Olive Sparke, delights her admirers with "Ypsilanti," and assisted by Harold Montague earns a well-merited encore in the duet, "Do you remember?"; Leslie Lu Lu sings and dances in her usual delightful style, her items, "Mandy" and "Vaggie," being enthusiastically received; Miss Marie Longmore's song, "Under the weeping willow tree," is finely rendered; and Mr. Arthur Thomas, in his musical items, obtains a hearty recall. Harold Montague is as humorous as ever, always delighting the audience, and keeping them in roars of laughter. His items include the song "Do be careful" and a pianoforte sketch. Mr. Claude Russell's pianoforte solo is heartily received; and the farce, Packing Up, in which Miss Ethel Mayaffre appears and acts charmingly, is well received. The concerted numbers by the company are excellent; and Montague's White Ladies' Orchestra complete a splendid programme.

WESTCLIFFE GARDENS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Will Bentley.—A specially strong company is here this week, the bill being headed by that celebrated conjurer and ventriloquial humorist Mr. Fred Vallance, who mystifies his audience just as easily as he makes them laugh; Miss Florence Venning is a captivating and charming vocalist, and renders her items, "The green Isle of Erin" and "In sunny Susquehanna," splendidly. Mr. Harry Child is a vocalist of finished style and fine compass, and has a good reception in his song, "The robber king." "The village pump" and "If the missus says," as rendered by Mr. Bert Graham, are vociferously received; and Mr. Bernard Russell is as funny as possible in "I knew I'd got something to do" and "Hold your hand out," both of which are encored. Mr. Will Bentley makes a decided hit in his songs, "Sing my lads yo ho" and "Who said he don't like girls?" and has to oblige again. Mr. Cyril Weller ably presides at the piano.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. W. F. Jury; Manager, Mr. Dudley Harcourt.—Jury's animated pictures are still a great attraction here. The films shown include Redskins' Justice, Who Kneaded the Dough, Beatrice Cenci, Olympia Horse Show, &c. Mr. J. Horton is warmly applauded for his splendid rendering of well-known songs, which are illustrated on the screen. A special attraction was presented on Wednesday, when the Howard Bros. gave their marvellous second-sight entertainment.

THE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. P. W. Willard.—The programme here this week is a good one. Mlle. Renee is delightful in her refined musical act; Miss Vera Patey is still a great favourite; Chas. Coverdale is really witty and quaint in his comedy act; and Oakley and James, in "A Little Bit of Everything" are excellent. Clarke's Nippers render a good account of themselves in their unique specialities; Venita is a charming comedienne; and Fred Dorman, light comedian, is a good turn. The Palascope shows some fine films.

COLCHESTER. — HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The Tossing Austins, American comedy jugglers and dancers, head the bill here this week, and give a cleverly humorous show; Gala and Norris, in an artistic musical duologue, entitled Down South, reap unstinted applause; Harry Maynard sings a trio of good songs, which, coupled with his engaging personality, engenders the utmost satisfaction; Mlle. Yetta, wire equilibrist, gives a polished performance; Ray Phillips, comedienne and dancer; Eddie Comett, comedian and patterer; and Dolly White, male impersonator, each contribute to the bill, which is concluded with capital films by the American Vitagraph company. On Friday a benefit night was awarded the Colchester and East Essex Cricket Club.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The Prodigal Parson is attracting considerable attention at the above house this week. Mr. Logan Darra gives a very fine impersonation of the Rev. Tom Godley; Miss Violet Hammersley meets with considerable success as the parson's wife; Mr. Alfred Northway gives a typical rendering of the villain, Enoch Jaggins; Mr. W. V. Garrod being successfully responsible for Phil Drive, who is most humorous, and is assisted by Miss Enid Edoni as his wife. Miss Madge Gillard is responsible for the Rev. Godley's blind child.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry.—Mr. Auguste Van Biene heads the bill this week with a miniature drama, entitled The Master Musician. He gave a very fine performance on his 'cello, and was recalled several times. A very fine turn is given by the Five Lunatic Bakers, who perform some wonderful tricks and some very clever acrobating; Mr. Herbert Bates gives some good tenor songs; an admirable sketch is presented by Fred Maitland, in which he "hits off" with great success the Suffragette movement. In one of the boxes appears one of the stage type of Suffragettes, from which she interrupts and defies the speaker, and eventually gets turned out by an attendant; this causes roars of laughter. Other artists are the Three Sisters Transfield and Tony Iveson. The Bioscope pictures show the Dieppe motor races.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—The star turn is Chas. T. Aldrich, and is rightly named the man of many parts. For a quick-change artist he would be hard to beat, while as a juggler and imitator of well-known magicians he does some splendid work. The Leslie Bros. are equally at home with any musical instrument, at the same time being highly amusing; William Lee and Helen Bentley appear in an amusing comedy sketch, entitled A Sure Thing; Lola Patey possesses a charming voice as a character comedian. Other items well given are Walter Wade, comedian; Harry Drew, the popular Welsh basso; the Five Olracs, acrobats; and Sisters Morgan, duettists and dancers. Bioscope pictures are also given.

CROYDON.—HIPPODROME AND NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Jackson Hayes; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Samuel James and Newman Maurice. — An attractive programme is provided here this week. Blanche Newman is a capital comedienne and dancer; Nat Lynton, swell comedian, is greatly applauded; a farcical sketch, entitled Tipping the Cabman, creates much merriment; Mr. Fred Southern and company present a powerful sketch, Lashed to the Mast, the principal characters being ably represented by Mr. Fred Southern and Miss May Emery. The programme also includes Rosie Everett, Leon and Nole, and several interesting pictures are shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hal Cummings.—This week an interesting variety programme is given on the system of two shows a night. A splendid entertainment is given by the Five Musical Tritons; another clever performance is by the Les Montaldos on the slack wire, introducing parrots and cockatoos; W. H. Smart, an eccentric Scotchman, is well named; Flo Hilton, male impersonator, is up to date; Miss Kitty Lavigne is a capital dancer; and other turns are Maxford and O'Neill, patter comedians; Le Rubens in the scena A Gipsy Encampment; Mr. and Mrs. Wordsley Hulse, sketch artists; and new pictures on the New-Bio-Dreadnought.

NEW HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—The principal turn is a dramatic episode Her Princely Betrayal, played by Mr. Herbert Cottesmore and company, which includes Mr. Oscar Ayde, Miss Amber Wyville, Miss J. Black, Mr. W. Black, and Mr. Royce Milton. The Villions are wonderful acrobatic cyclists; the Wedburns cause plenty of laughter; George Brooks, comedian, is well received; the Lyric Mummers are fine operatic comedy duologue artists; and other good turns are Conan and Doyle, patter comedians and dancers; Master Day, boy diabolist; Lizzie Daniels, comedienne; and the latest pictures on the Pepiscope.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Langley Wyatt.—The great attraction here this week is Eugene Stratton, the well-known comedian. Needless to say, he is meeting with a most cordial reception. Bright Brothers deserve hearty commendation for their graceful and neat athletic and gymnastic novelty; Geo. C. Doughty and company create roars of laughter with their comedy sketch Captain Cupid; the Five Saxonias are entertaining in their musical speciality; W. B. Raby, a clever comedian, is soon popular with his audience; Nell Cotter is a dainty comedienne; Dale and Vale are smart dancers; and Carlo Bianchi as an upside down juggler is successful. The Bioscope, with an excellent film, concludes an interesting programme.

PALACE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—Miss Dora Dench and Mr. Sidney Dench's company are this week producing The Prince of Rogues. In the title-rôle Mr. Edward Avinal appears to advantage; as Winnie Harwood, Miss Dora Dench is charming; Mr. Tom Ronald makes a manly Frank Farrell; Miss Violet Lytton is clever as Rita Congrieve; Mr. Bert Dent as Josh Buggins is extremely funny; and the remaining characters are all in capable hands.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Messrs. Garside and Knowles' company is this week presenting The London Fireman. The company is particularly strong and well-balanced in all departments, the principals being Messrs. F. E. Petley, J. W. Ryder, W. Burgess, E. J. Collins, G. E. Scully, and the Misses Nina Har

Sale, the Sisters Clifton, comediennes, and the Hippodrome pictures with new films complete the programme.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Some exceedingly clever male impersonations are given this week by Emma Don, who scores a tremendous success with a "swell" song and a coster ditty; Monroe's black and white comedy team are a party of vocalists and dancers of exceptional ability; while the skilful make-up of Albert Letine in his female impersonations is very deceptive, his good voice and graceful dancing adding greatly to the success of the turn. Victoria Loving, a charming comedienne; Jenny Adair, vocalist and dancer; Allsopp and Beckwith, a humorous and popular couple; with Carney Brothers, character duettists, and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux also appear.

NEW GRAND THEATRE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—An interesting variety combination holds the boards. Marie St. John is at home as a descriptive vocalist; Bob Best, comedian, is welcome; Comical Walker and his would-be acrobats afford scope for local talent; Marion Blake, a singer of sensible songs, is dainty; Fred Mason, whistling comedian, is popular; Lila Lingard, male impersonator, is well received; and Globella, juggler on the rolling globe, commands approbation.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The second week of the Hippodrome season commenced on Monday with the great Lafayette in his astonishing performance. Edith Courtney sings in an effective manner; the Miller Brothers are smart in their comedy bar act and in their really funny burlesque wrestling act; Billy Farrell, in songs and cake-walks, is warmly applauded; and Tiller's Twelve Palace Girls have a host of admirers. The Royal pictures are exceedingly interesting.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. S. Pearse; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Hereford Jones.—The pictures here this week are both amusing and entertaining, and include Monty Buys a Motor, The Gypsy's Daughter, A Chauffeur's Dream, An Intricate Duel, Great Football Matches (Cup Final, 1908, All Blacks v. England, Tottenham Hotspur v. Queen's Park Rangers), Frightened by Burglars, &c. Prominent in a good variety programme are Percy Victor's Dog Minstrels, Eddie Clay in a comical novelty act, and Bob Pearson, the popular humorist and guide.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—A good all-round programme is submitted here this week, the premier position being Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten in A Model School. Mr. Will Godwin, assisted by his wife and daughter, are warmly applauded for their entertainment; Vandinoff gives an interesting display of oil-colour painting; Katie Butler is as popular as ever; and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden are most successful in their amusing sketch; Gracie Grahame is a most pleasing comedienne; Olive and Owen do well in their comedy act; Babs Lloyd, juvenile comedienne and dancer, also contributes in capital style, and the Empire pictures by Films, Ltd., are up to the usual standard.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The Musical Jees, in their renowned act, The Musical Smithy, form one of the principal attractions here this week. In a daring and sensational horizontal bar act the Brothers O'Brien are loudly applauded; the Sages, burlesque artists and dancers, are entertaining; and Charles Rowen is a quaint comedian. The Brothers Passmore, comedians and dancers, create great hilarity, and some dainty dancing and good singing come from the Sisters Cora; the Van Host Trio perform clever acrobatic feats; John Donald pleases in his latest song-scena, The Scottish Exile's Dream; Beau and Bell, in illustrated duets are well received, and the Bioscope completes a good bill.

PAVILION (KINGSTOWN).—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—The excellent programme presented here this week is attracting large audiences daily. Mr. Malcolm Scott tops the bill, and provides a mirth-provoking turn; Miss Lulu Gillespie's vocal numbers elicit well-deserved applause, and Colin Moul, light comedian, supplies a capital turn; Miss Marjory Moore, a bright and vivacious comedienne, meets with a pleasing reception; Mr. Arthur Powell is a clever and amusing comedian; Mr. Jack Macdermott, comedian, and Mr. Forshaw Kershaw, pianist, also add to the success.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—A capital company is appearing here this week, and includes Belle and Bell, sketch artists; Charles Coll, light comedian; Rennie Hirst, comedienne; Bert Wright, comedian and dancer; Bessie Ball, ballad vocalist; Cave and Cave, song and patter artists; Smith and Waller, comedy duo, and the cinematograph.

EASTBOURNE.—PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Messrs. Taylor Platt and Trevor Lowe's company is appearing here in You Never Can Tell. Miss Katherine Stuart does clever work and is an interesting and convincing Mrs. Clandon; Miss Clara Earle is a girlishly bright and energetic Dolly; Miss Gwladys Morris a pretty and fascinating Gloria; and Miss Ivy Fenton helps ably as the maid. Mr. Charles Daly gives a fine performance as the waiter, William; Mr. Trevor Lowe as Finch McComas is conspicuously successful; Mr. Leslie Hamer is an excellent Valentine; Mr. F. Cremlin an earnest Crampton; and Mr. George Howard an energetic Bohun; and a particularly well-played part is that of Philip, enacted by Mr. Donald Calthorp.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—During the week the Royal English Opera Company, under the direction of Mr. T. H. Friend, is appearing here in a number of grand operas. On Tuesday evening Verdi's Trovatore was given. Mme. Marie Titiens sang finely as Leonora, and her fine work commanded recognition; Miss Edyth Alvord as Azucena was in capital voice, and both for singing and acting must be accorded the fullest praise; and Miss Lilyzie Stock was a dainty, effective Inez. Mr. Tom Griffith, who undertook the part of Count di Luna, used a rich baritone voice artistically; Mr. Frank A. Wood was a perfectly satisfactory Ruiz; and Mr. Fred J. Hargrave worked earnestly and well as Manrico. A small but efficient chorus and an augmented orchestra are under the control of Mr. T. Lawton, and Miss Annie Elliott is the graceful and clever principal dancer.

THE ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—At the head of the bill are the McBanns, who obtain quite an enthusiastic reception for their novel, smart, and skilful club juggling; Mr. Russel Wallett, always a favourite here, is again well to the front in his female impersonation; Miss Daisy Wood, too, is warmly received for her spirited singing; the Cecilias, lady instrumentalists, submit a pleasing turn; Miss Ida Kathrena gives full satisfaction as "the Dolly Girl"; the Braithwaites have a funny sketch, Getting Him Home; Mr. John Parrot causes great merriment as patterer and comedian; and new pictures are shown.

THE BANDSTAND.—Messrs. Arthur and Mills' Pierrots are now established in the bandstand, and are giving very bright, attractive concerts morning and afternoon. Mr. Alec. Johnstone, who undertakes the management, sings his songs with much culture; Miss Edith Blanchard's songs are given with taste and sympathy; Mr. Alf. Hurley, witty and genial, sings and patters to delighted listeners; Mr. Charles Berkeley, with a smart and individual style, is a large contributor to the general fun; Mr. Frank Wood is a capital mimic and a genuinely humorous comedian; and Mr. Jean Desormes has a sympathetic voice. He is the accompanist.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. William Mollison's production of Rob Roy is drawing large houses to this theatre. The exquisite singing of Mr. Ben Davies as Francis Osbaldistone is a special feature, and the favourite tenor is recalled again and again; Mr. William Mollison's Bailie Nicol Jarvie is a splendid study of the part, free from any suggestion of over-acting and full of many fine touches of humour; Mr. William Calvert's impersonation of the title-rôle is a virile piece of acting; and Mr. R. B. Drysdale's Dugal Cratin is admirable alike in the make-up and the energy which the actor throws into the part. The veteran player Mr. Tom Walker is again very successful as Major Galbraith, and his resonant voice finds scope in the dramatic rendering of "A famous man was Robin Hood"; Miss Kitty Brownlees is a graceful Diana Vernon, and sings with expression; while Miss Evelyn McNay's powerful acting as Helen Macgregor, Miss Josephine Woodward's droll Jean McAlpine, and Miss Ethel Armit's vivacious Mattie strengthen the cast. A word of praise must be given to Mr. William Lawrence's Captain Thornton and to Mr. Wm. A. Mackersy's Andrew Fairservice. The play is beautifully staged.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—A well-varied programme with a goodly proportion of notable performers has attracted large houses this week. Mr. Ernest Shand, at the top of the bill, provided a fund of entertainment with his songs and amusing patter, in which his versatility as a comedian was well displayed. Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, old pantomime favourites, gave a remarkably clever exhibition of trick cycling, their comic business being happily novel and refreshing; In The Adventures of a Happy Tramp Billy Howard and Kathryn Harris introduced a fair amount of humour and a great deal of skilled tumbling; while the facial contortions of Mr. Ed. E. Ford, the Australian sundowner, were something to wonder and laugh at, and the cyclone dancing or whirling of the Molasso Quartette was almost bewildering in its successions of rapid movement. The instrumental, vocal, and dancing speciality of the Barton and Franklyn Trio formed another enjoyable item; pleasing songs were also contributed by Miss Carlotta Levey and Miss Ada Cerito; the Two Anartos showed ingenuity in their musical merriment; and the Bioscope films maintained their usual standard of excellence.

FLEETWOOD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—The Ten Terbinis are heading a strong bill, their fine musical act being received with loud applause nightly. The Royal Court Cadets are very popular, and include Mr. Fred Dice, comedian and dancer, who is a great local favourite; Miss Amy Allnutt, comedienne, who is encored nightly; Mr. Reginald Jecks, whose fine baritone voice is heard to great advantage in popular songs; Mr. Will Challiner, comedian; and Mr. Chas. Sweeney, with Miss Jessie Anderton, brilliant accompanist. On Monday last Mr. Fred Dice, the popular stage-manager, had his benefit, and was rewarded, as he deserved, by a crowded and enthusiastic house. In addition to the usual artists the following assisted in a bumper bill:—Risley and Whittaker, Will Beanland, Howard Callon, Harlin and Hanlon, T. Benson, and a host of others.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—The Loyal British Empire Animated Picture Co., under the direction of Mr. Thos. Robinson, are showing a fine set of films this week and drawing full houses. Chief place must be given to such fine pictures as A Pretty Girl-Farmer, Cossacks of the Don, Why Smith Left Home, The Rival Lovers, and the dramatic film The Corsican's Revenge. Vocal items are given at intervals by popular artists.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Mr. Leslie Faber and company were here the first part of the week in The Liars. Mr. Faber sustained the part of Colonel Sir Christopher Dering in an able manner; Miss Winifred Arthur Jones as Lady Jessica was excellent, and Mr. Charles Combe scored a success as Edward Falkner. For the latter part of the week Miss Annie Hughes and company in The Mollusc occupied the boards.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—Our old favourites have come back here. That they were welcome was proved by the large audience and prolonged applause. Will Gane, the jester, evidently knows how to amuse the public; Miss Dorothy Francis with her fine soprano voice rendered some good songs, and the same can also be said of Mr. Walter Grieg, the baritone of the party. Mr. Edgar Berte, as a comedian and entertainer, scored a well-deserved success; some clever dances were given by Miss Inez du Buisson; and Miss Florence Croft as the accompanist acquitted herself well.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth.—On Wednesday evening a gigantic programme was carried out. The musical spectacular piece, "1812," played on the pier deck, was a tremendous success. The following artists perform in the Pavilion all the week:—Miss Lydia Raie, with banjo and mandoline solos; the Miltons, in a speciality shooting act; R. H. Lane, mimic; the Hall and Wilson Trio of roller cyclists; Harry Ugar, eccentric and patter comedian; and Transfield's Circus, with its beautiful ponies and unridable mule.

TOWN HALL.—Lessee, Mr. E. J. Chadwick.—The London Animated Picture Co., under the direction of Mr. Burroughes, is still attracting full houses; Mr. George Lynton gains applause for his baritone solos.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—A clever juggling performance is given by the Seven Ducos Perezoffs, who are starring here this week. R. Cameron Matthews and company have a laughable farce named The Honeymoon Baby; Deans and Wilton are highly amusing in comedy acrobatics; Walter Aubrey proves a clever vocalist and dancer; the Two Lillies present some novel terpsichorean feats; Tom Garland shines as a ventriloquist; Sidney Dolf is successful in a musical mêlange; Bessie Knight, comedienne, and the usual pictures are also in the bill.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder.—Miss Grace Warner and Mr. George Gordon and company are appearing here in a répertoire which embraces The Scarlet Clue, Lady Audley's Secret, East Lynne, and The Little Widow.

GLASGOW. — METROPOLE LTD. — Managing Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Gordon Jefferson.—Mrs. Fred J. Kirk's company occupies the boards here, The Naval Detective being given on the earlier evenings of the week and In Old Madrid later on. In the first play Mr. Leslie Austin is excellent as the detective, and his various disguises are well carried out; Mr. G. H. Holloway as Dr. Schreiner is a duly cynical villain; Mr. Franklyn Daly is amusing as Captain Hustle; Miss Edith Clare as Lulu Kaufmann is well suited; and Miss Maud Bevan infuses much pathos into the part of Phyllis Leslie. The play was well staged, and a crowded audience heartily enjoyed it.

EMPIRE. — District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—An enjoyable time is provided here by the American comedian Edward Clark and his Winning Widows in a racing sketch, the impersonation of a racing tout being specially good. La Belle Titcombe, with her Arabian stallion, gives a clever equestrian act, and the lady is a vocalist of much merit, singing French and English songs; Barton and Ashley have a new sketch, Adam the Second, in which this clever couple introduce a lot of smart business; Signor and Mme. Borelli again make a hit with their impersonations of Continental singers and their cat duets; the Twin Sisters Anderson are dexterous dancers and popular singers; Kioto is a daring Japanese equilibrist; St. George Sylvester is a clever conjurer; Lena Verdi sings and dances with much success; Moon and Morris score in patter and eccentric dancing; Wania appears in Russian dances; and the Bioscope shows the newest pictures.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Fred Karno's company in the lively sketch Saturday to Monday is the chief item in the bill here, and the fun of it is much enjoyed. Starr and Leslie contribute a clever vocal and juggling speciality; the Betsons give a smart and novel comic cycling turn; Harry Merrylees takes well in a Scotch dame song; Harwood's Juveniles show considerable ability in song and dance in their sketch A Children's Christmas Eve; Bert Danson is an exceedingly funny comedian with several good songs; Paula Peters introduces some trained dogs, baboons, and ponies in a clever act; and the latest Bioscope films are also shown.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—Carlton, the quaint one, in card tricks and verbal quips, keeps the audience on the broad grin. Later in the programme he presents his "Mysterious Cross" illusion, which proves very mystifying. Lily Harold gives a bright musical sketch, Cherry, in which she is ably assisted by a smart little boy and girl; Frank Lawton, of The Belle of New York fame, again proves his ability as a whistler and bone soloist; Minnie Kaufmann as a cyclist astonishes the audience with her skill and daring; Chinko, the young juggler, is exceedingly neat in all his tricks; Ray and Calden take well in their comedy act; Alec Kendal as a pattering comedian made a great success; Elsie Earle sings well; and a knockabout cycling turn is given by the Keegans.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The popular Scotch comedian Jack Lorimer is here this week, and has a flattering reception from his Glasgow friends. Francina, Olloms, and Page excel as tumblers and jugglers, the former also proving himself a most expert performer on the xylophone; the eccentric dancing of Andie Burns meets with well-deserved approval; Stella Stoll is a smart comedienne and dancer; several chorus songs sung by Alice Golding go exceedingly strong; Will Mitcham's instrumental items are always well received, and the patter and funny business of Clifton and Gibson are likewise acceptable. The mechanical extravaganza Menzies' 'Bus is seen for the last time this season, the conductor being Rolando Martin and the driver James Chippendale. The Palascope films give an excellent idea of Dog Racing at Govan.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—There is a good programme here this week. Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco are submitting a series of conjuring acts which thoroughly mystify audiences; another interesting turn is that of Terry and Lambert in the vocal sketch English Types through American Eyes, which is thoroughly appreciated. The other members of the company include Aida Martine, comedienne and dancer; Rhoda Paul, descriptive vocalist; the Bros. Dean, speciality dancers; Roma and Romani, favourite classical musicians; Little Zola, the popular comedian; Ten Dixie Girls, vocalists and dancers; and Harry Simms, comedian.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Rich and Rare provide a good comedy turn here; Rex and Hunter in their conjuring and trunk act are popular; Edie May and Amy Bathurst excel as comediennes; and the Bioscope is a strong item.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE. — Messrs Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—The Snow Family of expert and grotesque skaters supply a novel and amusing turn here; and Geo. French's cycle troupe are clever; De Henau paints a langscape, and does other things with his toes; the Three Rubies are a graceful trio of lady contortionists and dancers; the Cromwells are expert jugglers; Little Tim is a quaint comedian; and Mlle. Aladina, with a troupe of trained cockatoos, goes well; the Weimars on the wire have a good reception, and the Palacescope has some capital films.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Leonard Boyne and company in Raffles are playing to large audiences here. In the title-rôle Mr. Leonard Boyne's abilities are seen to great advantage, and he is a big favourite. Mr. E. W. Thomas is a strong Bedford; Miss Dora Sevening a charming Gwendoline; Mr. Cecil Brymer makes an excellent Lord Carley; Miss Lilian Hallows plays with distinction as Mrs. Vidal; and as Marie Miss Dorothy Gordon is excellent.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—A triple bill is being presented by Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. Tom Craven, and company. The first item is a smart little playlet entitled The Lady in Red, in which Mr. Tom Craven is an irresistibly funny William. Mr. Stephen Adeson makes a smart Mr. Johnson; Miss Isabel Collier a vivacious Cora; and Miss Clara Milvain a charming Mrs. Johnson. The second item consist of a duologue entitled The Yarn-Spinner, in which Mr. Lionel Brough, the greatest of yarn-spinners, enumerates his favourite stories, which seem more funny each time they are spun. Miss Mary Brough keeps the house in roars of laughter as Mrs. Cackle. The programme concludes with the celebrated comedy Milky White.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. George Gilbert.—Les Piccolinos are the cleverest little people ever seen here; Bert Woodward, the cycling coon, is a big draw; the Bohemians are capital instrumentalists; Aerian and Ostara are smart aerial gymnasts; Watson introduces some clever animals; Leicester Cooke is a daring equestrian; Doodles is in fine form; and excellent pictures are exhibited on the Bioscope. The programme concludes with the water pantomime Fun on the Broads.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.—Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Mr. Charles Collette, topping the bill here this week, keep audiences in continuous laughter by his witty yarns and smart comedy. In conjunction with Miss Joan Derry, he appears in a witty duologue entitled Tea for Two. Miss Flo Somers is good as the Picture-Postcard Girl; the Musical Keiths present a novel musical turn; La Petite Carlina is a clever dancer; Miss Lilian Jefferies a smart comedienne; Pulo is repeating his success of last week; Miss Joan Derry is a smart boy impersonator; Carl Osmond a clever cartoonist and comedian; and the Britanniscope displays some fine pictures.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, the Great Yarmouth Corporation.—Mr. Charles Gardiner is a quaint comedian; Miss Gertrude Melrose sings good ballads; Professor Thornbury's lightning sketches are capital; Mr. Arthur Melrose is a good mimic; Kent and Keith present a smart musical duologue; Miss Cecile Beresford is a chic comedienne; Master Harry Clark is clever; the Zampas are smart singers and dancers; Mr. Albert F. Banjert is a good elocutionist; Mr. H. Scott Russell a fine tenor; Mr. Rich Taylor a capable ventriloquist; and Kloof and Ramsey are amusing musical comedians. Excellent pictures are exhibited on the Bioscope.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS. — Proprietress, Mrs. S. Lawton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Barker.—The same artists as last week are appearing at these popular open-air entertainments.

MINSTREL ARENA.—The Black Diamond Minstrels continue in popularity, and their programme is much appreciated.

"THE GEM."—Proprietors, The Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.—The all-day picture show has proved a huge attraction, no less than 17,000 people paying for admission during the first four days. Excellent films are being shown, including The Suffragettes, The Lighthouse Relief, and Jack Johnson.

GREENOCK. — EMPIRE.—Responsible-Manager, Mr. Edward McCormick; General-Manager, Mr. T. J. Colquhoun.—Mr. Sydney Prince, with the Prince Edward Pictures, is still here. The films shown this week, whether of an instructive or amusing nature, were greatly appreciated. Special mention might be made of Little Hannah's Last Dream, Niagara Falls in Winter, Too Old for Work, The False Coiners, and Troubled by his Ma.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—Haddon Chambers' plays, The Idler and Captain Swift, are being presented by Mrs. Greenwood Croft's company. The week opened with The Idler. Mr. Philip Cuningham gives a masterly representation of Mark Cross, admirably realising the exceptional temperament of the man; Mr. Stephen Ewart acts with command of force as Sir John Harding; Mrs. Greenwood Croft shows great ability as an emotional actress in the part of Lady Harding; Mr. William Attfield is responsible for sterling work as Simeon Strong; Mr. Richard Dalton is excellent as the peppery General Merryweather; Miss Zoe Davis is thoroughly successful as Kate Merryweather; whilst Miss Elspeth Dudgeon as Mrs. Cross and Miss Rita Treiselle as Mrs. Glynn-Stanmore also contribute excellent representations.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—Tudor's ponies are a troupe of highly-trained animals, and their performance is as interesting as it is novel; Cecile and François appear in an attractive speciality which includes graceful dancing and smart acrobatic work; Nellie Coleman creates much amusement with her impersonations of male comedy characters; Marie Jones appears in a clever quick-change act, representing a variety of characters; Dome displays considerable skill as a modeller in clay; Daleno and Stream contribute laughable patter and good dancing; and Hurman is a smart manipulator of hoops, &c.

HALIFAX.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks. Miss Winifred Maude and company in The Stowaway are this week at the Grand. Dicky Dials is ably taken by Mr. Victor du Cane; Mr. Vincent Carlyle makes a vigorous and manly Tom Inglis; Mr. Gilson Brooke is successful as Charles Etherington; Miss Nellie Rousby pleases the audience as Chucky, a newsboy; Mrs. Wingold Lawrence makes a satisfactory Florence Etherington; and Miss Winifred Maude is ladylike and affectionate as Althea Dale.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—The chief attraction at the Palace this week is the graceful dancing of Miss Helen Roberts in the now famous "Salome" dance. Miss Roberts had a flattering reception. Mr. Chas. Penrose displays comedy of a very high order; Clark and Hayden appear in a musical sketch, By Appointment; the Lannons give a marvellous exhibition of pedestal dancing; the Three Arleys give a clever display, assisted by a troupe of highly-trained acrobatic dogs; Florence Esdaile, vocalist, gives every satisfaction; Sylo gives a clever exhibition of hoop-manipulation; and Miss Ida Mona is very successful as the dancing coon. The pictures complete.

HAMILTON.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. René Clayton.—Morris Cronin and his clever assistants are topping the bill here this week in a unique juggling scena; Frank Elliston, supported by P. G. Tyman and Miss Nellie Stevens, is appearing in an amusing sketch Aunt Matilda; Wylie's dogs are a novel and interesting turn; Burley and Burley are quaint acrobatic comedians; R. A. Speedwell submits an interesting series of lightning sketches of celebrities; the Waldrons are amusing in their absurdity The Silly Burglars; Charles M'Laren sings in a pleasing manner; and Lina Leslie, comedienne, in some dainty numbers, and the Bioscope conclude HANLEY. — GRAND. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatre and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—The star turn is that of the Six Æolians in a refined vocal and dancing act. Robbins, the famous cyclist, introduces something fresh in the form of a buck-jumping bike; Jessie Merrilees is heard in a couple of fine songs; Arthur Albert is a great success; Lorelle appears in an elegant and novel act; Ross and Calvert, comedy artists, in their absurdity are a hit; Mike Nono, the Irish cowboy, dances brilliantly; Lily Eyton is a charming singer; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux is responsible for two fine films.

Barney Deeley, a good comedian, appears; and the best films are A Bird of Freedom, Brown's Fishing Excursion, Doctored Beer, Walter the Rural Postman, and Lost Ball.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding-Smith.—Variety is the rule here this week, and the Empire Comedy Four are the head-liners, and are recalled again and again for their comedy business and sweet singing; Mack Olive and Daisy Baldry appear in a whistling scena, and are greatly appreciated, and Miss Nance Elder sings well; Prof. Dubois and his educated baboon show the wonderful patience and perseverance of animal training; Derenda and Green are two good juggling comedians; Miss Enid Errol and company appear in a smart sketch entitled The Magic Vase, wherein Miss Errol does some clever dancing; Wilton Heriot is very clever as a protean actor in his sketch An Anglo-American Alliance; and Morrelli and Moore are good in their eccentric act; Maurin's Fountains of 20,000 gallons of water are greatly admired, and some wonderful effects are produced with lights.

THE KURSAAL.—General-Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—Miss Margaret Cooper played to a very large audience last Saturday, and was recalled again and again. For this week Miss Norah Newport and Mr. Wilfred Virgo are the vocalists, and the Munrograph shows new films which are greatly appreciated. For the symphony concert on Wednesday, Mr. John Bridge is announced for violin solos, and for Saturday matinée only Miss Haidee Voorzanyer, the wonderful child violinist, is announced to appear. Herr Max Heymann is the conductor now that Mr. Julian Clifford is indisposed.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg.—Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—The pictures shown here maintain their standard of excellence. Some capital ones are attracting good business this week. Roars of laughter greet The Lady Barrister, Policeman's Whistle, Bobby's Fire-Engine, and Mr. Creepy. A Bird of Freedom, depicting the escape of a convict from prison, and Over the Sticks, describing steeplechasing, are intensely interesting.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—Miss Annie Hughes and company presented that charming comedy The Mollusc before a large and appreciative audience on Monday. Miss Hughes in the principal character, Mrs. Baxter, played in a fine vein of humour the indolent rôle, effectively producing all the fun of which the character is capable, and altogether affording a delightful study. Miss Lilias Waldegrave gave a pleasing representation of Miss Roberts; Mr. Athol Stewart's treatment of the character of the brother, Tom Kemp, merited unstinted praise; while the easy-going and too-indulgent husband, Mr. Baxter, was effectively enacted by Mr. Cecil Rose. The first piece was A Bit of Old Chelsea, in which Miss Hughes was seen in a clever study of cockney character. On Thursday and remainder of the week Mr. Leslie Faber and company, including Miss Winifred Arthur Jones, in The Liars, was billed.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—A delightfully new and original programme marks the reopening of this music hall. Harry Bold is an excellent comedian and raconteur; Forest and King are smart and clever gymnasts; some remarkable and effective subjects are depicted by the Bioscope; a very pretty scene, In a Rose Garden, is shown by Rosie King, who introduces juvenile maidens in dance and song; Sydney Bach as the Welsh landlady is a remarkable entertainer. A pianist of exceptional ability, he accompanies himself and sings in a most original and amusing manner. The conjuring by Anthony is a feature of clever and special interest, and an attractive turn is given by the Claymores, vocalists and dancers.

PIER PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—There is a pleasing variety in the programme this week. Payne's Bio-Photoscope shows some interesting pictures; Delafiore is exceedingly expert on the xylophone; Mr. J. D. Hunter, associated with Messrs. Herbert Maule, Frank Growcott, Thomas Boucher, Miss Rene Ashley, and Miss Blanche Bayley, introduce The Loss of a Lover; Mme. Haydee's marionettes are manipulated very cleverly; and some bright and tuneful songs are given by the Smart Set Entertainers, consisting of Miss Lena Hutchings, Miss Alice Frazer, Miss Pattie, O'Hanlon, Miss George Martin, Mr. Samuel Woodin, Mr. Oliver Comber, Mr. Lacy Mills, Mr. Edgar Hulland, and Mr. Walter George.

PUBLIC HALL.—The London Animated Picture Company, of which Mr. Gunner E. Gooes is the general-manager, continues here its attractive and varied entertainment in animated pictures.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—A large share of the visitors' patronage is secured by the clever entertainers who form the company provided this season by the Wallis Arthur Syndicate. Miss Schultz fully retains her popularity as comedienne, and Mr. Blackmore's songs are well chosen.

ST. LEONARD PIER PAVILION.—Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne's company is here this week in the musical comedy The New Girl, which was Odol is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which exercises its antiseptic and refreshing powers, not only during the few moments of application, but continuously for some hours afterwards.

Odol, as has been scientifically proved, penetrates the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, to a certain extent impregnating them, and thus securing a safeguard and preservative for the teeth such as no other dentifrice can provide, not even approximately.

Of all Chemists and Stores.

played for the first time in the borough on Monday, and very favourably received by a large audience. The play abounds in tuneful songs. Mr. Julian Rutt ably directed the orchestra, and the chorus gave every satisfaction. Mr. Arthur Poole as Col. Buller, V.C., has a humorous rôle, which he fills effectively; Miss Rosa Bennett as Hilda Coleman suits the principal rôle admirably, and her singing and dancing are deservedly well received; Mr. Ralph Lynn is good as Bertie Holbrook, and his masquerading as a schoolmistress is very diverting. Miss Beatrice Sutherland, a clever burlesque actress, provides a fine contrast in the dual rôles of Little Flossie and Jane, a "slavey," being associated with Mr. Kenneth Black, jun., in some excellent business. Miss Victoria Douglas is prominent as Martha Grim; Miss Ivy Leighton plays pleasingly as Cerise; and Mr. Edgar McIntyre adds to the merriment as Harry Harrow.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—There is an excellent programme this week. At the head is the brilliant actor-violinist Jan Rudenyi, assisted with great ability by Miss Dora de Winton and John D. Saunders in a musical romance entitled The Power of Music. Others are Clive Watts, eccentric comedian and dancer; Ara, Zebra, and Nora, acrobats; Miss Dolly Goldin, an expert and graceful dancer; Miss Alice Lorette and her beautifully-trained dog in an interesting series of tableaux; Charles Kitts and Miss Rhoda Windrum in their screamingly funny military sketch, The Cuckoo; a boy (not named on the programme) who uses a sweet treble voice with taste, and some humorous pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Manager, Mr. Tom Bogue.—The Royal Comedy Company are still bringing business to this house, and their farce each evening has proved very acceptable. The pictures are exceptionally good, The Two Brothers being strikingly dramatic, whilst Music hath its Charms is intensely amusing.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Morton's Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—A welcome return visit is being paid by The Bank of England company, under the guidance of Mr. Chas. Lester. Mr. Lester fills with success the rôle of Sherlock Holmes, and gives the character the requisite colouring; Mr. Eaglesfield and Mr. Henry C. Gilpin paint effectively the conspirators Stephen Hartley and Gordon Isaacs; and Miss Beatrice Anderson gives a very effective picture of the American widow. Miss Hart and Miss D. Riddell ably assist to give a proper representation of the play, which has plenty of exciting episodes to engage the attention of the audience

THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Dunford.—The Girl I Love is a thrilling act, capably presented here by Fred Maxwell, and Lois Du Cane and company. Lillie Soutter makes a popular re-appearance; the Melroses are loudly recalled; and others include Herbert Rule, a smart comedian; Marie Stroud, Vambert, and the Royal Quintette.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Attila Bros. top the bill in a clever strength act; Emmie Ames and Harry Bancroft are also very popular. Other artists include Horace Jones, Seth King, and Souplessi.

THE CIRCUS.—Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Emerson.—Animated pictures are the attraction here.

ILKESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Kennedy's Komiks, with the following artists, are concluding their stay here this week:—the Sisters Raymond, vocalists and dancers; Hayes and Hayes, sketch artists; Mr. Dodd, comedian; M. Nolan, comedian; Massey and Nolan, patter comedians; and Miss Ellis and Miss Lily, serios.

IPSWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Manager, Mr. Stead.—The late Capt. Joseph Woodward's Californian sea-lions, now the property of Mr. Berzac, attracted a large audience on Monday, and this attendance continues. They are really wonderful animals. A. W. Haines, Alan Borthwick and company have a really funny farce called Half-a-dollar; Joey Aberdare is a good singer and an expert sand-dancer; Stevens and Bennoir are very comical in a similar entertainment; the Hyde and Cody Trio are novel acrobats; the Sisters Terry are paying a return visit; and Poppy Lytten and Jack Bland have a very funny quick-change act called A Lesson in Love. Godfrey James, the collier tenor, has a voice of very exceptional quality.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—The attraction here is Mr. Fred Granville's company in It's Never Too Late to Mend. Mr. Hugh Montgomery gives an excellent rendering of Tom Robinson; Mr. Cecil A. Melton is a capable George Fielding; Mr. Charles F. Johnson handles the part of the Rev. Francis Eden with skill and care; Mr. Harry Cave gives a good account of Peter Crawley; and Mr. C. E. Linney is powerful in the part of Mr. Meadows. Mr. T. W. Warry causes much amusement in the part of Jackey; Miss M. Milton is pathetic as Josephs, the waif; and Miss G. Entwistle is a charming Susan Merton.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—The excellent vaudeville entertainment continues to draw crowded houses here. This week Burns and Bentley prove themselves excellent dancers, and win much kudos with their exhaustive sand-dancing feat; Johnny Fuller as the cat on the wire provides an excellent and mirth-provoking turn; Arthur Boyne sings a couple of funny songs; Bert Williams is a good ventriloquist; Harry Taft gives a star turn as the great American whistling comedian; Marie Wilton is a comedienne who quickly makes herself popular with the gods; and Will Van Allen brings the entertainment to a close as a tramp musician and raconteur.

KEIGHLEY. — QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Carson and Kendall; Manager, Mr. W. Carson.—Mr. Hugh Brady and company are this week presenting the sketch The Hole in the Wall. Mr. Brady portrays the part of Thomas, a servant, in a most amusing manner; excellent support is rendered by Algy Spalding, Dobson Clyde, Freddie Bentley, and Miss Pollie Denton. Blanche and Diacoff in their cycling turn are much applauded; the Harrison Bros., pattering comedians, score a big success. Other turns are provided by Fred Clyde, character comedienne, and Violet Gerald, soubrette.

LANCASTER. — HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Another first-rate programme is arranged this week, and capital business has been done. Warsaw Bros., in a musical comedy act, head the bill, and receive very gratifying appreciation; Cull Pitt is droll with his sleight-of-hand work; J. H. Carrey, comedian and stilt-dancer, is acceptable; Dollie Harmer, comedienne, is nightly encored; and Charles Banks, comedian, with his dog Woof, is a very pleasing turn. Ray and Lingard, in an amusing sketch, The First of April, are well received; and the Dancing Gilberts win favour. Comical pictures on the Hippograph wind up the bill.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—The evergreen drama Man to Man appears once again at this popular theatre, and is warmly welcomed by good houses. A local pantomime favourite, Miss Louie Adair, is in the important part of Ethel Maythorne, and gets a big reception, whilst other prominent characters are capably handled by Messrs. H. Holland, F. R. Robertson, and Frank Adair.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley. — Bransby Williams is here in many and varied character studies, and his accomplished work arouses the demonstrative appreciation of crowded houses; the Bros. Egbert are as diverting as ever in their well-known speciality; a refined musical turn by Olgar and Elgar is enthusiastically received; the Bros. Webb score with a musical farce; comedy acrobatics by the Garganis are a successful feature; Carl Howard wins applause for a humorous speciality; the Leonards dispense acceptable comedy; and other good turns are subscribed by Bertha Stuart, George Westland, and the Sisters Pine.

QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush—A powerful dramatic episode entitled Treachery is at the top of a good bill here, Marion Lind in a central part proving herself a capable actress. The Brothers Brooke do a very funny comedy sketch, which finds great favour; Leslie, Lyn, and Willro are a most amusing trio of comedians; Dan Whitley is also successful as a humorist; Mlle. du Roche is a pleasing vocalist; the Three Eldorados are smart acrobatic grotesques, and of the rest Corcoran Bros., with musical specialty, the Sisters Brand, and Nancy Renshaw are doing particularly well.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Expert acrobats loom large in this week's Hippodrome bill, the Four Rio Brothers and Marcel and Boris each being particularly smart in their respective styles; Diana Hope and company do some fine acting in a clever dramatic sketch, Her Good Name; Will Walton and Will Haines are a pair of successful comedians; whilst Thomas and Taylor in a quick-change speciality are very clever; Driscoll and Felino have an entertaining nofelty; Harry Friskey scores as a comedy juggler; that clever pair of sketch artists Geoffreys and Benson are as popular as ever; and Ned Nye completes a good bill.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—The Lyons Trio lead the way here with a humorous and dancing turn which is well to the liking of their many admirers; Blanche and Powell are excessively popular in a fine musical turn; Rita and Roma submit their well-known act with good success; Fred Herbert is a clever topical vocalist, and a new juggler, Ernesto, makes a successful appearance; the Sisters Belmont do well; whilst Jack Martin and Lillian Rigby also contribute successfully.

LEICESTER.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton.—At the head of a first-class programme here is R. A. Roberts, the original protean actor, in Dick Turpin and Ringing the Changes; at the other end are the Griffiths Bros., in an exceedingly funny wrestling skit; the Dauntон-Shaw Troupe of trick cyclists display remarkable cleverness; Will Poluski, jun., is a comedian who raises plenty of laughter; Farr and Farland, the aristocratic comedians, give a thoroughly enjoyable show; Will Johnson, the lively comedian; and Daisy Martell, vocalist and dancer, are also entertaining. The Bioscope shows the stirring episode of military life entitled The Bully and the Recruit. We regret that owing to a nervous breakdown Zertho and his dogs were unable to appear after Monday's performance, his place being filled by Tee Tung Foo, the Chinese vocalist, who made his appearance at the first house on Tuesday evening.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—Roars of merriment accompany the presentation here of the funny absurdity, The House of Tinn, by J. Gar Kiddie and company, who are on a first visit. Mr. J. Gar Kiddie, a really mirth-provoking comedian, scores a conspicuous success as Jeremiah Jinks, being well seconded by Mr. J. W. Groves as Mrs. Arabella Tinn, Miss Lizzie Payne as Miss Molly Tinn, and Mr. Douglas B. Watson as Augustus Hobbs. Capital dances are also contributed, making the entire "show" a thoroughly enjoyable one. Lambert and Hands are vocalists of great merit, their contributions to the programme being received with special favour; Les Curreys are very good in their entertaining and melodious musical speciality; Walter H. Pallaster's Bioscope, as usual, is a most popular attraction. Others who provide interesting turns are Cissie Esdale, comedienne and dancer; the Sisters Florence, vocalists and dancers; the Nicholsons, comedy duo; and Harry Ryde, comedian.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. A. Hurley.—The reopening of this hall is being attended with every success, owing no doubt to the splendid list of moving pictures that are weekly submitted, and the capital vaudeville artists that are continually engaged. Mr. C. A. Hurley, the acting-manager, leaves no stone unturned to make the entertainment as bright as possible. The chief films this week include The Silver King, The Arabian Legend, College Chums, The Inquisitive Boy, The Bathers' Race, The Bandits' Love, Free Pass to the Theatre, Modern Sculptors, The Poacher's Wife, Chinese Acrobats, The Pierrot's Love Affair, Leaving the Old Home, A Lottery Ticket, &c. Miss Bessie Cookson, ballad vocalist, and Charles Jones, a winner of a singing competition here, provide agreeable interludes.

LIVERPOOL. — ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Here this week we have had Mysteries of the Thames, presented by Mr. Augustine Knight's capable company. Miss Frances Waring infused into the part of Kate Brandon a deal of sympathetic feeling, which made the character generally acceptable; Mr. Knight's reading of Richard Brandon was marked by tact and power; a strong rôle was that of Captain Denbigh, admirably handled by Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson; rich humour was provided by Mr. Tom J. Taylor, who undertook Peter Waggles; Mr. Edward E. Swinton proved a creditable Bill Bosco; Miss Nellie Jackson, with her male impersonation of Bertie Fitzgerald, earned popularity; Miss Effie Bartlett, in the double rôle of Grace Rochdale and Helen Price, afforded every satisfaction; and valuable contributions also came from Miss Doris Brereton (Litle Doris) and Mr. C. Alan Hineson (Jack Hammond).

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineburg.—A most competent combination of artists, under the control of Mr. Ronald Yorke, have here this week given The Old Home, which has been received with much favour. Miss Gertrude Bonser was seen to every advantage as Hazel Dean, a charmingly presented type of good woman; thanks were due to Mr. Charles Franmore for an ably-drawn picture of her father, Daddy Dean; Mr. Henry Lonsdale, as the worthy clergyman, Eric Armstrong, well deserved the cordial recognition he received; Mr. Ronald Yorke played well the rôle of Dr. Warburton; Mr. Alexander Bradley did justice to Lord Avondale; Mr. Fred De Vere proved a most humorous Sam Adams; being well supported by Miss Mara Collings, as the lively Bridget Donoghan; and worthy support was likewise given by Mr. James Lee Hair (Timothy Twaddle), Miss Gertie Douglas (Polly Popp), and Mr. Walter Osmond (Jack Warren).

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Walter Passmore and company have held principal place this week with a neat humorous musical trifle, The Constable and the Pictures, among the artists being Mary Fraser (Lady Mortyn) and Charles Childerstone (Sir Ronald Stone); Sandford and Lyons were given a hearty reception for their really able simultaneous dancing and amusing patter; the Seven Wulfrunas went through a smart comedy acrobatic speciality, Fun in a Café; Howard and St. Clair were as funny as ever with their sketch, Do You Want to Buy any Coke? J. W. Rickaby kept his audience in a good humour with his burlesque, The Toff and the Sailor; Florence Yaymen had some neat coon caricatures; Peggie Lennie and Walter Hast gave a pretty poetic fantasy, The Sea Nymph; and contributions also came from Frank Hartley, a clever boy juggler; and Hugh Barclay, baritone vocalist.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—The stage here has been occupied this week with A Destroyer of Men, the company presenting it being that of Mr. James Hare.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Foremost here during the week was Miss Cissie Lawson (Mrs. John Lawson), with the powerful sketch, The Devil's Sunday, which was followed with close attention; Raglus, the eccentric juggler, also in big type, showed great cleverness, and caused endless laughter; Maggie Rimmer proved a pleasing comedienne, and earned loud applause; Ted Curtis and Picks, black and white speciality artists, were most enjoyable with their singing and dancing; some excellent concertina playing came from Alexander Prince; and Charles Craston, a smart comedian, and Belford and Mars, vocal comedy entertainers, were also in the list.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Dan Crawley was prominent here this week, and proved as merry as ever; Harry Roxbury and company brought their amusing musical mélange, The Prince of Monte Carlo, which was followed with general delight; the Tafanos met with ready acceptance, their comic serenading being particularly diverting; the Onlaw Trio gave a wonderful wire act; as a comedienne and dancer, Kathleen Cogan afforded every satisfaction; Evelyn Taylor, with her chorus songs, earned popularity; a capital turn was provided by Harry Zetter, comedian and eccentric dancer; and the list likewise contained the names of Norah Desmond, pictorial songstress; Edith St. Clair, comedienne; and Ethel Walker, Society entertainer.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—Here during the week the "Royal" stock company has been playing to good houses The Royal Mail, from the pen of Eva Elwes. Among the principal artists were Messrs. Cecil Ravenswood (Sir Frederick Etherington), Sydney Grant (Daniel Etherington), Harry Tresham (Oliver Trueman), Robb Wilton (Chiko Bobajee), Miss Florence Palmer (Margaret Trueman), Miss Lilian Radbourne (Nina Fairholme), and Miss Nancy Mitchell (Jubilee). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed the latest films.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Whit Cunliffe has been foremost here this week, and delighted everybody with his freshest songs, including "Exercise," "Nobody's satisfied," and "I will"; the lively Craggs presented their sketch, Billy; Matthews and Cowper had a laughable trifle, When the Clock Went Wrong; Franco Piper provided a most pleasing turn with his playing of, and juggling with, banjos; some skilful acrobatic work was gone through by the accomplished Schiavonys Troupe; and Burnetti, character musician; Irene Rose, with a charming incident, "Her First Engagement"; Vickey Delmar, acrobatic dancer, bugle, and drum sololist; and Ray Maskell, comedienne and dancer, also appeared.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Francis Gerard and his comedy assistants have been here throughout the week, with an able show in physical strength; Helen Charles gave a pleasing turn as pianist, vocalist, mimic, and siffleuse; the Corman's Juveniles had a beautiful scena, The Waif; Siems astonished his audience with clever conjuring; the Lovelaces (Jack and Lucy) rendered some popular illustrated songs; Ariel and Astarte went through a well-executed gymnastic performance; Victor and Louis presented an amusing sketch, The Golfer and the Caddie; the Sprees (Dorothy and Joe) submitted an enjoyable scena, Twickenham Ferry; Thierry and Lieli had a well-acted incident from the French Revolution; and also in the list were Harry Tomps, comedian; and the Sicilians, vocalists, &c.

LLANDUDNO.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Mr. Chas. M. Bestic's company is here for six nights in the musical play The Flower Girl. Miss Dorothy Firmin as Lily is pleasing throughout, and sings capitally; Mr. Martin Adeson scores heavily as Joe Wheeler, and coupled with Mr. Alfred Donohoe as Johnny Wheeler the comic element is well supplied; Mr. Robert H. Howard as the Hon. Billy Greenhill is well placed, and finds favour; Mr. Edward Kipling as Reginald Rackit is clever, his dancing calling forth rapturous applause; Mr. Henry Adnes (Alphonse de Racquet) and Miss Florence Wilton (Lizette de Racquet) give good French impersonations. Scenic effects and dresses are excellent.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's company occupied the boards here with Camille. Mr. Cecil Wynne gives a telling portrayal of M. le Comte de Varville; Mr. Conrad Heywood as M. Arnaud Duval stirs the audience by his fervour and expressive representation; Mr. Raynor as M. Gaston de Rieux could not be improved upon, his quick, sarcastic repartee being evidently to the audience's liking; in the title-rôle Miss Henrietta Schrier is seen to full advantage, her powerful portrayal of a difficult part being above the average. Harvest was announced for the remainder of the week.

PIER HEAD PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton this week provide yet another new scheme, to wit, a musical comedy, The Saucy Arethusa. Mr. Kemsley Scott Barrie is above the average as a lady impersonator; Mr. Jack W. Hughes sings in his usual good style; Miss Elaine Reed is an excellent soprano; Mr. Norman Osborn contributes a clever ventriloquial turn; and Mr. Tubby Edlin is clever at impromptu verse, and his comedy, patter, and song are heartily received.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Geo. Callis.—A maypole carnival on skates took place on Friday, July 10, evening dress being compulsory. The building was packed, and a most pleasant evening was spent by both skaters and audience.

LOWESTOFT.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—This huge building was packed on Monday night with an audience numbering about 3,500. The programme comprised several new and attractive features, including some remarkably fine pictorial subjects by the British Biograph Co. Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls scored a decided success in their vocal entertainment, which was both pleasing and refined; Mme. Telka, contralto, introduced several capital vocal numbers; and Wyllie again scored as the tramp musician. A distinct artistic novelty locally was presented by A Ba-Be in a pretty act, The Post-card Album, which was vociferously applauded.

MAIDENHEAD.—PAVILION PLEASURE GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. George Gude.—Mr. Will Harris is out of the programme this week, by Mr. Gude's permission filling an engagement made previous to joining the Cadets. Mr. Jack Anders sings "What ho! the Boulevards" successfully, and as encore scores with another Shepherd's Bush ditty, "Take me on the Flip-Flap"; Mr. Colin Gent gives a breezy rendering of "The Skipper," and his dramatic song scena, "Dear mother, I've come home to die," is full of pathos and intense feeling; Mr. Leo Fallowfield is fully capable of meeting the extra demands made on him by Will Harris's absence, and is specially good in "Don't be silly"; Florrie Delamere sings in a pleasing manner "Could you love a little girl like me?" and with Colin Gent contributes a spirited Irish song and jig, for which they are vociferously encored. Miss Adelaide Twort's songs are well selected and excellently sung, Tosti's "Good-bye" being particularly fine; Mr. Alex Tyson is a careful and painstaking accompanist, and renders, among other pieces, a brilliant piano fantasia, "Killarney." The laughable sketch, Watch the Chalk, by Leo Fallowfield, Jack Anders, and Florrie Delamere, is a bright and lively finish to an excellent entertainment.

MAIDSTONE.—PALACE.—Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—Among the artists appearing here this week, first place must be given to Mr. Fred Lindsay, the Australian whip manipulator. Mr. Lindsay's feats with the stock whip are little short of marvellous, and he has to respond to a well-deserved recall. Nada Moret is a clever American story-teller; Rose and Challoner, in The Lady and the Porter, give some clever impersonations; G. P. Trevor and company appear with great success in the dramatic sketch, Her Country's Enemy; Philip Levard, illusionist, has some smart patter and novel tricks; La Tostia is a clever mandolinist, her selection from Les Cloches de Corneville being encored; Sergt. Carrol gives a novel act, in which tambourine playing is introduced with great success; Amy Bellwood, comedienne, and the Bioscope, complete a popular programme.

MANCHESTER. — METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Andrew.—The Ramsey Trio top the bill here this week in a capital knockabout comedy act; F. A. Martell gives a sensational equilibristic performance, dancing and balancing himself on his finger-tips; Benson and Rose are good in their comedy duologue; Frank Sley and his marvellous Nipper provide a smart turn in comedy and dancing; Ormonde Penstone, a clever conjurer, is well received; and other entertaining items are provided by Will Hebden, comedian; Mike and Lena, "the Dutch lovers"; Yeager and Da Costa, the Blackville duo; France and Francis, acrobatic comedians; and Handel and Lee, talented musicians.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Bella and Bijou, the popular comedy duo, are at the top of the bill here this week, and are highly successful in a couple of smart and amusing sketches; equally popular, W. C. Fields is signalising his return to Manchester, after an absence of four years, by a perfect exhibition of his peculiarly comic juggling; a big hit is made also by Winifred Hare, the popular burlesque artist; while other good turns are the Brennans, accomplished dancers; Nipper Lupino Lane, boy comedian and dancer; Stelling and Revell, a funny pair of acrobatic comedians; Harry Leybourn, character comedian; Gwennie Hasto, refined vocalist and dancer; and Lilian Lowe, a cultured vocalist.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Victoria Monks, the well-known comedienne, is the top star here this week, and is heard in old and new successes. The Wille Brothers go through a really wonderful head-balancing performance, and do some marvellous feats on a bamboo pole; Arthur Lennard, the popular actor vocalist, is excellent; and Fred Curran, comedian, makes a big hit with a capital song, with an eccentric dance added. Ernest Charles Gittins presents in good style The Daughter of the Regiment, with Mlle. Adele Prescott in the title-rôle; Daras scores as comedian, conjurer, dancer, and impersonator; whilst other good items are offered by the Three Cape Girls, long boot dancers; Lupino Bros., as the musician and his poodle; and the Sisters St. Julian, duettists and smart dancers. Miss Nellie Dixon, of the choir, sings "The scent of the lilies" in fine style; and A Trip through the Scottish Highlands on the Bioscope is excellent.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—Madge Grey, an exceedingly good comedienne, is the principal attraction here this week. Prominent also are Carr and Rose, in an original operetta, A Winning Double; the Olympians, eight in number, demonstrate ju-jitsu interestingly; Burke, Andrus, and Frisco are funny in their spectacular absurdity, Trafalgar-square, London, 4 a.m.; the Musical Bentleys present a novel musical act; Alpho, the college boy, is a smart ventriloquist; Lily Palmer sings and dances charmingly; and a pleasing turn by Will Owen, comedian, completes the bill.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. Fred Leighton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The well-known Anglo-American comedian, Jake Friedman, supported by an excellent company, is here this week in the Dutch operetta, Happy Holland, a pretty sketch, with capital singing and dancing; Carl Wilbur is quietly effective in his American comedy, 61, Prospect-street; the Three Sisters Sprightly are as smart as ever; and wonderfully clever turns are those of the Bob Hanlon Troupe of aerial gymnasts, and the Faludy Troupe of Hungarian acrobats. Other very enjoyable items are offered by Lily Lonsdale, vocalist; Florry Cooper, vocal comedienne; Ernie Myers, quaint comedian and patterer; Les Two Cabiacs, French comedy acrobats; and Minnie Warner, comedienne and clever dancer. Pictures, as usual, complete.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Irene Verona and William Spray, the well-known musical comedy artists, are starring here this week in an absurdity, entitled My Romeo. Ruth Molloy, a mimic of music hall stars, is accorded a big reception; Ruby Bijou is a first-rate dancer, her bare-foot dance being particularly well done; Webb and Edna Branston, operatic vocalists, are excellent singers; Rosa Tilley, burlesque artist, takes well; Yvonne Lamor is a smart comedienne; the Six Emerald Gems, vocalists and dancers, foot it merrily and sing well; and enjoyable items are also offered by the Katos, komical kidgets, and Reba and Inez, dancers. As usual, Ruffell's pictures are admirable.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company are here this week in A Sister's Sin, which was played successfully last week at the King's Theatre, Longsight. The drama is closely followed by an attentive audience.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—Arthur Watson, Flo Stanley, and company, are the attraction here this week in an amusing musical comedy sketch, Cruise of H.M.S. Victory; Jenny Maningo is very clever in her novel juggling act, and is well received; Langslow, rifle expert on the lofty wire, gives a smart show; and the Donaro Brothers are neat juvenile acrobats. Other capital turns are contributed by Louie Hurman, singer of own songs; Lena Page, burlesque artist; Jack Foley, comedian; Scott, Scott, and company, in pantomime, That Awful James; and Dennis J. McCarthy, actor-vocalist. The Shipwreckers on the Bioscope complete.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Phillips. — As usual, an excellent programme is offered here this week.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Hardy.—The late Wilson Barrett's popular play Lucky Durham has been having a most successful run here this week, and it has been splendidly played by Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company. Now in its fourth year of tour, the piece goes as briskly as ever, and the interest is finely maintained throughout. Mr. S. Herbert Henniker as John Durham has been the leading feature in the play, and has sustained the rôle superbly; Mr. Arthur Leigh has also done splendidly as the Hon. Reginald Steighton, whilst the part of Lord Mountfallon has been capably presented at the hands of Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood; Mr. Henry Nunn has shown ability in the impersonation of Mr. Vallerton; and Miss Alice Esther Belmore has been a success as Helen Vallerton; Miss Rosabel Dodd as Lady Mountfallon, Miss Florence Dulhunty as the Hon. Margaret Steighton, Miss Frances Wolviston as Mrs. Durham (John Durham's mother), and others in the cast have individually and collectively contributed to the smooth running and keen enjoyment afforded the audiences nightly.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—This week's programme has proved a highly entertaining one and the several turns have been much appreciated. Pat Rafferty, among other subjects, sings in eloquent praise of the late General Buller, and Monrin and Cardiff, comedians and dancers, have given an excellent show and received unstinted applause; the Sisters Herbert, pleasing juvenile duettists and splendid dancers, have taken the audiences by storm, and Leo Tell has lost none of his cunning as a master of mimicry and an exponent of the equine "language"; Zeta Russell, vocalist and speciality dancer; Flo Cecil, comedienne, and the Hippodrome pictures also give added interest to the programme.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. C. Evans.—This popular place of amusement reopened for the summer season on Monday with the usual afternoon and evening variety entertainment, the latter being followed by the customary ball at 8.45 p.m. There was a very large attendance in the evening, when the official opening really took place, and the large audience were delighted with the capital bill of fare placed before them by the proprietor, "Lord" George Sanger, through his manager, Mr. Charles Evans. Mr. Wilfred Harvey leads a very capable orchestra this season, and the contributors to an all-round good programme, every item in which was deservedly applauded, included the Sisters Charnley (Annie and Edie), comediennes, dainty dancers, and brilliant bâton manipulators; Barrington, in his freak performances at the piano; Lord, Murray, and Lord, in the comedy gymnastic mélange, The Intruder; Charles Williams, character and vocal comedian; the Avrignys, Japanese jugglers and equilibrists; and Effie White, kaleidoscopic dancer, in her latest creation, "The Spirit of the Cave."

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. W. Player.—£1,000 Reward, presented by Mr. Frank J. Pitt's company, is here. Gilbert Lisle is ably represented by Mr. J. Wilton; Mr. Edward De Vere is good as Fred Inglewood, and Fred, his son, is well played by Mr. W. Gibson; Mr. Frank J. Pitt is well suited as Vincent Rainsworth; Mr. Joe English is praiseworthy as Dick Springthorpe; and Mr. Frank Dallas causes much amusement as Inspector Gilbert. In the rôle of Mme. Sanson, Miss Kathryne Eckart does capital work; Meg, a flower girl, is sympathetically played by Miss Marjorie Seymour; and Miss Minnie Goepel is a diverting Kitty.

MEXBOROUGH.—NEW PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—An excellent series of animated pictures is being shown here to good houses. These include Dora, a Rustic Idyll, Will Grandfather Forgive? Lady's Companion, The Sacrifice, Elixir of Life, &c.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson. — Mr. G. M. Copping's company presented on Monday Love Rules the World. Miss Gertrude Sterral acts with distinction as Maud Carruthers; Miss Constance Medwyn gives a delightful performance of Flo Morton; Mr. Richard Vane does full justice to the character of Harold Kingston; Mr. Stephen Layton makes an excellent Stephen Blight; the humorous side of the play is well kept up by Miss Nellie Freeland as Kittie Snowdrop and Mr. Matt Russell as Billy Binks; Mr. Wilson Wynne does well in the rôle of Paul Carruthers; and Sidney Rennef is a capable representative of Jim Dixey.

OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Edward Jowsey; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—The Mockery of Marriage, a thrilling drama of English life, occupies the stage here this week. The plot is a good one, and its unravelling is followed with great interest. Miss Mabel Liston gives a delightful interpretation of Alva Kenyon, and the rôle of Dick Kenyon is in the capable hands of Mr. W. Graham Arthurs; Mr. Harold Kinton is exceedingly good as Seth Pearce; Miss Kate R. Hughes is successful in the rôle of Mary Ann Barnicott; and the other characters are safely placed.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—A very amusing sketch entitled The Bricklayers is given here this week by the Boissets. Belle Braham also provides an amusing turn; the Three Pirmans, an acrobatic troupe, delight the audience, and Cliff Ryland causes much laughter with his songs and patter; Master Clifford is an excellent comedian and dancer. Other turns are provided by Frazer and French, comedians and dancers; Ethel Donna, comedienne and dancer; and Dorothy Gould, vocal comedienne.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—The chief attraction here this week is a sketch entitled Retribution, which is admirably played by Mr. Herbert Ferry's company. May Lilian Levey is also a popular turn, and a clever ventriloquist is Cavalli. Percy Carry is very amusing, and the Falcons are clever comedy acrobats; Ada Jenner and company cause much laughter in their skit, The Lady Barber, and Abalo and Hurst also do well.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. C. M. Julian.—Mr. Alfred B. Cross and company have been appearing with success in The Manxman, of which popular drama they have given a fine rendering. Mr. Cross is an excellent Pete, and Miss Minnie Watersford a charming Kate. Other parts are well filled by Messrs. Sydney C. Kearns, Fred Mace, Maurice

Voice and Throat.

Mr. SIMS REEVES, the World-Famed Tenor, writing on "The Art of Singing," said:—"Condy's Fluid clears the Throat and braces up the uvula, which in some singers interrupts the pure emission of the Voice."

Used as a gargle 8 drops of Condy's Fluid in a tumbler of water instantly clear the Throat and Strengthen the Voice. Condy's Fluid is guaranteed to contain NO Permanganate of Potash, which is poisonous. Insist on having "Condy's Fluid."

Sold by all Chemists and Stores at 1/-

Yorke, Roland A. Bridge; Misses Maud Aldred, Blanche Lee, and Chrissie Bickerstaff.

WINTER GARDENS.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—Cruikshank, the funny fellow, has proved a big draw this week, and Max Gruber, with his well-trained elephant, pony, and horse, has also been an attraction. On the tight wire Albos is excellent, and other good turns are Lillie Lassah, graceful dancer and comedienne; the Saletos, clever head-to-head balancers; the Marsumas in The Navvy's Rest; the Four Burnells with their amusing sketch On the Links; and Dolly Ross, comedienne.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. J. Bastow.—Mr. John Riddings, with his opera company, in costume, has filled the pavilion during the week, and given a high-class entertainment.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—Complete success attends the efforts of the enterprising managers of this popular place of amusement, and crowded houses are the rule nightly. The Hessleine Operatic Party, consisting of five first-class vocalists and three pianists on the stage, give a musical mélange from The Bohemian Girl, and the whole is accompanied by the full band, the result being a wonderfully fine stage picture and vocal item which brings down the house. Mr. Percy Maye is a really clever and thoroughly refined female impersonator; whilst Mr. Edward Morissey gives a unique equilibristic musical act; Mr. E. S. Kempton is a very good eccentric dancer, and the animated pictures this week are the funniest one could wish to see. Herr A. Spiegler comes in for a large share of applause for his violin solos.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. W. G. Sutton.—The pierrots have another excellent entertainment this week. Mr. H. Herbert is a really funny comedian; Mr. R. H. Stephens is popular, and scores well, whilst Mr. Maynard Dakin is always a favourite with New Brighton audiences. Miss Lilian Barnes, contralto; Miss Elfie Vincent, comedienne and dancer; Miss Aline Sudbury, soprano; all please greatly, and are loudly applauded. Mr. Arthur Linton is an able and painstaking accompanist.

TOWER AND GROUNDS.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. C. Brown; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Ellis.—The Sunday Concert on 12th inst. was only fairly attended, but the audience was very enthusiastic. Miss Nellie Ganthony gave one of her clever sketches, and was encored; Mr. Harrison Brockbank was in splendid voice, and had to sing again in answer to loud applause; Miss Alexia Bassian sang two or three items in stirring style. The band under Mr. Thomas Rimmer gave complete satisfaction.

THE PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Frank Nall.—Skating on Richardson's American roller skates is becoming very popular, and good business is being done. There is an excellent maple floor and a capital band.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—Large audiences are this week being attracted to see Mr. John E. Tomlinson's company in The Secrets of the ——. Miss Lizzie Palmer creditably portrays the rôle of Ismali, a Christian slave, and she is ably supported by Mr. John E. Tomlinson as Ibrahim Al Murad and Mr. R. Brown as Lieut. Markham.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—The Way of the World, a most fascinating drama, is the attraction here this week, Miss Sydney Crowe ably sustains the principal rôle of Adela De Roche, and as Kate Montague Miss Nellie De Lacy is also quite successful. Other leading parts are in capable hands.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells.—The chief attraction of an all-round excellent bill is Miss Hetty King, the well-known male impersonator, who scored a distinct success in her various songs. The ever-popular Alexandre and Hughes are seen and heard to great advantage, and fairly bring down the house with their inexhaustible fund of humour. Another capital turn is provided by Little Ganty, a local comedian, who is aptly described as a "little lump of fun." Another very pleasing turn is that of Norman and Leonard Trio, in a musical sketch, and Campbell and Barber are extremely amusing in a comedy cyclistic turn. Other clever items are contributed by Cassie Walmer, J. A. Wilson and his dog, "Private Towser," Marie Santoi and the Merry Little Japs, and Madge May, comedienne and dancer, the Bioscope concluding.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—The star turn here this week is Miss Marie Dainton, whose clever impersonations of other popular artists prove extremely popular. The Sundowner, a dramatic incident in Australian life, is also very acceptable as played by Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company. Other artists contributing excellent turns are Gus Harris, the Three Sisters Silcott, Jane Eyre, Gicardo, Ferris and May, Ted Cowan, and the clever cats.

NEWPORT.—EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Major Gallagher.—Mark Sheridan is the star turn here this week, and with his spontaneous humour keeps the house in roars; Elsie Robey, although in small type, deserved to be classed as a star of genuine genius. Her burlesque of the Spanish dancer is exceedingly funny, full of quaint touches and exaggerations. La Belle Nello, Queen of Equipoise, shows some feats of supreme elasticity of body, and among a glut of comedians who do well are Chas. Stevens, Will Musgrave, Rich and Rich, and Ted Box. There is a good comedy sketch, Home from the Honeymoon, by Arthur Jefferson and his company, and the American Bioscope with local pictures.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager Mr Wm. Mould.—Topping the bill here this week we have the Whitworth Cycling Girls, who have been very heartily greeted; Wisper, in his comedy act, is clever; and Miss Beattie Bloom, comedienne, is an old favourite. Mr. Will Letters, comedian, is very popular; Miss Maidie Berker, vocalist, is much appreciated; Mr. George Hope, tenor, renders his songs with acceptance; Messrs. Melvin and Max, comedy entertainers, have made a hit; and the Mouldoscope is, as usual, well up to date.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Edwardes' company is announced to open here on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday in The Merry Widow.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Marie Lloyd heads the bill, and her piquant style carries all before her, and enthusiastic applause greets her on every side. The Eight 'Varsity girls are an excellent turn; Mark Henton, "the mirthful one," is also good; Farley, Rennie, and Farley, in a comedy act, Fun at a Railway Station, create much laughter; Selby and Myers, patter comedians and dancers; Ella Lane, serio; Harry Thurston, burlesque comedian,; the Gilberts, skilful tight wire performers, in a comedy act, Pastimes in the Park; together with the Hippo-Bio, are immensely appreciated.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Mike S. Whallen, both as singer of comic songs and raconteur of humorous tales, is very successful, and his touches of pathos add no little to the value of his turn. Tom Foy in his sketch The Yorkshire Lad in London, evokes unlimited laughter, and his exaggerated ingenuousness is much enjoyed; the Irish-American artists, Callahan and St. George, in a musical duologue, present a turn at once clever and entertaining, and receive long and well-merited rounds of applause; Cussac-Talma, assisted by Mlle. de Forge, produce an illusion of an unusually mystifying character, and the banjo playing of Elton and Edwin is of the highest class; Johnson and Bert are a very comical pair, and their sketch, A Queer Customer, is most mirth-provoking; Fred Elton, in his musical sketch, On Board an Ocean Liner, which introduces the song "My Monte Carlo Maid," is very happy, and is to be congratulated upon the production of a very refined turn; Ernie Mayne is as funny as ever, and receives the hearty reception he is always accorded here; Alice Maydue in her own line is good; and the programme is concluded with the usual Bioscope pictures.

NUNEATON.—P. O. W. THEATRE AND ENTERTAINMENTS Co., LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—After a successful run of five weeks Kennedy's Komiks conclude their visit here. This week's programme is proving as successful as its predecessors. Lucretia gives some clever top-boot dancing; Josie Townsend is an entertaining comedienne; enjoyable turns are given by the Incemores (Living Mannikins), the Gilders (society entertainers), Terry and Snowden (duettitst and dancers), Ivy Dean (speciality dancer), Little Doris (child singer and dancer), and an interesting series of pictures. The Theatre reopens August Bank Holiday.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Julian Malvern's company in the drama I Defy the World, occupies the boards of the premier theatre here, and is much enjoyed. Mr. Lewis Gilbert acts capably in the part of Leon Darville; Mr. Oswald Douglas is clever as the villainous Count de Beaulieu; Miss Gladys Harding Walton as Pauline Delaporte gives a charming delineation, and Miss Mary Ainslie as Blanche Darville does exceedingly well; Miss Florrie Green is a smart Fanchette, and Miss Connie Gray a good Fifine; Miss Maud Lillian as Marie Wozzle and Mr. Chas. M. Julian as Samuel Wozzle are responsible for some capital comedy; Mr. Alfred Denning as General Delaporte and Mr. Chas. Conway as the blackmailer Laroche, give good assistance, and Mr. Frank Wheatly's Andre is a good study.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—The Old, Old Story, played by Miss Bonwin Carlton and company is here. Mr. P. Watson as John Hazel gives a well-acted portrayal; Mr. J. P. Dryden as James Marlow submits a clever delineation of a forger, and Mr. Edward Surrey as the detective, William Grimshaw, is most effective; Miss Marie E. Dempster makes a sympathetic Netty Hazel; Miss Kitty Maynard a winning Jessie, and Miss Esther Lamont a good Janet Marlow; Miss Bonwin Carlton as the lady bookie causes hearty laughter, and receives great assistance from Mr. Tod Squires as Bobby Blossom; Mr. H. J. Butler is good as Sir Humphrey Hazel, and Mr. T. Hadlin does well as Hilton Thorpe.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kilrow.—Queenie Leighton is the principal attraction this week, and her delightful singing gains repeated recalls; the Soho Trio introduce good singing and smart dancing; Abel and Welsh cause hearty laughter by their eccentricities; and Les Frasettis are excellent musical experts on violin, harp, and xylophones; Mrs. George Graves and company in The Chorus Girl, provide a capital turn; Edna Latonne proves a capable male impersonator; Cedar and Elgar are smart in a novel comedy act; the Sisters Barnes are dainty comediennes and dancers, and Edward Tilley is a refined comedian. An amusing picture on the Dottoscope concludes an excellent programme.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessee, Miss Winifred Stuart; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Frank Stuart's company is this week giving capital representations here of The Streets of London. Mr. Frank Stuart himself plays the bluff, honest old sailor, Captain Fairweather, in a way that could not be improved on, and gets the warmest reception from his many admirers; Mr. P. C. Wentworth gives a polished, smooth rendering of Gideon Bloodgood that tells home; Mr. Charles Ninian, a most amusing Badger, keeps the ball rolling all the time he is on the stage; Mark Livingstone and Paul find capable representatives in Messrs. A. W. Thompson and W. A. James; and Mr. John Hitchings creates genuine amusement as Puffy. Miss Mona Hall is a bright, amusing Dan; Miss Theodore Henries a sympathetic and conscientious Lucy; and Miss Winifred Stuart adds to her reputation with a most admirable rendering of Alida, that holds her audience throughout the play, and wins well-deserved applause

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Douglas F. Bostock.—A decided draw here this week is Ivan T'Schernoff's marvellous animal entertainment, with his group of educated ponies and dogs; Daisy Morell is a captivating comedienne; one of the smartest magical and second sight acts ever seen here is contributed by Kahn and Kahn; the Cattaneo Troupe furnish a novel and amusing comedy acrobatic sketch, which is duly appreciated; Tom Bryce and Miss Price are applauded for their excellent comedy sketch, The Dude's Wooin'; a capital and original ventriloquial turn is submitted by Prof. Dunning; Elton and Elma are funny and clever in a knockabout triple bar act; Jennie Sneddon sings sweetly, her songs being illustrated; and the Bioscope is entertaining.

PENTRE.—TIVOLI PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls' company are here in The Battle of the Belles, which is thoroughly enjoyed; Le Marbas, humorists and acrobatic dancers, are well received; Clown Argo, the eccentric mimic, is responsible for a large share of mirth; the Great Marconis, the electric wonders, are an excellent turn; Godfrey Price, the Rhondda Basso, possesses an exceptionally good voice, and is heard to advantage in some capital songs; George Edney, character vocalist and comedian; Mabelle May, dainty and graceful in song and dance; Bishop and Vale, knockabout comedians and dancers are applauded; and the Tivoliscope, in a series of up-to-date films, conclude the programme.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Tearle's stock company this week is reproducing Virginus, on which we had the pleasure of favourably commenting a short time since. The various parts are in the same capable hands, and the piece runs with commendable smoothness. The Taming of the Shrew has also been staged.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—"L'Incomparable," as Mr. Paul Cinquevalli is well termed, forms the draw for the week, and his marvellous feats of jugglery continue to call forth unbounded admiration. His attendant, too, imports some genuine humour into the turn. Wright and Lawson furnish some wonderful acrobatic business, being apparently able to turn themselves into any conceivable shape; Winnie Derson is an attractive comedienne; and Harry Anderson has a voice of great strength and penetrative power; the Arthur Gallimore Trio provide refreshing entertainment with their knockabout business; Dolly and Madge McColla are a promising pair of youthful artists; and Rose Sartella and Jock Walker materially strengthen the vocal side of the programme.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—A capital programme is being presented to the patrons at this cosy hall for the current week. Empress, the lady Houdini, handcuff manipulator, gives some marvellous feats; Syd Hermann's Hebrew stories are side-splitting; a refined and artistic gymnastic turn is given by the Rizarclis; the Sisters Ford as comedy duettists well merit the applause that is showered upon them; the Edmonds in Golden Deeds in South Africa are extremely neat and effective; Wal Robins is an admirable comedian; Vera Mayne sings a couple of good songs in effective style; the Recars give a capital act; the Leonas manipulate a number of musical instruments with much ability; and some excellent pictures are projected by the Alexandra Bioscope.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—The attraction this week is Ada Frank's company, under the direction of Courtney Robinson, in A Fight for Life. Count Adrian is well portrayed by Mr. Courtney Robinson; Jean Cardell is capably presented by Mr. Clifton Earle; Mr. Dan Ryan scores as Dan Murphy; Antonio is well sustained by Mr. Charles Higgins; La Cardell is excellently acted by Miss Violet Desborough; and worthy of all praise are Miss Ada Frank and Miss Rose Woodhall as Suzanne and Adell respectively.

PORTH.—THE PALACE.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Frank Hardie and company, in a military episode, are accorded a capital reception, their acting being really good, Akbar gives an admirable gymnastic performance, and merits praise; Little Hales, the queen of the wooden shoe, scores a big success, her stepping brings the house down; Pringle and Gray are most entertaining in their screaming military musical absurdity, entitled Kitty's Night Out; Bella Leaburn, comedienne and descriptive vocalist, sings remarkably well, and deserves mention; the Calcots are all that can be desired in their musical scena, entitled Rags and Tatters, introducing singing, dancing, and banjo duets; Smith and Johnson, coloured drawing-room entertainers, are great favourites here, and are warmly received; H. O. Wills, comedian, creates roars of laughter. He evidently keeps the house in excellent humour; his songs are appreciated. The Palascope, with latest pictures, concludes.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Clarence C. Corri's company, under the able direction of Mr. Haldane Crichton, is here this week with the well-mounted and capitally-played comic opera The Dandy Fifth. Dick Darville is well and vigorously presented by Mr. Frank Barclay, his vocalisation being much admired. Mr. Jack sustains the part of Trooper Brown in most amusing fashion; Mr. George Beverley does ample justice to the rôle of Sergt.-Major Milligan; Sir Victor is taken in good style by Mr. Bert Gates; Mr. Will Smith makes a soldierly Colonel; and Messrs. Frank Hayle (Jones) and Arthur Wilmer (Robinson) also do very well. Miss Pauline Hague is responsible for an exceedingly clever and charming portrayal of the vivacious Kate Lorrimer, singing her numbers in fine style. The Polly of Miss Isa Bowman is a bright and sparkling performance, full of life and "go"; Miss Maud Nichols is excellent as Mrs. Von Blitzen; and Miss Florence Spurgeon does well as the maid, Antoinette.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—The domestic military drama A Woman Worth Winning is staged here for the week by Mr. Percy Norman's No. 1 company. The callous and ruffianly General Borinsky is ably and powerfully enacted by Mr. A. B. Mackay; Mr. George Edwin Clive plays very naturally and in manly style as Fergus Lovinsky; Mr. Carthage Caldcleugh gives a realistic and well-sustained personation of the hunch-backed Ivan Bardoff; Mr. Gilbert Standing as Amos Pauloff does excellent work; Mr. Wynne Davies as Fedor Petrovitch is very good; Mr. Sydney Barton acts carefully the part of Czar Nicholas; Mr. E. Kendrick is highly amusing as Peter Popples; and Mr. L. Newman makes plenty of fun as Bertie Scribbles. Miss Ida Mackay plays admirably and is very diverting as Katerina Kloss; Miss Trixie Leighton is most praiseworthy as Lota Kalnovky; and Miss Chrissie Dunbar makes a very charming Roma Pauloff.

KING'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eugene Bartram.—The excellent drama A Warning to Women is presented here this week by Mr. C. Watson Mills' able company. The detestable villain, Dr. Marcus Dread, finds a very capable exponent in Mr. Leonard Lawrence, who plays the difficult part for all it is worth; the faithful Shaun is impersonated by Mr. William Vane in a manly and sincere manner which is quite convincing; Mr. Leslie Beaufort sustains in capital style the part of Fergus McNaughton; the rôle of the much and sorely-tried Squire Kennion is taken by Mr. Henry Rutland very naturally, and is an admirable embodiment throughout; Messrs. Sydney Ernest, W. Palliser Acock and Oscar Power are amusing and mirth-provoking in their respective parts of Lord Eversleigh, Ferdinand de Joules, and Mike McQuade. Miss Winifred Rutland is a charming representative of Sheila Kennion; Miss Ellen Beverley is well placed as Molly O'Moore; Miss Douglas Hicks does praiseworthy work as Hildred; Miss Edith Rutland is to be highly commended for her clever and natural acting as Miles O'Moore, the cripple; and Miss Lillian Herries gives a very meritorious and artistic portrayal of the unhappy Moira Kennion.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The Andos Troupe of Happy Little Japs give their well-known and finished performance of the art of balancing, much to the gratification of the audience; Daisy Hicks, a dashing soubrette, is well received; and the Shelleys are excellent and pleasing as duologue artists. Frank Bertram and company cause immense laughter in their amusing sketch The Chaperon; Cosgrove and Burns shine well as comedy duettists; Ben Albert, a quaint vocal comedian, gains many plaudits for his diverting song "What an Exhibition." Lily Arthur, a smart and effective comedienne and danseuse, has made herself a great favourite; the Primrose Quartette are responsible for some very tuneful vocalisation, and get a very cordial greeting; Kurkamp, the original singing conductor, has an enthusiastic reception for his two very admirably-rendered items; Payne's Bio, with some thrilling motor-racing pictures, concludes.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Mr. Fred Ginnett and company, in the equestrian spectacle Dick Turpin's Ride to York, go as well as ever; as a conjurer Mr. Henri Bekker is particularly smart in his methods; Mr. Chas. Santon, double-voiced vocalist, charms everyone with his performances; Miss Constance Mori, comedienne and speciality dancer, has a brisk, taking style that wins her great applause; Mr. W. H. Clemart, ventriloquist, gives an artistic turn with the aid of his numerous dummies, and is warmly applauded; the Five Whiteleys, Continental speciality artists, work very hard, and submit an exceedingly smart and daring performance; Mr. George Prince, crazy comedian, causes much laughter; Miss Gladys Mauvis, the Canadian coon, is excellent as a step-dancer; Mr. W. Selkirk's Scottish juvenile display, All Scotch, proves attractive and interesting. The Hippo. pictures finish an enjoyable programme.

PRESTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. Harry Tilbury and company are here this week, and are presenting the drama His Dishonoured Wife. Mr. A. George Fry enacts the part of the village blacksmith, Frank Lindon, in a manly and convincing manner; Mr. Horatio Sinclair imbues the part of Lord Devant with sufficient villainy, as does also Mr. Bernard Webb as Tom Redman; Mr. Ed. Brown is a capital Geoffrey Harvey; Mr. Fred Owen is a capable Neil Locksley; Mr. Harry Tilbury is distinctly funny as Mickey Doolan, and receives good support from Miss Etta Spalding, who scores as Araminta Dustpan (with song). As the heroine, Florence Lindon, Miss Tilbury appeals strongly to the sympathies of the audience; Little Phylis as Mabel Lindon in Acts 1, 2, and 3, and Miss Annie Newall in the same character in Act 4 are both good; Miss A. T. George is a favourite as Alice Harvey; Mr. Henry Selby as Bobby Peel also draws many a hearty laugh. The remaining characters are all in good hands, and the piece is capitally mounted.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Les Rallis top the bill with their original novelty The Artist and his Monkey; the impersonation of a baboon is lifelike, and this clever turn elicited loud applause; Fremel and Fremel, original eccentrics, give a quaint mixture of patter and tumbling; Bennett and Stirling, American comedy entertainers, give a good turn of song and dance and a well-executed xylophone duet; W. G. Wesley, character comedian, is well received; Daucit, the American dancing nugget, brings down the house with her dancing, and has to respond to vociferous encores; Edmund Bosanquet, violin virtuoso, and his "Bosanquephone," is also a fine favourite, who has to appear again and again for his delightful solos; Maddison Bros. are a clever pair of burlesque boxers and patter artists, who give a good turn; a clever turn is given by Dottridge and Instone's company in an interesting sketch of song and dancing, entitled Rosie's Birthday Party. The company, ten in number, includes Miss Kittie Trewhitt, Ira Gibson, and Trixie Whyatt; Martin Conway evidently suits the audience by the reception he receives. The Mysterious Parcel on the Bioscope concludes. A capital show, which has not a dull turn.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—The Lion and the Mouse, splendidly produced by Mr. Walter Maxwell's company, has proved wonderfully interesting here this week. It would be difficult to get three finer individual efforts than those of Mr. Leslie Carter as John Burkett Ryder (the Lion), Miss Christine Silver as Shirley Rossmore (the Mouse), and Mr. A. W. Baskcomb as Ryder's confidential secretary. There is art writ large over the acting of Miss Silver; Mr. Carter finds splendid scope for his undoubted histrionic ability in the part of the financial genius; and while Mr. Baskcomb had not a very large part to present, his skill in handling it stamps his as a performance worthy of special mention. Mr. Martyn Roland acts capably as the son of Ryder, and the other parts are meritoriously impersonated.

ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Melvin.—On the first three evenings of the week Mr. Will Dennis and company appeared in Little Lord Fauntleroy, and the production attracted capital audiences. The story of the heir to the earldom of Dorincourt was admirably told, and seems to have lost none of its piquancy. Miss Daisy May portrayed in splendid fashion the title-rôle; her acting was characterised by grace and charm, and her rendering of the lines entrusted to her—in itself no light task for a young actress—was in all respects excellent. Mr. Will Dennis appeared in his original part, Earl of Dorincourt, and his representation of the crusty old aristocrat was very fine indeed. Miss Gertrude Netterville scored a great success in the part of Mrs. Errol, and Miss Marion Fawcett and Miss Beryl Graham as Minna and Mary respectively did good work; Mr. George Roberts was also seen to advantage in his representation of Mr. Havisham. The play was put on in thoroughly satisfactory style. For the last three evenings of the week an attractive variety entertainment filled the bill.

MARINA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Dew and Valeriani; General-Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—Under enterprising management the fortunes of this place of entertainment seem to have thoroughly revived, and crowded houses appear to be the rule to witness excellent shows, in which the exhibition of animated photographs of topical, humorous, or educational interest are interspersed with items of song and dance by the juvenile artists Tiny and Mite. These young people have established themselves in the hearts of the Marina patrons, and their undoubted cleverness always ensures a hearty reception. As to the pictures, they are clear and steady. The programme is frequently changed, and those who visit the Marina invariably speak well of the arrangements made there and the attractions provided.

READING.—THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—Claude Anderson and Ethel Pender Cudlip are giving selections from Il Trovatore in highly-meritorious style; Bennett and Martell are exceedingly amusing in their sketch The Shipwrecked Mariners; the Godfreys, in The Slavey and the Coon, perform on a variety of instruments cleverly; and Josey present an amusing duologue; De Lilo and Metz, lady bender and comedy juggler, provide a good turn; Harry Marte sings and dances well; the Emson Girls, comediennes. are well received; Flo Inman elicits the sympathies of the audience by her sentimental singing; S. Bedford and company create great hilarity in their farcical comedy The Second Mrs. Chester; and the concluding Bioscope Pictures illustrate the Motor-car Races at Dieppe very vividly.

RHYL.—OLYMPIAN GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Eric Charlswood.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton are to be congratulated on the talent they have secured for this week. Frank Hook contributes amusing songs and patter; Paddy Duprez is a popular Irish comedian; Dick Tubb, comedian, on a first visit here, is accorded a hearty reception; Jessie Buckle, comedienne, delights everyone with her selection of songs; Bertram Noel is loudly applauded for his clever impersonations; Charlie Bray, a local juvenile comedian, is a great favourite; Eric Charlswood's latest success is the song entitled "Rhyl," which he sings with his usual ability; and Hariett Greene, soprano, Alf Ripon, Scotch ventriloquist, Edith Benson, comedienne, and Theresa Foote, accompanist, also add to the success.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Pictures by the Empire Bioscope predominate here this week, a capital series of films, depicting the following scenes, are presented:—Custom Officer's Revenge, His First Frock Coat, Arctic Hunting, Gamble for a Woman, Woes of a Cinematographer, Poverty and Probity, and Legend of the Ghost. The Three Coopers are amusing in their comedy vocal selections; Jack Hayton is a quaint comedian and dancer; and Florence Raymond submits an acceptable ventriloquial act.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's company are doing well this week in their latest success, The Gambler's Daughter, in which Mr. Robert Ayrton ably sustains the part of Desmond O'Dare; Miss Adria Hill adds to her reputation by the manner in which she plays the dual rôles of Mildred and Miriam (mother and daughter); Mr. Harry Elliston is a comical Jew as Solomon Solomons; and Miss Harriett Loydale as Auntie Zeb also keeps the house in roars. Mr. H. C. Robinson plays Stephen Brand, the villain, in convincing style; John Grant is a good study by Mr. Richard Pitt; as also is Mr. Harry Barham's The Weazel. Mr. Cedric Thornley does well as Tom.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Fun in a Pawnshop is an absurdity by Raleigh Abrahams and company, which heads this week's programme and causes much amusement; Silbon's Circus is a very smart performance, especially the acts of several cats; Ethel Loftus gets much applause for her songs and comical antics. The programme also includes acceptable turns by Nell Brough, with whistling songs; Avon and Crest, comedy artists; Major Moss and Son, in vocal scena; Welsh Vaudeville Entertainers (four), instrumentalists and vocalists; and Bernard and Weston, comedians.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—A clever dramatic sketch, Oliver Twist, in which Owen McGiveney takes Fagin, Bill Sikes, Artful Dodger, Monks, and Nancy in quick change, is well received. The Four Breens, very smart comedy jugglers; the Days, in mental telepathy; Ada Whitton, male impersonator; Marcus Boyle, funny comedian; Beattie and Gynne, in musical duologue, &c.; Elliott and Warne (Carrie and Tom), comedy artists, tumblers, and dancers; and X-Rays, the five mad athletes, also give clever turns.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Lester King.—The new pictures this week draw well, and include Pretty Flower Girl, Irascible Father, Haunted Bedroom, Britain's Promise, Athlete's Daughter, Hunchback of Notre Dame, Over the Sticks.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Mr. Brandon Thomas's company in Charley's Aunt is here. Mr. Syd Compton as Lord Fancourt Babberley was excellent in every way; Mr. Hastings Lynn as Jack Chesney and Mr. Basil Lynton as Charley Wykeham did pleasing work. Mr. Theo McCausland Stewart as Sir Francis Chesney, Bart., did well; Mr. Roy Byford pleased all with his clever acting.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Garside; Manager, Mr. Fred P. Morgan.—Mr. John Gerant's company in At Duty's Call is the attraction here this week. Mr. Matthew Boulton makes an ideal hero; Miss Beatrice Western as Dora showed great skill; Mr. John Gerant as Harold Alison gave full proof of his ability; Mr. Ernest St. John makes a dignified General Gordon, and Miss Ethel Wallis is clever as Salema. Humour is supplied in a pleasing manner by Mr. Frank Caffrey as Terry and Miss Laurie O'Neill as Mary.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. Francis Goodricke.—Robin Hood opened here on Monday with Mr. Ethelbert Edwards in the title part, of which he gave a clever representation; Miss Lilian Stennis as Lady Marion de Vaux rendered excellent support; Miss Laurie Flockton as Adela was untiring in her efforts to please; the part of Alison had careful treatment from Miss Gertrude de Burg; Miss Irene Malvern made an excellent Queen; Mr. C. Bruce Winston was quite at home as a Friar Tuck, and Mr. Clive Ross as Little John provided plenty of humour.

THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. L. Holland.—Wee George Wood is as great an attraction as ever this week in his songs and impersonations; Kennedy's Kiddies do another good turn; Richard Finberg, impersonator, is very good; the Three Lloyds give an excellent turn on the rope; Alfonso, foot equilibrist, and Llewlyn and Davis in vocal scena receive due recognition. Mme. Levante's orchestra of ladies have again been engaged for the season, and submit an excellent programme that suits all tastes. The solo artists are very clever. The programme also includes Professor Jones and his troupe of lady swimmers and also Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

SEACOMBE.—IRVING THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, The Excelsior Animated Picture Co.—In addition to an excellent film show, Miss Alma Curzon, comedienne, renders some acceptable items; and the Milsted-Bell Trio present a clever little sketch, entitled Three Sharps in a Flat.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Harry D. Lyle.—Mr. Herbert Fuller's company is here this week, and on Monday and two following nights presented Passion of Life. Horace O'Neal is in the capable hands of Mr. Alf. Russell; Mr. Stormont Wallett is a popular Daddy Kenny; Jack Kenny finds a clever exponent in Mr. Balfour Denistoun; and the rascally Ralph Flint is faithfully drawn by Mr. Fred Rivers. Plenty of fun is provided by Mr. Herbert Fuller in the rôle of Dan Sprouts; another successful character is that of Fergus McKenna as played by Mr. George E. Merrifield. Mr. Godfrey Hunsley does well as Abdullah; Miss Agnes Collier as Nita O'Neal stands out prominently; as Belle O'Neal Miss Isla Isobel Davies leaves nothing to be desired; and Miss Louise Russell is a charming Alice Kenny, Tilly being cleverly played by Miss Mabel Kent. A Noble Mother was announced for the last three nights of the week.

SHEERNESS.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Sheerness Hippodrome Co.—The chief attraction this week is supplied by Miss Beaumont Collins and company in the dramatic playlet The House of Terror, which is meeting with a cordial reception. Miss Beaumont Collins is seen to conspicuous advantage as Meg Harding; and Miss

Stella Leigh as Mother Crawley presents an admirable character-study. Mr. G. Boyd Pearson does full justice to the part of John Dason; and Mr. George Mallett is capital as Mark Verrell. The sketch is well staged. The Three Ramlos, comedy gymnasts, provide a thoroughly entertaining turn; the Knick-Knacks are good comedy artists; and Archie Pitt, quaint comedian, keeps the house in roars of laughter. Other entertaining turns are given by the Sisters Reno, acrobatic dancers; Gladys Williams, serio; and Nellie Chandos, comedienne and dancer. The Bioscope concludes with a humorous film, Grandfather's Pills.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Manager, Mr. F. R. Griffiths; Local Representative, Mr. Cyril Parkes.—The usual full programme of moving pictures is given here this week, the principal films, thrown with their usual clearness, being Forsaken, A Norman Vendetta, The Phlegmatic Gentleman, Kidnapped by Gipsies, The Deceiver, &c., which are interluded by enjoyable turns by Nat Lewis, actor-vocalist, who has been retained here for another week.

SHEFFIELD. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—The Outcast of the Family was played for the first time here on Monday by Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company. Mr. Herbert Bentone made a frank, manly, and sympathetic Stephen Barry, and other characters were well played by Miss Vera Neville, Miss Margeretta Tubskie, Miss Gertrude Morella, Mr. W. Cowell-Clarke, Mr. Chas. H. Coleman (a convincing representative of the squire's son, Harry Thorne), Mr. Bert Atherton, Mr. F. C. Leighton, Mr. E. W. Cudd, Mr. M. Platting, Mr. Ed. Jeffs, Mr Murray Maude, Mr Harold Holmes, Mr. Heaton Lodge, and Little Dorothy. The piece was mounted in a careful manner, and its scenes of pathos and humour afforded wholesome entertainment to an appreciative audience.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—The favourite drama of Russian military life, Under the Czar, still continues to thrill the Alexandraites. It is being played to good houses this week by Mr. Wilson Howard's company. Miss Carlotta Anson makes a handsome and emotional heroine as Sonia; Mr. Wilson Howard successfully depicts the bold and masterful Chief of Police, and other principal parts are carefully represented by Miss Madge Clair, Miss Vivienne, Mr. Gerald Smyth, Mr. J. Leicester, Mr. G. Broughton, Mr. J. C. Turner, Mr. Fred Elvin, Mr. F. Merring, Mr. Carl Vallender, Mr. Victor Gordon, Mr. Fred M. Best, and Mr. G. Fleming. The play is effectively staged.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—A novel and amusing top-line attraction here is an up-to-date extravaganza founded on the popular legend Jack the Giant Killer, in which the noted giant actor Mr. George Auger appears with great success, supported by a competent company, a midget, who takes the part of Jack, revealing great talent as a burlesque actor and vocalist; Miss Ouida Macdermott's vocal scena, Redwing, was enthusiastically applauded on Monday; the Vesilcne troupe of comedy gymnasts made a big hit; Mr. Vanando did a refined and thoroughly humorous ventriloquial entertainment; the celebrated Hymack in his mystifying sartorial monologue and quick changes, again puzzled and delighted Mr. Dunbar's many patrons; and others who gave much pleasure were Mr. Frank Bernard's farce company in Hello, Central; Mr. Frank Finglass, the ideal coon; Max York's well-trained terriers, and Miss Bella Green, vocalist and mimic. Good business continues the rule.

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—A programme replete with novelty was submited for the approval of a large audience on Monday, the contributors being Phil Ree's stable lads in a smart and very amusing performance; the talented Derrington family in an extraordinary display of trick cycling; Grant and Grant, transatlantic speciality artists in a remarkably diverting and original act; Mr. J. W Callingher, a local pantomime favourite; Mr. Jack Campbell, in well-rendered ditties; the clever and amusing Lavelle Bros., chair experts, tumblers, and comedians; Ross and Grayson, in an interlude distinctly above the average in its special line; Barney Armstrong, comic singer; Messrs. Tray and Rich, in a comedy act, and the smart American Octoroons, in songs and dances. The pièce de résistance this week is Ferdie's Ma-in-Law, one of the funniest sketches seen in Sheffield. Artistic pictures conclude a programme of all-round excellence.

GRAND THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—The "Grand," with its new decorations and improvements, presented a delightfully cool, spick-and-span appearance on Monday, when large houses welcomed the following artists:—Leoni Clarke and his famous troupe of cats, mice, rats, &c.; Miss René Lytton, vocal comedienne; Miss Lily Gaston, vocalist; Mint and Mart, expert paper tearers, &c.; Miss Winnie Loftus, a chic comedienne; Mr. Jones, with illustrated songs; and Mr. Dick Bradley, comic entertainer and laughable tramp cyclist, in a funny act.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Lessees, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred W. Holmes.—A Bird of Freedom and other romantic, fanciful, and humorous pictures were well received on Monday, and the variety artists included Eileen and Mayne in a good musical interlude; Tom Johnstone, vocalist; and the favourite Mr. Mark Merry, vocal comedian.

SOUTHAMPTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—The Gentleman Jockey proves a lively and entertaining attraction as played by Mr. Edward Marris's company. Amongst an excellent array of talent are Mr. C. W. Parke, Miss Ethel Ward, Mr. George Brentwood, Mr. W. B. Nugent, Miss Gertie Reed, and a very old operatic favourite, Mr. H. Le Maistre.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Wm. Trussell.—Alber's ten performing bears are the star attraction here, and have been cleverly trained. The Kirbys are an excellent comedy duo; Walter King is a droll comedian; Mr. E. a topical rhymester; and Ryan and Hall are clever acrobats; and Zeta Grey and company, sketch artists, W. E. Whittle, ventriloquist, and the Evalos, jugglers and gymnasts, also do well.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. de Frece and F. Mouillot; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—The Bros. Horne excel in their boxing sketch, The Biter Bit. Another popular turn is given by Crosland's Melody Makers in The Burglar's Dream; the Eight Lancashire Lads dance excellently; and Morny Cash is funnier than ever. The Sisters Gladwin, Will Driscoll, and Maudie Ford also contribute.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—A packed house on Monday extended a rousing reception to Mr. George Waters' company for their entertaining presentation of the musical absurdity The Gay Deceivers. Colonel Dewar has a lively interpreter in Mr. Frank Powell; Frank is creditably taken by Mr. Guy Williams, who sings in pleasing style; Mr. Frank Stanmore gives a humorous impersonation of Lord Reggie; Mr. J. W. Wood-Ingram is effective as Pinch, a burglar; the butler Joseph is drolly played by Mr. Mark Lester; Miss Pauline Prim wins special favour as Rosie for her clever whistling solos; Dora Dartrey is a fascinating personality as presented by Miss Dorothy Chard; the part of Winnie Winter is well taken by Miss Dorothy Mackenzie; and Mrs. Dewar is cleverly presented by Miss Kate Chard.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—One of the most attractive items in the excellent and enjoyable programme that is given twice daily in the theatre is the sketch entitled Slavery Days, which has pretty scenery and a good chorus to add to its interest. The characters are admirably sustained, Mr. Fred Percy in particular being most successful. He is assisted by Miss Ruth Sampson, Miss M. St. Clair, Mr. Jack Miller, Mr. Lev. Casso, and Mr. J. Brownlow. Other creditable turns are given by Miss Daisy Reed, a speciality danseuse, well received; Miss Olive West, comedienne and danseuse; Miss Lilian Constance, a pleasing soprano ballad vocalist; Messrs. Charles Ashdown and Edward Harvey, comedians; and the Palace Ballet, assisted by Miss Harold's Gipsy Girls. Evening performances conclude with the usual series of Bioscope pictures. Dancing takes place both afternoon and evening, and the Gipsy Girls draw good patronage in the Café Chantant.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—A second and concluding week's engagement of the Native Choir from Jamaica proves even more successful than their first, and a thoroughly enjoyable programme again gives intense delight. The dances by Mr. Frank Weaver are loudly applauded; Mr. H. Nation also gives piano solos in a creditable manner.

THE LEAS BANDSTAND.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The Chierrots, the new company that is gaining marked popularity by their excellent programmes under the able direction of Mr. Alfred Davies, are now giving three performances daily. Those contributing comprise Messrs. Victor Hunter, Walter James, Arthur Leslie, Jack Ferne, Fred Lester, and Hal Cluist, with the Misses Lillian Hubbard and Lily Boundy. Following their last daily concert, another first-class programme is submitted by the Rouge et Noir concert party.

PIER HILL BANDSTAND.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—Three performances also are given here daily by the smart and entertaining company of the Pick-Me-Ups, which has in Mr. George Robins a worthy director, who is rewarded with a large number of appreciative supporters.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company appear here this week in At Cripple Creek. Mr. Wernham Ryott makes a capital Joe Mayfield; Mr. Chas. E. Johnson as Martin Mason and Mr. Arthur North as Manuel Alvarez depict a precious pair of scoundrels in good style; the faithful Indian Wahketah is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Reginald Harley-West; Miss Agnes Verity powerfully delineates Dynamite Ann; Miss Daisy Carlton is vivacious as Maggie Mason, the pride of Cripple Creek; Belle Gordon is sweetly represented by Miss Dorothy Lart. Appropriate songs are introduced and a selection by Mr. Harry Leander as a Cripple Creek nigger.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident Manager, Mr. George F. Thompson.—Neil Kenyon is proving a great attraction here, his Scottish mannerisms being well received and encores demanded; the Herald Comedy Four do an original turn, introducing singing and dancing; May Mars with her songs creates a favourable impression; Jessie Barlee and Phil Smith, musical comedy duologue artists, are deservedly applauded; and other good turns are done by Mlle. Eldee, Cissie Curlette, May Fayre, and the Bioscope.

TIVOLI, LAYGATE-LANE.—Proprietor, Councillor J. K. Hall.—Animated pictures are shown on the Tivoloscope here, and Daisy De Roy with a budget of new songs is well received.

COSY CORNER, SEA FRONT.—Mr. Geo. Burton's comedians are clever. Songs are well rendered by Miss Pattie Burton and Miss May Tudor, and comedy is well represented by Messrs. Russel Ray and Ross. A special feature is made of the concerted numbers and an original sketch, Modern Watchmaking, is performed by the whole company.

STAFFORD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—Mr. Everard and company are presenting The Octoroon this week. Miss Laurie A. Pardy gives an ideal representation of Zoe; Mr. Edwin Turner plays Jacob M'Closky with power; Mr. Francis Everard as Wah-no-Tee acts in a capable and convincing manner; Salem Scudder is in the able hands of Mr. G. P. Beresford; and Miss Edith Leslie as Paul is good. Mr. Fred C. Imbert is seen to advantage as Pete; and others who take prominent parts are Miss Constance Medway as Mrs. Peyton, Miss Hettie Fergusson as Dora Sunnyside, Mr. Charles King as Kath, Mr. Eustace Gibson as Sunnyside, and Mr. Frederick Carr as George Peyton.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Closed until first Monday in August.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—Quite a varied programme is presented this week. A. L. Lawson and Frances Namon, with comical novelty cycle riding and ball punching, take a prominent place, and receive well-merited applause; a pathetic little sketch, entitled The Little Colonel, is touchingly played by Ernest Montefiore and company; Bugler Carr is great at balancing; the Onyx Duo perform some national dances skilfully; and Irene and Morton, in their interlude, are amusing. Angelina does tricky things with a cannon ball and other articles; and Stacey and Williams are smart.
